ACCIDENT WAS FATAL

SMITH YOUNG MAN GASHED HIS HEAD WITH AXE.

Lakefield, April 4. — The death took place of Frederick Hampton, son of Mr. William Hampton of Smith, at the age of 18 years and 6 months, under peculiarly sad circumstances. On Friday of last week the young man was engaged in chopping wood on his father's farm in Smith township, when the axe slipped and struck his left foot, the sharp blade nearly severing the front part of the foot. The injured man was brought to Lakefield where the wound was dressed, the cut requiring a great many stitches to close it. He was unable to survive the shock and passed away early on Tuesday morning. The funeral took place on Thursday afternoon, the remains being interred in the Hillside Cemetery.

Three representatives of the Maple Leaf Band waited on the committee of the whole Council last night, asking that they be given assistance by being provided with a hall in which to practice.

Consideration was promised.

OPERATE IN LINDSAY.

HINTS FOR SPRINGTIME, GARBAGE AND BACK YARDS

Annual Clean-up Must Come to Pass by 1st of May — The Flies

While "in the spring-time the young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love," the thoughts of the more sedate and harassed householder wearily turn to the cleaning up of the backyard. This erstwhile disagreeable duty has materially lost its terrors for those who reside in the garbage collecting area and have availed themselves of its advantages, while outside the privileged area the annual clean-up is still a necessary evil. The man who has conscientiously during the winter months carried out the garbage by-law has now the laugh on his recalcitrant neighbor who has allowed a heap of refuse to accumulate at his back door, inviting nemisis in the form of a Board of Health notice requiring its removal in twenty-four hours, under penalty of a fine.

Yards Clean by May 1st.

According to the Public Health Act, Schedule B, all cellars, buildings, outbuildings and yards, and outside closets must be cleaned on or before the first of May, and this will be strictly enforced. This provision of the Act yearly becomes easier to comply with, as the garbage collecting areas increase, and when the whole city is served the necessity of such a regulation should become obsolete, for there will be no plausible excuse for having dirty and untidy yards.

Wrap Garbage in Paper.

Now that the incinerator is working the householder is no longer required to keep his garbage in a receptacle by itself. The following regulations should be carefully observed. Keep all table refuse, peelings, vegetables, discarded food, tea leaves, etc., dry and wrapped in paper. This will prevent odor, keep the flies away (a very necessary thing), and keep the garbage can clean. This garbage may be deposited in a covered receptacle along with all other refuse except ashes. Ashes must be kept by themselves in boxes or other receptacles that can be handled by one man. The heavier and more cumbersome the box, the more likelihood of injury occurring to it. Place your receptacles in a convenient position at 7 o'clock in the morning on the day of collection, following out the above regulations, and you will have a satisfactory service.

The Latest in Garbage Receptacles.

The Morgan Hardware Co. has a splendid article for holding garbage, and where one of these is in use the housefly will be put out of business. It consists of a metal framework to which can be fitted an oiled waterproof paper bag. Attached to the frame is a metal self-closing lid, which fits over the mouth of the bag, thus preventing flies from gaining access to the contents. This appliance can be fixed to the wall by the sink, or any convenient place, and garbage deposited in the bag whenever occasion requires. As soon as the bag is full, pull the string attached thereto, and the bag is tightly closed. It is then removed and another bag fitted in the frame. The bags are of various sizes, the largest being big enough to hold a week's garbage from an average household. A man could buy no better Easter present for his wife than one of these sanitary garbage holders.

Special efforts will be made this summer to exterminate the fly in hotels and restaurants. This nuisance will not be tolerated by the Board of Health, and swarms of flies in the dining room or kitchen of eating houses will be sufficient justification for the cancellation of the license. It is not too early to make provision for eliminating this pest by arranging for screen doors and windows, and fly proof receptacles for garbage and where there is a stable yard to see that the manure box is also fly proof.

Whitewash Outbuildings.

Stables, chicken house, and other outbuildings would be benefitted by a coating of lime this spring. This would entail but little expense and labor, and with a small amount of carbolic acid added to the lime, would act as a good disinfectant.

EAST CITY NOT IN FAVOR OF THE GARBAGE SYSTEM

Petition Asks City Council Not To Enforce It

It would appear that East City is up in arms against the move of the City Council to extend the garbage collecting system to Brooklyn.

A petition of protest has been largely signed, and the Council will have to deal with it Monday night.

The retail tobacconists, it is understood, will also ask Council to rescind the by-lay providing a license fee of $40 for the sale of cigarettes.

Engineer's Department.

Ald. Gordon may decide to further reorganize the Engineering Department. He says $1,200 could be saved. The Engineer reported recently that it had been decided to retain Mr. Hay and Mr. Quartermaine, the latter to do the clerical work, stenography and typewriting. Provision was also made for a better system of keeping tab on the work done through the Street Commissioner and foremen.

Ald. Gordon started off with the reorganization of the department when he sought to further pare down the expenditure last night, but he did not offer any suggestions.

Not Many Tenders.

There has not been a steady stream of tenders for the job of collecting the city's garbage, and it would seem that the men who might do the work are somewhat afraid to tackle the proposition.

They would take up the work when garbage is most plentiful and they would also have to make some arrangements for two outfits — wheels in summer and sleighs for the short part of the winter which would be included in the contract of seven months, from June to December.

APPEAL IS WON

Judgment, in favor of the defendant Clayton, was delivered by Judge Huycke at Division Court yesterday afternoon in the appeal of Herbert Clayton, manager of the Royal theatre, who appealed the finding of Magistrate Dumble, who imposed a fine of $100, for allowing one or more boys under the age of fifteen unaccompanied by adults to enter his theatre.

Mr. D. O'Connell acted for Mr. Clayton.

The evidence produced by the defense showed that Clayton was not the proprietor, and that his wife, Mrs. Clayton, was the one in whose name the license was made out. The Municipal license was made out in Clayton's name, but the Provincial license is in her name.

Asked this morning if he would take further action against the other party, Chief Thompson stated that he did not think so.

DIPHTHERIA SERUM WITHIN REACH OF ALL

System of Distribution at Low Prices Through Local Boards of Health

Dr. John McCullough, chief officer of health of the province, announces an important departure by the provincial board of health. The board has made arrangements to supply anti-diphtheria serum to local boards of health and druggists. This serum will be supplied for the use of the general public at greatly reduced prices, and it is hoped by the provincial board that this cheap distribution will put the serum within the reach of the poorest patients.

The anti- toxin to be supplied by the board will be of standard quality, 30 per cent. in excess of that marked on the label. Druggists and dealers will be given the serum at the same price as local boards of health, and will be permitted to retail it to medical practitioners at a profit of 25 per cent. on the price, at which they secure it.

The success of the plan of the provincial board for placing the serum within reach of poor people and of patients being attended to at the expense of municipalities depends largely upon the co-operation of local medical health officers, and Dr. McCullough has appealed to these officers to obtain their assistance through the local boards of health.

GOSPEL HALL.

The congregation of Gospel Hall will be afforded an interesting address on Easter Sunday, when Mr. Robert McMurdo, editor of the "Armor of Light," Chicago, will deliver three addresses on Easter Sunday. He will also deliver addresses during the following week. Mr. McMurdo is considered one of the shining lights in Gospel work, and a large attendance is anticipated. He is also a former resident of Scotland, where he spent a number of years.

LINDSAY IS EXCITED OVER BURGLARIES AND ARRESTS

Wilson and Smith Thought to be Tools of Gang Who Worked for Montreal Firm—Had Their Camp Near Orillia

Lindsay, April 4.—The talk of the town for two days past has been the burglaries and the capture of the midnight marauders by the Peterboro police, and as more light is shed on the affairs of these two youthful suspects, a startling state of affairs is unfolded. The young men, Smith but 17 years old, and Wilson 19, are more or less hardened criminals already, although Smith states that be was led into the affair by bad accomplices. To the non-interested spectator, Smith has a more or less open face of innocence, while Wilson bears the marks of bolder assurance.

From evidence gleaned from the prisoners, the Provincial police will be given a chance to show what they are made of. It appears that Smith and Wilson are but two of a large gang of "tools," employed by a firm in Montreal to turn is as much stolen goods as possible. They, with other members of the gang, it is understood, are paid a weekly or monthly salary the same as any other person. They do the work and carry the "booty" to their rendesvous in the woods north of Orillia, from which point the stolen goods are mysteriously hauled to Montreal and handed over to a mysterious firm and re-peddled through the country in a mysterious manner. After delivering the goods to their employers the culprits then are paid their wages, return to their camps and await further orders.

Council to Investigate.

"The council will deal with the matter on Monday night," said Mayor Beal in referring to the lax manner in which matters in connection with the recent burglaries were handled by the Police Department.

Many citizens were very outspoken this morning in their criticism of the police in not becoming more active in trying to round up the burglars. It is claimed that no information was sent out to outlying points warning the police to be on the lookout, and that no word was sent to Peterboro. The only telephonic communication, it is said, Chief Chilton had with Peterboro was when he answered Governor Balfour's message.

BATTLE AGAINST TAX RATE IS SUSPENDED TILL MONDAY NIGHT

Prospects of Rate of 25 1-2 Mills, Appear to be Favorable

Inspiration of the Mayor May Bring the Desired Result

The committee of the whole Council spent two weary hours last night, wrestling with the tax rate. The majority of the aldermen were tired out as a result of their trip to Toronto.

At eleven o'crock, on motion of Ald. Duffus and Gor[illegible]cided to have the [illegible] prepared, but that a blank space be left, so that the amount of the rate might be inserted at the Council meeting, Monday night. There is sure to be some more discussion.

Ald. Gordon made almost every manoeuvre possible last night so that the rate might not exceed 25½ mills. He slashed the estimates of the Board of Works, Fire Department and other items till he had made up $4670 of the $5000 required to hold the rate at 25½ mills.

His suggestions were too much for Ald. Anderson, the Finance Minister, and Ald. Duncan, both of whom donned their overcoats and prepared to leave the meeting.

Another suggestion offered and endorsed by Mayor Buller and Ald. Gordon was that part of the salaries in the engineering department be charged up to the big sewer undertaking. These salaries at present are provided in the Board of Works estimates.

Ald. Duncan presented one difficulty to the successful carrying out of the suggestion. He pointed out that, as they knew, at [illegible] Board of Works meeting, the City Engineer was ordered here, there and everywhere to attend to different works. How could he do this work if he were held down to the other?

However, there may be an opening provided here, and if such is the case, Ald. Gordon is going to take advantage of it, and put the proceeds into use, in an attempt to prevent the rate of 26 mills, when Council meets to decide the issue, Monday night.

It was the unanimous opinion that the extra $1,000 for street watering should not be touched. It was felt that this amount was not enough.

2 Per Cent. Discount.

It was decided to allow a discount of 2 per cent. on the payment of the taxes for the last part of the year, by the 1st of August.

FRATERNALLY YOURS

Last night was a big night in Havelock, when the new Oddfellows' Hall was dedicated. After the ceremony a very enjoyable public entertainment was given. The concert was followed by an exceedingly delightful banquet, which caused the local Oddfellows present to be high in their praise for the efficiency of the Havelock Oddfellows along the line of entertainment. The members of the Grand Lodge who were present and who gave addresses, were: Grand Secretary Brooks of Toronto and Grand Warder Cooper of Belleville.

Delegations of the Peterboro Lodge of Oddfellows No. 111, and Golden Link Lodge No. 81, D. of R., were present. The gentlemen of the former body were:—D.D.G.M. W. Savigny; Past Grands, W. G. Freeman, W. S. Robinson, Geo. Gillespie, F. Wise, James Ballery, T. H. Sills and J. S. Londerville; Noble Grand Robert Martin; Brothers W. Hooper, T. Target and F. H. Downton. The Daughters of Rebekah present were:—Mrs. Wm. Hartley, Mrs. B. Watt, Mrs. T. Sills, Mrs. R. Martin, Mrs. J. S. Londerville and Mrs. Jas. Ballory.

The Havelock Lodge of the I.O.O.F. is rapidly coming to the fore: its membership is increasing, financial standing good and enthusiasm becoming greater.

The meeting of the Sacred Heart Branch No. 509 of the C.M.B.A., to be held Monday evening will be marked by an initiation of several new members. Every member is urgently requested to be present.

A special meeting of the Peterboro Circle, No. 193 of the O.C.H.C. was held last night in the K.O.P. Hall. Mr. O. S. Matcheet, the local delegate to the Supreme meeting recently held in Hamilton, was present to give his report and Mr. W. E. O'Brien of the head office was also in attendance to explain the new rates, which were decided upon at the Supreme meeting.

The Peterboro Circle, which meets every 1st and 3rd Monday in the K.O.P. Hall, is going ahead with great rapidity, and has now a membership of over 100.

The Catholic Order of Foresters of this city will attend the eight o'clock mass to-morrow morning at St. Peter's Cathedral, and will receive Holy Communion in a body.

Another large initiation will feature the Easter Monday night meeting of the Sherwood Forest Camp No. 59 of the Woodmen of the World.

FAIR PRIZE LIST WAS REVISED

Some Changes Are Made by Exhibition Board.

The Peterborough Industrial Exhibition Board met in regular business meeting last evening in the Council Chamber.

The principal business of the evening was the revision of the prize list, which underwent a number of small changes in regard to amount of prizes.

President J. H. Garbutt presided.

Souvenirs and Elections.

The aldermen were trying to reach some agreement regarding a grant for the Temple Band. It was suggested the souvenirs might be used by the city to good advantage.

"I like the tone of that," added the Mayor.

HE HAD PLENTY OF PAIN KILLER

The Finance Committee at a meeting yesterday afternoon dealt with accounts for indigent cases, and the members received quite a surprise.

One case, for instance, is that of a man who is apparently a confirmed drunkard. He is 64 years of age, and his expenses in the hospital are paid by the city.

When he cannot get the real stuff, he resorts to painkiller. The committee were informed that this man was found to be in possession of some eighty-two bottles, which had at one time contained the means to an end—painkiller.

"Give it the usual six months' boost," somebody remarked in regard to the communication, asking for a grant towards the Cartier Memorial, and the hoist was given.

PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, APRIL 4, 1914.

IS HE MAKING A DEMONSTRATION ?

THE MONTREAL Herald-Telegraph commenting on the action of Sir Lyman Melvin-Jones, states that the Senator supportd the Liberal party during the last election, when it endorsed free trade schemes, and points out that he has broken with the Liberal party over its endorsation of free agricultural implements at a time when the Liberal party is unable to remove that duty. It points out further, that there have been many indications that the Borden Government is contemplating the removal of this duty. One reason for thinking so was the flat-footed policy of the Conservative Winnipeg Telegram for free agricultural implements. Then the Herald asks this significant question : Is Sir Lyman holding aloof from both parties in order to support which ever one maintains the duty on agricultural implements ? Is Sir Lyman merely making a demonstration with the support of a rich man as the bait for a tariff policy ?

The move was certainly adroit, but it will hardly effect its purpose. When the Rt. Honourable R. L. Borden, stumped through the west on the reciprocity issue, he promised the western provinces a non-partizan tariff commission to inquire into the tariff and recommend whatever changes were deemed to be in the interests of the Canadian people. As the Honourable Arthur Meighen pointed out in his recent address in Peterborough, the bill constituting such a commission was passed by the House of Commons, but was thrown out by the Grit Senate. The Borden government has done all that it could to carry out its pre-election pledges. Although balked by the Senate, it has declared its determination to proceed again with the measures which the Grits have delayed. If it deems a reduction in, or the removal of, duty on agricultural implements in the interests of the Canadian people, such will be performed, Sir Lyman Jones and other interested parties to the contrary. The Conservative administration is in power in the interests of good government, and not in the interest of large manufacturing or financial concerns. Sir Lyman's influence is no doubt worth having, else he would not take the position he has, but the time has gone by, when the rich head of a corporation can dictate the policy of the government, and make a sacrifice of the Canadian people.

RADIALS.

THE RATEPAYERS of Brantford by a vote of 1317 to 83 have decided in favor of purchasing the local railway system and operating it as a municipal enterprise. Brantford has thus realized the importance of hydro and radial development. St. Catherines is following in the same direction, for delegates recently met in that city and formed a hydro-radial union for that district. Various resolutions were unanimously adopted dealing with the improvement of the waterways route of the St. Lawrence and the early construction of hydro-radials throughout Western Ontario.

But radial development should be thoroughly investigated before this city takes any plunge in that matter. St. Thomas has been unprofitably operating its street car line, and as a result an offer has been made to the city council by a private citizen to take over and operate the municipal street railway system for a period of five years. The offer is said to be favored by a number of the alderman as, under the present system, there is an annual deficit.

The population of St. Thomas is considerably below that of Peterborough and lacks many advantages that we have here. Brantford and Guelph afford more equitable comparisons, and, if they can make a success of radial development, Peterborough may be only standing in its own progress by delaying to proceed in the operation of radials.

AFTER MORE ASSISTANCE.

WHAT ARE WE coming to ? The C.N.R. wants forty millions, the N.T.R. wants fifteen millions, a big deputation is clamoring for millions to improve our canals ; another deputation is asking for assistance in the building of Hydro radials. Now comes the University of Toronto, with the statement that it is facing a crisis, and wants a million or so for new buildings. Why not let us all go down to some government and ask for a million or two?

Sir Edmund Walker presented the needs of the University for new buildings which amounted to $1,400,000, showed that the raising of the standard had only temporarily reduced the attendance, and that they were facing the necessity of cutting down the professors' salaries and raising the fees of the students. Before the government gives the assistance the University asks, it would be well to inquire into the return the University is giving for the money expended. Not that university education is not highly esteemed, but rather, that it should provide as good educational facilities as possible for the money expended. Is the cost of University education in Toronto too high ? Is the training given worth the price ? How does the cost of education compare with other places ? Should not the public have more information regarding the administration of the University ? Is the University doing as much for its students at the present time, with the present equipment as it should ? There are a score of questions that are a cause of uneasiness in the public mind regarding University training in this province.

For one thing, the tendency has been to increase the cost of University education to the student. This is a bad feature. In England there is a saying that only gentlemen's sons go to the universities, a saying which is equivalent to the establishment of class distinctions of a most rigid character, and which sets up artificial but effective barriers against training all who are deserving but lack means. That is one thing that should be reduced as much as possible in Ontario. In the matter of providing food and lodging all the universities could stand improvement. Toronto University has been doing fairly well in providing residence accommodation, but its dining hall is by no means first-class. Perhaps some of the new buildings under construction will provide a partial remedy, but as for increasing the cost of the courses to students such a policy should be stopped and reductions made.

President Falconer chose his comparisons with care. There are other universities that might put Canadian institutions in an inferior position in some particulars.

The Provincial Government should, and will be, as generous as possible to Ontario Universities, but these are institutions the administration of which requires watching just as much as the N. T. R. or Mackenzie and Mann, and all the subsidizing should not be concentrated in Toronto.

THE WOMAN SUFFRAGE BILL.

THE BILL in the Ontario Legislature extending the municipal franchise to married women owning property, was killed before it reached the final stage. The Honourable I. B. Lucas, declared that the time was not yet ripe for such legislation ; that no distinct and unmistakable demand had come for it, and even if the government thought it advisable to pass such proposals into legislation it would be contrary to the well established principle, that those who were to be granted the privilege would be a unit in demanding it. The women of Ontario, he declared, were divided, the majority to his knowledge, were either opposed or merely indifferent.

There has been considerable comment on the bill in the press. The Ottawa Citizen claims that the government is a little bit behind the times, in refusing to pass this measure. The Toronto World, extremely radical sometimes in spite of its conservatism, commenting on the bill, points out that the Ontario government is just marking time on questions of principle, upon which Sir James Whitney committed his cabinet before his illness. The last issue of the Christian Guardian contains a paragraph of interest on this question :

> "We regret to note that in Chicago, during the recent woman's suffrage campaign, the women held mass meetings in the theatres on Sunday afternoons to discuss the matter of registration. The Northwestern Christion Advocate laments this fact, the more so as even in Chicago the men have fairly recognized and observed the Sabbath Day in their political enthusiasm. This is surely not a good beginning in the purification of politics."

In view of all the facts, Mr. Lucas no doubt took a safe and sound position on this question. Every reform of this character should have a strong public support behind it. Even when the majority of educated and intelligent persons favor such an extension of the franchise as was proposed, there must be a public sentiment in favor of it, from the highest to the lowest, in order to make it a distinct benefit. Many who would oppose granting a general suffrage to women, are in favor of extending the municipal franchise to them. Those who are interested in the passage of this bill, should not feel that the measure has been settled for all time. It has merely been postponed to that period, if such a period arrives, when it will be in the general interest of good government to make it a law.

You've Got Us.

Hamilton Herald.

And if Finance Minister White should lower the duties on agricultural implements would not Sir Melvin Jones' position be tragic? He might have to organise a political party of his own.

The Country Shocked.

Orange Sentinel.

The country has been shocked by the revelations of waste and graft in connection with the building of the National Transcontinental Railway. The Winnipeg Tribune, an independent Liberal paper, has expressed severe condemnation of those concerned, and the Huntingdon Gleaner, a Liberal paper in Quebec, has said that the country will never again trust Laurier. Instead of costing thirteen millions, the amount mentioned by Liberal orators, about two hundred millions have been spent, and the wasteful expenditure is reported at forty million dollars.

Law Protects Shade Trees.

Woodstock Sentinel-Review.

A newspaper paragraph tells how a man in Collingwood secured a verdict of $93.97 against the water and light commission of that town for the damage done to some shade trees by the agents of the hydro-commission. The paragraph adds that, according to the law as interpreted by the courts, nobody, even when backed by the authority of the municipal council, has a right to cut down or mutilate any shade trees without the consent of the owner of the property in front of which the trees are standing. It is well that this should be kept in mind. One can never tell when such information may prove useful.

LOVERS

By Walt Mason

When we see a youth and maiden through a flood of moonlight wadin', as they vow a love eternal, how with them we sympathize! And we wish them countless blessings, with no end to their caressings, hoping they may ever travel under sunny, cloudless skies. Love is for the young and blooming, and they'll always find us booming wedding rings and orange blossoms, and the shower of shoes and rice; every youth should haste and marry, he should gather in a damsel on the day he has the price. Oh, the whole world loves the lovers (as the blushing maid discovers), and the universe is hoping they may never know the dumps; but when patriach and widdy get to acting gay and giddy, then the cold world merely sniggers and refers to them as chumps. Do your loving in your Junetime, in your mad and mellow moontime, ere the winter of existence brings the shadow and the cold; for there's naught on earth that's sadder than to see an ancient gadder toting round a shelf-worn widow, courting like a ten-year-old!

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

THE GANNON'S BRIDGE.

Editor of The Review:

Sir,—The letter of Mr. Robert Shaw, Reeve of Harvey and Warden of the County of Peterborough, places that gentleman in a curious light before the people of the county which he misrepresents. He admits that the present bridge was built at the expense of the Harvey Council, the two governments, and the County Council. Now he saddles the whole expense of making over the bridge on the County what have the County Councillors got to say to this. Their ratepayers will want explanation.

FAIR PLAY.

THE HEALTH SUPERVISION.

Editor Review:

Dear Sir:—

Regarding the complaint in Thursday's Review about children being sent home from school who had nothing but "a mere rash," I wish to say that in doing this the School Health Supervisor was simply carrying out her duties, as all suspected cases of contagious or infectious diseases must be dealt with in this way.

As to allowing children to remain at school when other members of the same family are ill with a contagious disease, such a thing is never permitted with the knowledge of either the teacher or the Health Supervisor. If information regarding such cases were sent to the teacher, it would be appreciated and would greatly aid in preventing the spread of disease.

Birthdays Note

SATURDAY, APRIL FOURTH

PROFESSOR A. P. COLEMAN, who has been head of the department of geology in the University of Toronto for the past twenty years and who is probably the greatest authority on his special subject in Canada, is sixty-two years of age to-day. As an explorer and mountain-climber he possesses a great reputation. There is a story about his prowess in this direction, which is worth repeating. A party of geologists attending an international congress, were out examining some rock formation in Sweden. In the evening seated around the fire in an inn, some of them began to discuss the day's events. One of the distinguished men present took occasion to refer to the way a member of the party had always got ahead of everyone else—a small active man, who he believed was a Canadian. Thereupon a guide struck in and told how a few years before at a geological gathering in Mexico, there had been a Canadian who had distinguished himself in the same way, "and his name," said the guide, "was Colley-mann." On comparing notes it was found that the energetic Canadians were one and the same person—Professor Coleman of Toronto.

SUNDAY, APRIL FIFTH

THIS is the eighty-eighth birthday of JOHN R. BOOTH, one of the most picturesque old men of the present day in Canada. He was born in Shefford, P.Q., but has been a resident of Ottawa for fifty-seven years, where he has long been prominent in the lumber and paper industries. His vitality is remarkable. Not many months ago, while inspecting his mill in Ottawa, he had the misfortune to break his leg. He was taken to the hospital to have the injured limb set. The doctor was about to administer an anæsthetic, when the veteran lumberman demanded what be was about. When told, he refused absolutely to be put under the influence of the drug and insisted on being propped up so that he might watch the operation. He actually looked on with intrepid courage while the limb was set, enduring pain which would have overcome much younger men.

To Drive Last Spike.

WINNIPEG, April 4.—A large number of railway men and special guests left Winnipeg last night on No. 1 over the G.T.P., bound west for the driving of the last spike in the Grand Trunk Pacific, which will link up the main line from Winnipeg to Prince Rupert.

The party included Morley Donaldson, general manager and vice-president of the G.T.P.; G. V. Cave, assistant general manager; A. S. Smith, manager of G.T.P. telegraphs; H. H. Hansard, legal representative; H. A. K. Drury, engineer of the board of railway commissioners, and a number of other officials.

Called Mason; Gets Damages.

MONTREAL, April 4. — Judge Charbonneau yesterday morning awarded Gonzalves Desaulnier, K.C., $250 damages in his suit against L'Action Sociale, the organ of Archbishop Begin of Quebec. Mr. Desaulnier asked for $25,000. L'Action Sociale reprinted the statements of a French professor who accused Mr. Desaulnier of being a Mason, and always willing to stir up unfounded scandals against the Roman Catholic Church.

AMPERE WAS ABSENT-MINDED

Ampere, the famous mathematician and physicist, was one of the most absent minded men that ever lived, as the following story from the Taegliche Rundschau goes far to prove:

In September, 1806, Ampere read a learned paper on his researches before the Academy of Sciences in Paris. When he had finished his lecture and was about to take his seat he found, to his surprise, that it was occupied. Greatly agitated, he went to Geoffrey Saint-Hilaire, the president of the academy, and said, "Mr. President, I must call your attention to the fact that some one who is not a member of this body has entered the chamber and taken my seat."

The president replied calmly, "You are mistaken, my learned brother; the person whom you have in mind is, like ourselves, a fellow of the Academy of Sciences."

"How long, I should like to ask?" said Ampere.

"Since Nivose of the year VI," said the president, who was now entering into the humor of the situation.

"Well, that is odd!" cried Ampere, and, seizing a calendar of the academy, he opened to the date Saint-Hilaire had mentioned and read: "Napoleon Bonaparte, fellow of the Academy of Sciences, chosen in Nivose of the year VI."

Much disturbed, Ampere made all sorts of apologies and explained that he had not recognized the emperor on account of his poor eyesight.

"You see what happens," said Napoleon, "when you don't get round to meet your fellow members. I have never seen you at the Tuileries. But now I shall command you to come and see me. Tomorrow at 7 o'clock you will dine with me."

The next evening the emperor waited two hours for Ampere, but he had long since forgotten the invitation.

Importance of Sleep.

A very frequent cause of nervousness in many persons is loss of sleep. It gives rise to headaches and neuralgia and is mainly responsible for other distressing ailments. The man or woman whose sleep is unduly disturbed as the result of of heavy mental work, by night watching at the bedside of the sick or through irregular hours of employment should endeavor to secure a little refreshing sleep whenever possible in order to make up for the loss sustained, for not only will headaches and other ailments develop from sleeplessness, but the nervous system will soon become considerably deranged as a consequence. So be careful upon this point.

WIZARD BURBANK'S ADVICE.

Go to the Farm, Young Man, and Your Future Is Assured.

Luther Burbank, by experience and accomplishment doubtless the best qualified man in the world today to make such a statement, says the great opportunity for our boys and young men is in agriculture. He points out that after the young man has spent eight years at hard study of medicine, the law or engineering, he has not made a success; he is only prepared to commence the battle for it. Whereas to add but one kernel of corn to each ear grown in this country in a single year would increase the supply 6,000,000 bushels. One improvement in the potato is already paying back $17,000,000 a year. Everything we eat and wear comes out of the ground. With less than half our population raising things, should there be any wonder that the cost of living has increased 58 per cent in fifteen years? To quote from Mr. Burbank:

"What the world needs urgently and now is men who can increase the forage from our present acreage, so that 16 cents will buy a pound of the choicest sirloin, as of old, instead of a pound of rump, as now.

"What the world needs is not theory or agitation or college lore. There are plenty of these, and at a cost of $190,000,000 per annum in money and who knows how much time they have succeeded in increasing our crop yield only a bare 3 per cent.

"What the world needs is men who can do to agriculture and to horticulture what Edison did to electricity, Carnegie to steel and the Vanderbilts, Hills and Harrimans to transportation—develop their efficiency."—Popular Mechanics.

One Advantage.

"We will never be bothered with mosquitoes once we move into this flat, May."

"Won't we, Jack?"

"You bet we won't."

"How can you tell?"

"There won't be room for one."

Hopeless Case.

"The cost of living is frightful!"

"Well, we might as well brace up and make the best of it, for there is no escape."

"None?"

"No; the undertakers have also decided to raise their rates."

Wasn't Saying.

"If you had your life to live over again, would you do things different?"

"You bet I would."

"In what particular?"

"Well, I am married, for one thing."

POLAR BEARS

Powerful, But Timid, They Very Rarely Attack Human Beings

Observations made throughout a number of years by officers of the United States revenue marine prove that the polar bear's limit of range is St. Matthew island in Bering sea. A few of these bears were at one time seen near the seal islands, being adrift upon a huge ice floe. On St. Matthew island the bears have lairs and dens among the rock glens that abound upon the island. They feed almost entirely upon seals, walruses and dead drift whales, and, though disdaining to devour the blubber, the flesh is greedily consumed. A carcass upon which a bear has passed his gastronomic judgment reveals the skin and its fatty lining torn asunder, the flesh being cut into strips and shreds by the powerful claws and teeth. A single blow of a bear's paw upon a seal's head suffices to kill it, and, dragged out upon the ice, a meal is soon dispatched.

In summer the hairy coat of the polar bear turns to a dingy yellow and its pelt then becomes of no value. They have not near the courage of the interior bears and will rarely attack a person unless there are two or three in company. As soon as they scent a man approaching they, as a rule, will shamble off as fast as they can, and there are but few records of a bear killing any of the natives along the northern coast.

The Eskimos are very partial to the meat of the white bear, but the blubber they reject, and even the dogs, unless they are very hungry, turn up their noses at the oily mass. Ten years ago it was a hard matter to secure the entire skin of a polar bear. The Eskimos formerly cut off the head and claws and either threw them into the sea or buried them in the ground. One of their superstitions is that should the head and claws not be disposed of the friends of the dead animal will see the remains and consequently leave that particular district and will never return.—Juneau (Alaska) News.

BABY'S OWN TABLETS USED FOR YEARS

When a mother uses only one medicine as long as there are little ones in the home it certainly bears grand testimony to the value of that particular remedy. Thousands of mothers use nothing else but Baby's Own Tablets. Concerning them, Mrs. M. LeBlanc, Memramcook West, N.B., writes: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets for my little ones for the past ten years, and know of nothing to equal them during teething time or for colic, constipation and indigestion. All my neighbors who have used them think as I do." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Two Eggless Recipes.

Cabbage or Salad Dressing.—Melt in a double boiler one generous tablespoonful of butter. Add to it one tablespoonful of flour, one teaspoonful of sugar, one-half teaspoonful of dry mustard, three dashes of paprika, one quarter teaspoonful of salt, white pepper to taste. When these are well blended add slowly, stirring constantly to avoid lumps, one-half pint of boiling water and three drops of Worcestershire sauce. Continue stirring until thick. Cook five minutes; if too thick put in a little more water. Should the dressing be for cold slaw pour it while hot over finely shredded cabbage; if for salads use when cold.

Surprise Molasses Cake.—Put into a deep agate pan one-half pint of baking molasses, two generous tablespoonfuls of sweet lard, the grated rind of one orange, one-quarter teaspoonful of salt and one small teaspoonful of baking soda. Put these on the fire for two minutes to melt; remove, beat for two minutes; pour in one gill of boiling water, stir up and add one pint good measure of sifted flour, beat long enough to remove lumps. Grease twelve large muffin pans and put in batter, which will seem thin; bake twenty minutes in a brisk oven; take care that it does not burn.

His luck was down, and it was true

"They keep a lot of servants, I suppose."

"Not at all! They are so wealthy that they can afford to fire them."

"Suckers?"

"Yes."

are not a new and untried remedy—our grandfathers used them. Half a century ago, before Confederation, they were on sale in nearly every drug or general store in the Canada of that day, and were the recognized cure in thousands of homes for Constipation, Indigestion, Biliousness, Rheumatism and Kidney and Liver Troubles. To-day they are just as effective, just as reliable as ever, and nothing better has yet been devised to

Cure Common Ills

MOTHER OF SCHOOL GIRL

Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Daughter's Health.

Plover, Iowa.—"From a small child my 13 year old daughter had female weakness. I spoke to three doctors about it and they did not help her any. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had been of great benefit to me, so I decided to have her give it a trial. She has taken five bottles of the Vegetable Compound according to directions on the bottle and she is cured of this trouble. She was all run down when she started taking the Compound and her periods did not come right. She was so poorly and weak that I often had to help her dress herself, but now she is regular and is growing strong and healthy."—Mrs. MARTIN HELVIG, Plover, Iowa.

Hundreds of such letters expressing gratitude for the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has accomplished are constantly being received, proving the reliability of this grand old remedy.

If you are ill do not drag along and continue to suffer day in and day out but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a woman's remedy for woman's ills.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Pardonable Error.

There was great excitement on Mars as the earth drew near. Astronomers had their eyes glued to the telescopes like postage stamps to love letters, and their meals were fed to them by subcutaneous injections.

Excited crowds outside were gathered around the bulletin board, which had just announced that the earth had several thousand satellites in addition to the one big moon—either that, it was stated, or else the earth people were able to pick up their houses and walk.

Just then Professor Zazazaza, who had been snatching a few hours' sleep, woke up, turned his trained eye on the earth and informed the waiting crowds that the women of the earth wore hats four times as large as themselves, which had led to the curious mistake.

THEY USE DOGS AS BLANKETS

Every visitor to one of the great Paris stores will have noticed counters covered with table cutlery of the characteristic French pattern—broad, curved blades and horn or black bone handles, excellent steel and very cheap. Almost all this is made at Thiers and by hand. But there is no external sign of manufacture, and a traveler might pass through the town without suspecting a great industry.

The swift flowing Durolle supplies power at the bottom of a deep and narrow gorge, on the steep side of which the apparently sleepy town is built. At one story below street level we came to the forges of the chief firm. Here, with extraordinary quickness and skill the knives are hand forged—blade, hilt and tang—from steel bar, then tempered one by one, and two stories lower down, at river level, in a long, dark, damp cellar, they are ground, and it is the method of this process, unique so far as I know, that makes the industry of Thiers worth a moment's description.

The river turns a score of emery wheels about a yard in diameter, and above each of these is a narrow, sloping platform six feet long and two wide. Along each of these, flat and face downward, lay a grinder, man or woman, grasping a blade by the two ends and pressing it by the whole weight of the body against the revolving wheel just below. The long row of stretched out bodies gave a grim impression of something between a field hospital and a mortuary.

The foreman assured us that it was much easier work thus to press against the wheel by one's weight than to sit and press by the force of one's arms. But to lie thus almost motionless all day long in a dank cellar, far below the ground level, is about as dreary and unhealthy a way for a human being to pass his life as can be imagined. The place itself cannot be warmed, but to keep at least a little heat in their bodies and stave off rheumatism as long as possible the grinders have adopted the extraordinary expedient of training dogs to lie all day upon them—dogs of all sorts and sizes. There they lay, curled up on the backs of their owners' thighs, living hot bottles.—Sir Henry Norman in Scribner's.

Visible Molecules.

The year 1913 recorded the first demonstration visible to the eye that all matter is composed of molecules, built up of atoms in crystalline forms. By passing X rays through a crystal an "interference photograph" resulted, showing the so called space lattice of the crystal and giving conclusive ocular proof of Dalton's atomic theory.—New York Times.

A NEW SILHOUETTE.

There is a present season tendency with some of the Paris dressmakers to produce silhouettes in a straight line, and here is an imported frock that proves the new rule in so far as the tunic is concerned, accordeon pleated of soft tango crepe, falling from a high waistline very loosely outlined with a crush girdle. This design is especially adapted to juvenile figures and can be developed in chiffon, silk or cotton voile, with a narrow straight skirt.

Had Him Located.

"All is lost," said the discouraged politician, "but honor."

"What is that?" said the deaf man who had a way of hearing part of what was said and jumping at the rest. "His honor lost? No; that can't be! I had a drink with him in a saloon around the corner just a few minutes ago."

Fair in War.

"Do you think George Washington ever told a lie?"

"Certainly not."

"Never?"

"Well, he may have told a few white lies to the red men during the colonial wars."

ST. JOHN'S FEARS FOR SAFETY OF STEAMER SOUTHERN CROSS

Number of Newfoundland's Dead Has Been Placed at Seventy-seven, But If Southern Cross Is Lost a Hundred and Seventy May Be Added To the List.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., April 4.—As the hour went by last night without word from the sealing steamer Southern Cross, fear grew that her crew of 170 men had been added to the toll of Tuesday's blizzard in which men of the sealer Newfoundland lost their lives.

The number of the Newfoundland's dead was placed definitely at 77 late yesterday, with the further possibility that several of the 112 who were rescued would succumb to the effects of the 48 hours' exposure.

Arrangements were made last night for the reception of the rescue ship Bellaventure, which is expected to arrive to-day, bringing most of the dead, and many of the survivors.

In an effort to solve the mystery of the disappearance of the Southern Cross, the Newfoundland Government asked the American revenue cutter Seneca to leave the ice patrol and search for the missing sealer. The coastal steamer Kyle, which has a wireless equipment, was fitted out here for a cruise along the southeastern coast off which the Southern Cross was last seen on Tuesday morning, a few hours before the three days' blizzard set in.

Although the vessels of the so-called wooden walled sealing fleet of which the Southern Cross was one, have bucked ice floes with impunity, and are regarded as very staunch ships, sealers say her cargo of 17,000 seal pelts would be an active danger during a storm on account of instability.

DOMINION HOUSE HAS QUIET DAY

OTTAWA, April 4.—The House of Commons having been in session until after three o'clock yesterday morning all contentious matters were avoided at yesterday's sitting. Several Government bills were advanced yesterday afternoon, including Mr. Nantel's bill to amend the Adulteration Act, which was given a second reading. The bill is introduced to protect the manufacturers and venders of maple syrup, and prohibits the use of the word "maple" on any brand or label upon any syrup which is not boiled down syrup of the maple tree. The bill was referred to a select standing committee on agriculture, and all persons desiring to be heard for or against the bill should notify Mr. Sexsmith (East Peterboro), the chairman of the committee.

Mr. Pelletier's resolution making some slight advance in the pay of certain postal employes passed through committee and the bill founded thereon was introduced and read the first time.

At four o'clock the House went over to the Senate chamber, where the royal assent was given to a number of bills, including the interim supply bill.

In the public accounts committee yesterday W. M. German of Welland, after securing an order for the production of all papers and vouchers respecting payments of $18,858,000 to J. D. McArthur, railway contractor, had the committee summon Major Leonard, chairman of the Transcontinental commission; Gordon Grant, chief engineer, and Collingwood Schreiber, C.M.G., to give evidence on Tuesday next. The subject of the enquiry will be payments made in the McArthur contract in respect to overclassification.

SUFFRAGETTE IN CUPBOARD.

She and Companions Had Secreted Themselves in House.

GLASGOW, Scotland, April 4—The caretaker of a large vacant mansion near Rutherglen, three miles southeast of Glasgow, yesterday captured a militant suffragette found hiding in a cupboard in the cellar of the mansion. The woman was locked up by the caretaker, who telephoned the police, who arrested her. The police arrived too late, however, to prevent the escape of several other suffragettes in the building, who in their hurried flight had left their cloaks behind them.

Search of the mansion disclosed bottles containing paraffin and also cotton wool and matches and other inflammable material, which had been placed evidently with the purpose of starting fires.

Submarine Hits Gunboat.

LONDON, April 4.—While rising after having been submerged during a sham attack off Harwich, Essex, yesterday, submarine C 2 struck the propeller of a gunboat. The periscope and part of the conning tower of the submarine were torn away by the impact, and only the coolness of her officers and crew prevented her from sinking.

DIAMOND DEAL

Uncut Gems Have Changed Hands in London.

LONDON, April 4.—A great diamond deal has just been completed by Messrs. L. Bretmeyer & Co., London, who bought German Southwest African uncut diamonds to the amount of 900,000 carats for approximately £1,000,000. Other large firms in England and on the continent have been competing for the diamonds, which are of moderate size, and in bulk would almost fill an ordinary traveling trunk. They will be forwarded to England in parcels labelled according to the size of the stones. Transactions of this kind are carried out for the cost of the estimated value of the rough diamonds. One, in German Southwest African, in 1913, involved £12,000,000. The stones, which are sold through the Government, are found by the shore, where they are knocked into shape by heavy winds which cause the sand to rub against them. After a gale they can be found on the surface.

GOULD GETS SIX YEARS.

German Spy Goes to Prison But Wife Is Set Free.

LONDON, April 4.—The trial of Frederick Adolphus Gould and his wife, charged with spying on the British navy, supposedly in the interest of Germany, was begun and ended yesterday at the Old Bailey.

Gould was sentenced to six years' penal servitude, to be followed by deportation. Mrs. Gould was discharged, the indictment against her being withdrawn.

The fact that Gould's arrest followed upon an investigation by the secret service police indicates that he obtained possession of important naval documents, and the serious view taken of the case was shown by the sentence, the maximum penalty being seven years.

A Question of Reliability.

LONDON, April 4.—The Spectator, commenting upon the status of the Panama Canal tolls repeal bill in the United States Congress, says in an editorial yesterday:

"The honor of the United States is now at stake before the whole world. We do not think we shall be charged with affectation if we say that the question whether British ships are, or are not, to pay more than their share for the up-keep of the canal is as nothing compared with the question whether the United States can or cannot be counted upon to accept the obvious meanings of treaties and scrupulously to observe them."

Two Fell Dead of Fright.

WORCESTER, Mass., April 4.—Patrick Eagleson, 70 years of age, of Duggan street, Spencer, and Mrs. Bennis Arseneault, 60 years old, of 48 Maple street, Spencer, dropped dead from fright in the street yesterday afternoon as they witnessed a three-cornered fight between Martin Niederberger, a chauffeur employed by Walter Watson, of Leicester, and Stanley Orutt and Chas. Barmon, employes of a Niagara cereal company who were distributing samples in the town.

The three fighters are under arrest.

REBEL LEADER IS UNSPARING OF DEFENDERS OF TORREON

Victor Is Now In Full Control of the City and Gen. Velasco Is In Full Flight With Pursuers at His Heels—Villa Dines In State With Grime of Battle Still on Him—Has Huge Territory Now.

TORREON, Mexico, April 4.—Gen. Villa, the victorious, took dinner in the Hotel Salvatore last night after two weeks of beans and tortillas, his hair uncombed and his face unshaven. The day was given over to looting and executions. Velasco and his little band of Federals are battling against the inevitable in an effort to gain a friendly port to the southward. In close pursuit is Ortega and Rosalia Hernandez. They have been barking at Velasco's heels all day, and they have orders to take him prisoner at any cost of men or mounts.

In the city the volley-firing against adobe walls indicates the fate of the brave Federal defenders. No "Colorados" are to be taken prisoners. The "Colorados" are the former rebels of Orozco's revolution who joined with Huerta. Villa considers them as traitors, and says that they must pay the penalty all traitors pay. The poor peon Federals, driven to battle by the flats of swords, and impressed from the prisons, are to be spared, for men are needed to repair the line, to bury the dead, and bring in the wounded. How many have been killed, how few have escaped, and how many executed prisoners, no one will ever know. Velasco started the valiant defence of the city with 12,000. He left with less than 2,000, and many of these are dropping on the desert from the fatigue of the long fight and the wounds they received. Villa suffered heavily, and his losses will likewise be countless, as he keeps no muster roll and the unknown dead cover the flats by the river.

The fighting since Sunday week has been almost continuous. Repulse after repulse was suffered by Villa and his forces, but they returned to the fray, and finally triumphed. This victory is the most significant event that has occurred since Madero captured Juarez in his revolution. The revolution of Villa can no longer be classed as one of national importance. Huerta, at the National Palace, faces the most formidable revolution Mexico has ever seen. The very gates of the capital are to be stormed, and by a ragged outlaw brigand who crossed the Rio Grande only thirteen months ago with three mules, a sack of maize flour and a half-dozen followers. Last night Villa was cheered as the greatest military genius of modern Mexico. Recruits are flocking to him from all parts of the war-ridden country to replace the thousand men who were lost in battle. Before the celebration was under way Villa issued orders that Saltillo and Monterey, the two remaining garrisons in the central tier of the States, would be stormed, and he is already preparing to attack these points preliminary to moving on Mexico City itself.

With the taking of Torreon by the rebels the Constitutionalists now control an immense wedge-shaped portion of Mexico, with the point resting on Torreon, 500 miles south of here, and the top extending along the American border, from Nogales, Ariz., to a point just west of Eagle Pass, Texas. At Piedgras Negras, known as Ciudad Porfirio Diaz, across the Rio Grande from Eagle Pass, there is a Federal garrison, but it does not now constitute a menace to the rebels.

Tampico To Surrender?

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Constitutionalist outposts within five miles of Tampico are preparing to attack the city, Rear Admiral Fletcher reported yesterday, adding that he had private advices that the Federals are preparing to surrender without resistance.

ELLIOTT WANTS PUBLIC PHONES

But He Doesn't Say How to Get Them, Says Lucas

TORONTO, April 4.—After a brief debate yesterday the Ontario Legislature rejected J. C. Elliott's resolution regretting that Hon. I. B. Lucas had not submitted a report to the House on his investigations in Great Britain two years ago into the public ownership and operation of telephones, and urging that immediate steps be taken to establish a public-owned and operated service.

The debate was continued from Thursday night's adjournment. Mr. Elliott maintained that under proper administration the cost of this service would be greatly lessened and the benefit of the telephone extended to almost every home in the province.

Hon. Dr. Lucas, in continuing the debate, referred to the vague nature of the resolution. There was not a single suggestion what the Legislature should do except think about it. The whole matter, said the Minister, was one which came under the jurisdiction of the Federal Government, which had granted the concessions in the first place. As for buying out the company, it would take probably $30,000,000 to buy the Bell Telephone Co. Should they take up the long-distance and fight the thing out whith the Bell Telephone Co. It would mean duplication of plant, immense economic waste in this province, and years of bitter fighting.

The amendment of Mr. Pattinson was carried. It was to the effect that the House approve of the report of the Provincial Treasurer, made to the House in 1913, that experience in Great Britain justified the conclusion that it was not desirable for the Government to duplicate existing lines and enter into competition with the telephone system, owned and operated by a corporation over which the province had no jurisdiction.

Further amendments to the motor vehicles act are sought by Mr. Wm. McDonald (Centre Bruce) to reduce the speed of cars to four miles an hour when passing horse-drawn vehicles, and to prohibit the use of streamers and pennants.

NO HALF MEASURES.

WASHINGTON, April 4. — In the Panama Canal toll exemption controversy two salient points were emphasised in the under current developments of the day. One was the concerted effort being made by Republican Senators to unite against the President's repeal policy on the ground of political expediency, and the other was the reinforced determination of administration leaders to yield to no compromise on the House bill providing for flat repeal of toll exemption for American ships.

Among Republican Senators who have been classified as doubtful with regard to their intentions concerning the repeal, there is a general tendency to line up against the President. Democratic Senators who are championing the President's cause assert that they welcome this movement, confident that it can have no other effect than to solidify the Democrats and aid in assuring success for the administration. These Democrats, while admitting that five of their number cannot be induced to abandon their opposition to the bill, insist that there is every indication that all other majority Senators eventually will support the bill.

Unknown Millionaires.

The sale of the Duke of Bedford's Covent Garden property in London to Mr. Mallaby-Deeley, M.P., for a sum believed to be in the neighborhood of $15,000,000 has caused the London Daily Mirror to print an article in which it remarks that London has many unknown millionaires.

The metropolis, it is declared, is full of men who could put down millions of dollars at almost a moment's notice. Yet, beyond their own small circles, nothing is known of them. Not only the city but the suburbs also have many of these millionaires.

Until a comparatively short while ago, Mr. Mallaby-Deeley was almost unknown to the general public. To-day he barely enters business circles, and he says that he is not a business man, yet his colossal deals are the talk of the hour. A little while ago, too, there was the case of Birch Crisp, the almost unknown man who was responsible for the $50,000,000 loan to China. Up to that time the public had never heard of him. Then, suddenly, it knew him as the financial giant who was fighting against the world.

The public was staggered, too, when Charles Morrison of Coleman street, London, died and left over $55,000,000. Mr. Morrison was in no sense a public figure, and he had gone on quietly amassing his huge fortune without any one knowing very much about him.

In The Guards.

The guardsmen have many privileges. Guards' officers, though usually rich men, are better paid than line officers. For instance, the ordinary pay of a Guards' lieutenant is the same as that of an infantry subaltern, but in addition he draws "Guards' pay" at the rate of $350 a year.

In regard to the rank and file, a guardsman private gets a penny a day more than the infantry Tommy, where the pay of other grades is also higher.

In the Guards' "Magna Charta," as contained in the King's Regulations, it is laid down that:—

"Officers of the Foot Guards are not to be put on duty with other troops, nor are officers of other corps to be put on duty with, or to command, men of the Foot Guards.

"In performing the duties of a garrison or camp they will be kept distinct as much as possible; but, under the immediate command of their own officers, they will perform whatever duties may be required of them."

Sawdust Sugar.

In the course of a paper read before the Royal Society of Arts, in London, Dr. Zimmerman described a process by which sugar might be manufactured from sawdust.

In its natural state, he pointed out, wood contains no sugar, but when sawdust has been subjected in closed retorts to digestion with a weak sulphurous acid solution under pressure of six to seven atmospheres, a very remarkable transmutation takes place, as much as twenty-five per cent. of the material being converted into sugar. In this Dr. Zimmerman claims that we have a valuable feeding stuff for horses, cattle, and sheep.

Sir Robert Peel and a friend were once going through a picture gallery where there was a portrait of a well known man who was famous for saying sharp things.

"How wonderfully like!" said the friend. "You can see the quiver on his lips."

"Yes," replied Sir Robert, "and the arrows coming out of it."

GRAHAM DENIES

He Offers Big Forfeit If He Owns Tramway Stock

MONTREAL, April 4—For months The Montreal Herald before it was merged with The Telegram, printed this query in connection with its campaign against the street railway system: "Who owns ten thousand shares of Tramway stock?"

A "reader" has now written to The Montreal Star asking if it is possible that Sir Hugh Graham, its head, owns the stock, and Sir Hugh has issued a specific denial with the offer to give $800,000 to different hospitals and $200,000 "for a fund to provide a decent living for the blackmailers of the Montreal press," if his denial is found incorrect.

Sir Hugh's denial follows:

"Not only do I not own ten thousand shares of Tramway stock, but as it happens, I do not own one share and have no option promise, or expectation of shares. I remember some years ago my secretary having bought in the open market for my brother a small lot of street railway shares. That is the nearest I ever got to owning Tramway stock."

May Expropriate Company.

WINDSOR, Ont., April 4. — The president of the Sandwich, Windsor and Amherstburg Railroad Co. has refused an offer of $155,000 made by the civic light committee for the company's lighting plant, and expropriation proceedings probably will be taken. The object is to eliminate competition to the Hydro system.

Windsor Wants Member.

WINDSOR, Ont., April 4. — The city council last night adopted a unanimous resolution to present a claim for a separate member of the Provincial Legislature in the next redistribution of seats. The last Government census showed the population to be 19,000, but it has grown, and now has reached the 25,000 mark.

Blacks Kill Missionaries.

PERTH, Australia, April 4.—It is reported that the blacks have destroyed the Drysdale River mission and murdered two priests and lay brethren and many half-breeds.

CHINESE SERVANT ARRESTED.

He Is Believed to Know What Became of Vancouver Woman.

VANCOUVER, B.C., April 4. — A mystery which the police believe must include the murder of Mrs. Charles J. Millard, 1,650 Pendril street, is to-day baffling the entire force of the city.

Mrs. Millard, who is the wife of the chief ticket agent at the C. P. R. depot and who has lived in Vancouver for many years, has disappeared. The police believe she was killed. Not the slightest clue as to what became of her has been found, but the police have arrested a Chinese servant employed in the Millard residence, and they believe that he can solve the mystery of the disappearance would he but speak.

Aged Magistrate Retires.

RIDGETOWN, April 4. — When John P. McKinlay resigned the position of police magistrate of Ridgetown, the oldest magistrate in active service in Ontario, ceased his official duties. Mr. McKinlay celebrated his 91st birthday on Jan. 1, and has been holding court and deciding cases regularly.

TONE OF ASQUITH'S ADDRESS WILL DETERMINE ACTION OF UNIONISTS

Prime Minister Raises "the Army vs. the People" Issue in East Fife, the Opposition Will Put a Candidate Into the Field—Balfour's Speech In Commons Has Put Vigor Into the Unionists.

LONDON, April 4.—Premier Asquith was given a big send-off when he departed from London yesterday for his constituency of East Fife, Scotland, where he is to deliver to-day a speech to his constituents. Large crowds of Liberal supporters gathered at the stations along the line, and at every stopping place the Premier received addresses from Liberal associations, expressing the wish that "the electors of East Fife will send you back to Parliament with redoubled authority to maintain the traditions of the army, the authority of the crown and the power of the people."

Mr. Asquith will make his first speech at Ladybank, eight miles southwest of Cupar-Angus. The Unionists threaten that if this speech is provocative in the sense of raising the army question as an electioneering device, they will rescind their decision not to oppose the Premier's re-election.

At Edinburgh yesterday Mr. Asquith said:

"I really do not know what is going to happen here in Fife. I have been somewhat diverted as I came along by reading what my friends who are in political opposition to me are going to do. I gather that after some hesitation and much deliberation they have, provisionally at any rate, came to the conclusion that I am to have a conditional walkover; conditional that is upon my being upon my best behaviour during the next two or three days. Gentlemen, this is very alarming. I can only say, and I say it in all good temper, that if they think that either hope or fear of what they are going to do or not going to do will have any effect whatever upon what I say or upon what I do, then it is high time they disabused themselves of that impression."

The Standard says the Unionists regard the big farewell demonstration when Mr. Asquith left London yesterday morning as provocate, and much will depend on whether his speech to-night is as conciliatory as it is hoped for or whether he will have an opponent.

The "die hard" Conservative organs publish warnings against undue optimism as to the Ulster situation. The Pall Mall Gazette, the daily edition of J. L. Garvin's Sunday Observer, declared yesterday that "an election first" remained the Unionist policy, and added: "If an election first be accepted, there will be an increasing movement in favor of the principle of federalism and full co-operation between the parties in working out a great scheme of devolution."

The Pall Mall Gazette reiterates the determination of the Unionists of Ulster to proceed with the establishment and proclamation of the provisional government if the Home Rule bill be passed before an election.

When yesterday's developments in Parliament are reviewed by the newspapers this morning there seems a general concensus of opinion that the politicians are drifting apart again, and that Mr. Balfour's speech has served to stiffen the once slackening opposition. The apparent Unionist support of Sir Edward Grey's federal idea proposition has dwindled away in view of the impossibility of carrying out such a scheme prior to a general election.

The Ulster leaders declare that there are but three alternatives — a referendum, a general election, or the withdrawal of the Home Rule bill and the consequent maintenance of Ulster's position within the Empire.

The Morning Post says the Liberals are now trying to make all possible capital out of Premier Asquith's bold appeal for a vote of confidence from his own familiar friends in East Fife, because the Unionists have not at once decided to contest the seat. The cry is being raised, they are afraid of challenging the verdict of the electors. As a matter of fact, in view of the strong feelings in the constituency, it is by no means certain that there will not be a fight. A contested election would serve a useful purpose even if its result were wholly unfavorable to the Unionist candidate. It is the Liberals who have shirked and who continue to shirk a fair and open trial at the bar of public opinion.

Premier Asquith's progress from London to Fife is calculated to awaken recollections among the elders of the people of Gladstone's famous travels through the country, when every stoppage was made the occasion of a speech from the train window. Addresses of confidence from local Liberals were presented at Grantham, York, Newcastle, Berwick and Edinburgh.

Greeks and Albanians Clash.

VIENNA, April 4.—A report was received here yesterday from Avlona, Albania, that Greek irregular forces were fiercely attacking Koritsa and other towns on the Argyro-Castro Koritsa line. Koritsa was reported to be in flames, and many persons were said to have been killed.

Cut Caused Lockjaw.

KINGSTON, April 4. — Gerald B. Howes, seven-year-old son of G. B. Howes, of Parham, died in the General Hospital yesterday of lockjaw. A week ago while at play he fell on the ice and suffered a bad cut on the forehead. He was doing nicely before lockjaw set in.

Cy Warman's Condition Serious.

CHICAGO, April 4.—The condition of Cy Warman, known as the Rocky Mountain poet, who has been ill in a hospital here for several weeks, is serious but not critical, according to his physicians. Mr. Warman was taken ill while at a hotel here March 15. His condition became so serious that he was taken to a hospital two days later.

Missionaries In China Warned.

PEKIN, April 4.—All the missionaries in the vicinity of Sian-Fu Province of Shensi have been ordered to take refuge in Sian-Fu, as the brigands have invaded the nearby plains and now are within twenty miles of the city. A Government force from the city of Shensi is proceeding to the affected district to relieve the situation.

TRADES AND LABOR COUNCIL

Notes by Official Scribe.

There was a goodly number at the Council's meeting this week, J. J. Hartley, president, calling the representatives to order shortly after 8 p.m.

Another Visit from James Simpson.

Controller Simpson, of Toronto, announced his willingness to speak at a public meeting on request of the Council. A very full list of engagements prevented him from offering a date earlier than 6th May. The meeting thereupon declared itself satisfied with the date, and hope that the workingmen of Peterboro, whether organized or not, will flock to the Labor Hall that evening, and listen to the workingman's champion, James Simpson, as he unfolds in his own brilliant way, the possibilities of a shoulder to shoulder stand when taken by the world's wealth producers.

The Machinists' Representative.

The city is to have in its make-up in the next six weeks another labor leader in the person of James McIntee, International Representative of the Machinists' Union. He will be asked to address the Council at its next meeting, April 15. Mr. McIntee has an enviable reputation as an orator on the rights of labor, and his lucid and forceful explanations of the questions that confront capital and labor will be most beneficial to all who will make an effort to come and hear him.

A Non-Union, or Unfair, House.

As at last meeting much vigorous debating arose over the local show houses, Representative Howarth, of the Musicians wanted the stigma which was cast on the union musicians now playing at the Grand Opera House by the Council raised, as Owen Miller, the Secretary of the American Federation of Musicians, had written saying they did right by not quitting the Grand till they were ordered to do so from headquarters. To declare the Grand Opera House off the unfair list the Council did not wish, as Mr. Turner positively refused negotiations for a settlement. If Mr. Clayton could not obtain an entire union staff, the fault was not his, so good union men of the city can still sympathize with the locked-out theatrical workers as heretofore.

A BIG EVENT

Twenty-Ninth Anniversary of The Salvation Army

Twenty-nine years ago next Thursday, April 9th, the Salvation Army opened fire in Peterborough, and although much criticized and wondered at, they have gone on steadily. They are going to have a great five-day Celebration Thursday, April 9th, the principal speakers will be His Honour Judge Huycke, Mayor Buller and Magistrate Dumble. A great rousing enthusiastic meeting it will be, and all are invited.

Good Friday will see two special services, one in the afternoon at 3, and one in the evening at 8. Saturday evening will be a great Old Timers' meeting. Reminiscences of bygone days, together with a rousing welcome to Staff Captain and Mrs. McAmmond, old officers of the Peterboro Corps.

Sunday at 6.30 a.m. there will be a march around the city, followed by a Love Feast at 7 o'clock a.m., in the old church now occupied by the Christian Science Brethren, kindly loaned for the occasion. At 11 o'clock a Holiness Meeting, led by Staff-Captain and Mrs. McAmmond.

At 3 p.m. the principal speakers will be Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., A. E. Peck, M.L.A., and a representative of the City Council. The particulars of this great event will be given later. Sunday evening at 7 p.m. the service will be led by Staff-Capt. and Mrs. McAmmond. On Monday night the climax of the series of special meetings. There will be a great demonstration by the Young People of the Corps, entitled the Floral Cross.

The officers and soldiers of the corps are looking forward to big crowds, and much good being done. An Anniversary Banquet will be included in the big event.

WOMEN'S MISSION CIRCLE.

The annual meeting of the Women's Mission Circle of Murray Street Baptist Church, will be held, Tuesday, April 7th, at 3.30 p.m. in the Sunday school hall. A very interesting program has been arranged and all interested in missions will be welcomed.

NOT RECOMMENDED.

W. E. Brooks, President of the Young's Point Conservative Association, is authority for the statement that R. N. Stuart was not recommended by the Association as lockmaster for Lovesick. The report in a morning paper, he says, is incorrect.

Britain Not Land-Grabbing.

PHILADELPHIA, April 4. — That the principle of the Munroe doctrine is just as alive now as it ever was and that President Monroe's declaration is not an "obsolete shibboleth" was the trend of discussion yesterday at the annual meeting of the American Academy of Political and Social Science, which is considering the present international relations and obligations of the United States.

Speaking of Great Britain, in relation to the Monroe doctrine Seth Low said the British "crave no more territory."

It takes a young widow to convince a man that he is making love to her when she is doing all the love making herself.

ANNIVERSARY OF GEORGE STREET SUNDAY SCHOOL

Rev. F. L. Farewell to be Heard at Sunday Services.

The anniversary of George Street Church Sunday School will be held on Sunday, when Rev. F. L. Farewell, associate secretary of the Sunday school work, will be the visiting speaker. Mr. Farewell will address the congregation, an open session of the Sunday school in the afternoon, and will also speak at the evening service.

This Sunday school is one of the best in the city, with all the departments organized. There is a splendid staff of teachers and officers, who are under the able leadership of Mr. Wilson Taylor, B.A., of the Collegiate staff, who is the superintendent.

At the morning service, the primary department will occupy seats in the body of the church, and the intermediate classes will be in the gallery.

George Street Sunday School is steadily growing, and at the present time, the bible classes and some of the intermediate classes find it necessary to use the auditorium. A larger Sunday school room is a great necessity.

EVERY WIFE'S DUTY

Watch Husband's Hair. If Thin or Full of Dandruff, Insist on His Using Parisian Sage

Men as a class give but little thought to the care of the hair. Not until it comes out by the combful, or some friend remarks that they are getting bald, do they really take notice—then it may be too late.

If your husband's hair is getting thin; if he has dandruff or the scalp itches, take immediate action—do not let him become a bald head.

Get from any drug or toilet counter a 50 cent bottle of Parisian Sage. It contains the exact elements to supply hair and scalp needs. The first application removes all dandruff—the great hair destroyer. A little Parisian Sage rubbed well into the scalp for a few nights will work wonders. When the hair stops falling and the new growth appears use every other night until the hair is thick and abundant.

Parisian Sage is a delightful and invigorating hair tonic for men, women and children. It is a scientific preparation based on a thorough knowledge of what is needed by the hair and scalp to keep them perfectly healthy and remove dandruff, stop scalp itch and falling hair.

Surely try Parisian Sage. The Warne Drug Co. sells it with an agreement to refund your money if not satisfied. Look for the trademark —"The Girl with the Auburn Hair." Accept no other.

DIDN'T WANT PRESENTS

GIVE MONEY TO MONISTS SAID HAECKEL ON BIRTHDAY.

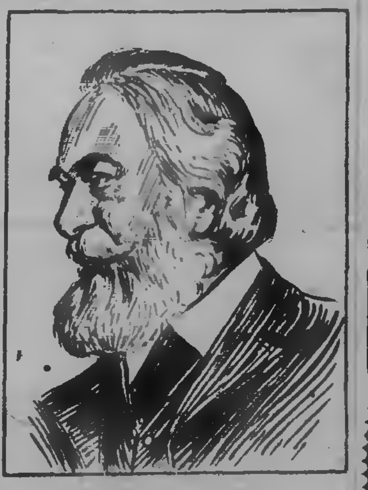
Celebrated Scientist and Expositor of the Evolutionary Theory, Who Attained the Age of Eighty Years a Few Weeks Ago, Has Passed Through Many Trials and Persecutions In Pursuit of Science.

Prof. Ernst Haeckel, the celebrated German philosopher and naturalist, was eighty years old on Feb. 16. His friends and disciples in all parts of the world had planned to present him with some fitting proof of their regard, but Herr Haeckel sent out an appeal to his friends requesting them to refrain from sending him any personal donations. He further asked them to devote any money intended as a gift to him to a special fund which he plans to place at the disposal of the German Monists' union, in order to make it international in scope.

Prof. Haeckel is the chief representative of radical naturalistic evolution in Germany and is a bold theorist. His best known works are "Natural History of Creation," "The Origin of the Human Race" and "The Riddle of the Universe."

Prof. Haeckel made his debut as a writer on scientific subjects in 1862, when he published his monographs on the "Radiolaria." This work, strongly influenced by Darwin's theory of evolution, created considerable interest in the scientific world and attracted the attention of scientists all over the world to the modest "Privatdozent," at Jena.

The novelty and boldness of the theories advanced in that work surprised even the advanced thinkers in Germany and aroused a storm of indignation among the traditionalists.



PROF. ERNST HAECKEL.

Prof. Haeckel was bitterly attacked and denounced as an enmey of mankind who had degraded his species, and determined efforts were made to have him dismissed from his professorship at the Jena University. But the late Grand Duke Karl Alexander of Saxe-Weimar, the protector of the young scientist, declined to interfere. When a prominent man begged the duke to prohibit the lectures of Haeckel, the duke asked his visitor whether he believed that the professor was really convinced of the truth of his statements.

"Certainly, I do," was the reply, "and what he says is all the worse for that very reason."

"But then," retorted the grand duke, "in that case he is doing nothing more than what you are doing yourself."

But Prof. Haeckel did not take all this quietly. He was a born fighter and never hesitated for a moment to enter into a polemic with his opponents. Undaunted by the storm of vituperation which his first important work had aroused, Haeckel, between 1866 and 1875, went on an extended tour of scientific exploration and investigation through Europe, Asia Minor, Syria and Egypt, from which he returned with a great mass of valuable material, which he used with telling effect in a series of epoch-making works.

Prof. Haeckel has always thoroughly enjoyed life, and his untamable, fighting spirit is still with him in his active old age. He has never quailed before opposition or hard names, but has remained a lusty, healthy, impetuous, intrepid youth, even when his hair had worn to snowy white. It is related that not many years ago, the Grand Duke of Weimar playfully rallied him, in the midst of a brilliant company, on his belief in evolution. To the amazement and horror of the guests, he slapped the grand duke on the back and replied: "Well, my good man, when you have time, just come over to Jena, and see some proofs of it!" In his seventy-fifth year he severely censured Kaiser William, in a public lecture at Berlin, for laying down the law on a subject of which His Imperial knew little or nothing.

When Prof. Haeckel retired from his chair at Jena, he did so with the avowed intention of devoting the rest of his life to the compilation of a large work on the "History of Biology" and the development and extension of the "Phyletic Museum" which he equipped and presented to the University of Jena in 1908.

Countess' Dancing Class.

The Countess of Aberdeen has taken in hand the task of teaching poor Dublin children how to dance and play. Every day at Dublin Castle, in a building used as a riding-school, scores of little ones from schools in the congested districts are guests at the Castle. Here teachers instruct them in folk dances, Swedish drill, and a number of exercises. Personal interest is taken in the work of instruction by the Lord Lieutenant and Lady Aberdeen.

SUSPENSION FOLLOWS HIS APPOINTMENT

Charges Are to be Preferred Against Constable Royce of Port Hope

Port Hope, April 4.—A sensation occurred at last night's meeting of the Town Council, when Constable Allan P. Royce was appointed Chief of Police by the board, and immediately afterwards suspended from office for thirty days by Mayor Bush, who will refer certain charges against Royce to the County Judge for investigation. Such was the dramatic sequel to a four months' controversy over the appointment of a Chief Constable for Port Hope.

Royce was formerly night constable of the town for a number of years, and has been Acting Chief since the dismissal of the former occupant of the position by last year's Council. The Police Committee advertised for applicants some weeks ago, as a result of which they received about twenty-five applications, including one from Royce, who came into prominence in the interim through his enforcement of the liquor license act. Certain charges were preferred against him to the Police Committee, the investigation of which did not satisfy the Mayor and some members of the Council.

Last night's vote on Royce's appointment stood four to four, and Councillor George A. Smith, who was in the chair, gave the casting vote in favor of Royce, thereby appointing him at a salary of $700 per annum and uniform. This was followed by Royce's suspension by the Mayor, and in order to clear the atmosphere the charges against Royce will be referred to the County Judge to investigate.

From Agony to Health

How Sufferers from RHEUMATISM, LUMBAGO and SCIATICA, may find speedy, welcome relief and certain cure

KEPHALDOL

Pronounced KEPH-AL-DOLE

At last the victims of these torturing complaints—men and women whose lives are long-drawn-out agony—may look with hope, confidence—certainty—to pain's most glad departure.

In Kephaldol is offered, for the first time, a remedy which not only has medical endorsement for its efficacy in all cases of RHEUMATISM, LUMBAGO, and SCIATICA, but is also guaranteed to be a perfectly safe pain-killer, containing nothing to injure the heart or any other bodily organ.

Kephaldol is prompt and reliable, causes no intestinal irritation, and has none of the characteristic after-effects of quinine and phenacetin. Kephaldol brings, indeed, untold blessing to pain-wracked humanity; joy of perfect life again to those who, perhaps for many years, have dragged through a tormented existence. Kephaldol is prescribed and praised by doctors, and gratefully appreciated by suffers.

MR. JOS. WOOD, Derby Road, Mareday, Eng. tells of his remarkable recovery. His own words are:—"I have been off work three years and six months, and nothing I could get did me any good. I was suffering from Lumbago and Sciatic Rheumatism. Had six weeks in the hospital, but the doctor said he could do no more for me.

"I got some Kephaldol on Friday. On the morning of Wednesday I had no pain and no painful joints. I felt a new man, and have had no return of it.

"One of my workmates was off work 12 months. After taking Kephaldol he tells me he has now no pain. Another who had been laid up 11 weeks is also free from pain now. Every day I am asked for the name of the stuff that has sent me to work again. Kephaldol is now taken for three or four miles around here." 15

BEAU FIELDING WAS A PUZZLE

Beau Fielding was a young man of fashion in the reign of William III. His house was sumptuously furnished, his hunters, hacks and racers were of great value, and "he kept a table of princely hospitality." He had no ostensible source of income, yet appeared to be rolling in wealth. All that was known of him was that he was the fifth son of Thomas Wilson, an impoverished gentleman of Leicestershire. Evelyn describes him as a very young man, "civil and good natured, but of no great force of character," and "very sober and of good fame." All attempts to discover his secret were vain. "In his most careless hours of amusement he kept a strict guard over his tongue and left gossip to conjecture what it pleased."

He redeemed his father's estate and portioned off his sisters and when remonstrated with on his extravagance replied that, however long his life should last, he would always have enough to live in the same way. Some said it was he who had robbed the Holland mail, for which another man had suffered; others that he depended upon the gambling table though he never played for large sums. He was the enigma of social life till his career was cut short by a duel. His adversary was at that time a young man about town like himself, John Law, who afterward became the founder of the famous Mississippi scheme by which half of France was ruined. When the mysterious Beau died he left only a few pounds behind him and not a scrap of evidence to enlighten public curiosity.

Vegetable Ivory.

Vegetable ivory is the product of the plant known among botanists as Phytelephas macrocarpa. It is a native of South America, found chiefly on the banks of the Magdalena, Colombia. It is mostly found in separate groves, in damp localities and upon ground that bears no other form of plant life. The seeds contain a milky juice which, as it ages, hardens until it becomes a valuable substitute for animal ivory.

"And you're not an old man yet, bailie," said the assessor blandly.—Youth's Companion.

TREMENDOUS WATER PRESSURE

It Would Be Compressed to Such a Degree of Density by the Enormous Weight That the Water Would Float Upon It—Limits of Diving Depths.

From ordinary considerations it would seem that there is no limit to the depths to which a diver or a submarine boat might go. Such, however, is not the case. What prevents diving to great depths is the enormously increasing pressure of water. No diver without a suit can go over 150 feet, because the pressure on the body is then about five tons to the square foot on his body. Eardrums would be staved in, and other fearful difficulties would result.

To remedy this the diving suit was invented, but there is a limit also to its depth. At a depth of one mile the pressure due to the water alone is 165 tons to the square foot. Even if a diving suit was devised to withstand this enormous pressure trouble would be found in getting a pipe line that long and withstanding the pressure that would not break of its own weight.

In the case of a submarine boat it is slightly different. Here only the strength of the boat is the necessary thing. But to be strong the walls have to be thickened, and this adds to the weight, consequently adding to the load to be pulled through the water, and so at last the limit of the engine propelling the boat is reached. If a larger engine is procured it itself weighs more, larger quarters are needed for it, etc. So there is a well defined limit to a marine boat's diving.

Let us take the extreme depth of the sea so far found, that of five miles, and find the pressure to the square foot on the bottom. As water is comparatively incompressible, a cubic foot of it weighs practically the same on the surface as at the bottom of the sea. In the case of fresh water this is sixty-two and a half pounds. Salt water weighs slightly more. So all one has to do to find the pressure due to the water at any depth is to multiply the depth in feet by sixty-two and a half, and the answer is apparent at once in pounds.

At a depth of five miles, the number of feet being 26,400, we have that number of cubic feet to multiply by sixty-two and a half. The answer is 1,650,000 pounds, or 825 tons, to the square foot pressure. No known hollow vessel can withstand this.

While on the subject of increasing water pressure a number of interesting observations can be made in connection with air compressibility. Air is very compressible, the volume decreasing as the pressure increases. If a bottle is tightly corked it will contain air at ordinary pressure of fifteen pounds to the square inch, and that is the pressure it exerts. Then tie a weight to the bottle and let it down in the sea by means of a string. On bringing it to the top again it will be found that the stopper has been forced into the bottle by the water pressure. If the bottle is filled with water and stoppered and let down no such thing takes place, showing that water is not compressible to any great extent.

If by any means some air could be placed at the bottom of a sea five miles deep it would not rise to the top, for it would be denser—that is, would weigh more to the cubic foot than water—and the water would have to float on the air; hence no man knows if the bottom of our seas is wet or not.

There is only one thing that would prevent the air from becoming this dense, and that is if it was cold enough it would liquefy. However, it is almost impossible—is, in fact, impossible—for anything at the bottom of the sea to be colder than 4 degrees C., for if it got colder the water around it would become colder and larger and consequently lighter and rise, and its place would be taken by 4 degree water, which would bring the object to that temperature. So we have no argument against the suggestion, for the temperature at or below which air liquefies is between 100 and 200 degrees below zero C.

Some people seem to think that a stone thrown into the sea can sink only to a certain depth and is there held suspended on account of the pressure of water. A body immersed in fluid is buoyed up only by the weight of the fluid displaced. We have found that water is practically incompressible, so if the stone displaces a cubic foot of water that water weighs the same, or practically so, at the top or at the bottom of the sea. So the stone would be buoyed up only by that constant force and would be carried down by its weight. Thus the difference in the forces would be always downward, and the stone would sink to the bottom.

In fact, if the stone is at all compressible the tendency is for it to get heavier per unit volume as it goes down, for we have the same weight in a smaller space. It will be remembered that this is what happens to the air if we take it in a rubber bag under the surface of the sea. The volume gets less and less, consequently weighing more and more per unit volume and displacing less and less water and being buoyed up less and less until at last a place is reached where the air weighs more volume for volume than does the water and it will not rise.—Lawrence Hodges in Chicago Record-Herald.

HEADS BRITISH LEAGUE.

Lord Roberts is Elected President of Covenanters.

LONDON, April 4.—Lord Roberts last night was elected president of the League of British Covenanters at a meeting held in Caxton Hall. Resolutions were adopted at the meeting pledging the British covenanters to do all in their power to prevent the establishment of Home Rule in Ireland without sanction of the nation and the support of the people in Ulster in "their gallant struggle to maintain their constitutional rights."

Speeches were made at the meeting by Walter Hume Long, former Chief Secretary for Ireland; Lord Milner and Sir Edward Carson. Sir Edward said the Government either would have to exclude Ulster from their bill or make up their minds that they would have bloodshed and coercion.

Pioneer Fruit Grower Dead.

GRIMSBY, April 4.—The death occurred at the old Pettit homestead here of Andrew Hamilton Pettit, aged 77 years, the well-known fruit grower. Mr. Pettit complained of feeling ill but a few hours before death came.

Mr. Pettit was one of the oldest residents of Grimsby, and was a pioneer fruit grower of the Niagara district. He had charge of the Canadian fruit exhibit at the Chicago World's Fair in 1893.

In politics Mr. Pettit was a Conservative, and in 1896 ran as Conservative candidate against Mr. Blain, then Liberal Speaker in the House at Ottawa.

Mr. Pettit was a captain and Fenian Raid veteran.

FROM THE FINANCIAL POST OF CANADA

"I consider that the treatment accorded Canadian securities abroad last year as the best indication of how high Canadian credit stands in Europe. At a time when the financial condition of the whole world was at its lowest ebb, London and the whole Continent gave us all the funds we required for legitimate enterprises. This speaks for itself, and is conclusive evidence of the high place in the world's credit in which Canada stands to-day." Such was the opinion expressed by Sir Thomas Shaughnessy in a special interview with the Post this week.

"The Canadian Pacific Railway will have no need to borrow further money for some time to come. A great deal of money will be spent this year on construction purposes, but we have a good deal of money yet in our treasury for this purpose. The Canadian Pacific Railway has been spending more money on its lines than it has borrowed; but it always has the debenture stock to fall back upon; that there are plenty of people who will eagerly buy this up." So said Sir Thomas Shaughnessy to The Post.

Sir Thomas was not in a hurry to express himself as to the stock market outlook. "I would rather not say anything about whether the present is or is not a good time to buy securities," Sir Thomas said; "I am concerned more with the operation of this railway than with the movements of the stock market."

"Regarding American railway securities, though, I am of the opinion that these are bound to go up in price. The 5 per cent. increase in the freight rates will place their earnings in a more satisfactory position. After the American Currency Bill gets properly operating, there should be plenty of money in the States for the purchase of securities.

"I look for business to rapidly pick up from now on," is the opinion of Sir Thomas. "Stocks of goods throughout the West are pretty well depleted, and must early be replaced. This in itself will mean a very substantial volume of business.

"We do not expect so many immigrants this year as in 1913. But the difference in numbers will be made up by the importation of fewer ordinary laborers and workmen. During the past few years there has been very heavy demand for laborers for work in construction camps, and various kinds of railroad workers. A great deal of the railroad construction has now been completed, and the demand for construction laborers has fallen off. Hence, fewer immigrants of this class will be brought out.

"In regard to farm laborers, I may say that we expect to carry nearly as many this year as last year. There will be no lack of these, which is really the best type of emigrant, and which the Dominion most requires."

EVOLUTION.

She had been christened Mary.
  I knew her first as "Mame,"
But I thought her sweet and jolly
In the hoyden days when "Molly"
  Was her name.

How time, that lengthens dresses,
  Takes the franker moods away!
Soon she turned a pretty shoulder
That had grown distinctly colder—
  She was "Mae."

O female affectation,
  How you peep out in a name!
She bade farewell next season
To orthography and reason—
  She was "Maeme!"

Then I quite lost track of Mary,
  Till one day there came to me
An invitation bidding
Yours truly to the wedding
  Of "Marie."

But I think she's done with changing,
  For but yesterday I saw
Her vigorously mauling
An imp that through his squalling
  Called her "Ma"

His Irresistible Appeal.

The other night a crowd of young people met for a social session at a certain house in the suburbs. They ate and they danced, and they sang. And when it was all over the prettiest young woman there—she hadn't been escorted thither by any chosen cavalier—said:

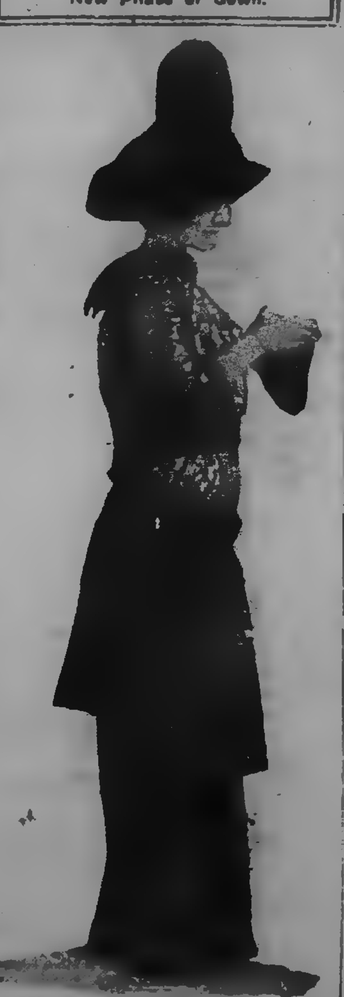
"I walk home, but it's a lonesome walk, and I'm afraid. There have been holdups in this part of town. So I choose Mr. Blank to see me safe home." On the way home Mr. Blank, an ambitious vocalist, was considerably swelled up. The prettiest girl had chosen him from a crowd of personable bachelors. He couldn't resist saying:

"Why did you think I was the strongest and bravest man there tonight?"

"I didn't," answered the girl. "I picked you because I knew you could holler the loudest!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

ADOLESCENT TYPE.

Paris Now Creates a New Phase of Gown.



AFTERNOON FROCK OF STITCHED MOIRE.

A Parisian chronicler of fashion has dubbed the present sartorial mood of the City of Light "la mode adolescente." Surely this is a very apt description of the costumes being sent over from the other side of the pond. There is a languor and abandon about the lines that suggests the soft, pliant, yielding figure of the adolescent, and in no costume of the season is this phase of the mode more apparent than in afternoon frocks.

This costume is the backbone of every well dressed woman's wardrobe. It meets so many varied engagements of the day. It is charming for an afternoon bridge, for luncheon and for the club meeting or for formal calling.

Illustrated is a delightful example of the daytime gown, carried out in black moire. The striking feature of this model is the machine stitching done in white thread which outlines the bodice, producing a brocaded effect. This is the last cry in applied designs.

MORE ENTRIES ARE RECEIVED FOR WRESTLING CHAMPIONSHIPS

A BIG NIGHT WITH MATMEN ASSURED

Entries have been received from two more of Toronto's crack wrestlers for the Peterboro City Championships to be held in the Y.M.C.A. next Thursday evening. The latest entries have come in from S. W. Collings, Wrestling Instructor of the Central Y.M.C.A., Toronto. They are those of R. Hood, Toronto city champion in the 115 lb. class, and of M. Walsh, a former Ontario and city champion and a successful competitor in the recent tournament in Toronto, who will take part in the 135 lb. class. This ensures lively bouts in both these classes, as the Peterboro entries in both classes are sure to give a good account of themselves.

In the 115 lb. class, Hood will meet Harold Lees of Peterboro. According to the results of the recent tournament in Toronto, Hood should win, but he will have to work for it. In the Toronto tournament Clay beat Lees on points after the liveliest kind of wrestling for the full period of six minutes. Both men were in danger at different times, but always managed to work out of the holds put on them. Clay, who is a little pocket Hercules, has been wrestling for ten years, and has won many important bouts. During this period he has defeated Hood on different occasions. Two weeks ago Hood managed to get a decision over him in Toronto, there being no fall. This is about the first time Hood ever got a decision over Clay. The fact that Hood could not throw Clay and that Clay could not throw Lees indicates that the bout between Hood and Lees will be a lively one. Lees probably has quite a little the advantage in strength and is fully as fast a wrestler as Hood. Hood has the advantage in science and experience. It will be a rattling fast bout from start to finish and well worth seeing in itself.

The Peterboro entry in the 135 lb. class is David Forbes, a brother of the well-known professional wrestler, Jack Forbes, who wrestled in Peterboro a year ago. David Forbes has held the lightweight wrestling championship of Scotland, and won a championship on Victoria Island about a year ago. He has been in Peterboro since shortly after the first of the year and attended the wrestling class at the Y.M.C.A. regularly for the past few months. Forbes is a fast and aggressive wrestler with more than the usual amount of science.

Walsh, whom Forbes will meet in the 135 lb. class, is a winner of several important tournaments, including the Ontario championship. He is probably stronger than Forbes, is cool and cautious in the ring and well enough up in the science of the game to know most of the most dangerous holds. These two men should be very evenly matched and will provide a ding dong bout throughout. With the Durnan, Haritaken bout in the 125 lb. class and the Keegan, Oswald bout in the 105 lb. class, four excellent bouts are already ensured, with prospects of several entries in the heavier classes. The tournament promises to be the most successful event of the kind ever pulled off in Peterboro.

SWARTZ MAY BE WITH THE PETES

It may yet be possible that Willie Swartz will again hold down left garden for the Petes. Mr. Denham received a letter from him yesterday, in which he signified his willingness to come to terms, so the matter has been left in the hands of Manager Blount, with power to act. Swartz is the only relic of "Old Folks" Templin's White Caps.

LACROSSE

The big organization meeting of the Peterborough Lacrosse Club, which will be held on Monday evening in St. Alphonsus Lyceum, is open to everyone interested in the revival of the once popular game. The election of officers and appointing of delegates for the meeting of the O. A. L. A., to be held in Toronto on Good Friday, is the principal work to be accomplished by the meeting.

Course In Farm Law.

A recommendation that it is anticipated will be speedily put into effect was made by an agricultural inspector for one of the Boards of Education in New Zealand recently. This advises that a short course in farm law should be taken up in the last year of an agricultural secondary pupil's course. The question has since been discussed by farmers, all of whom are of opinion that the suggestion is well worth following up, so that young New Zealand agriculturists will leave college equipped with all that is to be known on such questions as mortgages (which are continually being negotiated in farm life), bankruptcy, law regarding the dipping of sheep, driving, etc.

DON'T TALK.

Now the hockey season's over, some think they've naught to do
But censure sturdy Cap. Giroux, and his plucky, luckless crew.
I'll tell you why they lost the cup, though its none of your affairs.
The stout ship lost the captain, and put in for repairs.

Gallantly they played and lost, but always on the square,
From whom they won—to whom they lost—all say they did it fair.
True to their colors did they start,
and stayed through weal and woe,
Not like the horse you played for first,
That did not even show.

So now you kickers quit your chin;
if you can't say pleasant things,
Remember, any bee can buzz but just the worker stings.
So if you want to make a noise and are hungering for fame.
Don't try to do it talking, but get out and play the game.

And to those who like to see clean sport, though the boys don't always win, (Someone has always got to lose, so to lose can be no sin).
To those who like to play it fair,
whatever wind doth blow,
I say, three cheers for the players
each, and three for "Cap. Giroux."

INSURANCE BLACK LISTS.

Names of Swindlers Who Have Robbed Companies Are Kept on File.

No less interesting than the "Rogues' Gallery" at Scotland Yard, that wonderful register of criminals which enables the police to turn up the record of any "habitual" who may pass through their hands, is the "black list" kept by insurance companies of people who make a living by instituting bogus claims. These lists are kept up to date, and contain photographs as well as full particulars of individuals who endeavor to fleece insurance companies.

One family obtained hundreds of pounds from shopkeepers and others for injuries alleged to have been sustained by falling over cellar-flaps and other imaginary accidents. The man who specialized in falling from the steps of motor-buses, and the other who always slipped on a piece of fat outside butchers' shops, are among the people who made a good thing out of bogus claims till they were found out.

In an interesting article on the curiosities of insurance, published by the London Daily Chronicle, it is also pointed out that most of the claims coming in just now are caused by jewellery thieves, who break into flats and small houses that are left unoccupied for an hour or two. Many such residences have doors with glass panels and spring locks—a favorite combination for the burglar and housebreaker, since he has only to break the glass and pull back the lock. He first knocks at the door. If, after two or three knocks, no one answers, he assumes that no one is in, and makes an entrance. If someone comes to the door he asks for a person who does not live there.

There seems to be nothing which one cannot be insured against nowadays, judging by some of the curious claims which have been paid. For instance, a man burnt his foot on a hot-water bottle while lying in bed. He was awarded £30. A butcher pushed out of his cart by the pigs he was taking to market received £60 for his injuries; and another man who scratched his eye with his finger-nail while washing, and destroyed his sight, was paid £150 as compensation.

Among other curious claims paid might be mentioned the case of a lady who swallowed a splinter of glass while eating an ice at a restaurant, and another a lady who swallowed a needle in a piece of pastry at an hotel.

A Mile of Pennies.

The Wesleyans of Brighouse have set themselves to collect "a mile of pennies" for a Sunday-school fund. The collecting cars are a foot long, and are divided into one inch spaces fitted with tiny envelopes to receive penny contributions. Many yards of pennies have already been collected, although the scheme has only just been launched.

THE OLD TIME "YE."

It Was Simply an Abbreviation and Was Always Pronounced "The."

How does it happen that in copying and reading ancient manuscripts, we call the character our ancestors meant for "the" by the ridiculous "ye?"

They said "the" just as we do, and the only apparent reason for mistaking the character is that two centuries ago the letter "h" was usually written with a tail below the line and with a razeed top, which made it look like our "y." Then the word was so frequently used that it was contracted, just as the word "and" was then treated and continues to be treated to this day by many of us.

When I was a boy, more than eighty years ago, the alphabets in our school books always ended with the "short and." We called it "ampersand" and considered it a fine snapper when we rattled off the alphabet. Sometimes when sufficiently cultured we gave it the full title "and-per-se-and."

Now, it is likely that our "&" will become obsolete, just as "ye" has become. Then our descendants of the next century or two will be puzzled perhaps, but I do not think they will be so foolish as to say "ampersand" when reading our manuscripts and coming to the little quirk we meant for "and." Do let us drop saying "ye."
—Dial.

Not an Octet.

"They are less marked with you than with us," he said. "Here you all talk alike—the shopgirl's accent differs in no wise from that of a Stuyvesant or a Roosevelt. But with us the lower classes talk a disgraceful jargon.

"The 'h' especially. The lower classes can never master that 'h.' In my youth I once heard a stage manager rehearsing 'Faust.' He had sprung from the people, poor chap, and he conducted the rehearsal like this:

"''Old your 'ands on your 'ips, 'old up your 'eads and look 'aughty. You're not on 'Ampstead 'Eath, now—you're in 'Ades. Now, 'asten off 'urriedly, with a look of 'ate.'

"'But, sir,' said I, 'there's only six of us.'"—Washington Star.

The Practical Side of Music.

He was a lover of music who had just been to hear Puccini's "Madame Butterfly," and he was expatiating upon its beauties to an unresponsive friend whom he observed to yawn. The music lover was hurt. "Look here, John," he protested, "don't you think that music is of some practical benefit in life?"

"Oh, yes," said the unresponsive one. "Why, judging from the portraits I have seen of eminent musicians, especially pianists, I should say that music is great to keep the hair from falling out."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Not Guilty.

Lawyer—You understand what you are to do in court now, don't you? Client—Yes, I guess so. Lawyer—When the court asks you whether you are guilty of manslaughter or not you say "guilty." Client—But I can't do that, my conscience wouldn't allow it. Lawyer—Why? Client—Because it wasn't a man I killed, it was a woman.—New York Globe.

Very Thrilling.

She—The life of a secret service man must be very thrilling. He—Yes, that's what I thought when I read of one of the president's guards falling asleep standing up.—Buffalo Express.

Impatient.

"Do you tell your husband everything?" "Why, I can't. He won't listen to me over two or three hours on a stretch."—Washington Herald.

Aim only at that which is within reach and trust the big things to time and the spirit.—Towne.

Methodical Judges.

The Supreme Court at Singapore has made an order in favor of a girl named Koh Chee Neo, who sought to prove that she was the legitimate daughter of a man named Low Kim Pong, who had died, and that she was therefore entitled to a share of his estate. Two Chinese arbiters, says The Penang Gazette, had reported that the girl had "fifty to sixty per cent. of her mother's chin, while her forehead, two cheeks, and face resembled the father, and they were perfectly satisfied her claim was just.

WHEN everything that can be said has been said there is always some one to keep right on talking.

Every man is a hero in his dreams —that is, in some of them.

"Where did you get such an idea?"

Welcomed the Troops.

The Eastern Bengal manoeuvres, which it was feared in some quarters would excite the animosity of the people, have had quite a contrary effect. The regiments marching to Dacca have been everywhere welcomed, even small villages putting up arches, while the colonels of the regiments have been garlanded and presented with addresses. Oranges, cigarettes, and other gifts are being thrust into the hands of the troops. The Highlanders of all ranks are being pressed to visit the schools and similar institutions, and are being asked to make speeches. An officer writing from Dacca says: "The heartiness of the reception accorded to the troops is almost uncanny, and is so different from what was expected, and from the usual apathy of the Indians, that the effect on British and Indian soldiers alike is bewildering."

Large Closed Country.

Afghanistan, the buffer state between British India and the Russian possessions in Asia, with an area of about 250,000 square miles and a population of probably about 5,000,000 Mohammedans (no census has ever been taken), is, with the exception of Tibet, the largest closed country in the world.

Miss Donaldson wore a tango evening dressof pale pink silk chiffon, with cream tunic of Point de Sprie.

MISS PALMER'S RECITAL.

The music lovers of Peterborough were afforded a delightful evening at the Conservatory of Music last evening, the occasion being a graduating violin recital by Miss Edwina Palmer, graduate of Toronto Conservatory of Music, and pupil of Miss Lin Drechsler Adamson; also Mr. Rupert Gliddon, Musical Director, Conservatory of Music.

The beautiful technique displayed by Miss Palmer as a violinist since her appearance in Peterboro has caused high comment, and altogether her work reflects more than considerable credit upon her teachers. She was ably assisted by Miss Elsie Drechsler Adamson, who also displays rare ability as a violinist.

The accompanists were Miss Jeannette Killmaster and Miss Gwendolyn Smith.

During the evening Miss Palmer was presented with several bouquets.

AN OLD FASHIONED REVIVAL MEETING

Friday night's service at the Park Street Baptist Church was the climax of one of the greatest weeks in its history. The auditorium was filled, and the way that all took part in singing and testimony was truly an old fashioned revival meeting. The sermon on "We Let Her Drive" was an exposition of the 27th chapter of Acts. God cannot use any man or woman till they have come to the end of self and like the publican, Philipian jailor, and Jonah, cry out—"What must I do to be saved." Musical Director Peter sang "Throw out the Life Line," assisted by the chorus choir. There will be four great services on Sunday. Prayer meeting at 10.00 a.m. in lecture room, led by Rev. Mr. Conners. At 11 a.m. Evangelist Pugsley will preach "What is our Hope?" At 3.00 p.m. the Evangelist will preach to men only on "Boot Strap Religion." The Male Quartette will sing as well also Musical Director Peter. At 7 p.m. subject "A Beggar at a Banquet." Special music by chorus choir. Come and bring a friend.

After the concert, those assisting were treated to a supper at Coleman's Savoy.

A RECITAL BY DR. PARK

PLAYED THE VIOLIN AND DISCUSSED THE COMPOSERS BEFORE LITERARY SOCIETY

The Normal School Literary Society held one of its most successful, interesting and instructive meetings Friday afternoon.

Dr. Park gave a violin recital, consisting of the following:

I.—Finale from Mendelssohn's Concerto, Mendelssohn.

II.—Merveille de Paganina, Paganina.

III.—Scene de Ballet, De Beriot.

IV.—Obertras Mazurka, Wieniawski.

V.—The Corelli, with variations, Kreisler.

Mendelssohn was born about 1830 At an early age he showed great skill in composing and with the help of a famous violinist he composed the Concerto which is the best musical composition of all ages. The Finale is one of the most attractive parts. It is meant to show great joy, so great as to be almost incoherent. Joy like that of a lover on his wedding day, or like an exile when returning to his native land. This composition shows the capacity of a violin and is difficult. Mendelssohn, like many others, used music to tell what he could not express in words. It is vague but not shallow, on the contrary it is very deep [illegible] expresses feelings and emotions which cannot be done with words.

The selection was beautifully rendered, and it certainly showed joy.

A joy which cannot be described any better than by using the chairwoman's remarks: "Music like that gives me a feeling which makes me want to be better."

Paganina.

Paganina was the greatest violinist. We may have some who can play as well as he did, others who can compose as well as he did. But we have not an individual who can both play and compose like Paganina. Then he was the first to discover the great possibilities of the violin. The others are only building on what he discovered.

He could play two parts on a violin and also play whole compositions in harmonics which anyone who knows anything about a violin knows is very difficult.

There is a pretty romance told of Pagaina which said that he was shut in prison for years with a violin had all the strings broken off but the one of D. And that with great practice he at last was able to play whole pieces on the one string. This story is not true, but one thing is certain that Paganina did practice very much, often not stopping playing till he dropped from exhaustion. He was a genius, but like all geniuses his genius was ninety-nine per cent. hard work.

This number was also very well rendered, and much appreciated by the students.

Seven Great Violinists.

Another romance says that Paganina left seven violins and that the ones who received these violins became the seven great violinists who immediately followed him. One of these was De Beriot, a Frenchman.

De Beriot was a great violinist, but very fond of travel. One day, while travelling in France, he heard of a local fiddler who was ~~said~~ to be a great player. Beriot sent for him and an awkward, monkey-faced peasant soon came carrying a violin. When requested to play he refused, saying he was untaught and could only play a few chords. But on Beriot's second request he consented and when he finished Beriot said, "You are the best violinist in the world." He and Beriot soon became warm friends.

Beriot was the friend of all young violinists, and brought out more budding talent than any other man. He composed many melodies which the half-way violinist delights in. The Germans say that Beriot's playing was cold and formal, but on the contrary, his compositions are rich and soulful, which makes us doubt if his playing was cold.

The Germans also depreciated the works and playing of Wieniawski. His works are also beautiful and stir one's nature. He was of a restless wandering disposition, and aften disappeared for months at a time. He showed his talent early, and his works show great promise, but he died unnoticed in a small Russian village at an early age. This selection certainly showed the genius of the composer, as it did the genius of the violinist.

The last selection was also well rendered, and much appreciated.

The students wish to thank Dr. Park and Miss Rannie, who accompanied him, for their fine programme.

The meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

ONLY ONE CAN OF MAPLE SYRUP

Sold for $2.00 Per Gallon on Market To-day

One lone can of maple syrup, containing about seven gallons, was all that was on the market this morning to meet the demands of citizens, armed with gems and scalers intending to procure some of the "precious." It was monopoly pure and simple, and the gentleman presenting the syrup, unhesitatingly asked $2.00 per gallon and had no trouble at all in selling. A very large number of citizens were disappointed and returned home with the empty receptacles. Reports from several sources state that the syrup may not be any too plentiful this season.

ANOTHER SUCCESS.

The Tramps Re-Union presented at the Y. last evening by the members was greeted with one of the biggest crowds that ever assembled in the gym. for any occasion. The Weary Willies, with more jokes and a change of program, kept the gathering in a happy mood from start to finish.

A BABOON ADVENTURE

CLIMAX OF A CURIOUS BATTLE

The Conflict, Which Was Forced Upon the Jabbering Brutes, Resolved Itself Into a Living Avalanche That Swept Down the Hill—A Lucky Escape.

When I was in South Africa, a correspondent writes, I left Mangwe one afternoon in company with a couple of men who were traveling up country. We rode at a slow canter through the long grass, for grass grows long in Africa, over your head very often. None of us carried a gun or even a revolver. All we had were sjamboks, whips made of a single strip of hippopotamus hide and stout enough to maim a man if the blow were well directed.

We were about a mile below the only pass in the south of the Matoppo hills that leads through to Bulawayo. Suddenly we saw that the grass on our left was being disturbed over a pretty wide area, and out of curiosity we rode over. We found out that the grass was simply alive with hundreds of baboons marching toward the hill.

There were brown baboons and gray baboons and baboons almost black, little baboons, big baboons, mamma baboons, pickaninny baboons and old granddads almost white with age. We reined in our horses and watched. They showed no fear and no desire to get acquainted with us. They looked at us over their shoulders, the mammas hugged their babies tighter, and they quickened their pace.

We ought to have let them pass, but one of the fellows suggested in a spirit of mischief that we should help them along. Before you could say "knife" the three of us were in among them and began to slash with our sjamboks in all directions. The baboons jabbered and showed their teeth, but never attempted to attack us. We were safe so long as we were mounted. Pretty soon they came to a clump of trees, which they tried to climb. But the trees were thorny and they had to give it up. Then they started for the hills again.

We drove them right to the foot of the hills, but there we had to stop, for we could not take our horses over the rocks. The baboons swarmed up like acrobats. I didn't stop to think, but was off my horse and after them. My friends called to me to stay where I was, but I was up that hill almost as quickly as the baboons were.

A black old man baboon was nearest, and I made a rush for him. He didn't run. I cut at him with the whip. He only bared his teeth and snarled. I looked round. On every side were big men baboons, and each bared his teeth as I caught his eye. They had no intention to run away from me or to let me get away from them.

I lost my nerve and couldn't even think of a way out. All I could do was to back up to a rock, keep the baboons at bay with my sjambok and wait there until my companions could come to my rescue. Before I'd gone two steps stones began to fly—stones of no small size, either. Luckily a baboon is not a good marksman. He makes a jump as he throws. Those baboons hit one another as often as they hit me.

Very slowly I backed for the rock; very slowly the baboons followed. They were waiting for something. That gave me hope. If they didn't mean to rush me, why not back down the hill until my companions could reach me?

So I changed my direction and, amid the fusillade of stones, approached the brink of the declivity. I reached it at last and began carefully to back down. The stones fell thicker than ever. In protection I had to hold my arms over my head. All the time there was a hideous jabbering and screaming.

Presently I was virtually underneath some of them. The old black fellow who had first faced me picked up a rock as big as himself and dropped it. I dodged, stumbled over a rock behind me and fell.

Then I knew what they were waiting for. A score of them were on me in a moment. They tore and bit me fiercely. If there had not been so many they would have got me at once, but they got in each other's way and damaged themselves as much as they did me.

I tried to keep their nails away from my eyes and face and throat, and together we rolled over and over and down the slope of the hill. I was scratched and bleeding in a dozen places and my clothes were torn to shreds, but somehow I was not bitten very badly. Perhaps the pace was too great for any accurate work!

So we bumped and rolled downhill—first I on top, then the baboons on top, then at last a rolling ball of baboons with me inside. I was too scared even to think of death, although if I had been alone death was certain. All at once I heard the sound of hoofs that scrambled over the rocks, shouts in the English tongue and sjamboks that whistled as they lashed round. Baboons turned to flimy things and took wing, as, saved, I fainted.—Youth's Companion.

IN THE OPERA BOX.

Here is one of the strikingly original, yet nevertheless typically modish designs for evening wear that was seen in one of the boxes of the opera this season. It was trimmed with jet since many of the smartest Paris and New York frocks sparkle with this attractive trimming. The material was a peach pink indestructible voile—the sort that does not crush or tear as the ordinary—over pink taffeta. The simplicity of the design was all the more attractive because of the soft lights and shadows of the drapery. Laced tango slippers in pink with pink hose made a charming ensemble.

IN POIRET'S STYLE.

EXTREMES IN DAYLIGHT.

There Is, in Reality, No One Longest or Shortest Day.

It is usual to regard Dec. 21 as being the shortest day in the year and June 21 as the longest. But this impression, like so many others that are ingrained in the popular mind, is not a strictly accurate one.

True it is, of course, that on Dec. 21 and June 21 respectively the sun reaches its most southerly and most northerly points in the zodiac and begins in the one case to ascend and in the other case to decline. But this is in theory only, because for two or three days preceding and following these dates there is no observable difference in its position or its hours of rising and setting.

This question of latitude, by the way, is extremely important when speaking of the shortest or longest day or days of the year.

In London and its neighborhood, for instance, the shortest days are seven hours and forty-five minutes and the three or four "longest days" around June 21 are sixteen hours and twenty-six minutes. At Tornea, in Finland, June 21 brings a day nearly twenty-two hours long and Christmas one less than three hours in length. In St. Petersburg the longest day is nineteen hours and the shortest five hours, while at Spitzbergen the longest day is three and a half months, the shortest being counted in seconds only.—London Answers.

FEATHERED SCAVENGERS.

Crows as Track Cleaners and Gulls as Government Workers.

As unique a crew of track cleaners and police as could be found anywhere is enlisted in the service of the Southern Pacific railroad. The members are neither Americans nor foreigners. It is a crew of crows.

The big black birds built their nests near Hornbrook, Ore., on the northern division of the road. They have become fat and sleek living off the generosity of tourists and of dining car employees.

When the trains arrive at Hornbrook the crows leave their roosting places and circle about the depot. As the limiteds pull out the birds follow them for five or six miles. Scraps are thrown to them, and they devour every bit, policing the tracks and acting as scavengers. The section hands and other employees of the road realize the value of these birds and keep them from being molested. Trains crossing the Great Salt lake are followed by sea gulls, the latter, like the crows, feasting on scraps thrown from the diners.

In a similar way the great lakes are patrolled by white winged gulls. The government protects them, appreciating the work they do in following the ships or hovering over the fishing grounds and keeping the waters free of pollution.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

New Year Calls in China.

New Year calls are the custom in China, and you have to pay them in festive attire of silk or satin.

These fine clothes (says Archdeacon Moule in the Chinese People) can be hired, the price being gradually lowered as the hours of the first six days pass by. We complained once of the very late arrival of a caller, who should have been among the first to salute us. He replied that money was scarce, and he was obliged to wait for the cheapest day to secure a fine robe already donned and doffed by a dozen of others. During these ceremonial days the whole community seems to give itself over to indiscriminate gambling, a practice illegal and condemned both by Chinese law and standards of morality, but winked at during this season.

"MY ONLY MEDICINE"

Says Mrs. Corbett, Are "Fruit-a-tives" "They Keep Me In Perfect Health"

MRS. ANNIE A. CORBETT

AVON, ONT., May 14th. 1913

"I have used "Fruit-a-tives" for Indigestion and Constipation with most excellent results, and they continue to be my only medicine. I am highly pleased with "Fruit-a-tives" and am not ashamed to have the facts published to the world. When I first started, about six years ago, to use them, I took four for a dose, but I cured myself of the above troubles and gradually reduced the dose to one tablet at night.

Before taking "Fruit-a-tives" I took salts and other pills but the treatment was too harsh. I thought I might as well suffer from the disease as from these treatments.

Finally, I saw "Fruit-a-tives" advertised with a letter in which someone recommended them very highly, so I tried them. The results were more than satisfactory and I have no hesitation in recommending them to any other person. They have done me a world of good. I get satisfaction from them, and that is quite a lot". Didn't Need the Hoe.

Some time ago a hobo meekly tapped on the back door of a suburban home and asked for something to eat. The good housewife responded that she would feed him on the back step along with Fido provided he was willing to earn the meal by cleaning out the gutter.

The tramp agreed, and when he had eaten his way through several sandwiches the housewife came out with a reliable looking hoe.

"You needn't have gone to that trouble, madam," said the hobo. "I never use a hoe in cleaning out a gutter."

"Never use a hoe!" said the woman. "What do you use, then, a shovel?"

"No, madam," sweetly replied the hobo, starting for the back gate, "my method is to pray for rain."—Boston Advertiser.

MAULED BY A LION.

Captain C. H. Stigand was once mauled by a lion, and he recounts the adventure in his "Hunting the Elephant in Africa." The captain had shot a lioness, and while watching the body from a tree he saw two lions approach. They stood over the lioness and roared alternately for half an hour. He succeeded in shooting them both but on approaching the body of his second victim he found that it was not quite so dead as it had seemed. "I approached the edge, and immediately the inert mass assumed life and, with a roar, sprang on me with one bound. The orderly, who was a few yards behind me, immediately retired precipitately. As the lion sprang I fired into his chest, and he landed on me, his right paw over my left shoulder, and he seized my left arm in his teeth. As my left arm was advanced in the firing position, it was the first thing he met.

"The weight of his spring knocked me down, and I next found myself lying on my back, my left arm being worried and my rifle still in my left hand underneath his body. I scrambled around with my left arm still in his mouth until I was kneeling alongside of him and started pommelling him with my right fist on the back of the neck. He gave me a final shake and then quickly turned round and disappeared in the grass a little nearer to the station than I was."

The author adds that he was drenched with blood, and upon examination he found eight big holes in his arm and three claw marks on his back, a damage that partially disabled him for two years. He remarks modestly that since that adventure he has bagged seven more lions.

Two Great Stages.

The largest stage in the world is that of the Grand Opera House in Paris. It is 100 feet wide, nearly 200 feet in depth and 80 feet high. The height is measured from the level of the stage to the "flies."

The stage of the Metropolitan Opera House, New York city, is 101 feet wide, 89 feet deep and 77 feet high and is believed to be the largest in the United States.—London Answers.

Hence the Danger.

"I am just wondering whether it would be safe to propose to that girl that I have been going with."

"I don't think it would."

"What makes you think she would turn me down?"

"I don't. I think she would snap you up."—Houston Post.

Depressing Influence.

"So you don't like that professional optimist?"

"Not much," replied Mr. Growcher. "There are times when I might forget my troubles if he were not constantly advising me to make a terrible effort to cheer up."—Washington Star.

Up to Scratch.

"How shall I know if they want me to give an encore?" asked Mrs. Nuglory demurely at the amateur theatricals.

"That will be quite easy," explained Mrs. Korstic. "We will hear the cat calls"—Judge.

Good Form

Breezy Manners of Today.

"We were sitting in the drawing room after tea, Mrs. Callander and I," said a woman recently. "She was a subtlety in velvet and old lace, and I—I was her most complete foil in brown charmeuse. We were both of that old school of thought which is so hoary that it dares to proclaim its conventionality out loud.

"My friend was telling me, in that tender voice so well in keeping with her gentle face and soft gray hair, of two charmingly pretty girls who were presently coming in to see her. 'Every one is raving about them,' she declared. 'With their lovely coloring, tall, slight figures and cameo cut features, they have made dreadful havoc in the hearts of the young men round here.'

"I was on the qui vive for the first sight of these delightful visions, picturing them when they should enter sitting there in graceful pose, framed against the lovely flowers and old oak panelling of my friend's room. How sweet and dainty they would look in their pretty dresses, with their soft, clear voices and graceful ways, that we foolish old fogies imagined the prerogative of budding youth!

"The door opened at last, and the young girls were ushered in. I was amazed at their behavior! They rushed precipitately up the room as though propelled by some unseen force and made a triumphant dart for their hostess (I give their progress as it occurred). Having greeted my friend with a ringing 'how de do' and a hail fellow well met squeeze of the hand, which was irresistibly comic to my matured fancy, they favored me with a stare and an ungraceful nod of their pretty heads.

"The elder girl then 'threw' (this is the only term which fitly describes her movements)—threw her body into an armchair and, crossing one knee over the other, displayed almost the complete length of one slim leg and more than a little of the other. Her sister, settling herself sideways on a high chair with her elbows comfortably supported on the back rail, began to regale us with stories of her prowess at golf, tennis and other games, calling across the room to the elder one for confirmation of her tales. 'Wasn't it so, Jennie? Didn't I do a corking stroke at that seventh hole; wot?' receiving a cheery abbreviated nod by way of answer. Their voices were shrill and uncultured; they clipped their words until my friend and I could scarcely understand. Never once during the hour that followed did they assume a graceful pose or show anything of that quiet charm that, in my day at least, invariably marked the gentlewoman.

"A well known actress once did a delicious piece of work in one of those plays of which she always makes a success. She crossed the room very slowly, in her inimitable way and, sinking gracefully into an armchair, at the same time putting a cushion to her back, said quietly, 'It took me seven years to learn to do this!' Well, it was worth it! What a contrast were her graceful movements with the hoydenish behavior of these young girls. Their shrill voices with her quiet accents! One could imagine them gripping their golf sticks or perhaps dancing, for the word is a catholic one now. But one could not conceive them ever getting into a carriage with that little 'hop, skip, jump' which is apt to arouse the latent humor of the beholder."

Economy Hint For Hostess.

A very clever hostess with an eye to values and efficiency (which means a maximum effect produced by a minimum amount of labor) makes this well laid plan whereby she lumps her obligations, as it were. She gives a dinner one day to eight or ten guests, follows it the next day with a luncheon for eight, which she then concludes with a "tea" for a few more.

She figures it out in this way: The same flowers of the evening before may be rearranged for the luncheon. The little cakes, almonds and sweets, usually untouched, will serve again. A fresh bunch of grapes added to the bowl of fruit, which, though it has been in the ice chest overnight, is still most presentable, as well as many of the other little touches which the home seems to need in honor of some favored guest or social "lion." In this way the decorations will answer for three functions instead of one. But you must be extremely careful not to let any of these entertainments smack of leftovers. Nothing is more insulting to a guest than that.

This is truly an original plan for economy and a very sensible one, as usually the accessories of a dinner go begging after the feast, and this innovation makes admirable use of the flowers, fruits and sweets, and this is no small saving as prices are today.

A luncheon, however beautiful, does not give the pleasure a dinner does when the business of the day is over and one is quite keyed up for an evening's enjoyment.

We are all more or less like Peter Pan and refuse to grow up, and there is a subtle excitement in an evening entertainment no daytime function will ever afford.

A SEASON OF TINY HATS.

Tiny hats are maintaining their sway this spring with promise of a summer rule, and here is a typical shape for early spring wear, made of moire taffeta with a tall crown and narrow brim in suggestion of the French chimney pot hat. An extension of the brim on each side holds on imitation aigrette, since real have become illegal and unfashionable, balancing each other in a forward and a backward curl.

The State and the Individual.

The state may make it easy for a man to acquire a small holding, but it cannot give the man the energy, the industry, which are necessary if the boon is to be an abiding blessing to him. The state may help men over bad times, but it cannot give men the moral character which enables those who possess it by their energy, determination, industry, to place themselves beyond the reach of temporary disaster.—London Strand Magazine.

Unconcerned.

An incident illustrating the placidity, if so it may be called, of the Duke of Wellington has reference to a naval officer, a near connection of the duke. The ship which this officer commanded was lost, and he himself was drowned. When the news was communicated to the duke he merely exclaimed, "That's the second ship he has lost!"

Large Eagle Shot.

A large eagle, disporting on the ice in the river, was shot by Bert Storey in the vicinity of Big Island, near Brockville. The bird measured eight feet from tip to tip of its wings.

SERVANTS OF ROYALTY.

In England They Are Supplied by a Regular Employment Agency.

Even royal palaces have their servant problems. The general opinion seems to be that the servants who attend upon kings and queens are of a race apart, but such is not the impression given by a remarkably frank interview given in London by a registry agent who has frequently had dealings with Buckingham palace.

"We are held responsible for the people we send to the royal household," he said, "and we send no one who has not lived in good houses and has had at least two years' 'character.'

"Only British servants are engaged. The men must be between twenty-two and twenty-eight years old, and the women between eighteen and twenty-two.

"The wages are no better, to begin with, than in other households, but there are better allowances—in liveries and in plain clothes. There is the chance, too, of promotion to something better.

"A head housemaid might get $250 a year, and of course there is a pension for every servant who has served a certain number of years.

"Ten years is generally considered the minimum time for a pension, but when a case of misfortune occurs an application is made to the king, who approves a special grant.

"The servants have plenty of work to do in the palace, but ample leisure and very good quarters and living. The maids are required to dress alike—in the same colored prints. The state porters and marshal men are engaged directly by the king on warrant.

"The ordinary household servants are resident, with the exception of a personal housemaid, who travels with the royal family."—New York Press.

ONE AND ONE MAKE TWO?

Not Always, by Any Means, According to Sir Oliver Lodge.

Sir Oliver Lodge has attracted a tremendous amount of attention by telling scientists (of whom he is one) that he believes in immortality in spite of science. This is not the first time he has locked horns with scientific dogma. In his book, "Modern Problems," he affirms that one and one do not always make two. And this is the "almost frivolous" way he makes his point:

"I would contend that, whereas the proposition that one added to one makes two is abstractedly beneath controversy, it need not be true for the addition of concrete things. It is not true for two globules of mercury, for instance, nor for a couple of colliding stars; not true for a pint of water added to a pint of oil or vitriol, nor for nitric oxide added to oxygen, nor for the ingredients of an explosive mixture; not necessarily true, either, for snakes in a cage, or for capital invested in a business concern, flourishing or otherwise, nor is it true, save in a temporary manner, for a couple of trout added to a pond. Life can make havoc of arithmetic.

"The moral of all which is that propositions can be clear and simple and sure enough, indeed absolutely certain, as long as you deal with abstractions, but that when you come to concrete realities and have all the complexities of the universe behind you—not only behind but in front and among and intermingled with every simplest thing—then we perforce step out of the realm of positive dogmatic security into the region of reasonable and probable inference, the domain of pragmatic conviction, of commonplace intuition, of familiar faith."

Took a Mean Advantage.

Returning from South America, a New York man vouches for the ingenuity of the city officials in Rio de Janerio. The householders on a certain street received notices that the city fathers had heard complaints of the high tax rates along that particular thoroughfare, and in order that justice might be done the residents were asked to submit their own valuation on their property. When the prompt and joyful responses had all been received the lots were condemned and bought for a contemplated public improvement.—New York Tribune.

Grandest of All.

"What is the grandest thing in the universe?" asks Victor Hugo. "A storm at sea," he answers and continues: "And what is grander than a storm at sea?" "The unclouded heavens on a starry, moonless night." "And what is grander than these midnight skies?" "The soul of man"—a spectacular climax such as Hugo loved and still, with all its dramatic effects, the picturesque statement of a vast and sublime and mighty truth.

Unfortunate.

"What are you crying for, Peperl?"

"Because I am so unfortunate."

"How do you mean unfortunate?"

"The teacher told us that there were 1,500,000,000 people in the world, and he said I was the most stupid of them all."—Fliegende Blatter.

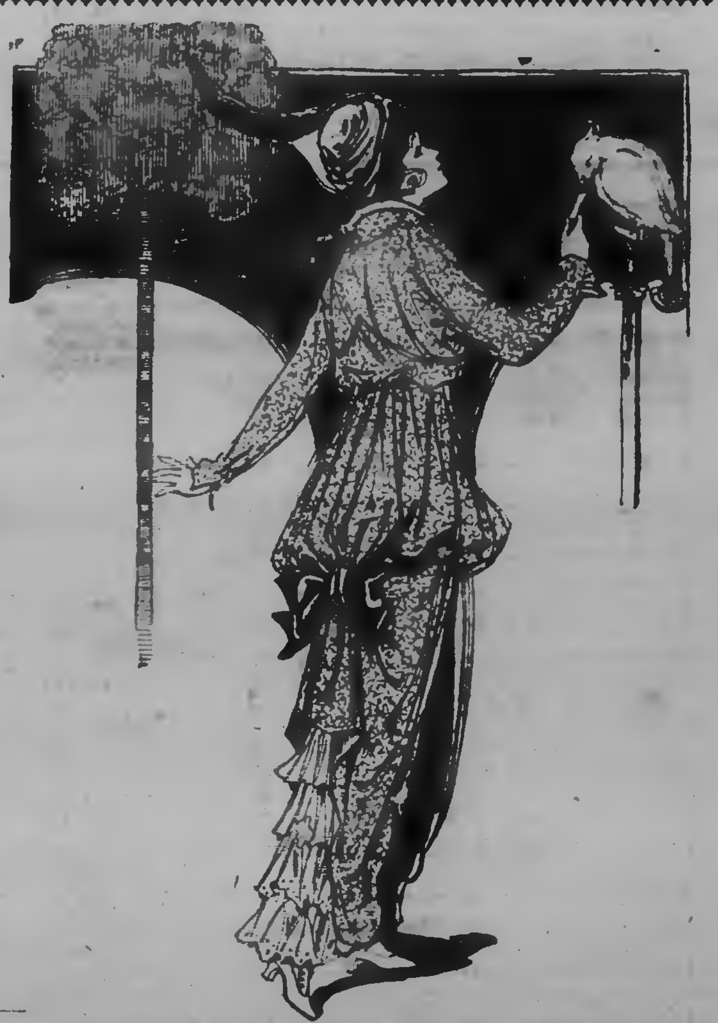
THE LATEST FROM DAME FASHION



IN MANDARIN CREPE WITH THE NEW BUSTLE.

A figured Mandarin crepe, that soft drapable stuff, is used in the development of this afternoon frock which gives a quaint suggestion of the old-fashioned polonaise. The lifted back in the present fashionable effect reveals an odd little flounced petticoat of sheer batiste machine embroidery. Pearl grey suede buttoned boots and pearl grey in the hat match the tone of the frock.

RENTING ROOMS

The total amount of rent money paid for furnished rooms in this city each week is enormous! Nobody knows how much. It goes to thrifty people, who like to lessen their own rent or living expense by sub-letting one or more spare rooms to an agreeable person. If YOU have a desirable extra room you can become a receiver of rent by ordering a "Furnished Room to Let" ad. in the Review. The cost is nominal—one cent a word for first insertion and half a cent a word for subsequent insertions, run consecutively.

FOE OF THE FLYING FISH.

Albacore Actually Jump Out of the Water to Catch Them.

The home of the flying fish is along the path of the north Atlantic trade winds. In "Memories of the Sea" Admiral Fitzgerald of the English navy says that in sailing down the trades you find the sea fairly alive with these fish, which are relentlessly pursued by the albacore, the largest of the mackerel family.

From my commanding position at the end of the jib boom I could look straight down on the strange scene. There was a shoal of some dozen albacore swimming along ahead of the ship. Sometimes one or two of them would dart off on either bow or right ahead for thirty or forty yards and then drop back again until they were straight under where I was sitting. The ship was going about seven knots. As it sailed along the flying fish would rise out of the water before it, spread their wings and soar away to the right or left. Often I could see exactly what happened. As the flying fish rose one of the albacore darted off in pursuit and kept almost underneath him until he dropped into the water again; then there was a splash like the rise of a salmon, and the flying fish flew no more.

But the albacore did not always wait for the flying fish to touch the water. On several occasions I saw them actually take their prey in the air by making a huge jump out of the water.

HE DIDN'T LIKE DRIPPING.

And No Wonder, After He Had Read About Its Strength.

What is dripping?

Everybody knows that dripping is supposed to be the juices, the savory essences, that fall from roasting meats.

That is the supposition. But what really is dripping—the dripping that the poor of England buy by the pound and smear upon their bread in lieu of butter?

The question perhaps will never be answered, but a partial solution is given to it by the fact that a London poorhouse recently bought at $7 a ton thirty-two tons of dripping from—a soap works.

"A little boy," he would begin, "complained bitterly about the bread and dripping that formed his daily breakfast.

"'It'll kill me,' he whined at last. 'I know it'll kill me.'

"'Kill you? What do you mean?'

"'Why, I've been feeling pretty bad lately, and now I know it's all this dripping what's the cause of the trouble. I read it in a book.'

"'Some pure food rubbish, I dare say! And what, precisely, did you read in this vile book, silly?'

"'I read,' whined the urchin, 'that constant dripping wears away a stone.'"—Exchange.

An Estate in the Moon.

After the Franco-German war, in which Camille Flammarion, the famous astronomer, fought as a captain, he settled down to his astronomical labors in Paris and later founded an observatory at Juvisy specially to study the planets. On the occasion of his scientific jubilee he was presented with a silver medal depicting him standing on a cloud, flanked on one side by the planet Mars and on the other by his Juvisy observatory. A region on the moon has been named after him, but in whispering this fact to an interviewer M. Flammarion hoped it would not be published. "The budget commission," he added humorously, "may want to tax it as being landed property."—Westminster Gazette.

An Ancient Pension.

A curious revelation regarding the origin of a $1,500 pension which falls to the Lord Mayor of Dublin was made in reply to a question asked in the House of Commons the other day. It was explained that the pension was granted in consideration of services rendered to Charles II. The sum in question is a perpetual annuity granted by the Merry Monarch to the mayor of the day and his successors, for eminent services rendered at the time of the Restoration. For many years it carried with it the rank of captain in the army, with its corresponding privileges regarding command and so forth. The latter privileges have become obsolete, and the Lord Mayor of Dublin performs no military service; but the annuity is still paid out of the Consolidated Fund.

The Discovery of Blotting-Paper.

Blotting-paper was discovered purely by accident. Some ordinary paper was being made one day at a mill in Berkshire, when a careless workman forgot to put in the sizing material. The whole of the paper made was regarded as being useless. The proprietor of the mill desired to write a note shortly afterwards, and he took a piece of waste paper, thinking it was good enough for the purpose. To his intense annoyance the ink spread all over the paper. Suddenly there flashed over his mind the thought that this paper would do instead of sand for drying ink, and he at once advertised his waste paper as "blotting." There was such a big demand that the mill ceased to make ordinary paper and was soon occupied in making blotting only, the use of which spread to all countries.

Finds Mammoth's Tooth.

A strange find was made on the Yorkshire coast the other day. As a man was walking over Filey Cliff he saw a piece of ivory projecting from the cliff face. He worked at the object with his walking-stick, and disclosed the tooth of a mammoth in perfect state of preservation. It is that of a large ruminant, and weighs 12 pounds 13 ounces. Along the gum line it measured a shade over twelve inches, whilst it stands eight inches in height and is close upon four inches thick. The ivory is as fresh as when the huge animal died. Mammoth remains have been previously found along the Yorkshire coast at long intervals, but nothing approaching a tooth of such giant dimensions as this one has ever been discovered.

To Keep Cake Fresh.

Most housewives know that an apple in the cake box will help to keep cake fresh and moist, but if there is cake in the house and no apple put a glass of clear water in the box and the same result will be achieved.

BODY SNATCHERS.

The skeleton of the last of the body snatchers treasured in King's college hospital recalls that there must be Londoners still living who remember Hare, who, with his accomplice, Burke, first substituted murder for resurrecting corpses in order to supply subjects for the dissecting rooms. Burke, whose method of smothering the victims gave his name as a new verb to the language, was hanged on the testimony of his accomplice, for Hare turned queen's evidence and was released.

Forty years or so ago Hare was a well known figure in London streets, for Sergeant Ballantine in his "Life" describes him as one of the most persistent blind beggars on the streets about 1870. Few people recognized the cold blooded murderer in the middle aged stout man, clad in a white smock and led about by a dog. His blindness he owed to the fact that on leaving prison Hare found work in some lime kilns. The laborers discovered his history and threw him into a pit of lime. It was a terrible vengeance, for it destroyed his eyesight. And as it is not fifty years since he was a striking figure in London streets some people should recall him.—London Spectator.

Lightning Cures.

Some have had physical reasons to rejoice that they had been struck by lightning. De Quatrefages mentions the case of a telegraph employee at Strassburg who was struck senseless and remained paralyzed until the next day, but thereafter enjoyed better health than ever before. In Martinique a M. Roalde was deprived by lightning of the use of his limbs for three hours, but, having previously been a man of weak health, was much stronger from that time on. Several authors refer to cases in which rheumatism was cured by lightning. And in this respect also trees seem to be as men. Arago saw a poplar, one of an avenue of 1,500 near Tours, which, having been struck, developed such vigor that its trunk soon far surpassed in dimensions those of all its neighbors.

He Knew the Moment.

The last time Augustus Thomas, the playwright, went to a dinner of the Hoboken Chowder club (noted for its hospitality more than its views on national questions) he was assigned to the rear of the speakers' list to "bring up the retreat from Moscow," as he put it. One of the speakers made a stab at politics, and the chairman turned to Thomas.

"I'm going to call on you next," he whispered hoarsely.

"Don't do it," begged Thomas.

"I will," insisted the chairman. "It is the proper zoological moment!"—New York Tribune.

Why the Cook Left.

There was a dead silence in the kitchen, and the mistress felt that the work was not progressing as it should. She walked quietly along the passage and found the cook reading a novelette. "Why are you wasting your time like this? What is this rubbish that keeps you from your work?" demanded the mistress. Her eyes fell on the title of the novelette. It was called "Married to the Master."—Manchester Guardian.

A Wicked Prisoner.

A perfectly formed hard shell crab about the size of the end of a person's thumb was found in an oyster shell. The crab had evidently been swallowed by the oyster, but presumably the crab proved too much for the oyster, as there was no oyster in the shell when it was opened.

Still Appropriate.

"What is a den?"

GIGANTIC SEA WAVES.

Force of Those Raised by Earthquakes or Violent Storms.

The term tidal wave is erroneously applied to almost any unexpected wave that inundates the seacoast or the shore of a great lake. These waves are rarely if ever due to the tides since the real tidal wave is a phenomenon admitting of exact calculation and prediction, but they may be traced usually to some distant earthquake or violent storm.

When an earthquake occurs beneath the sea the vertical movements of the sea bed generate a great wave, which is propagated outward from the center of the shock and reaches the land after the arrival of the earth wave. In the open sea this wave is so broad that it cannot be perceived, but when it reaches shallow water near the shore it rushes forward as an immense breaker, sometimes sixty feet or more high and overwhelming everything in its course.

The sandy beach deposits and loose bowlders are swept away, while inland the surface is strewn with debris. The velocity of these great sea waves is greater than the ordinary waves raised by the wind. A submarine earthquake near the coast of Japan in 1854 gave rise to sea waves which traversed the whole breadth of the Pacific at a rate of about 370 miles an hour. At Simoda, Japan, the waves were thirty feet high, while at San Diego, Cal., they measured only six inches. Such an earthquake wave near the coast of Peru once lifted a gunboat of the United States navy and landed it a mile inland.—Kansas City Star.

STAGE GHOSTS.

Kean's Contrivance to Make the Shade of Banquo Realistic.

I think it was Charles Kean who first resorted to illusion to make a stage ghost a little transparent, says a writer in London Tit-Bits. When he produced "Macbeth" at the old Princess' theater he manufactured a contrivance which allowed Banquo's ghost to appear through a transparent column.

Later on, when Mrs. Ann Radcliffe's "Romance of the Forest" was staged at Covent Garden theater, those responsible for its production arranged that the spook in the piece should be seen by the audience through a gauze of bluish gray color, so that the too corporeal effect of a live actor might be removed.

When the old playhouse in Drury lane opened, in 1794, with a performance of "Macbeth," Banquo's ghost was omitted. Although Mr. Kemble's acting was fine enough to make the audience almost believe that they really did see the ghost, yet the people were not satisfied until the system they had been used to was readopted and Banquo's shade allowed to trot bodily across the boards.

Reflecting mirrors and the cinematograph are coming in general use at the theaters, and with them it has been found possible to manufacture ghosts capable of striking terror into the hearts of all followers of the occult.

Rudeness About Doors.

Never mind if you do not happen to know the person who is coming behind you. Hold the door or gate open for him just the same. Of course the next in order may be several steps behind, or you may be obliged to save two seconds to catch your train. You may in cases like these feel compelled to slam a door or gate in the face of an innocent fellow being. But in scores of instances recently observed doors and gates have been slammed in the faces of those following by boorish men and women, apparently out of sheer clownishness. Sometimes the person thus insulted may happen to be one whom you may wish to please. It pays to be a lady or a gentleman, even when you think you are among strangers.—Kate Upson Clark in Leslie's.

Clinching the Argument.

At a club meeting held in a public house in a small village a discussion took place as to whether a hard or soft substance would last the longer. The debate continued for some time, until one man spoke up and said:

"Now, men, you are all mistaken, as I can easily prove. When me and my wife married she had as good a set of teeth as any woman could have; now she hasn't got one, and her tongue is as good as ever."—London Tit-Bits.

Contrasts.

"Well, the baron thinks himself intellectual when he is with the poet, and the poet thinks he looks smart when he's with the baron."—Fliegende Blatter.

Men and Jobs.

Canker sores in the mouth result from a badly balanced diet. The stomach digestion may be satisfactory and yet cankers may develop. To cure cankers burn them with some aromatic sulphuric acid applied to the ulcers with a wooden toothpick. To prevent them eat regularly, properly and slowly. NOMENCLATURE.

For centuries fair woman reigned,
And o'er her subject man maintained
A firm and gentle sway.
Enthroned securely in his heart,
Crowned with his love, she had the art
To rule and to obey.

Obey? Yes, in its primal sense.
Just turn and search the Latin, whence
Our English words contrived,
You find the root means but "to bear"—
The prefix opposition there!
You see where we've arrived.

Yet everybody was content.
For lovely woman had her bent.
So he believed, did man.
Alas, that age of gold is past!
It doubtless was too good to last.
Fate had another plan.

Shakespeare was very much to blame
For asking us, "What's in a name?"
A name! That's just the rub!
Man yielded woman her demands—
While she'd "a scepter" in her hands.
But how about a club?

The Illegible Writer.

A protest which Michelangelo once made to his nephew against his sending letters in illegible handwriting will arouse a great deal of sympathy in the breast of modern sufferers from the same form of rudeness. It is contained in a letter given in the "Life of Michelangelo."

"I never receive a letter from you without being thrown into a fever before I can read it. I am at a loss to know where you learnt how to write! Little love here! I believe if you had to write to the biggest ass in the world you would take greater care. I threw your last letter into the fire because I could not read it. I cannot therefore reply. I have already told you, and constantly repeated, that every time I get a letter from you fever attacks me before I succeed in reading it."

Insurance and Assurance.

They were talking, the little group of agents, about the words insurance and assurance, some claiming that the first and some that the second was the better word to use.

But with a scornful laugh a Boston agent in gold rimmed spectacles said:

"You are all very ignorant. Insurance is no better and no worse than assurance. Each has a special significance, and each is equally good in its place. The place for assurance is where precaution is taken against a certainty—against, that is, death. Life assurance, we should say if we spoke with perfect correctness. The place for insurance is where precaution is taken against an uncertainty, such as fire, shipwreck, burglary. Fire insurance, marine insurance, we should say."—Exchange.

When Macaulay Was a Boy.

At one period of his boyhood Macaulay's fancy was much exercised by the threats and terrors of the law. He had a little plot of ground at the back of the house marked out as his own by a row of oyster shells, which a maid one day threw away as rubbish. He went straight to the drawing room, where his mother was entertaining some visitors, walked into the circle and said very solemnly, "Cursed be Sally, for it is written, 'Cursed is he that removeth his neighbor's landmark.'"—From G. O. Trevelyan's "Life of Macaulay."

IS AN OLD TIMER.

A. D. Braithwaite Had a Vigorous Life in the Far West.

Mr. Arthur Douglas Braithwaite, recently appointed assistant general manager of the Bank of Montreal, and who is widely known in fashionable circles of Eastern Canada as a society man and generous patron of art and wholesome sport is widely and popularly known throughout Alberta as an "old timer." He was connected with the Bank of Montreal during the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and it was his lot to pass along from one frontier office to another, as the Bank of Montreal established branches behind the rail head. In this way he came to be at Regina when it was in its infancy, and he was manager of the important branch at Calgary during the crucial period when that place was developing from the canvas and shack frontier post into a well-built and substantial commercial centre. During the eighties, Mr. Braithwaite was one of the leading and most popular citizens of Calgary. Of splendid physique, and being a good rider and athlete, he entered heartily into the sports of the country, and before he had been long in Alberta, he could ride bucking bronchos with the best cowboys in the country, and the pick of Texas, Wyoming and Montana found their way into Alberta in those days. At a time when influence of the most evil kind threatened to obtrude themselves into the sport of horse racing on the Canadian prairies, Mr. Braithwaite induced a number of his friends to associate themselves with him for the purpose of directing the development of that good sport according to the best traditions of the British turf, and shady practices on the pioneer race tracks in Alberta were put down with a strong hand. Mr. Braithwaite himself owned a famous racehorse, which was always fairly and squarely run to win, and old timers in Alberta still recall "Harkaway," not only as a wonderful performer on the track, but as the champion of true sportsmanship at a time when an example of that excellent quality was very much required.

Mr. Braithwaite was also one of the originators of the bachelor's ball at Calgary, an annual event which did much towards setting, for all time, a high standard for social entertainments throughout Alberta. He was also a patron of the Calgary public library and the local hospital. As became a man born in an English rectory, the institution which perhaps attracted most of Mr. Braithwaite's attention, while a resident of Calgary, was the little English parish church, which has since developed into the Cathedral Church of the Redeemer. He sang in the choir, was sidesman and churchwarden, and occasionally took service as lay reader in outlying settlements, for clergymen were few and far between in Alberta in those days. Since removing to Toronto, Mr. Braithwaite has been churchwarden of St. James Cathedral and a delegate to the provincial synod. Wherever he has gone, he has shown the same public spirit as made him popular in the Far West. From Calgary he was removed to Hamilton, Ont., as manager of the bank's branch there. When he left Hamilton, the citizens presented him with a public testimonial. He then went to New York, to take charge of the bank's agency there, returning to Toronto, as manager, seven years ago. Mr. Braithwaite was then appointed general manager of the Ontario Bank, which had just gone into liquidation, the act of winding up affairs being in the hands of the Bank of Montreal. For some time past he has been superintendent of Ontario branches of the Bank of Montreal, and for two years has been chairman of the Toronto Clearing House. He is greatly interested in musical affairs in Toronto, and he was president of the Elgar Choir at Hamilton. He was also treasurer of the South African Patriotic Fund in Toronto. Mrs. Braithwaite is a daughter of the late Mr. William Hendrie, the millionaire contractor of Hamilton, Ont.

Man-of-War's Hospital.

The hospital on board a British man-of-war, and which seamen call the "sick bay," is well equipped and modern in every respect. The hospital corps usually consists of two doctors, a steward and three or four assistants. The "sick bay" consists of a dispensary, an operating room, a medical ward and an isolation ward. The dispensary is up to date, and contains a complete outfit of drugs, which are official. Minor operations as a rule are the only ones done on board a man-of-war while she is in port, but emergency operations are done on board while the ship is at sea. Ventilation in a ship's hospital is very good, and taken as a whole a hospital on board a man-of-war is a great deal better than the general public in civilian life believe.

A man never looks better than when he is looking for another man who owes him money.

Probing Peat Resources.

The Dominion Government has, through the medium of the Department of Mines, just undertaken a very extensive and exhaustive investigation into the merits of peat as fuel, the commercial feasibility of its manufacture at a reasonable marketable price and the available supply in Canada.

The Government is experiencing considerable difficulty with get-rich-quick men, who, posing as promoters of peat enterprises, induced investors to place considerable money in ventures that are not based upon intelligent information in regard to the possibilities of the industry.

There is considerable capital invested in Canada, however, in legitimate peat enterprises, and these are to be given every encouragement by the Government, with the end in view of doing everything that is possible to provide against a fuel famine in the future.

Wanted Them All.

Julia Ward Howe was once talking with a dilapidated bachelor, who retained little but his conceit. "It is time now," he said pompously, "for me to settle down as a married man, but I want so much. I want youth, health, wealth, of course; beauty, grace"—

"Yes," said Mrs. Howe sympathetically, "you poor man, you do want them all."

UNUSUAL AND CHIC.

Oriental Lines In This New Costume.

OF TAN DUVETYN AND CLOTH.

Chinese lines have been exploited in evening wraps for several seasons, and oriental effects both in materials and trimmings have received a perfect sartorial ovation from the feminine public, but this year the silhouette designed from Chinese costumes is new in the dress world.

The chic little three piece costume pictured is of such a genre. The material used is tan wool for the skirt and the same shade in duvetyn for the little mandarin jacket, which has a sash of silk worked with metal threads finished with bands of fur. The costume is original and smart in the extreme.

A Good Writer.

"What does this young fellow write? I won't have my daughter married to a starving author."

"Off the handle, as usual, dad. That young chap wrote $500,000 worth of life insurance last year."—Washington Herald.

Giving Him a Tip.

He (at 11:30 p. m.)—Can I never get you to say "Yes?"

She (stifling a yawn)—That depends on your question. Try asking me if I am sleepy.—Baltimore American.

Four Footed Poultry.

A certain old man in the Wynchope settlement named Bickley was exceedingly fond of "big words." He was riding his horse over the country one bright spring day, apparently intent on some important business.

Whenever he met anybody he gravely asked: "Have you seen anything of any stray poultry today? I've lost mine and am hunting it." When they told him "No" he would proceed on his way.

After spending several hours in what seemed to be a vain search he at last rode up to the door of a farmhouse and called, "Hello!" A lady came to the door, and, doffing his hat very politely, the old man inquired if she had "noticed any stray poultry around?"

After a moment's thought the woman told him she had seen no chickens.

"Oh," he replied, "it's my hogs that I've lost, not my chickens."—Youth's Companion.

Armenian Peasant Life.

Among the Armenian peasants the old patriarchal system prevails. The entire family of a score or two of people of several generations lives beneath a single roof. Together both men and women till the fields in a primitive manner, and when the grain is ripe, they take a sheaf to the roadside that the passing stranger may give a present and thus bless the crop. Their houses are of stone roughly laid or of mud, or frequently they are half underground, and from a distance their homelike roofs resemble the mounds of a prairie dog settlement.—Christian Herald.

Cured.

"She married him to reform him, and she has succeeded."

"What was his favorite form of dissipation?"

"He was a spendthrift."

"Why, he has nothing to spend!"

"Nope. She spent all he had."—Houston Post.

Sufficient Grounds For a Divorce.

"The only untold agony a woman suffers is when she wears tight shoes to be stylish," replied Mr. Gabb.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Reflection.

"Not everything in this world is appropriate."

"What makes you think of that?"

A Snapshot.

"Here's a case where the police caught a photographer they wanted in his dark room."

Had Heard of One.

"What is an expert?" asked the teacher of her brightest pupils.

It was a poser for awhile, when one of them raised a hand.

"Do you know, Willie?"

"Yes'm."

"Then what is an expert?"

"A good baseball player."

Just the Difference.

"How do rawnchers do out in this country?" asked the visiting Englishman of the friendly westerner who was showing him about.

"No good," replied the cow puncher.

"Really, I heard they did well."

"Rawnchers don't, but ranchers do."

WORDS ON WHICH COMMON USAGE AND DICTIONARIES DISAGREE

An Amusing Verbal Duel in the Supreme Court in Which the Lean Lawyer's Wit Came into Play—A Blind Man's Criticism of Irving.

There are many words so habitually mispronounced that the correct accent (i. e., the accent favored by the dictionaries) would appear wrong if anybody used it in current conversation. This, of course, means that common usages have overriden the dictionary and established a new standard which the dictionary of the future will have to respect, just as those of today respect the pronunciation of "lien" that they rejected in the past. Such words are cocaine and ptomaine, which the dictionary of the present recognizes as trisyllables, thus: co-ca-ine, pto-ma-ine.

Anyone familiar with French—a language that may be said to possess no accented syllables—will understand Taine's complaint about London restaurants that whenever he ordered potatoes the waiter invariably served him with buttered toast.

And of course it was another Frenchman who made a jest of matrimony by pronouncing it ma-trim-ony.

Mark Lemon records a story about Lord Chancellor Eldon and Sir Arthur Pigott. The first always pronounced the word "lien" in two syllables, as if it was spelled li-en; the latter pronounced it in one syllable, lean, just as it would be pronounced in ordinary conversation. On this difference Jekyll wrote an epigram:

Sir Arthur, Sir Arthur, why, what do you mean
By saying the chancellor's lion is lean?
Do you think that his kitchen's so bad as all that,
That nothing within it will ever get fat?

Lord Eldon's pronunciation of this legal term was not unknown at one time in America. Witness an anecdote about Lincoln. He once appeared in the supreme court in a case involving a lien upon a piece of property.

The presiding judge was noted alike for obstinacy and pedantry. Lincoln, referring to the lien, pronounced it "lean." This visibly affected his honor.

"Li-en, Mr. Lincoln," he gently remonstrated.

"Very well," said Lincoln. But a little later he forgot himself and out came the pronunciation "lean."

Once more he was corrected by the judge.

"As you please," retorted Lincoln, somewhat nettled.

"Not as I please," came from the bench. "That is the pronunciation favored by Webster and by Worcester. It so obtains at Westminster hall and also at our own supreme court in Washington."

Lincoln had now recovered his constitutional good humor. Bowing to the court, he said: "Certainly, your honor, certainly. I only desire to say that if my client had known there was a lion on his farm for so long a time, I am sure he would not have stayed there even long enough to bring this suit, and I should not have had the pleasure of appearing before this honorable court."

Of Henry Irving we are told that to heroic perseverance and hard study he added almost childlike eagerness to adopt any suggested improvement in his manner of delivery. A blind man once offered an illuminating criticism on his Shylock. The sensitive ear of the sightless auditor detected a fault in Irving's opening line:

Three thousand ducats—well!

"I hear no sound of the usurer in that," was the blind man's subsequent comment to Irving himself. "It is said with the reflective air of a man to whom money means very little."

The justice of the criticism was acknowledged by Irving. He revised his reading, not only of the first line, but of several others in which he now saw that he had not been enough of the moneylender.

George Eliot in "Middlemarch" supplies a classic instance of the value of the accent. When Lyndgate, sore distressed at the failure of all his professional and financial plans, comes to his wife for sympathy, she meets him with the query:

"What can I do?"

Whereon the author comments: "That little speech of four words, like so many others in all languages, is capable of expressing all states of mind, from helpless dimness to exhaustive argumentative perception, from the completest self devoting fellowship to the most neutral aloofness. Rosamund's thin utterance threw into the words 'What can I do?' as much neutrality as they could hold. They fell like a mortal chill on Lyndgate's roused tenderness."

"Ain't you tired of hearing people say 'That is the beautiful Miss Belsize?'"

"Oh, no," the professional beauty replies. "I am getting tired of hearing people say 'Is THAT the beautiful Miss Belsize?'"—William S. Walsh in Chicago Record-Herald.

Try to be something in the world and you will be something. Aim at excellence and excellence will be attained.—Boileau.

PLANTS IN SLEEP.

Some Take Their Naps at Night, Others During the Day.

Clover shuts its leaves before rain and at night, bringing two of its three leaves face to face and folding the third over the top. The young blossoms are also carefully sheltered by inclosing leaves which move forward in the evening and wrap them around.

There are two plants in the garden whose flowers sleep by day—the night blooming stock and Lychnis vespertina. The former is withered and shriveled in daylight, but expands and exhales a vanilla-like odor at night. The lychnis is white, and in bright sunshine every flower closes and hangs limply down.

As the sun sets this Endymion plant awakes expectant of the moon. The drooping calyzes raise themselves and slowly expand their flowers. It visibly ceases to droop and fade, and the plant, which almost died by day, is adorned anew. Its sister, the red lychnis, shines by day and is called diurna, but this white one has long left the beaten ancestral path and has become vespertina.

As it opens small flies appear and visit it. The calyx is of that reddish hue which they approve. The sun dew which attracts flies shows the same dull red in its leaves. It is not a rarity, but few have seen its blossoms opened.—Scotsman.

Great In Little Things.

George Washington's surveying done 150 years ago with the comparatively simple instruments of the day has been checked up by government surveyors of today and found perfect. Experts in other lines might check up other works and qualities of his—his patriotism, his common sense, his foresight, his persistence—and find pretty nearly the same degree of excellence. Washington was only nineteen years old when he ran his lines through the forests and over the hills of Lord Fairfax's estate in Virginia. But the youth was father to the man.—Baltimore Sun.

Gigantic Neptune.

Neptune, owing to its remoteness, shines as an eighth magnitude star. Its diameter is 35,000 miles, or a little more than Uranus. Its mean distance from the sun is 2,740,000,000 miles. It has one satellite, which revolves at a distance of 220,000 miles, or about the same distance as our moon. However, of the planet itself we know very little, but it seems probable that it is little more than a globe of very heavy gas.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Varicose Veins.

In mild cases of varicose veins, especially in young and otherwise healthy people, the symptoms are very slight. There is a feeling of weight in the leg and a dull ache toward the end of the day. The ache is soon relieved by the patient's resting with the leg somewhat raised, so that the blood can flow back more easily. Sometimes cramp complicates the trouble, and the cramp is likely to return again and again until life becomes a burden.

More serious complications are thrombosis, or the clotting of the blood in the vein, and phlebitis, or inflammation of a vein. Often a form of eczema appears in the skin of the leg, or an ulcer may arise. When varicose veins are very troublesome surgical treatment is advisable, but the milder cases can be much relieved by rest and proper bandaging.

A KING AS AN ACTOR.

He Didn't Intend It, but the Moving Picture Man Caught Him.

While King Christian of Denmark was cruising with the queen and their two sons in his yacht Rita off Aarhus, Jutland, the party were startled by the sound of shots and shrieks for help. The king immediately gave orders to sail in the direction of the sounds.

They found several boats manned with crews of the most desperate looking type engaged in a regular battle.

The king was making arrangements for speedy intervention when he saw through his binoculars another boat, a little away from the others, with a man at the stern calmly turning the handle of a cinema camera. The sight of that unruffled figure made the king smile, and he ordered the yacht to be "taken out of action."

At that moment, however, fate took a hand in the game. The actress who took the part of the heroine jumped overboard to escape from the villain, but halfway to the shore she became exhausted and would have drowned if the king had not detected a genuine ring in her cries of distress. A boat from the royal yacht was manned and came to the rescue of the actress.

WISCONSIN'S NEW CAPITOL.

It Will Be Crowned With the World's Fourth Highest Dome.

The fourth highest dome in the world is that of the new Wisconsin state capitol, with a height from the ground of 269 feet 8 inches without the bronze statue of a woman which will increase it to 287 feet. The three domes which are higher are those of St. Peter's cathedral at Rome, 330 feet; the Duomo at Florence, Italy, 310 feet, and the national capitol at Washington, 307½ feet.

The dome on the Wisconsin capitol is more than 104 feet in diameter at the base. It is constructed of concrete, re-enforced with 2,300 tons of steel, with exterior wall made of 8,000 tons of white granite. In order to place the main steel girders, each of which weighs twenty-three tons, it was necessary to erect a square steel tower through the center, with derricks which could be moved from corner to corner.

The dome alone will cost $2,500,000, considerably more than one-third the price for the whole building, which is limited to $6,000,000.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Prize Crop Counties.

No other county in the United States from the Atlantic to the Pacific has the distinction of Lancaster county, Pa. For fifty years it has stood as the richest farming county in the land. The tillers of the soil try to raise better crops each successive year. McLean county, Ill., now stands second to Lancaster, with Los Angeles county, Cal., a close third and Whitman county, Wash., fourth.—Argonaut.

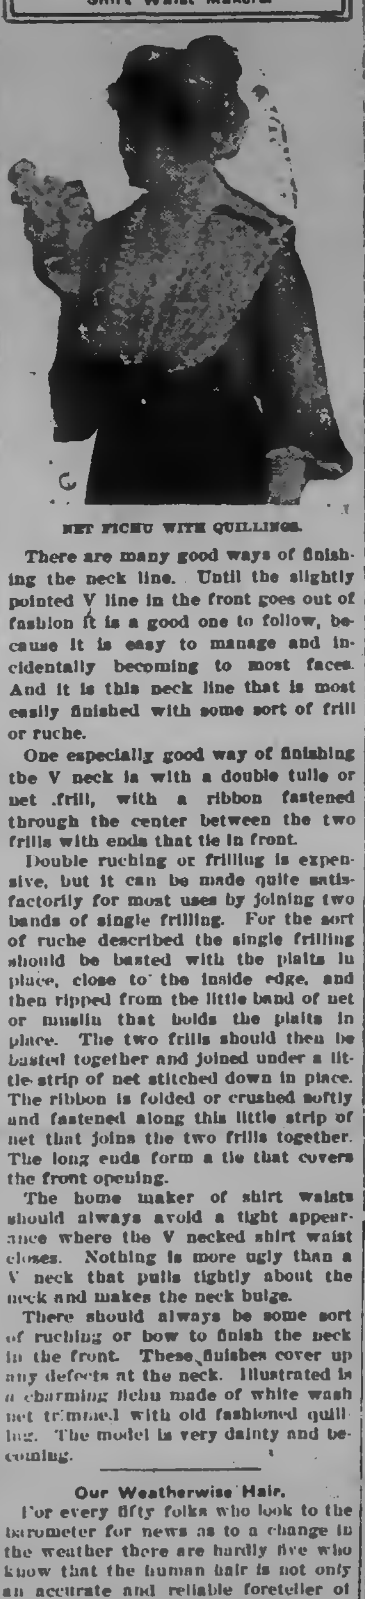
TO FINISH V NECK.

Advice For Home Shirt Waist Makers.



NET FICHU WITH QUILLINGS.

There are many good ways of finishing the neck line. Until the slightly pointed V line in the front goes out of fashion it is a good one to follow, because it is easy to manage and incidentally becoming to most faces. And it is this neck line that is most easily finished with some sort of frill or ruche.

One especially good way of finishing the V neck is with a double tulle or net frill, with a ribbon fastened through the center between the two frills with ends that tie in front.

Double ruching or frilling is expensive, but it can be made quite satisfactorily for most uses by joining two bands of single frilling. For the sort of ruche described the single frilling should be basted with the plaits in place, close to the inside edge, and then ripped from the little band of net or muslin that holds the plaits in place. The two frills should then be basted together and joined under a little strip of net stitched down in place. The ribbon is folded or crushed softly and fastened along this little strip of net that joins the two frills together. The long ends form a tie that covers the front opening.

The home maker of shirt waists should always avoid a tight appearance where the V necked shirt waist closes. Nothing is more ugly than a V neck that pulls tightly about the neck and makes the neck bulge.

There should always be some sort of ruching or bow to finish the neck in the front. These finishes cover up any defects at the neck. Illustrated is a charming fichu made of white wash net trimmed with old fashioned quilling. The model is very dainty and becoming.

Our Weatherwise Hair.

For every fifty folks who look to the barometer for news as to a change in the weather there are hardly five who know that the human hair is not only an accurate and reliable foreteller of rain or drought, cold or heat.

If in dressing your own hair or brushing your small daughter's you find it rough and brittle the weather will keep hot and dry. When the hair becomes soft and smooth again look out for rain. Lasting rain is foretold by curly hair becoming straight and clingy and straight hair flat and less abundant looking. When the hair begins to fluff out and curl again the weather will become pleasant once more. The approach of thunderstorms is heralded by the hair's crackling when being combed and "following" the comb and brush, which electrical tendency grows less and less as the rain comes down in showers. Some people are far more alive to atmospheric changes and conditions, but all hair shows its weather wisdom more or less, the blonder shades more so than brown or black locks.

AN UNWARRANTED INTRUSION.

The following story is actually true. A young Icelander, going across the desert from Reykjavik, met a man riding a pony. Such meetings are very rare indeed in those parts, and, like ships at sea, the two hailed and spoke. And this was the manner and substance of their conversation:

"What is your name?"

"Stefan."

"Whose son?"

"Thorstein's son."

"Where are you going?"

"To prison, for stealing a sheep."

"No one taking you?"

"No; the sheriff was busy, so he gave me my papers"—the warrant for the arrest—"and sent me off to prison myself."

The young men exchanged snuff and a kiss and then parted.

A week later the young Icelander was returning to Reykjavik, and near the same spot he met the same man.

'What," he cried, "Stefan Thorstein! Why, you said you were going to prison."

"So I was, and I went. But they would not let me in."

"Why not?"

"Because I had lost my papers, and the sheriff said he would not take me in without my warrant."

"So they won't have you in prison?"

"No."

"And you are going home again?"

"Yes."

And they went their ways.—London Tit-Bits.

CAMP IS VISITED BY DETECTIVES

Wooden Shack Near Orillia Served to Shelter Bad Gang

A FALSE ROOF

(Lindsay Warder.)

Detectives Newhall and Meagher, of Peterboro, were met at the C.P.R. station on Friday morning at 10.22 a.m. by Chief Chilton and Constable Foster, the four officers taking the train for Orillia. The object of the visit to the lake town was for the purpose of further investigating matters in connection with the recent burglaries which took place in Lindsay.

The tranquilizers of trouble arrived there at 11.45 o'clock a.m., where they were met by Chief of Police Reid and his assistant, Constable Wright.

Visit the Camp.

After dinner Chief Reid engaged a rig and drove the officers to the shack, two miles north of Orillia, where the bandits hold high carnival and foregather to distribute their plunder and formulate plans for raids through near-by towns. It is the Octopus or head centre, and sends out its tentacles to the places most vulnerable, using youths in most instances to perform the most nefarious work. Weak-minded youths, lured by a monetary consideration, risk their lives to support a gang of wise old renegades.

It could scarcely be conceived that such a hide or hang-out for thieves could exist in a law-abiding country, and it has the stories of Robin Hood, Jack Sheppard and Willie Brennan beat to a frazzle. An organized gang, which, according to good authority, has existed for years, and who possess a whole army of men engaged in the traffic. When you see a deaf and dumb man standing on your threshold, he may be one of the spies sent out from headquarters, or he may have his arm in a sling, or probably hobbling along on crutches. Those are the men who keep the fellows at headquarters posted of what is going on in the country.

In the Rendezvous.

The officers on going out to the shack, which is built of boards, found it was fitted up with boxes to sit upon, the floor being littered with straw, upon which the outlaws slept. Old rags were strewn around, a bolster placed under their head while resting, and a large comforter comprised some of the contents and bedding. Cotton batting was discovered in the premises. This was used for packing around explosives, which are used in safe blowing. Cartridges, railroad tickets and other goods were found. The shack was equipped with a false roof.

Birds Had Flown.

The officers found the men had flown before they got there, but they received sufficient information to put them in touch with the workings of the secret organization, which has Montreal as the metropolis, where the loot is sent and disposed of.

TALK OF CIVIC COAL YARD AT THE LIMESTONE CITY

Kingston, April 6.—There is some talk in civic circles of the establishment of a municipal coal yard, the city chartering a boat and buying its coal at the mine. The city consumes in the light and water works department, city hall, fire department, and schools, over 5,000 tons of coal annually, for which an average price of $4.50 a ton is paid.

It is stated that there would be a great saving if the various departments would unite and establish a civic coal yard, purchase and handle its own coal. It is possible that this matter will be taken up by the mayor in connection with his scheme for a municipal ice plant.

REV. R. POGUE'S SERMON ON DUTY OF LABOUR

IN ITS RELATION TO CAPITAL

Labour Must be Reasonable in its Demands, Says Mr. Pogue

The duty of Labour in relation to Capital was the subject of the sermon by the Rev. R. Pogue, of St. Paul's Church, Sabbath evening. He spoke in the first place on the demand of Labour for a living wage, and said in part as follow: "A distinction must be made between a living and a minimum wage. A living wage is based upon the principles of justice and brotherhood, and is such a wage as will enable the Labourer to live a free, natural, healthful, moral life. The conditions under which a man labours ought to be such that his work and its reward will promote his health, his intelligence, his morality—in short, that it will promote an all-round efficiency of his life and all its powers as an indivdiual and as a social and a religious being. It can be quite easily shown that the community or country that enjoys the highest level of wages has the highest degree of happiness and the highest standard of citizenship, and that the peoples of the lands with low wages are abject in their misery, degradation and servility. So that there can be but one answer to this demand of Labour for a living wage. It must be granted. The law of justice and of Brotherhood as well as the law of Christ demands that it should. But a living wage is not a minimum wage. The demand for the former may be a just and reasonable one, but that for the latter may be sometimes exceedingly unjust and may result in the complete demoralization of Capital. There are many men doing business in Peterboro who cannot pay what they themselves feel ought to be a minimum wage for the reason that if they were to do so they would have to shut up shop. Here is a fact that may not be known to labouring men generally, namely, that 85 per cent. of he men who start in business for themselves, fail. So keen is competition to-day in business and such are the conditions in the industrial world that it is quite impossible for many employers to pay a minimum wage. If the Labour Organizations of the country should demand a minimum wage for the different trades and professions to go into effect to-morrow, the result would be the complete demoralization of business enterprises throughout the country. Labour, therefore, must be reasonable in its demands. It is the duty of Labour at times to make sacrifices, just as I pointed out a week ago there are times when it is the duty of Capital to make sacrifices. It is no answer to say that if a man cannot pay a minimum wage that he ought to get out of business. Suppose he were to get out of business, what would follow? Exactly what has followed the organization of "Trusts" throughout the country. The result of a centralizing of business in our large cities has been the shutting up of small enterprises in the towns and villages and the throwing out of employment of great numbers of men. These men have gone into the large centres and the result has been unemployment or the employment of only skilled labour and the cutting down of wages because of the oversupply in the Labour market.

Pleasure in Work.

Another demand which Labour makes is the demand that work shall not become slavery, that it shall be so arranged that men shall find pleasure in it, and that regard shall be had to the welfare of the workmen as much as to the quantity of the output. It demands such a regulation of the hours of labour and the conditions of labour that labourers shall not become brutalized by their work. Now this surely is a reasonable demand. Work to every healthful man ought to be a joy. To accomplish some desirable thing by mental or physical exertion ought to add to a man's happiness. But Labour must remember here that there are times when it is necessary for all of us to do our work under very exacting conditions and to work even to exhaustion. The minister of religion, the doctor, the professional nurse, the school teacher, the mother in the home, or hundreds of others that I might mention, can not confine their labour to an eight hour day, though often times their strength is not adequate to the demands that are made upon them. They must work frequently when their service is of the most sacrificial kind and without any thought of pecuniary reward from Society for the work that they do. Why should not men in other callings be willing for the social well-being to do hard and difficult things? Men will only find pleasure in their work to the extent that they think of the social good, and when they relate their work to the well-being and comfort of Society rather than to

WEALTHY FORT WILLIAM MAN COMMITS SUICIDE

Canadian Press Despatch.

Fort William, April 6.—Arthur A. Vickers, aged forty-one, a wealthy land owner and real estate dealer, was found dead in the bathroom at his home on Ridgeway Street early this morning with gunshot wounds in his head. A shotgun was found on the floor beside him.

He retired last night, apparently in good spirits. The report of the gun was heard at four o'clock this morning by his young wife and servants. Doctors say that death was instantaneous. Mr. Vickers married two months ago, Miss Marielle Finn, of Port Arthur, and returned from a wedding tour in the Eastern States a few weeks ago. He was a member of the firm of Murray, Vickers & Moffat, and was a graduate of the University of Toronto. He was well known years ago as an oarsman.

NOTHING DOING AT THE FIRE STATION

The firemen have had a rather easy session lately. The last call responded to was rung in on the 12th of March, or a month ago next Sunday. The Chief remarked this morning that this was a ery singular instance, as this season of the year generally ushers in two or three fires per week.

SERGT. ADAMS ANSWERS THE FINAL SUMMONS

Citizens of Peterboro will regret to learn that Mr. Robert Adams, passed away last evening at his residence, 308 Stewart Street.

The late Mr. Adams was born in Ireland sixty-eight years ago, coming to Peterboro when he was twenty-eight years of age. He shortly after became a member of the Police Force with which he was connected for 32 years, and with the late Constable McGinty, who passed away five weeks ago to-day, were the veterans of the force. He held the position of Sergeant for some time.

He leaves to mourn his demise a sorrowing widow, two brothers and two sisters.

The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon to the Little Lake Cemetery. Rev. Jas. Rollins will conduct the services. All the members of the police force will be present.

NEW GENERAL SECRETARY TO BE IN CITY SOON

Miss A. Peacock, of Toronto, who is to succeed Mrs. Grey as secretary of the local branch of the Y.W.C.A., is expected to arrive in the city on or about April 15th.

The Y.W.C.A. is filled to its utmost capacity with boarders, there being some 65 young ladies at the Institution. The same flourishing condition is to be found in the south end branch at the corner of Park and Townsend Streets.

At the Vesper Service in the former institution yesterday afternoon, the members were addressed by Mrs. (Rev.) J. G. Lewis. Her subject was "The Galicians in the Canadian North West and the Efforts of the Methodist Missionaries to Christianize Them." This interesting subject was handled in a decidedly intelligent manner, and brought home to the listeners the great struggles of the missionaries in teaching the Gospel of Christ to this rapidly increasing class of Canadian citizens.

ASKS $2000 DAMAGES

SUDDEN DEATH OF CAVAN RESIDENT

Mr. Geo. Sisson, a respected resident of Cavnn, was found dead at his home, Saturday morning. He had been attacked with heart trouble during the night. The funeral took place this afternoon to Ida Cemetery.

IS THIS PART OF THE GANG?

Montreal, April 6.—Five boys, aged from 12 to 14 years, of respectable families, confessed before the juvenile court to a series of exploits that took them as far afield as Ottawa. Starting their thieving at school, two of the bolder spirits raided the house of their own leader, known as "Slim Jim," and with their loot, two watches and $7 in cash, took a trip to Ottawa, where they registered at a hotel on Murray street. They visited several houses on the excuse of shoveling snow, collected various hauls of valuables and clothing, and becoming bolder were detained and sent back to Montreal.

MR. GORDON MAY SUCCEED MR. HALL AS CITY SOLICITOR

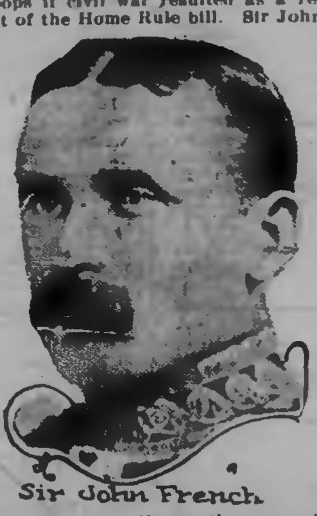
In cousequence of Mr. L. M. Hayes, appointment as senior judge for the County of Wellington, Mr. E. H. D. Hall has found that he will require to concentrate all his attention to the firm's business, and he has resigned as City Solicitor.

His resignation will be dealt with at the meeting of the City Council to-night.

The name of Mr. G. N. Gordon is prominently mentioned as successor to Mr. Hall. Should Mr. Gordon be appointed, he would vacate his seat in Council and another alderman for the Centre Ward would have to be elected either by a vote or by acclamation.

BUT FOR THE CUCUMBERS FRENCH MIGHT HAVE BEEN PARSON INSTEAD OF SOLDIER

Sir John French has been much in the limelight as a result of the revolt of the army against the British Government, which precipitated the worst crisis which Premier Asquith has had to face in his stormy career as Prime Minister. Sir John is the generalissimo of the Imperial forces in England, and would have been in chief command of the British troops if civil war resulted as a result of the Home Rule bill. Sir John was not among the mutineers, although one report stated that the whole War Office staff, with two exceptions, had threatened to resign.



Sir John French.

Besides being chief of the Imperial General Staff, he is likewise the first military member of the so-called Army Council, which is presided over by the Secretary of State for War. He would retain his position if there were a change of government. His salary is $20,000 a year, plus numerous allowances. Another of his duties is that of president of the Board of Selection, a board which selects the most suitable men for the various commands, decides on promotions, appointments, etc.

Sir John was originally intended for the church, and his family, by way of training him in his boyhood for holy orders were wont to delegate to him the task of reading family prayers. He did very well as a budding parson until one morning, when in the presence of the kneeling family and servants, he rendered the passage, "O Lord, cut us not off as cumberers of the ground," with considerable unction as "O Lord, cut us not off as cucumbers of the ground," which convulsed his small congregation and brought the devotions to an untimely close. He was rendered so indignant by this irreverence that he declared then and there that he would never say prayers again; and while it is hoped that he has done so in private, he has certainly never attempted since to minister to the spiritual needs of others.

He tried the navy for a while, and then went into the army, serving under Lord Wolseley in the Nile Expedition of 1884-5, and making a great reputation for himself as a general in the South African War. The Boers used to describe him as a "devil," because he seemed able to be everywhere at once.

JUDAS MACCABAEUS

The announcement in last Saturday's issue that the soloists are engaged for "Judas Maccabaeus," Handel's famous Oratorio, to be given in the Grand Opera House, reminds us that the second season of the highest type of choral study, the Oratorio, nears its end, as the work is to be performed on Wednesday, April 29th. The arduous work on the part of the promoters and singers can hardly be estimated, and all the members of the St. George's Choral Society are worthy of the hearty support of the public.

Second only in importance to the "Messiah" (so finely given by the same organization last season), the story of the great hero "Judas Maccabaeus," who lived 200 years B.C., and rescued the Jews from their Syrian foes, is to be found in the "Apocrypha," as well as in the 12th Book of "Antiquities" (Josephus.) It seems incredible that the heathen gods, Jupiter, Bacchus and Ashboreth were at this time set up in the Temple at Jerusalem. Such was the case, but on return from the defeat of the Syrian army under the valiant Georgias, the Temple was reclaimed for the worship of the true God. The music abounds in patriotic fire, and has a marvellously dramatic ending, especially in the four last numbers, "See the Conquering Hero," "Sing Unto God," "O, Lovely Peace," and the "Hallelujah." The well known bass solo, "Arm, arm, ye brave," was sung here a year ago by Mr. Frank Oldfield, who comes again to sing all through the work this month.

The first of the four final practices will be held to-morrow, Tuesday, in the Collegiate Institute, when the chorus and orchestra will combine. This, the greatest choral event of the season in our city, is being keenly looked forward to, and the veteran Dr. Torrington of Toronto announces his intention of being present if possible; so he assures Mr. R. J. Devey. Dr. Torrington first produced the work in Toronto twenty-seven years ago, and he has kindly lent the score used for the forthcoming event.

THE POLICEMAN THE FRIENDS OF BOYS

Police Chief Thompson Speaks To Life Problem Club

"Keep out of the hands of the policeman, but consider him your friend, and you will never have cause to be placed in the hands of the law," said Police Chief Thompson yesterday afternoon to the members of the Life Problem Club at the Y.M.C.A. The subject of the speaker's address was: "How to Keep Out of Jail."

Chief Thompson gave several instances where young boys had started on the downward path, but had recovered their standing in the world through acting on the advice given them by the officers of the law. He asked the boys to bear in mind that the policemen were their friends.

RUSHING THE WORK.

HOSPITAL MAY LOSE THE GRANT

The Crowded Condition of the Wards Must Not Continue

Orillia, April 6.—Dr. Bruce Smith, Inspector of Hospitals, has forwarded a report of an inspection of the Orillia General Hospital, made by Dr. Helen MacMurchy. Dr. Smith gives notice that the present overcrowding cannot be permitted to continue if Orillia Hospital is to get a government grant. Discussing "special features," Dr. MacMurchy says:

"This hospital has a large active service, but the medical and nursing staff labour at a great disadvantage on account of the crowded condition of the wards and of the nurses' home. This cannot be permitted to continue. No hospital receiving a government grant can be allowed to overcrowd the wards. Even the private rooms of the staff are utilised for patients, and the maternity ward is unsuitable and overcrowded. It is hoped that the Mayor and Council and the citizens generally will at an early date discuss the question of the needs of the Hospital, and inaugurate a progressive and up-to-date policy worthy of the town of Orillia. More fire protection must be provided at once."

EASTER HOLIDAYS.

The Normal School students leave for their various homes for the Easter vacation on Thursday. The various other schools, including Public and Collegiate, also close Thursday for the Easter vacation.

THE LICENSE INSPECTOR THE ONLY ONE LEFT

With the death of Police Sergeant Adams yesterday evening, leaves License inspector Joseph Stewart is the only surviving member of the old guard of four, who for years guarded the city.

When interviewed to-day Mr. Stewart was in a reminiscent mood, and he related some of the old times which are well remembered by the older residents of the city.

Mr. Stewart was for twenty years a member of the Police Force along with the late Chief Roszel, Sergeant Adams and the late Constable McGinity, during which time, excitement prevailed extensively throughout the city or rather town as it was then.

In those days' said Mr. Stewart, "you had to fight like a tiger."

"Why about two or three times a week, we would have to go out to some of the surrounding woods and round up a bunch of tramps. Often we have been shot at. Yes, sir, many a fight we have had and the old residents will remember those days."

Referring to the work carried on by the members of the force, he stated that then, the four of them, had to do the work which now occupies the attention of some twelve men. The work included sanitary inspector's work, looking after dog by-laws and other various by-laws which were left with the police to enforce.

It was a case of inspect yards, serve papers and a hundred and one things. The Chief during the months of May, June, July and September would look after the office work along with one man who would have all the day duty to do. The other two members who did night duty would be sleeping. The day man would inspect yards, serve papers and assist to keep order throughout the city, which presented a most turbulent condition on some occasions.

No holidays were furnished for the members until the work of inspection was done, which was generally through for the second trip about the end of September.

The night men always stayed until court was over in the morning at ten o'clock.

"Chief Rozelle and I were appointed the same night, and Sergeant Adams had served as acting chief for nearly nine months before that. He was an excellent man and always used every one the same."

Speaking of the growth of the city, Mr. Stewart said there was nothing south of Charlotte Street during his first years here. The site of the present post office was then an empty cellar. There was no market building.

"You had some rough times then?" remarked the reporter.

"Yes, there were twenty-three hotels and often on Sunday there would be about twenty-five men in the cells. Sunday was the same, as the rest of the week."

"What was the salary those days?"

"We got $400 a year and bought our own clothes out of that."

RECKLESS DRIVING COST HIM $8.75

Evidently the Police Department are against circus stunts being pulled off on Water Street without a special permit. This morning, a native of Lakefield appeared before Magistrate Dumble on the charge of being intoxicated while in charge of a vehicle, thereby endangering the lives of the public.

He was assessed $8.75.

DR. ROBINSON IN HIS NEW OFFICE

Dr. Robinson, veterinary surgeon and proprietor of Robinson's Livery, has removed from his temporary office at the corner of Charlotte and George Streets to his former one a few doors east. The office has been thoroughly renovated and the fittings are decidedly up-to-date. The work on the moving picture theatre is steadily progressing, but just when it will be completed cannot as yet be stated.

FIRST BABY IS BORN AT FORD

Town Has All Claims for Being On the Map

Ford, Ont., April 6.—It was not long ago that the community where the Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited, is located, was dignified by the establishing of a post office and thus it became a real village with a name of its own, Ford, Ontario; but its real claim to being a real town did not appear until the other day when the first baby was born. The youngster, a boy, was promptly named Henry Ford Riberdy.

GIFT FROM CHOIR TO MR. L. S. EDNEY

At the close of the morning service at St John's yesterday, Mr. L. S. Edney, who has been a member of the choir for some years, was presented with a handsome copy of the "Book of Common Praise," with tunes, on the occasion of his leaving the city. Canon Davidson and Mr. R. J. Devey voiced the regret at parting, of all the choir, and the former took occasion to say how much the church appreciated the faithful work of all the choristers.

Mr. Edney left for Hamilton on an early train this morning.

HAS VIOLIN ONCE OWNED BY DE BERIOT

Editor Review:—

Dear Sir:—

In the Saturday edition of the Review, I have seen an article about a recial by Dr. Park on Paganani (not Paganina) and de Beriot, in which I am very interested, as I am in possession of a violin that at one time belonged to the great violinist.

Charles Auguste de Beriot was not a Frenchman. He was born on the 20th February, 1802, at Leuven, province of Brabant (Belgium), and was married in 1833 to the celebrated French dramatic songstress, Maria Felicita Malibran-Garcia, who was born on the 24th March, 1808, at Paris, the first daughter of Manuel Garcia, the celebrated opera singer, born on the 22nd January, 1775, at Sevilla (Spain.) Maria Felicita was the first wife of the banker Malibran. Her marriage having been dissolved, she married de Beriot. M. de Beriot was in the year 1842 the successor of Pierre Balliot on the conservatory of music in Paris. He lived later in Brussels (Belgium.) He became blind in the year 1855, and died on the 8th April, 1870. A daughter of her first mariage, Maria Paulina Malibran, born on the 22nd July, 1828, was married to Dr. Johann Wilhelm von Banmer, Russian Councillor of State in Riga, Russia, who was a cousin to my grandfather. Maria Paulina received the violin from her mother, as her testatrix, as she had no children from their second marriage. My grandfather received it from his cousin after his death, and so the violin came into our possession. As no one in our family was a musician, we did not care very much for this instrument. My father inherited it from his father, and before I came out to this country, he gave it to me. I will be very glad to show the violin to any persons who may care to call.

Yours truly,
EMILE BAUMER.

GUELPH TRIES IN VAIN TO KEEP DOWN THE RATE

Guelph, April 6.—Guelph's tax rate for 1914 will be 24 3-10 mills on the dollar. This was decided upon at the meeting of the civic Finance Committee. Every possible effort was made to keep the rate down to the same figure as last year, but without avail, and the rate as above mentioned will be recommended to the City Council to-night. The general rate limit of 15 mills was not quite reached, but there is only a small fraction of difference.

CIVIC GOVERNMENT.

THE MUNICIPAL government of each city is a problem of its own kind. Government by commission has been tried and failed in many cases. In those places in Canada where it has been a success, government by commission has been a modified form of that existing in American cities, and has combined with it the chief features of the English municipal system. The difficulty in the average city, is to get the right men to offer themselves for municipal offices, and, having got them, to be able to concentrate intelligent public opinion in the city behind them. This is a vital point in which most cities have failed, including those which have been driven to the expedient of government by commission. Some of these latter, are the best governed cities in the world, yet they have found the same difficulty in getting the right men as commissioners.

Perhaps the chief difficulty is to find suitable men with the leisure to devote the proper amount of time to municipal affairs. Canadian cities are not wanting in men of capacity, but nearly all the men capable of intelligently directing the business of a large and growing municipality, are too busy managing their own business affairs to be able to give the time absolutely necessary to fulfill properly the duties of a municipal officer. Most businesses in which the best citizens are engaged, absorb all the time of the man at their head. If he devotes a fair amount of attention to town or city business, he neglects his own affairs, with consequent pecuniary loss, and often receives little thanks for the sacrifices which he makes. The result is that municipal business is conducted often as a side issue; men go into it for experience. They make a handle of it for something higher, or else for private advantage. They try out their political ideas on the dog, and municipal government suffers by their mistakes as often as it profits by their ability. St. Thomas is a first class example of a wishy-washy method of conducting municipal affairs in combination with private business. The Daily Journal of that city, pointing out the average annual loss on the street railway, of from ten to thirteen thousand dollars, or a mill and a quarter this year on the tax rate—the only instance in Ontario of a municipally owned railway showing steady deficits—states:—

> "To what extent the officials in the city building are using up their time on account of business not connected with their offices will be enquired into at the next or subsequent meeting of the council. The city solicitor is doing work both of council or conveyancer, the assessor has not yet separated himself from the contracting business, the city auditor gives practically his entire time to the management of a financial institution—the tax collector is secretary of the St. Thomas Cemetery Company; the health inspector is connected, as secretary or something else, with institutions of one kind or another; so that it has been discovered that the business hours of the offending officials are given over to other remunerative sources, although the city is actually paying the officials, too, for such services."

It is true that this criticism refers to officials receiving remuneration for their services and the same condition in greater or less degree exists in many other places. Perhaps in this case the trouble is a mere matter of salary, but the same criticism would apply to the council or administrative body had investigation been made there.

What the Journal says is undoubtedly true of the majority of urban places. The natural consequence of a new country is the scarcity of men having the wealth and education, permitting them to give their time free of charge to the public service. Having tried to set up the English system of municipal government which asks for the free service in most cases of those seeking political office, whether municipal or otherwise, Canadian municipal government has suffered from the low material condition of the people rather than from an inherent desire to do things badly or selfishly. The danger is, that performance under adverse conditions might result in an attitude of indifference towards political affairs, resulting, as it has done in the United States, in a lack of seriousness in the exercise of electoral privileges. The chief difficulty has been to find men financially able to devote proper time to politics.

In order to meet this contingency, western cities have incorporated a feature of government by commission, into the management of civic affairs. They have appointed a man, a commissioner, if you will, to take charge of civic business; in some cities they have appointed two or three. They pay them a salary large enough to enable them to devote their whole time to municipal government. The salaries range from $1,200 to $2,500 or $3,000 per year. The commission or commissioners are under the control of the council; in some cases they are appointed, in others they are elected. In many Ontario cities, the same idea has been put into practice by the election of controllers. This plan, necessarily, does not meet the whole problem. Since the chief difficulty is the lack of properly trained and well to do men, whether they are elected as controllers or elected as councillors, does not make a great deal of difference. The election of a commissioner or a controller, however, has this decided advantage that it necessitates the men that are put in control of civic affairs, devoting their whole time to the office, and it eliminates such a lamentable condition as the St. Thomas Journal describes. Possibly Peterborough would be benefited by the appointment of a commissioner or the election of a controller, but this matter would have to be decided in the light of an inquiry into present conditions.

SIR WILFRID LAURIER'S REPLY.

FOR TWO HOURS Sir Wilfrid Laurier held the attention of the House of Commons during the closing of the debate on the National Transcontinental scandal. The speech was worthy of the old warrior of the Liberal Party in Canada, for it was characterized by all those points of excellence which made his speeches of yore a delight to the ear. But, however one may be pleased with his diction, the address was stamped with a most apparent and telling defect, that of providing an adequate reply to the main charges in the report. Sir Wilfrid tried to belittle the two commissioners who prepared the report but was, in spite of his cleverness, at a manifest disadvantage for lack of ammunition. He condemned Mr. Gutelius because he once held a minor position on the C. P. R. and Mr. Lynch-Staunton because he was a lawyer and spelled his name with a hyphen.

Sir Wilfrid admitted that mistakes have been made. In regard to the famous Davis contracts Sir Wilfrid admits that he received a protest from the late Mr. Hays, the former President of the Grand Trunk Pacific. Sir Wilfrid says he reached the conclusion that it would be risky in law and unfair to the Davis firm to cancel these contracts.

What were the Davis contracts? They were the contracts for the building of 204 miles of railway of the Quebec division. For nine large contracts there were only two bidders for each one. These were sub-let to smaller contractors who were excluded from competing by the extraordinary conditions required of them. In this way $8,800,000 were recklessly expended in profits to the big contractors which might have been saved to the people of Canada. Concerning these contracts the Montreal Star says:

> "The legal point we can well leave to the lawyers. Obviously the Grand Trunk lawyers thought otherwise; else Mr. Hays would never have proposed a protest. Mr. Lynch-Staunton now thinks otherwise. Presumably, the lawyers of the present Government think otherwise; for they endorse his report. At any rate, the ordinary man would say that Sir Wilfrid might well have given the country the benefit of the doubt. If he had cancelled the contracts, and the Davis firm had sued, he would have had a margin of $740,000 for legal fees."

Then Sir Wilfrid declares, in face of his own admissions and the evidence, that there has been no waste, not a dollar wasted, the only fault is that they have built too well and have had too large a hope for the future!

Sir Wilfrid did not explain why he had declared the road would not cost at the outside more than $13,000,000 whereas it will cost $298,000,000. He did not explain clearly why it would have been unfair to the Davis firm to prevent them from pocketing a "rake-off" of $740,000 on contracts under which they had never turned a spade. Sir Wilfrid ended his oration with the statement that he assumed full responsibility for conceiving the road and for the manner of its construction.

Now what does Sir Wilfrid's speech show? Let us give him credit for admitting mistakes and for assuming responsibility, but a responsibility from which he could not escape. Granting this, his speech shows that the main charge in the Gutelius-Staunton report is undoubtedly true, viz., that the road was built on an extravagant scale. His speech is tantamount to admitting that the job was too big for the Liberal Administration, which was lamentably incompetent to estimate the cost of the road or to guage either its probable revenue or the effect of the expenditure on ths country's finances at a reasonable valuation. The people supported Sir Wilfrid's policy on a basis of $13,000,000 in 1904, and now the big fact is that the Liberals deceived the Canadian people. If they were sincere in the estimates they placed before the electors, the most charitable view of the whole situation is that Laurier and his followers were incompetent for the task of government—incompetent to manage even the public works of a township council. That is the real meaning of Sir Wilfrid's speech for the charges of extravagance and incompetence have not been refuted. The building of the National Transcontinental is a monument to the incompetence of the Laurier Administration and shows them unworthy of the support of the Canadian people.

HARD WORK

By Walt Mason

It's hard to swat the lyre redhot, and keep the blamed thing twanging, when you've got a cold, with aches untold around your brainpan hanging. I have the grippe, and bark and yip, until I scare the neighbors, still I must do, the long day through, my "literary" labors. My lungs are lame and all my frame seems sore and dislocated; I cough and sneeze and bite my knees in anguish unabated. Yet I must raise my locoed lays, some optimism springing, and urge the toffs who have no coughs to keep on dancing, singing. My eyes are red, my aching head, feels like a football seedy, and when I speak my pulleys creak, my voice is hoarse and weedy; I sob, I pant, kerchoo and rant, I whoop and squeak and strangle, my works are punk throughout my trunk, my nerves are all a-jangle. I punch the lyre, but there's no fire or rapture in my swatting; the winged steed is lame indeed, and stumbles when he's trotting. Don't roast too hard the halting bard, or load him down with cursin'; you do not know how much of woe he may have on his person.

WOMEN VOTE TO MORROW

CHICAGO'S FIRST FEMALE SUFFRAGE ELECTION ATTRACTS WIDE INTEREST

CHICAGO, April 6.—Two hundred thousand women will have their first real say in city affairs to-morrow. With 470,000 men, they will choose 36 candidates. In the list of those who aspire to make municipal laws there are eight women—another Chicago innovation.

The Progressive party presents three women candidates—Miss Marion H. Drake in the first ward, Miss Bernice Napierski in the 12th, and Mrs. Julia Agnew in the 31st. The Socialists have four candidates—Josephine C. Kane, in the 6th, Lydia E. McDermut in the 7th, Gertrude R. Dubin in the 20th, and Maude J. Ball in the 31st. Miss Harriet E. Vittum is running as an Independent in the 17th ward.

Interest in the women candidates centres chiefly on Miss Drake, because she has dared what few men have tried and none successfully—to vanquish Ald. "Bath House John" Coughlin who, with "Hinky Dink" Kenna, has held undisputed sway in the first ward for nearly a quarter of a century.

Four Buildings Burned.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April 6.—Two fires early yesterday destroyed four business buildings in the heart of this city and a portion of a manufacturing plant in East Birmingham, causing losses estimated at $325,000. The Acme White Lead and Color Works, a paint and glass establishment, a furniture store and two clothing stores were first destroyed, entailing a loss of about $200,000. Later the Stockham Pipe & Fitting Co. plant in East Birmingham was damaged to the extent of $125,000.

Freight Train Runs On to Platform.

LONDON, Ont., April 6. — While passing through the station yard of the Grand Trunk Railroad, about three o'clock Saturday morning, the locomotive of a west-bound freight train left the rails, plowing up about 20 feet of platform.

As the speed at the time was only four miles an hour, beyond the smashing of the platform, there was no great damage done and no injuries to the crew.

Physicians Recommend Castoria

CASTORIA has met with pronounced favor on the part of physicians, pharmaceutical societies and medical authorities. It is used by physicians with results most gratifying. The extended use of Castoria is unquestionably the result of three facts: First—The indisputable evidence that it is harmless: Second—That it not only allays stomach pains and quiets the nerves, but assimilates the food: Third—It is an agreeable and perfect substitute for Castor Oil. It is absolutely safe. It does not contain any Opium, Morphine, or other narcotic and does not stupefy. It is unlike Soothing Syrups, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, etc. This is a good deal for a Medical Journal to say. Our duty, however, is to expose danger and record the means of advancing health. The day for poisoning innocent children through greed or ignorance ought to end. To our knowledge, Castoria is a remedy which produces composure and health, by regulating the system—not by stupefying it—and our readers are entitled to the information.—Hall's Journal of Health.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. B. Halstead Scott, of Chicago, Ills., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria often for infants during my practice, and find it very satisfactory."

Dr. William Belmont, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "Your Castoria stands first in its class. In my thirty years of practice I can say I never have found anything that so filled the place."

Dr. J. H. Taft, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I have used your Castoria and found it an excellent remedy in my household and private practice for many years. The formula is excellent."

Dr. R. J. Hamlen, of Detroit, Mich., says: "I prescribe your Castoria extensively, as I have never found anything to equal it for children's troubles. I am aware that there are imitations in the field, but I always see that my patients get Fletcher's."

Dr Wm. J. McCrann, of Omaha, Neb., says: "As the father of thirteen children I certainly know something about your great medicine, and aside from my own family experience I have in my years of practice found Castoria a popular and efficient remedy in almost every home."

Dr. J. R. Clausen, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "The name that your Castoria has made for itself in the tens of thousands of homes blessed by the presence of children, scarcely needs to be supplemented by the endorsement of the medical profession, but I, for one, most heartily endorse it and believe it an excellent remedy."

Dr. R. M. Ward, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Physicians generally do not prescribe proprietary preparations, but in the case of Castoria my experience, like that of many other physicians, has taught me to make an exception. I prescribe your Castoria in my practice because I have found it to be a thoroughly reliable remedy for children's complaints. Any physician who has raised a family, as I have, will join me in heartiest recommendation of Castoria."

VERA NICHOLAEVNA

A Story of the Russian Revolution

By DONALD CHAMBERLAIN

When I was a young man I was sent to St. Petersburg by my employers to establish a depot for the sale of the chemical goods they manufactured. I had letters to the American ambassador and, desiring to see something of Russian society, accepted such invitations as he secured for me. Society in Europe is different from ours in America in this—that the sovereign is its recognized head as well as the head of the government. In order to see society in St. Petersburg I must see the Count Circle. The ambassador was very good to me and put me on his list for an invitation whenever there was a function of importance coming off.

One evening at a ball at the Winter palace I was in the refreshment room partaking of the delicate viands there when I saw a girl whom I had noticed for her beauty of form and face, her vivacity and general attractiveness. I had asked for an introduction to her and had been promised one later in the evening.

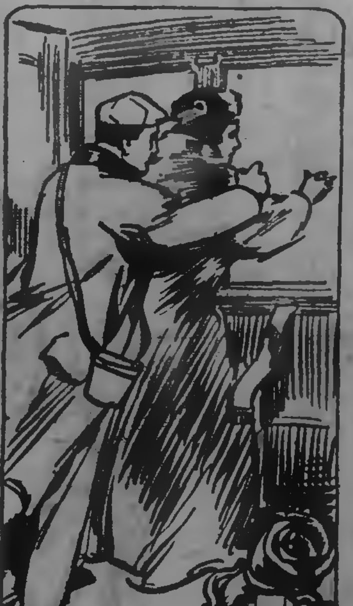
We were all standing in the supper room, some eating, some drinking, and since it was crowded I was pushed very near the object of my admiration. She stood with her back to me pledging an elderly man whose many decorations marked him for an important personage. Each held a glass containing wine. Feeling something touch me, I looked down and saw the girl's left hand. In her right she held her glass, while her left hung beside her. In the crush it had been pressed against me. The man emptied his glass and turned to a table near him to replenish it. While he was doing so the girl turned her head, gave me an appealing glance and lowered her eyes to her hand. Partly catching her meaning, I looked down and saw something between her thumb and finger. I dropped my hand against hers, and she placed a tiny phial within my fingers. This had scarcely been accomplished when the gentleman turned toward her with a bottle of champagne in his hand, filled her glass, then filled his own.

I have narrated bare fact; my astonishment I have not attempted to depict. The girl sipped her wine, the man tossed his off, then set down both glasses, offered her his arm, and, she resting her fingers lightly upon it, they went to another apartment.

Instinctively I slipped the phial into my pocket, concealing so far as possible what I did, for I knew that the girl must have passed it to me to get rid of it, and I surmised that she might be watched. With a view to getting an explanation from her I went to the person who had promised me an introduction and asked him to introduce me at once. He went off to look for her and returned saying that she was in company with a minister of state and he would not think of intruding upon her at such a time. Unfortunately very soon after this she left the palace.

Before leaving myself I inquired who she was and learned that she was the daughter of a colonel in the Russian army, one of the nobles who in Russia stand between the imperial family and the common people, a class that have no voice in public affairs and that are as much opposed to the autocracy of the czar as those who are beneath them. Her name was Vera Nicholaevna.

I went to my lodgings, and as soon as I had entered and locked the door of my bedroom I took out the phial I had received to have a look at it. It contained a colorless liquid. I was tempted to touch my tongue to the contents, but dare not. Being a chemist, I resolved to analyse the liquid and the next day did so. It was lucky that I had refrained from touching my tongue to it, for it was a deadly poison.



SHE MADE A SPRING FOR THE WINDOW.

I was for some time a prey to conflicting emotions. Had it not been for the personality of the girl and its effect upon me I would not for a moment have been tempted to meet her with the likely result of being drawn into a dangerous position. Visions of dungeons, of Siberia, of the scaffold haunted me. On the other hand, I could not banish her from my mind. I was horror stricken that one so young, so beautiful, should be implicated and longed to prevent her going a step further and becoming an assassin. I thought of her working in the mines at Kara or dragged to the scaffold, and while doing so I considered making her acquaintance and using the secret I possessed to compel her to desist from political crime.

Nevertheless I did nothing at the time and would have done nothing had not fate thrown a second and a much greater temptation in my way. Months passed, and, having finished my work in St. Petersburg, I applied for my passport and started for America. At the railway station I climbed into a compartment of a car, taking a seat by the window on the opposite side from which I had entered. There was but one other person in the compartment, and the light was insufficient for me to see him or her distinctly, for I could not make out whether I was looking at a man or a woman. A long ulster reaching from the chin to the ankles concealed the figure, but I thought I saw a slight adornment to the felt hat indicating that the wearer was a woman.

The passenger was looking out of the window, apparently watching for some one. Presently the guard shut the door, but my fellow traveler did not cease to watch. The train was moving out of the station when I heard a gasp more like that of a woman than a man, and, looking out, I saw a man running to catch the train. The train gathered speed, but from my position I could not see the man chasing it. The passenger put her head out the window, but soon withdrew it and fell back on the cushion.

"Did he catch it?" I asked.

There was no reply for a few moments; then suddenly the other person, starting up, threw open the ulster and revealed the figure of a woman.

Great heavens! She was the girl who had handed me the phial at the Winter palace.

"He is on the footboard. When the train stops he will come to arrest me. That means for me the mines. Death is far preferable. I am going to die."

She made a spring for the window, but I caught her.

Sacrifice—very great sacrifice—rarely comes when we are in our sober senses. It takes us by impulse. Looking backward, I wonder how I could have done what I did then, and I shudder. I defied the czar of all the Russias. I persuaded the girl to give me her ulster and her hat, while I transferred to her my fur overcoat, my traveling cap and a steamer rug for a lap robe. With these articles, the cap drawn down over her eyes, she was well covered and, sitting in a far corner, could not be told from a man. I put on her ulster and her hat and when the train stopped was sitting by the door, while Vera Nicholaevna sat where I had been, pretending to sleep. When the train stopped I knew a search was being made, and presently the door of our compartment opened, and an officer of police looked in.

"I am lost!" I cried in a falsetto voice.

The officer wanted no better evidence that I was his quarry. I was ordered to get out of the car, the door was closed, and my captor told the guard that the train could go on.

My object was to deceive the officer as to my identity as long as possible, and this was not an easy matter, since I was a man and he was looking for a woman. I wrapped my ulster about me and kept my hat well down over my face. It was night, and this helped me. Luckily I wore no beard. I was taken to the jail of the town in which I was captured and locked up. As soon as the key was turned on me I muttered:

"Thank heaven, she may be saved!"

The next morning the mistake was discovered. I was sent to St. Petersburg charged with assisting a political prisoner to escape. I wrote to the American ambassador to help me, but had little expectation that my letter would be given him. It was not, and I languished in a dungeon.

I wrote again to the ambassador, but my letter was not permitted to reach him. Some unknown person informed him of my condition, whereupon he worked hard for me. He would have failed had he not made personal application to the czar. The emperor was at the time asking for a concession on the part of the United States in a matter pending between the two governments, and a bargain was finally struck by which the concession was made on the one side, while I was granted a pardon on the other. After several months spent in captivity I was released, given my passport and told to leave Russia by the first train.

From my parting with Vera Nicholaevna, when I was arrested, till the present I have never seen her nor heard of her except indirectly. One day long after I reached America a Russian came to see me and told me that for the sacrifice I had made to the cause of freedom in Russia, if I had any favor to ask of him, it would be granted so far as possible. I told him that I desired no recompense except to know where Vera Nicholaevna was. To this he replied that it was the only impossible favor I could ask, for Vera Nicholaevna was lost to the world; her identity had been buried.

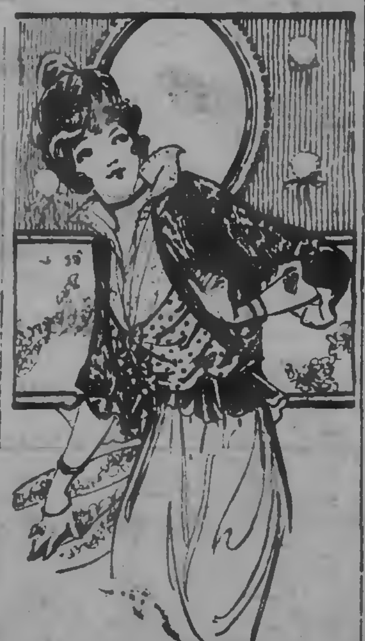
BOWS THAT FLARE AND FLAUNT

The small, simple hat shapes of this season very often flaunt aloft high flaring bows that give a dash to the appearance as nothing else can. Here the shape is a peacock green straw almost like a Turkish fez, the three-looped bow of moire taffeta ribbon in the same shade and is worn with a mandarin crepe suit, also of the peacock shade.



THE SEPARATE BLOUSE INVARIABLY HAS A PEPLUM?

Separate blouses have become the vogue again, and whatever they are made of, they almost invariably have a peplum, which often hangs below the outer jacket to simulate a peplum on the skirt. This dressy little affair combines the fashionable bolero and vest and closes invisibly in front with snap-fasteners under the frills.

SCOTS HUMOR.

A minister in a country parish was promoted from his unremunerative cure to the more desirable one of jail chaplain to a large town. His congregation resented his acceptance of the office, and referred to the trouble that it would give them to find a successor. But the divine stuck to his guns, and took as the text of his farewell sermon, "I go to prepare a place for you!"

The minister gracefully and fully accepts the high opinion of his powers accorded to him by the members of his flock. An Episcopalian Scottish professor told me that he questioned a distinguished parish minister as to the reasons why the Lord's Prayer was so seldom used in the service of his church. The reply was:

"Weel, ye see, we just dinna need it."

"But," pursued the professor, "surely it is impossible even for one so gifted as yourself to produce a prayer more sublime?"

"Aye," was the answer, "but oor folk thinks itherwise."

Another anecdote is taken from Geikie's "Scottish Reminiscences." A country doctor who was attending a laird had instructed the butler of the house in the art of taking and recording his master's temperature with a thermometer. On paying his usual morning call, he was met by the butler, to whom he said:

"Well, John, I hope the laird's temperature is not any higher today?"

The man looked puzzled for a minute, and then replied:

"Weel, I yas just wonderin' that mysel'. Ye see, he deed at twal o'clock!"

A minister well advanced in years summoned his elders, and apologetically announced to them his intention of taking to himself a third wife.

"She will come in handy to close my een," he added.

"Fegs, minister," replied one of his counsellors, "I have had twa o' them mysel', and I can promise ye they have opened mine!"

Swans' Inherited Trick.

A visitor to the cathedral city of Wells, in Somersetshire, England, tells of a curious incident he witnessed there among the swans in the Episcopal palace.

One afternoon about five o'clock, whilst watching the movements of the various birds in the water, the correspondent heard the ringing of a bell, and on looking to see whence the sound came, he observed that one of the swans was vigorously pulling the cord, evidently to attract attention.

As no immediate notice was taken of its efforts the impatient bird continued to ring the bell violently until there appeared at the window of the tower the wife of the gatekeeper, who threw out a quantity of food to the expectant waterfowl.

On making inquiries as to the origin of this interesting episode, the correspondent was told that a number of years ago a daughter of the Bishop of Wells, being much interested in the birds inhabiting the moat, taught the swans to ring the bell at feeding-time, at five o'clock in the afternoon. This practice has been continued by successive families of swans down to the present day, and it would seem, therefore, as if the birds transmitted to their offspring the knowledge that when the cord was pulled the bell would ring and that food would follow.

Ready to Oblige.

Sir Horace Avory is regarded as one of the ablest judges in England. He does not figure in the limelight to the same extent as some of his brother judges, for he refuses to ape the knock-about comedian.

When at the bar he was a noted cross-examiner. On one occasion he was cross-examining a witness on the various counts of a plea of justification.

"Yes," said the witness who had a fearful record and was unable to withstand the merciless cross-examination, "but you'll be accusing me of murder next."

Sir Horace Avory calmly looked over the pages of his brief and blandly inquired: "Which one do you mean?"

The things that wait around the corner for you are most apt to be the things that you are fondly yearning to pass up.

Money is a good thing to have, and if you haven't it it is a good thing to get.

Bashfulness that is never in evidence necessarily means to pardon our unbelief in its existence.

Many women regard a husband as a useful article to have about the house.

DURING the cold weather when it is necessary to keep on extra fires, there is always increasing danger of accidents happening from defective chimneys, defective stovepipes, furnaces, explosion of coal gas, accumulation of dust near heating appliances and numerous other causes.

To avoid misfortune as the result of losing your property by FIRE, see that your INSURANCE is in good shape and placed in first class companies.

Better to have it and not need it than to need it and not have it.

IS VELASCO ENTRAPPED ?

FLEEING DEFENDER OF TORREON PENNED IN BY REBELS

TORREON, Mexico, April 6.—Desperate fighting between Federal forces under Gen. Refugio Velasco, which evacuated this city Thursday night, and columns set in pursuit under Gen. Rosalio Hernandez is reported by couriers from Parras, five miles east of San Pedro, where Constitutionalists cornered Gen. Velasco's rear guard Friday night killing more than one hundred and taking many prisoners. The messengers left San Pedro early Saturday, and state that after the butchery at that place the Federals fell back on Parras, where they were making a determined stand when the messengers left.

Gen. Villa returned to Torreon late Saturday night with news that Gen. Hernandez has Gen. Velasco's army cooped up five miles east of Parras. Another battle is imminent.

Gen. Carranza had nearly an hour's conference with Gen. Villa over the telegraph wire Saturday night. The subject of the conference was that reinforcements shall be sent from here to assist in the campaign against Monterey. Gen. Villa asks that no reinforcements be sent at once, but that 3,000 men be held in readiness to despatch when he sends for them.

Gen. Villa is reported to have said that he will prevent Gen. Velasco's army from making a junction with Gen. Joaquin Maas, at Saltillo, if it takes every soldier in the army to accomplish it.

Villa To Follow Up Victory.

JUAREZ, April 6.—The opinion that Gen. Villa intends to take every advantage of the defeat of the Federals at Torreon was expressed here Saturday. It was based on the intelligence officially announced Friday night that Villa had left suddenly for San Pedro to take personal charge of rebel troops reported to have participated in an encounter with the fleeing Federals.

The departure of Villa from Torreon prevented that promised telegraphic conference with Gen. Carranza.

TO TEACH SETTLERS THE BEST METHODS OF CULTIVATION

Mr. A. H. Tomlinson, Provincial Horticulturist, of British Columbia, is busy planning three demonstration farms in the north country. These farms will cover tracts of five acres apiece, and will be devoted to work in connection with horticultural and agricultural experiments. One of them is to be situated in the vicinity of Lakelse, along the line of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. The second on Queen Charlotte Islands, and a third at Bella Coola. Every assistance is to be given to the farmers along the route of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway in keeping them posted in the best manner of cultivating the soil; in securing the proper kind of seeds, roots and trees for planting, and in the care and marketing of their produce.

TWO CIVILIZATIONS

A Lecture to St. Peter's Literary Society

The Ladies' Literary Society of St. Peter's F. A. S. held their last meeting for this season on Friday evening, when Mr. D. O'Connell delighted a large audience with a fine address on "The Two Civilizations." It is needless to remind any who have heard this speaker of his oratorical ability, and the Society were most fortunate in securing him for their final evening. Mr. O'Connell carried his theme back to the early ages, when, 800 years before Christ, the city of Rome was built upon the banks of the Tiber, and the people grew in power and strength, governed first as a monarchy, then as a republic, and later under the imperial form. They conquered the whole of the civilized world, and overcame the barbarians of the west and south of Europe. Posessing the characteristics necessary for the foundation of greatness, they were then a people of simple habits, strict integrity and morals, and, above all, imbued with a great sense of religion. They were frugal and industrious, with a strong sense of the domestic and civic virtues, and much of our modern jurisprudence is founded on the laws of ancient Rome. But as the empire grew in power and might, wealth came, and demoralized the ruling classes, and the patriotic patricians who, formerly, were willing to lay down their lives for their country, and to go on long and weary marches into far lands for the sake of the empire, became lax in their morals, and with self-indulgence came the downfall of the civic virtues, while a loose system of philosophy sprang into existence which turned the whole of their religion into ridicule. The outstanding point in the history or religion at that period of time was the fact that their religion was a national affair. There was no distinction between Church and State, and the king of emperor was almost the high priest. It was on this degenerate condition that the Christian religion burst like a new light, and finally, after centuries of torture and persecution, found its way to the hearts of all classes, until in the year 312 A.D. Constantine ascended the throne, embraced the Christian doctrines, and made it the religion of the state, bringing down with a crash all the pagan gods in the ancient Pantheon. The see of Peter was fixed in Rome, and it was there, centuries later, that Charlemagne was crowned emperor, and the great empire of the west was raised on the ruins of the east. The strange people of the Middle Ages, with no sense of self-restrain, and yet capable of great sacrifices for the cause of the church, these were the people who organized the Crusades to defend the holy places of the Saviour's birth and death, and who built the wonderful Gothic Cathedrals. Then came the 16th century, with the mendicant friars travelling over Europe, gathering funds for the building of St. Peter's in Rome, the protests of Luther, and the Reformation in England.

Mr. O'Connell pointed out the similarity between modern conditions and those prevailing in the ancient empire before the downfall, the world daily becoming more materialistic and less spiritual, the same loose ideas in regard to marriage and divorce, and the growth of the capitalist class. The pool labourer may go on toiling day after day, giving his sweat and blood for the creation of wealth, and ending in starvation, while surrounded by those who are squandering in luxury enough to support thousands of poor families, and the siren song of the Socialist is ringing in his ear, preaching doctrines that would destroy the State and overthrow all the ancient ideals, choke individuality and ambition, destroy the Christian family, and make even the child the ward of the State.

A vote of thanks was tendered to the speaker, and Rev. Dean McColl thanked him warmly in the name of the Society.

Miss May Hickey had charge of the very good programme, which was as follows:

Instrumental Duet Misses K. and E. Conroy.
Vocal Solo—Miss H. Warmington.
Recitation Miss Carr.
Vocal Solo Miss M. Clancy.
Accompanists—Misses K. O'Brien and L. Clancy.

SERVICES ARE CONCLUDED AT PARK STREET

A Special Meeting for the Many Converts To-night

Sunday was a busy day at Park Street Baptist Church. Pastor J. A. Conners led a largely attended prayer meeting at 10 a.m., and at 11 a.m. Evangelist Pugsley preached a helpful and instructive sermon on "Our Hope." Two decided for Christ. The church was filled with men at 3 o'clock and all were delighted with the talk on "Boot-Strap Religion." Five men gave themselves to Christ. The male quartette delighted the men. The church at seven o'clock was packed, in fact, scores were turned away. The anthem by the choir, solo by musical director Peter, "At the Feast of Belfshazzer," and solo by Miss Adams, "Step Out for Jesus," were delightfully rendered. Evangelist Pugsley was at his best and at the close of the sermon, twelve came to the altar, which makes a grand total of 233. There will be a service for the converts to-night. All welcome.

Mr. Pugsley is leaving for Port Perry, where he will hold union services. He will be accompanied by Mr. Peter. In the fall, Mr. Peter will take a special course in evangelistic work at the Moodie College.

REV. R. POGUE'S SERMON ON THE

the size of their pay envelope at the close of the week. When a man who works eight hours a day at the monotonous and nerve racking task of making rivets is able to relate those rivets to the ship for which they are being made and picture to himself that ship riding on the high seas and doing the commerce of the world, then he feels the dignity of toil and of work, and he finds a pleasure in it, that is not possible without this vision. Of course, it is only fair to add that no one will have this high ideal of work unless he feels that he is getting a fair share in wages of the wealth that he produces. If he is not getting this then it is his duty not to be content with his task and to do everything in his power to bring about a new and a better industrial order.

More Time to Rest.

The third demand of Labour is for a greater amount of leisure, for more time to rest, to play, to think and to worship. When a man has to work without any time to play and not enough time to sleep, the result is to brutalize him and to efface the Divine image stamped upon him by his Creator. There are two or three things, however, that Labour must remember in enforcing this demand. The first is that Labour must not be guilty of violence. I do not question the right of Labour to organize. That right has long since been conceded by all reasonable employers. But Labour cannot teach and preach the doctrine of brotherhooda nd yet itself, in acts of violence and bloodshed, be guilty of the most flagrant violations of the law of brotherhood. Then secondly Labour must not stand for the doctrine of a limited output. It is evident that if Labour puts a limit on the number of useful things made, then Labour itself must have less of these things to enjoy. The desires of Labour as well as Capital are yearly expanding. And this is right. Men to-day want better food and more of it, better clothing, better homes, better education, more ease, more leisure, and more pleasure. But it is evident that if the hours of Labour be reduced in a sort of sliding scale until men shall only work five or six hours a day, the result will be such a limitation of the things produced that there will not be enough things produced to contribute to these increased wants. To quote the words of another: "There is no way to gratify these keener appetites and more delicate tastes, except by increasing the annual stream of wealth, and especially the wealth of lovely and refining things. The man who pretends to be a friend of the working classes and suggests the limiting of the hours of labour, until only a fragment of each day is employed, is all unconsciously the deadliest foe of their well-being. Whoever increases the wealth of the world, increases the betterments of the poor. Whoever lessens the stream gives someone less to drink of its satisfying waters." But the strongest indictment that can be brought against this doctrine of a limited output is that it interferes with the sacred rights of personality. It is a violation of a fundamental law of human nature not to use to the fullest the powers with which we have been endowed and not to bring these to their highest efficiency. Our struggle with nature to wrest from nature all that nature can give us is the very best thing possible for the development of one's powers. And when a man is denied by hard and fast laws of Labour Unions to work all he wants to work and to produce all he is capable of producing, then he is denied the privilege and the right of developing to the full the powers that God has given him. I pointed out last Sabbath that it was the duty of Capital to invest Capital, the duty of Capitalists to use their talent of wealth to the full. It was a duty that they owed to their own nature and it was a duty that they owed to society. I say exactly the same words to Labour. Labour can no more bury its talent than can Capital. Labour must never deny to the workman the right of free competition. Competition ought to be natural to all healthy, normal, happy men. The exhilaration consequent upon "speeding" incites men to put forth their best powers, and it is only by putting forth their best powers that they can gain increase of power. I have used the word, free, competition advisedly. You will deny that free competition is possible in our present industrial system. I agree with you that it is not possible. But in the circumstance two duties are quite clear. The first is to work and labour and pray for the coming of a new and righteous order. And the second duty is the duty of making the highest use of all your powers, physical, mental, moral and spiritual, until that new time comes, the duty which the Master laid upon the servants in the parable of the pounds, when He said, "Trade ye herewith till I come."

BODIES OF SEALERS ARE BROUGHT INTO ST. JOHN'S

All But Five of the Sixty-Nine Are Identified and Heart-Rending Scenes Occur as Families Recognize Bodies of Loved Ones—One Woman Finds Husband and Son Clasped in Each Other's Arms.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., April 6. — In every church yesterday the disaster which overtook the Newfoundland's men on the ice was the theme of the sermon. Messages of sympathy from the King and the Canadian Premier were read and were gratefully received.

By noon all but five of the sixty-nine bodies of the Newfoundland's hunters, brought in Saturday by the Bellaventure, had been identified. These were shipped on a special train last night to Bonavista, where most of the victims lived.

Attendants at the Grenfell Institute, which was turned into a morgue, said that the scenes accompanying the identification of the bodies were almost beyond endurance.

One woman found two bodies clasped so tightly in death that they could not be separated. They were her husband and son. The lad was wrapped in his father's arms as if the man had been trying to shield him from the pitiless cold.

The hand of another dead man was missing. One of the survivors, who had lain helpless near the body for nearly forty-eight hours, said that his comrade, unable to stand the agony of frost bite, had sliced off his hand with his seaman's knife.

A gray-haired mother, supported by her two daughters, passed down the long rows looking for her sons. Attention was suddenly drawn to them when the woman fell to the floor in a faint. They had found not only the four sons and brothers, but two cousins, among the dead.

Of the thirty survivors in the hospital none is expected to die, but the majority will never be fit for active service again. Three lost both hands and both feet. Five lost both feet Eight others lost a foot and 11 will lose a hand or fingers. The others will bear scars for life.

Some of the survivors said they sought shelter from the Arctic gale behind the bodies of dead shipmates, but in all the delirium of the two days and nights of exposure, the bodies of the dead were left inviolate. Each man of the 150 endured his lot with firm patience, and each one, the dead as well as the living, was found with his full equipment of clothes, boots and sealing gear intact.

By Tuesday, when special memorial services will be held, if the Southern Cross fails to appear, the families of her 173 men must be provided for as well as those of the Newfoundland's dead and crippled.

Owing to the absence of Gov. Davidson and Premier Morris, the acting Premier, Mr. Bennett, directed the work of caring for the dead and injured. Every physician and nurse in the city volunteered for service. The new Grenfell Institute was turned into a morgue.

The disaster which overtook the Newfoundland's hunters was unavoidable, according to Capt. Randell of the Bellaventure. Tuesday dawned somewhat overcast, but with no hint of blizzard conditions, he said, so that it was quite permissible to put men on the ice after seals. Four ships were within sight of him, the Newfoundland, Stephano, Florizel and Bonaventure. These had a total of a thousand men on the ice.

The storm broke with typical Arctic suddenness. The hunters from the Bonaventure and the Florizel were fortunate enough to reach their ships safely. The Stephano's men, being nearer the Florizel than their own vessel, hurried on board her. The Stephano meanwhile steamed towards the spot where her crew had been seen before the snow shut in. This took her away from the Newfoundland's group, who were far from their own ship. As soon as the Stephano was notified by the Florizel's wireless of the safety of her own men, she headed back into the storm to pick up the Newfoundland's hunters.

It was impossible to see a ship's length ahead into the snow curtain, and when the Stephano's captain thought he was within a mile of the stranded hunters he lay too and kept his whistle going in the hope that they might be guided towards him.

As hours passed and not a man reported he concluded all had reached their own ships. But the Newfoundland had no wireless and all that day and all Wednesday the fleet remained in ignorance of the fate of the 150 men marooned on the floes.

On Thursday the weather cleared and the Bellaventure was making ready to start her men after seals again, when a lookout reported men on the ice. Captain Randell immediately ordered every available man from the ship to the rescue. The main party of castaways were four miles away, over a broken field of ice. The Bellaventure was driven toward them with all possible speed, but so bad were the ice conditions that it required nine hours to cover the four miles.

In the meantime his men had reached the castaways. Only a few of the hardiest were conscious and able to help themselves. Many were in a stupor. Some were raving, others had been stricken with ice blindness. Many bodies were found frozen so fast in the ice that pickaxes were necessary to chop them out. Two of the survivors were nearly mad from their own sufferings and from grief. Each had watched a brother die in his arms.

EXPECT GOOD TRAFFIC EAST AND WESTBOUND

Every effort is being made to develop the mineral and fishing industries in British Columbia. They will provide a large amount of freight traffic for the Grand Trunk Pacific on the eastward run. Prince Rupert is looking forward to being, in the future, the Pacific headquarters from which grain will be shipped through the Panama Canal to Europe. It is confidently predicted that a large percentage of the grain grown in western Canada will find its outlet on the Pacific coast. The Grand Trunk Pacific is pre-eminently a grain carrying line. With a grade through the mountains that can almost be classed a prairie grade, it surpasses both its rivals in the handling of this class of freight. The Grand Trunk Pacific also runs through one of the very finest grain growing areas in the world. A few months ago a settler named Paul Gerlach, whose homestead is in the Grand Trunk Pacific zone, captured the blue ribbon for high-class wheat. Fish and coal will supply eastward bound freight to augment the large amount of grain that is always likely to seek the cool route via the Great Lakes and the Atlantic to Europe.

SOUTHERN CROSS IS STILL MISSING AND ANXIETY GROWS

Steamer Not Reported by Incoming Vessels Or By Government Steamer in Search of Her.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., April 6.—Anxiety deepened last night for the 173 men on the sealing steamer Southern Cross, which has been missing since Tuesday's blizzard. She was not reported either by incoming vessels of the sealing fleet or by the steamer Kyle, sent out by the Government to search for her. By sunset to-day if she is not heard from, she will be officially posted as lost with all on board. Disaster to her, following so closely on the loss of 77 men of the sealer Newfoundland would bring upon the colony the greatest tragedy in its history, depriving whole settlements of their bread-winners and rendering one thousand women and children dependent upon charity.

As the public learned yesterday from the Newfoundland's survivors, who were landed Saturday, the details of the two days' blizzard and the condition in which it caught the Southern Cross, the first hopes, based on the stoutness of the ship faded.

Capt. Martin, of the sealer Erik, says he parted company from her a week ago Thursday, when the Southern Cross turned homeward with 17,000 seals. She was so deeply laden that all her provisions and part of her bunker coal were stored on deck, so that every available space below could be filled with her catch.

Capt. Barlett, of the Terranova, says the last he saw of the Southern Cross was a week ago Friday, when she was wallowing slowly down the coast. Other ships of the fleet sighted the steamer driving before the gale last Thursday morning. She has not been reported since, and the skippers of the fleet who came through that gale and the storm of equal severity later in the week, say every chance was against a vessel so deep in the water as the Southern Cross.

ASQUITH RAISES ISSUE IN DISCUSSING ARMY EPISODE

Prime Minister Expresses Hope That the Army Is Not to Become a Political Instrument and Hints at Negotiations to Cement Liberal-Labor Alliance.

LONDON, April 6.—(Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—"The army in this country is not, I pray, to become a political instrument. It has no place and no voice in framing our policy or moulding our laws," said Premier Asquith at Ladybank, opening his bye-election campaign in East Fife on Saturday.

A brilliant spring day and notable scenes of enthusiasm at Ladybank marked the occasion. The meeting took place in the village assembly room, and was opened by the usual formal business, including the adoption of the Prime Minister as the Liberal candidate. Mr. Asquith, Mrs. Asquith and their daughter, were given a rousing welcome.

Sir James Scott, who presided, welcomed the Premier amid cheers, as the greatest Parliamentarian they had known. Mr. Asquith returned thanks for his adoption as the Liberal candidate. He said it was a novel experience, contesting a bye-election, but they lived in strange times, and in no respect were they more strange than in the way in which credulity dogged the heels of invention, and invention strove, and strove in vain to keep pace with credulity.

The true doctrine of army administration, he said, was laid down by the older William Pitt, and was no worse for having been laid down 170 years ago.

The Prime Minister said it was his duty in the post which he had assumed, by searching personal inquiry, and with the co-operation upon which he could count, to see that the army was fit, in ever shifting conditions, for its primary and elementary duty. The army would bear nothing of politics from him, and he expected in return to bear nothing of politics from the army. (Cheers.)

Responsibility for the preservation of domestic peace, continued the Prime Minister, lay with the magistrates and the police. Under normal conditions, the army's aid could not and ought not to be invoked by the civil power. It was only in emergencies which were happily rare, that any such call could be addressed to the army. When such an occasion arose it was the duty of the soldier as it was the duty of the civilian, to comply with the demands of the civil power. But these present Tory doctrines struck at the very root, not only of army discipline, but of democratic government. (Cheers.)

Where did they lead to? They set a precedent which was capable of an infinite number of applications, and was much more dangerous in its consequences than the one which went before it. (Cheers.) If the Government was to recognise the existence of a dispensing and discriminating power they must recognize it not only in the officers, but in the men, and not only in the army but in every body of public servants.

Two years ago in this hall he had described the Tory doctrines as furnishing a complete grammar of anarchy. (Cheers.) He repeated now that these new dogmas, countersigned by the Tory leaders, would be invoked whenever a spirit of lawlessness undertook to block the ordered machinery of self-government. (Cheers.)

"We believe that settlement by consent is in the interests of the country and of both great political parties," continued the Premier, dealing with the Home Rule issue. "Those who believe in Home Rule do not desire to see the new system started under the most unfavorable conditions and amidst the clouds and darkness of civil turmoil. On the other hand, those to whom Home Rule is repugnant cannot face with equanimity the problems which the government of Ireland present if by any misadventure now the hopes and expectations of four-fifths of the Irish people were to be dashed to the ground." (Cheers.)

Mr. Asquith recapitulated his temporary exclusion plan, and while admitting its disadvantages said that it had the great merit, at least, that it got rid of any question of coercion. It gave the populations concerned the immediate arbitrament of the ballot. "I am anxious for peace, and I say this for both sides, it must be peace with honor." (Cheers.)

They must see some process applied, with necessary variations, and applied without delay, to other parts of the United Kingdom, in the conviction that such a reconstruction of constitutional organization would lead to greater efficiency in the conduct of both local and Imperial interests.

There remained one very serious point to be emphasized. If they studied the bye-elections of the last two years, they would find, with perhaps one exception, that every loss of a seat to the Liberals had been due to a split in the forces of progress. Upon the great issue of Home Rule the bye-elections has pronounced with an overwhelming majority in favor of the Government policy. It was indeed a melancholy thing for those whose hearts were bound up in the future prospects of wise democratic legislation to find the democratic army split asunder in the face of the common enemy. It was time that such a state of things came to an end. It would surely be childish if, in the great issues before them, which could only be brought to success by unity and loyal co-operation, they should allow comparatively trivial differences upon issues not vital, to divide a force which united was irresistible. (Cheers.)

THE SPORTING WORLD

SOME FURTHER ENTRIES FOR THE WRESTLING CHAMPIONSHIPS HERE

The classes are filling up nicely for the city wrestling championships that are to be decided in the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium next Thursday evening. In addition to the entries already reported, entries have now been received in some of the heavier classes, including T. Harpley and Andrew Gibson, in the welter-weight or 145 pound class, and of Alex. Gibson in the 158 pound class. All three entries are from Toronto.

Harpley is a wrestler whom Scott of the Peterboro Y.M.C.A. defeated on points in Toronto two weeks ago. Harpley is strong and has been working out faithfully with the Toronto boys and is anxious if possible to get another try at Scott in the hope of reversing the decision. Andrew Gibson is one of the classiest wrestlers in Toronto. He is the Ontario Y.M.C.A. champion, and has decisions to his credit from Adams of the West End Y.M.C.A., the crack wrestler who beat Scott on points in the recent Toronto tournament.

It is a sight worth going some distance to see, just to look at Gibson's magnificent physical development. In the Toronto championships he was as lean as a race horse with muscles standing out in knots all over his shoulders, arms and stomach. His abdomenal development is equalled by very few athletes. None of the Peterboro boys met him in the Toronto contest, but it was noticed that he was fast and tricky and inclined to go after the scissors holds. He had a way of jumping across his opponent when on the mat, taking a face hold and throwing his opponent backward in an effort to secure the scissors hold and arm lock. This manoeuvre he reversed once or twice by taking a leg lock over his opponent's head, getting a body hold and endeavoring to throw his opponent by sommersaulting him over his head. Gibson looks like a likely winner in this class although he will have to work for his decision. Other entries in this class besides Harpley are Will Scott, Mel. Turner and possibly a third entry on the part of a new member of the local class who has been doing good work during the past year.

As yet Alex. Gibson, a brother of Andrew, is the only entry in the middleweight class. No entries from Peterboro have been received in this class as yet. Entries close to-morrow with Mr. J. J. Thompson, Physical Instructor Y.M.C.A.

BASEBALL

Remarkable tribute was paid Rube Waddell by Connie Mack, when the manager of the world's champions was informed of the famous Rube's death.

"He was the greatest pitcher in the game and although widely known for his eccentricities, was more sinned against than a sinner. He was the best hearted man on our team and every man with whom he came in contact will verify my statement. When a comrade was sick, Rube was the first one on hand to see him and the last to leave, and if he had money, it went for some gift or offering to the sick man.

"He made my team, and every follower of the White Elephant banner in the Quaker City knows this in his heart. He came to Philadelphia, a stranger, but entered into the spirit of the city and tried with all his heart to bring pennants here. He may have failed us at times, but to him I and the owners of the Athletic ball club owe much.

Fans Wronged Rube.

"The pennants of 1902 and 1905 were won for us mainly through the efforts of the Rube and if he had not been injured in that straw hat accident at the close of the latter season, we would have won the world's championship from the Giants in a walk. And he was badly injured, too. Many fans have figured him as having quit in the face of the heavy guns of the McGraw outfit. They wronged a man who, if he was anything, was a courageous pitcher. His shoulder was injured and never regained the strength which had made the Rube such a terror in opposing batsmen. I cannot say how sorry I am to hear this news.

"I received a letter this morning from Waddell's sister telling me that he was sinking but assuring me that he would live for some time. In the letter she sent me a message from the great southpaw. He wished to be remembered to his team mates and to the younger men who were now upholding the name which he practically made. He expressed sorrow to his sister that he had acted in the heedless manner he had during his baseball career and wished to see his first wife. Above all did he want to see his manager, she said, and I was moved to take the trip but for conditions which made it impossible.

Had Generous Heart.

"In his entire career he was his own worst enemy. Never did he harm a man intentionally and many are the men who can testify to his generous heart. Truly am I sorry and from every viewpoint do I regret the passing of the great southpaw."

The departure of Mr. Claude Bartlett of the Bank of Ottawa staff, this morning for North Bay, deprives Peterborough of one of its popular young men and all round athletes. Mr. Bartlett was a well known basketball player, rugby player and a wrestler of promise, besides being a keen follower of other sports.

LACROSSE MEETING ON FOR TO-NIGHT

Third and last call to—not supper—but to the lacrosse meeting at the St. Alphonsus Lyceum this evening at eight o'clock. This is the organization meeting and the election of officers and forming of the club will be the main business to be performed. As they say in the church campaigns, "come and bring a friend."

CHILDREN AT SHELTER.

Six children comprise the household at the Children's Shelter at present. This is the smallest number of inmates of the Shelter for a number of years. Superintendent Henry of the Shelter said this morning it was the smallest number for any winter he could remember.

DURAZZO, Albania, April 6.—Prince William, the new ruler of Albania, Saturday announced his intention of taking the field and leading the Albanian troops against the Greek insurgents who have taken the town of Koritza, which Friday night was reported captured and partly destroyed. A general mobilization of the Albanian forces was ordered.

ATHENS, Greece, April 6. — The Albanian town of Koritza has fallen into the hands of "insurgents," according to an official announcement here Saturday. It is explained that the "insurgents" are Greeks, who have risen in opposition to the decision of the European powers that Koritza must belong to Albania.

Reports are current that the insurgents are in the pay of the Greek authorities.

Prayed For Carsonites.

LONDON, Ont., April 6.—Orangemen to the number of several thousands, from the city and surrounding districts, gathered at St. Matthew's in this city yesterday, in order to hold a special service of prayer for Sir Edward Carson and his anti-home rulers. The meeting was held by Rev. T. B. Clarke and a number of other prominent Orangemen and home rulers, lay and clerical. The affair partook of something of the nature of a spectacle, as the different lodges paraded and marched to the church.

MANY CHINESE SERVANTS ARE BEING DISMISSED FROM HOMES

Orientals Unpopular In Vancouver as a Result of the Murder of Mrs. Millard—Police Secure Confession.

VANCOUVER, B.C., April 6.—The shocking murder of Mrs. Charles Millard, the young wife of the chief ticket agent of the C.P.R. at the terminal depot in this city, has stirred the city profoundly. Aside from the question of the crime itself, the fact that she was killed by her Chinese servant, who for five years had lived in the Millard house, has brought the whole burning Oriental question to the fore here. Saturday night the police took special precautions to prevent the slightest chance of a riot in Chinatown, and the night passed quietly enough there. Uptown, however, when a slightly inebriated citizen began to attack every Oriental he met he soon drew a crowd. The police took no chances, but whisked him off in the patrol.

Scores of Chinese servants have been dismissed from residences, especially in the west end and Shaughnessy Heights. Downtown restaurants and hotels are being warned personally by customers and by personal messages that they must get rid of their Chinese or lose business. Never before have Orientals been so unpopular in this city.

The coroner's jury Saturday night brought in a verdict of murder at the conclusion of a three-hours' enquiry over the pitiful little pile of whitened bones that are all that remain of Mrs. Millard. Mrs. Barnard, a neighbor of the Millards, said that on Wednesday afternoon she smelled burning flesh and remarked at the column of black smoke coming from the Millard's chimney. It was during that afternoon that the unfortunate woman's body was cremated by the 17-year-old Chinese boy, and when her husband arrived at 11 o'clock in the evening of that day all the visible evidences of the crime had been wiped out.

Jack Kong, the Chinese boy, in his confession in writing, given to the police on Saturday, says that on Wednesday morning his mistress complained to him that the porridge was burned and ordered him to prepare another dish. He refused to obey and she told him she would have to cut his ear off to make him be good. In a flash the lad says he swung a chair over his head and knocked her apparently dead. Then he got the family carving knife, he says, and cut off the legs and arms and fed them into the furnace. He then dragged the body downstairs and he used there a cleaver to assist the carving knife in the dissecting. He attempted to clean up the stains, both up and down the stairs, but a close examination since made by the police showed many small specks of blood still about.

He took off Mrs. Millard's rings and watch, and these, together with some other trinkets, he had stolen a fortnight ago, were found Saturday afternoon hidden in a corner of the basement.

When Mr. Millard came in late from Victoria, he thought the house looked slightly upset, but he accepted the Chinese boy's explanation that Mrs. Willard had gone out to spend the day with one of her four sisters, who live in different suburbs. That night the Chinese boy crept downstairs and carried into the corner of the attic Mrs. Millard's hat and street clothing and veil, which she would have used had she gone out, and which would have excited her husband's suspicions had he seen them in the house. Next morning the boy refused to go to school, because he had washed his trousers the day before, and they were not dry, for he had gotten them covered with blood while carrying out the murder.

Somewhat dissatisfied by the lad's conduct, but suspecting nothing serious, Millard went down to his office, and from there began to telephone his sisters-in-law, attempting to locate his wife. When he failed to find her, he returned to his home and found the Chinese boy still cleaning up. The lad had a big fire in the furnace, and was much agitated at Millard's unexpected appearance. Thoroughly aroused by this time, Millard telephoned to the police.

When the fire finally died down the Chinese boy, in his confession, said he took out the skull and all the bones. He did not get them all, however, and it was this fact that gave the police their first definite clue. A couple of handfuls of whitened bones still remained in the furnace. The skull and large leg bones, the Chinese boy had stuffed into the flue below the drawing-room grate, where they were found yesterday.

The Chinese boy is a rather pleasing-looking little fellow, who was getting along rapidly at the Lord Roberts School. Saturday on his way to attend the inquest he whistled a popular tune. He made his confession to Mr. Millard in the presence of the police.

Had Hard Trip.

NEW YORK, April 6.—The Cunard liner Mauretania arrived Saturday from Liverpool and Queenstown twelve hours late. She was delayed by a series of terrific storms which lasted throughout the passage. Passengers were forced to remain from the outer decks during practically the whole voyage.

Three days out from Liverpool a stateroom on "A" deck caught fire from a short circuited electric wire. The interior was badly damaged, but because of the construction of the Mauretania it was impossible for the fire to spread. But a few of the passengers knew that there had been a fire.

Suffragette Battle With Mob Enlivened Metropolis on Sunday.

LONDON, April 6—Suffragists created a diversion during the Unionist demonstration in Hyde Park Saturday, and as a result "General" Mrs. Flora Drummond and the Misses Rogers and Virtue were arrested.

The women, about 1,000 strong, marched through the London streets to the park, and although the police had not given a permit for the procession, the women forced their way through the crowds gathered at the gates of the park. The women were waving the suffragette colors.

Immediately on their entrance to the park crowds of rowdies charged them, and for nearly an hour a fierce fight was in progress, the police having repeated to interfere to save the women from the mob.

Miss Virtue was on the point of being thrown into the Serpentine when policemen got her out of the hands of her tormentors.

Gets $50,000 Damages.

NEW YORK, April 6.—The largest verdict for personal injuries in the history of the local courts was awarded to Matt Yurkonis, 42 years old, a Luthunian of Staten Island, who was awarded $50,000 by a jury in the U. S. District Court. Yurkonis sued for $75,000.

The verdict is against the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad, which employed Yurkonis as a laborer in a mine at Scranton, Pa., where he was injured in an explosion. Yurkonis went into the mine with an open lamp to test the gas. When rescued it was found both his eyes had been blown out of their sockets, his limbs dangled insensitive and limp. He will be a cripple for life and blind.

ANNIVERSARY AT GEORGE ST. SUNDAY SCHOOL

Prizes Were Presented to Regular Attendants at School.

Sunday was a red letter day in the history of Goerge Street Sunday School, when the anniversary was observed. Rev. F. L. Farewell, the widely known Sunday School worker, was the visiting speaker, and his addresses were heard with much interest and profit.

Interest was perhaps centred in the session of the Sunday School, when there was a very large attendance, the gathering being swelled by the presence of officers, teachers and scholars of the Grace School.

REV. H. A. FROST AT CHARLOTTE ST.

Rev. Mr. Joliffe and Rev. Dr. Henderson to be Heard.

Rev. H. A. Frost of Victoria University, occupied the pulpit at Charlotte Street Methodist Church yesterday. At the evening service he preached from the 12th chapter of Mark, his text being, "He ordained that they should be with Him." His subject was thus the relationship of Christ to his disciples. That relationship was more than that of a mere servant and teacher, more than that of an apostle and master. Christ recognized it as more than these, for He said: No more do I call you servants, but friends. Christ was so human that he longed for human sympathy. He showed this in three ways: First, He confided in His disciples His secrets. Secondly, He made them sharers in His joys, in His honours, work and sorrows. It was a priceless privilege for Peter, James and John to be taken on the mountain to see Christ in all His spiritual glory. Thirdly, He took Peter, James and John with Him in His hour of trial. The disciples found the greatest honor and privilege was in His company.

The application of this subject to the present day, was that people must feel the need of Him. Friendship unites Christians with Christ. They should not call him a friend when they blush to recognize His name in public. There is no country like this one for opportunity. In taking advantage of opportunity, in seeking material advantage, there was a tendency to encourage the slighting of serious things. Christ made a demand on the friendship of his followers, that they should be witnesses of Him to the uttermost parts of the earth. Men counted not their lives dear because of Him, thus died the martyrs; thus the missionaires risked their lives all over the world. If Christ is to be a power in the world to-day, it is because of his witnesses. The most dangerous thing to-day is a dishonest silence. Christ depends on his friends to carry on his work, to be witnesses for Him in the world.

The music was as usual very good, the choir rendered a fine anthem, and Miss Richardson sang a solo. The announcements are as usual. Rev. Mr. Joliffe will preach next Sunday, and a week from next Sunday, Rev. Dr. Henderson will occupy the pulpit.

ALL SAINTS' CHOIR.

All Saints' Choir assisted by St. John's Choir will render Stainer's Crucifixion in All Sain't Church to-night.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mr. L. S. Edney, formerly of Cressman's, left this morning for Hamilton, where he will take up his new duties with the A. M. Sauter Co.

The members of the Shirt Waist Euchre Club were entertained for the last time this season last evening by Mrs. D. Adams and Mrs. G. A. Little, at the home of the former on Francis Street. The club comprises the wives of a number of the Lindsay curlers, the curlers also being invited to last night's open meeting. During the course of the evening the ladies took occasion to present one of their members, Mrs. A. MacNabb, Colborne Street, with a beautiful hanging fern pot, as a slight token of their esteem. Mrs. MacNabb leaves in about a week's time for Peterborough, Mr. MacNabb having been transferred to the Electric City to fill the position of Station Passenger Agent at the Grand Trunk Depot. The address was read by Mrs. Chas. Williams, while Mrs. D. Adams made the presentation. Mrs. MacNabb in leaving Lindsay leaves behind a host of friends, all of whom will regret her departure.—Lindsay Warder.

Mrs. T. W. Robinson, Weller St., will not receive Tuesday, or again this season.

Mr. W. S. Harrison and Miss Harrison, of Toronto, spent Sunday in the city.

Mr. L. H. Dickenson, of Toronto, registered at the Oriental over Sunday.

Mr. H. M. G. Garden, of Farnham, Que., is among the guests in the city.

Mr. A. S. Manning, of Albany, N. Y., is a guest in the city.

Mr. Hubert Eastwood, of S.P.S., Toronto, is the guest of his parents, Dr. and Mrs. Eastwood, Brock Street, for the Easter vacation.

Mr. Harold Smith, of St. Albans, Brockville, is the guest of friends in the city during his Easter vacation.

Mr. F. Hulec, of Cleveland, is a guest at the White House.

Mr. R. Desautels, 30 George St., returned Saturday from Long Island, where he went Tuesday on the arrival of word that his sister, Miss Eva Desautels, nurse-in-training at St. John's Hospital, was ill with diphtheria. Mr. Desautels says his sister is greatly improved, and is now out of danger.

Many friends will extend deepest sympathy to Mrs. Adams in her bereavement. The familiar face of Police-Sergeant Robert H. Adams who was popular and respected, will be missed in many circles. After a long illness rest came to him Sunday evening at 6 o'clock.

Mr. R. R. Hall has sufficiently recovered from his recent operation to return to his home.

Mr. W. McBrine, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Dunlop, 315 Murray Street.

Mr. G. E. Butler, of Millbrook, was in the city on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. D. Miller spent a few days visiting in Lakefield last week.

Mr. Sidney Dunsford has arrived here from Hull, Quebec, to take a position in the local Bank of Ottawa.

Miss Ruby Quartermaine, Hunter Street, sang a solo at St. John's Church yesterday morning.

Mr. F. C. Neal is spending a few days in Toronto this week.

The employees of the Cressman Co. displayed their regret at the departure of Mr. L. S. Edney, who has been employed in the Carpet Department for the past four years, and who left to-day to assume duties with the A. M. Sauter firm, of Hamilton, by presenting him with a locket and fob. Mr. Edney was well thought of by his fellow employees, and has their best wishes for success in his new enterprise.

READING AND ITS PLEASURES

By F. M. Dela Fosse.

In touching on the subject of poetry, one has to pick one's steps carefully, for the field is so great and compasses within its borders such a vast amount of varied vegetation. In fact, when one thinks over the matter, it is really almost appalling to find how many diverse opinions there are regarding poetry and as to what constitutes the true poet. On the one hand we see the work of Shakespeare and of Milton held up to ridicule as balderdash and on the other, the efforts of some of our present day obituary versifiers and patriotic bards acclaimed as genuine specimens of the divine afflatus. The number indeed is small of those who recognize true poetry when they see it, and the best of us may be led astray occasionally by the lilt of some soothing lyric into mistaking mere melody for the true outpourings of the Muse. But there is a world of difference between melodious commonplace and the pitiful effusions that from one cause or another are allowed to find their way into newspapers and magazines. There is no need whatever to single out any one paper or periodical as especially sinning in this respect because it is epidemic all over the country, and the more rural the district wherein the paper or periodical is published, the more glaring are the specimens of bucolic dementia that it publishes. Take for instance, obituary poetry. In the name of common sense and all that it implies, wherein lies the need of dragging one's private sorrows into public view through such an agency as a few miserable verses of doggerel? Is it fair to the memory of the dead, who cannot defend themselves? Is it fair to members of the afflicted family, who have perhaps enough sense of the fitness of things to feel that by such means they are being brought into undeserved ridicule? The Canadian newspaper is, I honestly believe, one of the greatest agencies for the distribution of knowledge that we possess. For countless thousands it is the sole means of gaining an insight into the world's affairs, and a smattering of general scholarship that is attainable. All honor to it for the good that it accomplishes. It is undoubtedly hard for any rural publication to try to keep a paper up to a high level of literary excellence. This may be admitted. But it cannot be hard to keep its columns from being burdened with rubbish, especially of unrhythmic rubbish, which is the worst rubbish of all.

In a public library one gets incontrovertible evidence of the great influence of the daily newspaper. In the reading rooms the same people will be found day after day perusing the papers and magazines. Very few indeed of these ever borrow a book on a borrower's ticket. Their sole reading consists of what they find ready to hand where they sit. Most of such readers are well-versed in the affairs of life, but there are others who are not so fortunately circumstanced and whose literary taste has not been greatly cultivated. For such as these it is not a good thing to be brought face to face with such specimens of morbid assininity as above alluded to. If written by someone personally known to a reader the effect is appreciably heightened, for not knowing good poetry from bad, the main thing that appeals to him is that there in all the glory of type stands the brainwork of John Smith or Henry Jones, his fellow-townsman. Why should not he also blossom out as a bard? Too often he does essay the task and more drivel is the result. If only some of these halt and blind toilers to Parnassus knew the mirth that their efforts create, it is safe to say that they would be tardy enough in attempting its rocky declivities.

There are many who frankly dislike poetry in any form and are prone to say with Carlyle, "If you have anything to say, why sing it?" Members of this class, however, are generally not obtuse enough to deny literary merit to real singers. They simply do not possess the power to appreciate this particular form of literature, yet are quite willing to allow that others may see beauties in it from which an unkind fate has debarred them. There are others again, who have no ear whatever for music, and to whom the finest creations of our greatest poets are nothing but senseless combinations or variations of sound. There are others still, who are very fond of poetry but could not be induced on any account to wade through the epics of Milton or of Dante, or poems like Browning's "The Ring and the Book." Their preference lies entirely in the way of lyrics and sonnets, whose musical measures haunt the memory. By far the greatest proportion of readers of poetry belong to this class. Some of the widest known scholars indeed have confessed that they never could read through the works of Milton or of Spenser, and it is safe to say that a critical world thinks none the worse of them for their confession.

The members of the Shirt Waist Euchre Club were entertained for the last time this season last evening by Mrs. D. Adams and Mrs. G. A. Little, at the home of the former on Francis Street. The club comprises the wives of a number of the Lindsay curlers, the curlers also being invited to last night's open meeting. During the course of the evening the ladies took occasion to present one of their members, Mrs. A. MacNabb, Colborne Street, with a beautiful hanging fern pot, as a slight token of their esteem. Mrs. MacNabb leaves in about a week's time for Peterborough. Mr. MacNabb having been transferred to the Electric City to fill the position of Station Passenger Agent at the Grand Trunk Depot. The address was read by Mrs. Chas. Williams, while Mrs. D. Adams made the presentation. ANNIVERSARY AT GEORGE ST. SUNDAY SCHOOL

Sunday was a red letter day in the history of Goerge Street Sunday School, when the anniversary was observed. Rev. F. L. Farewell, the widely known Sunday School worker, was the visiting speaker, and his addresses were heard with much interest and profit.

Interest was perhaps centred in the session of the Sunday School, when there was a very large attendance, the gathering being swelled by the presence of officers, teachers and scholars of the Grace School.

The Sunday School tea will be held to-night, and there will also be a lecture on Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress."

REV. H. A. FROST AT CHARLOTTE ST.

Rev. Mr. Joliffe and Rev. Dr. Henderson to be Heard.

Rev. H. A. Frost of Victoria University, occupied the pulpit at Charlotte Street Methodist Church yesterday. At the evening service he preached from the 12th chapter of Mark, his text being, "He ordained that they should be with Him." His subject was thus the relationship of Christ to his disciples. That relationship was more than that of a mere servant and teacher, more than that of an apostle and master. Christ recognized it as more than these, for He said: No more do I call you servants, but friends. Christ was so human that he longed for human sympathy. He showed this in three ways: First, He confided in His disciples His secrets. Secondly, He made them sharers in His joys, in His honours, work and sorrows. It was a priceless privilege for Peter, James and John to be taken on the mountain to see Christ in all His spiritual glory. Thirdly, He took Peter, James and John with Him in His hour of trial. The disciples found the greatest honor and privilege was in His company.

The application of this subject to the present day, was that people must feel the need of Him. Friendship unites Christians with Christ. They should not call him a friend when they blush to recognize His name in public. There is no country like this one for opportunity. In taking advantage of opportunity, in seeking material advantage, there was a tendency to encourage the slighting of serious things. Christ made a demand on the friendship of his followers, that they should be witnesses of Him to the uttermost parts of the earth. Men counted not their lives dear because of Him, thus died the martyrs; thus the missionaires risked their lives all over the world. If Christ is to be a power in the world to-day, it is because of his witnesses. The most dangerous thing to-day is a dishonest silence. Christ depends on his friends to carry on his work, to be witnesses for Him in the world.

The music was as usual very good, the choir rendered a fine anthem, and Miss Richardson sang a solo. The announcements are as usual. Rev. Mr. Joliffe will preach next Sunday, and a week from next Sunday, Rev. Dr. Henderson will occupy the pulpit.

ALL SAINTS' CHOIR.

All Saints' Choir assisted by St. John's Choir will render Stainer's Crucifixion in All Sain't Church to-night.

ALD. GREEN THINKS COUNCIL DOES THINGS DIFFERENTLY WHEN BENCHES ARE FILLED

The City Dads Re-Consider the Cigarette By-law With Tobacco Dealers in Attendance and Reduce the License Fee to $15

To any one interested in studying facial expressions an opportunity presented itself last night when the City Council dealt with the cigarette by-law and incidentally rescinded the decree that all retailers of the coffin nail must pay a license fee of $40. The tobacconists were present, as well as several barbers who deal in tobaccos as a side line.

At one stage of the proceedings the Mayor declared that the by-law stood. The deputation was dismayed, more so because it appeared at first as though the license would be reduced by half or more.

There were four motions. Ald. Anderson and Stratton moved that the fee be $25. Ald. McIntyre moved for $20, but got no seconder. Ald. Duffus and Gordon moved that the license be $15. Aldermen Saunders and Green moved for $40, and on the result of the voting, the Mayor declared that the by-law stood.

Ald. Duncan called for the yeas and nays on the motion for $15, and the aldermen responded as follows:

Yeas—Aldermen Stratton, Gordon, Duffus, Johnston, Langford, McIntyre, and the Mayor (7).

Nays—Aldermen Saunders, Duncan, Green, Anderson (4).

Then the tobacco dealers who had remained till midnight to learn the verdict smiled.

Not Very Prompt.

Ald. Anderson said he was pleased to see the deputation present, but he could not congratulate them on their promptness. A month had elapsed after he had given his notice of motion to provide a fee, and not a single objection had been taken till the by-law was passed.

Ald. Anderson took up the merits of the arguments of the tobacco dealers and found them wanting when compared to the object of the by-law.

He didn't place much stock in their petition. He had been in a place where he felt like signing it just to oblige the holder.

Ald. Duffus thought it was jumping from one extreme to the other and a mistake. He felt that in the case of the barber the non-sale of cigarettes would drive away trade in other lines. That possibly was the most serious objection. Until the Government prohibits the sale, he would reduce the fee to nothing higher than $15.

To Ald. Green it appeared that the Council did things differently when the benches were filled. He was with the by-law.

"I think I had my right senses then and I have no reason to change my mind," said the West Ward representative.

Ald. Duffus didn't like the reference to the benches. He reminded Council that when the by-law passed he said it was a mistake.

In presenting the case of the tobacco dealers, Messrs. Arch. Brault, H. Gainey and Bruce Patterson were the speakers.

Mr. Brault said they were not in the business for the good of their health. They had to sell $300 worth of cigarettes to pay the license.

Mr. Gainey claimed that they were taxed high enough, without adding the extra tax.

Mr. Patterson referred to the matter of high taxes and also said that the use of cigarettes would not cease till the sale of tobacco was stopped.

COAL BY-LAW SENT BACK TO BE BURIED

It is Too Cumbersome and Troublesome, Says Ald. Duffus.

Should Not Pick Out Any Certain Merchant, Ald. Duncan Opines.

Ald. Green Believes There Are Too Many By-laws Now

"We directed the City Solicitor to prepare a by-law to amend by-law No. 1107, to provide that all coal sold in less than car loads must be weighed and a record kept of the weights and a return made to the Chief Constable on the first day of each week, the returns to be verified for the respective dealers by statutory declarations by the persons who did the weighing, and also to provide that when coal is delivered in bags that the number of bags shall be stated on the ticket."

A by-law to this effect was refused passage by the City Council last night, and it was sent back to the Committee to be buried.

Ald. Duffus said the by-law was cumbersome and troublesome. He would authorize the police to weigh a certain number of loads each month.

Ald. Johnston — The suggestion came from the coal dealers themselves.

Ald. Duncan—We should not pick out any certain merchant and force it upon him.

Ald. Green, after innocently suggesting that gasoline might be measured, said he was of the impression that the local coal dealers were as honest as those of any city. There were far too many by-laws now and they certainly could not keep track of them. The original by-law he felt was sufficient.

Mayor Buller said that the coal dealers do not see the coal weighed. If any wrong was done it was accomplished by their servants. It would be foolish to think that a man would hire another to give short weight. It was a false impression.

Ald. Stratton held that the dealers should not be asked to give away their tonnage. At all events he would have the returns made to the City Clerk and not the Police Chief. Ald. Langford opposed the by-law.

The present by-law provides that the police shall weigh 80 loads of coal each year.

Toronto, April 7.—The Peterboro Bill was passed by the Private Bills Committee this morning without further opposition. Mayor Buller and City Solicitor Hall were present for the city.

THE CRUCIFIXION AT ALL SAINTS'

A Pleasing Rendition Before a Large Congregation.

The presentation of Stainer's "Crucifixion" last night was well attended in All Saints' Church last night. The Rev. R. B. Grobb conducted the devotions. The choirs of All Saints and St. John's combined under the leadership of Mr. R. J. Devey, with Mr. George Chandler, solo tenor and Mr. George Harris, solo bass.

The chorus was excellent, indeed it is one of the best of the fifteen presentations given in and around Peterborough. Messrs. Boddy, East and Hurst gave able assistance, and the unaccompanied quartette was expressively rendered. The work will be given on Good Friday night in St. John's Church by the combined chorus.

ASPHALT MIXER IS A NUISANCE

Residents Complain to Council Through Mr. Hatton.

The complaint of residents near the corner of Bethune and McDonnel Streets, in regard to the presence of the asphalt mixer, and the consequent damage to property, inconvenience, loss of sleep, etc., will receive consideration and a remedy applied.

Mr. G. W. Hatton presented the grievance to the Council last night.

One of the gentlemen from the affected section said he had asked Rev. R. Pogue why a charge was not made by the Lord's Day Alliance, as they worked there on Sundays.

ARTHUR BLADE JOINS THE FORCE

A Creditable Addition is Made by Police Commissioners.

Arthur Blade, formerly of London, Ont., police force, was appointed to a position on the local force at a special meeting of the Police Commissioners. The vacancy was caused by the resignation of Constable Brown, who leaves to-day for London, England, to attend the bedside of his mother, who is seriously ill.

The new man is a local boy, and a son of Arthur Blade, sen., the well-known florist. He is well built, young, and a well-known athlete, and will make a valuable officer for the local force.

LIVERY CHANGE

Mr. R. Gibbs Sells Out to Messrs Blewett and Middleton

A big livery deal was consummated yesterday afternoon, whereby the business of Robert Gibbs, the well known Water Street livery man, was purchased by Messrs. Stanley Blewett of Otonabee, and S. Middleton.

It is understood the price paid was an exceptionally large one. The new firm will take over the business this week.

G. N. GORDON APPOINTED

SALARY IS $1,000

ALD. LANGFORD TAKES EXCEPTION TO THE SPEED DISPLAYED IN THE MATTER.

Mr. G. N. Gordon is City Solicitor.

The appointment was made last night by Council after the resignation from that office of Mr. E. H. D. Hall had been received and accepted. Subsequently, Ald. Gordon resigned as a representative of Centre Ward, and Ald. Duncan introduced the by-law authorizing the appointment and incorporating the name of Mr. Gordon. The salary is $1,000.

The speed attained by Council in reaching conclusions in this instance drew a faint protest from Ald. Langford, who felt that further consideration of this question should be made. He had not known of the resignation of Mr. Hall, only through the evening papers, and he moved that action be deferred. There was no seconder.

The resignation of Mr. Hall was accepted with no little regrets, several of the members speaking very highly of Mr. Hall's long service.

MARTIN'S MAJORITY IS FIVE THOUSAND

Canadian Press Despatch.

Montreal, P.Q., April 7.—The latest figures on the civic election show that Duncan Macdonald for controller is seventy-nine votes behind J. L. Beaudry. The Board of Control is thus composed of four French speaking members, Hebert, Cote, Ainey and Beaudry. Martin's majority over Stephens is five thousand.

WHAT WILL THE FARMERS SAY?

Companies are being formed in Canada for the purchase of New Zealand butter and general farm produce. Large quantities have already been purchased of the finest farm products in the world. The butter costs about 25 per cent. laid down here less than the Canadian produce, and is driving the latter out of the swell hotels and restaurants. It will not be very long before it will completely command the Canadian market. Other products are likely to follow suit. The Canadian farmers' homemarket, like his foreign market, is in grave danger.

26 MILLS THE RATE

A RAY OF HOPE

Not a word was uttered last night in reply to remarks by Ald. Anderson and Mayor Buller when it was announced that no other course than a rate of 26 mills was open before the Council.

The Finance Minister, in introducing the by-law to fix the rate, explained the increases in the various departments of Council, and to those outside their jurisdiction.

Continuing, he said the matter of assessment was a live one. While the tax rate appeared to be crawling up, the assessment per head, was, he believed, lower than in many of the cities of the province. Out of 24 cities, Peterboro came twenty-first in the list. "We certainly cannot get along with less money, and the only way to reduce the rate is to have the assessment increased, and I think the assesor is working along this line. We hope this will take care of our increased expenditures."

At the present time I think Peterboro is carrying what we might call a peak load in regard to debt. Very few of the debentures mature for some few years.

Ald. Anderson gave the amount of debentures to be retired as follows: 1914, $20,000; 1915-16, none; 1917, $3,000; 1918, $2,900; 1919, $17,132; 1920, $113,000.96. The fact of the debt not being reduced to any appreciable extent, probably makes the burden harder than it would otherwise be.

Mayor Buller said he was sorry that it was impossible to keep the rate at 25 mills. The members of the Council had tried hard to do so. The different departments not controlled by Council had got away with a great deal of the money. The Library Board had a surplus which they did not know what to do with, so they increased the Librarian's salary. As Ald. Anderson had stated, no doubt the rate was high and the assessment very low. There might be cases where the assessment was high. But in the majority of cases the assessment needed remodelling, and he hoped that a change would make a difference next year.

BOYS CHARGED WITH STEALING SAP PAILS

The ever present "sweet tooth" is mainly the cause for a case to be tried before County Magistrate Edmison to-morrow afternoon at three o'clock. The charge heard will be that of Mark S. Burnham against Rube Brady, Jas. Edwards, William Davis, A. Davis, Claire Brady, W. Armstrong, and Daincourt Woods, who are alleged to have entered Burnham's maple grove at Lot 27, Concession 11, Otonabee, and damaged and carried away sap pails on March 28th. Just how much sap they relieved Mr. Burnham of is not known.

THE MURDER AT HAVELOCK

Indications Point Towards Robbery and Murder of Bulgarian

INQUEST ADJOURNED

The inquest into the death of N. Duloff, a Bulgarian, who is supposed to have been murdered at Havelock, was opened yesterday and adjourned until the 17th.

Assistant Crown Attorney Wearing represented the Crown. Interviewed to-day, Mr. Wearing stated that public sentiment coupled with some strong facts of evidence, points with suspicion to Kalo Volicoff, a fellow Bulgarian, who left hurriedly for Bulgaria shortly after the murder took place. He is alleged to have taken a large sum of money, nearly $700, belonging to the murdered man. Duloff's father in Bulgaria, becoming acquainted with the facts, had the man arrested on his arrival in Bulgaria.

Volicoff's Letters.

Provincial Inspector Boyd, of Toronto, expressed his opinion that Duloff had been foully murdered with robbery as the motive. He has also obtained numerous letters from Volicoff to a fellow countryman. These letters, which have been partly translated, are to the effect that he wants his absence kept silent, and also the fact about the cap of the murdered man being found near where the murder is alleged to have taken place. He is said to have expressed himself that he can make more money in Canada than Bulgaria, and that he intends returing as soon as this little thing passes, as he remarks in his letters to the fellow countryman at Havelock.

The manner in which the letters are written are taken as being strong proof of the guilty conscience of the man.

At the resumed inquest, witnesses will be present from Toronto.

Owing to the fact that there is no extradition treaty between Bulgaria and Canada, some trouble may be caused in bringing the man back if sufficient evidence is secured to warrant such action.

The body, which was found in a pond about twenty feet from where the two men were working, was badly decomposed. Two deep cuts were found on each side of the head at the back, they evidently being blows inflicted by a pick or sharp edge of a shovel.

Owing to a slight misunderstanding of time Mr. Wearing missed his train, and was forced to board a fast freight as it passed through the city about one o'clock.

A FINE ADDRESS BY REV. GEGGIE

Presbyterial of Women's Home Missionary Society in Session.

Rev. A. L. Geggie, of Toronto, addressed a public meeting of the Peterborough District Presbyterial of the Women's Home Missionary Society, of the Presbyterian Church last evening, in St. Andrew's Church, on the appropriate subject of Home Missions.

In a brilliant manner he briefly outlined the various stands and suggestions introduced by the women's societies in their Home Mission work. His recitals of the labors of some, engaged in missionary work, was indicative of the firm hold the Home Mission Societies were obtaining in the churches and elsewhere.

His entire address was more or less full of valuable suggestions for the enlarging of their field of work and his remarks were keenly followed by the numerous delegates present.

Rev. Robert Pogue, of St. Paul's Church, presided, and in his opening remarks spoke of the great work being carried on by the Women's Societies.

Rev. James Rollins, of St. Andrew's Church, who introduced the speaker, also commented upon the successful work of the ladies.

The gathering were also entertained by several selections from the choir, after which they were entertained to refreshments by the ladies of the church.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Presbyterial of Women's Home Missionary of the Presbyterian Church, was held in the afternoon.

It was decided to meet with other church missionary, both home and foreign in union, in June, when several important topics will be discussed. Owing to this stand, the election officers was left over.

The reports presented were indicative of remarkable activity in the work, being carried on by the Home Missionary Society.

Charts' pictures and other drawings showed that considerable work had been done, and under rather strenuous conditions at times.

One of the pictures of special interest was that of the Hugh Waddel endowed hospital, costing $25,000, in Kenora, Sask., which was erected by Mrs. Waddell, in memory of her late husband.

EAST CITY CHICKENS ACT AS GARBAGE COLLECTORS

Bat They Can't Eat Ashes, so the Gardens are Fertilized—Residents Win Out and Garbage System Will Not be Extended

Ald. Duncan Maintains That Brooklynites Should Not Shirk Their Duty

There will be no additions to the garbage area, although the Property Committee recommended that the service be accorded the residents of East City and sections of the city proper.

As a result, the area now covered will not be enlarged this year.

The chickens and gardens will consume the garbage in East City, from whence came a loud cry of protest. A dozen or more residents of Brooklyn attended the Council meeting last night. Messrs. Jas. Dillon and Sam Bickell spoke for the delegation, stating that East City did not want the system. What garbage there was, was consumed by the chickens and the gardens took care of the ashes.

Mr. S. Gaskins said he had been paying to have material hauled to his property. Why should he pay to have that which he needed carried away from his property?

Ald. McIntyre protested against the service being extended to the East Ward.

Ald. Langford said that the additions had been recommended by the Board of Health, through the Sanitary Inspector. "They look at these things from a health standpoint," said the chairman of the Property Committee.

Ald. Johnston said if any changes were to be made, the north-western part of the city might be cut out. Probably not a dozen residents were in need of the system.

A Clean-Up Needed.

Ald. Anderson held that there were a great many places in East City very much in need of the service. If it was decided to leave East City out he hoped that Council would take drastic measures to bring about a clean-up. At one place he said it was enough to make a man turn back.

Ald. Duncan failed to understand why East City should escape a clean-up. In the face of the order of the Health Department the incinerator being provided, they should not shirk their duty.

Ald. McIntyre—"We take a pride in East City, and if you call around after May 1st you will see it's the cleanest place in the city. You don't want to listen to all the Sanitary Inspector says. He don't need to call over there."

Ald. Johnston—"You talk about flies and dust. I never saw nicer bouquets than those outside residences. The cans are not thoroughly cleaned out; it is only an inducement for flies. There are also ashes and peelings strewn about."

Moved in amendment by Ald. Johnston and Green that all the new area be cut out.

Moved in amendment to the amendment by Ald. Duncan and Gordon that the new area remain.

Aldermen McIntyre and Duffus were alone in their motion, while Aldermen Duncan and Gordon were supported by Ald. Stratton.

Ald. Stratton protested against the chairman of the Property Committee voting against the recommendation of the committee after they had spent so much time in discussing the question. It was a funny way of doing things.

Ald. Duffus held that it was a mistake.

"What's the position in regard to tenders?" inquired Ald. Langford.

"I cannot tell you," answered the Mayor.

WITNESS MAKES THINGS LIVELY AT COUNTY COURT

Mrs. Carter of Havelock is an Unwilling Witness.

Said She Would Go to Jail Before Answering Further Questions.

The County Court presented an amusing an turbulent aspect this morning, when the case of Mrs. Harry Carter vs. Harry Bowen, of Havelock, was commenced before Judge Huycke. Mrs. Carter seeks to recover damages to the extent of $300 on chattels alleged to have been unlawfully retained by the defendant.

Mr. G. N. Gordon acted for the plaintiff, and Mr. D. O'Connell for the defendant.

The case arose out of transactions between the late son of the plaintiff, Frank Carter, and Bowen, who entered into a livery business in Havelock.

The late Mr. Carter put $500 and one horse into the business. After his death the money was paid back, but the horse was retained, also other chattels. Mrs. Carter seeks to recover the balance.

During her evidence, Mrs. Carter displayed more temper and general disrespect for the etiquette of the court than ever seen before at a County Court case before Judge Huycke.

Frequent exhibits of temper and repeated refusals to answer questions caused Mr. O'Connell considerable provocation. Numerous times the witness threatened to quit and leave the box, and made several attempts to do so, but was persuaded to stay.

"I demand my friends to release me from this box," she exclaimed in indignant tones repeatedly.

"I'll go to jail first, before I answer any more questions."

One exhibit, a letter, was thrown at Mr. O'Connell.

Mr. O'Connell remarked, "Oh sit down and behave yourself."

The repeated calls to sit down were reminiscent of "Sit down, you're rocking the boat."

The case is proceeding.

COMMISSIONERS TOOK WISE STAND

Canadian Police Bulletin Makes Some Comments.

The Canadian Police Bulletin has the following comment on the stand adopted by the local Board of Police Commissioners:

"The Police Commissioners of the City of Peterborough, instead of appointing a Policewoman, wisely increased their patrol force by two men, which will give the citizens better value for their money, and also a matron to look after female prisoners and make delicate female reports on cases.

"It is deeply regretted that the old and well understood name of Police Matron was ever confused with that meaningless designation of Police Woman. The only service which women are capable of performing has been efficiently performed in all our large cities for years past by the police matron and changing the title to Police Woman is not going to make them more efficient to qualify for duties they are physically incapable of performing.

"The fad originated in a western town amongst those who have something if only a name which no other city had or could boast of."

PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, APRIL 7, 1914.

IMPERIAL NATURALIZATION.

FOR TEN YEARS, negotiations have been in progress between Britain and the over-seas Dominions, to secure uniform naturalization laws throughout the Empire. Going through the British Parliament at the present time, is a bill which is intended to remedy the long standing grievance on naturalization. The measure is designed to establish a system of imperial naturalization. As the law stands at the present time, an alien who is naturalized as a British subject in Canada, or in any other over-sea Dominion, is a British subject only of the country in which he has been naturalized. Passing beyond the three mile limit of the territorial waters of that country, he ceases to be a British subject, and has no right to claim the protection of the Imperial Government. When an alien is naturalized in the United Kingdom, he carries the rights and privileges of British citizenship with him wherever he may travel. There are many thousands of good Canadians, loyal subjects of the King, who are without a country the moment they travel beyond the borders of Canada. To remove this anomaly, the present bill is before the Imperial Parliament.

The bill extends to the Dominion Parliament and to Colonial Legislatures, the power to pass naturalization laws, which will have effect beyond their own territories. Thus, an alien naturalized in Canada, will become possessed of all the rights and privileges of imperial citizenship, just as if he had been born in the British Isles. The term of residence necessary under the imperial law for naturalization is five years, and it will be necessary to adopt the five year period in this country and throughout the empire to secure imperial citizenship. At the present time, the period in this country is three years, which, even if the new bill becomes law, will be sufficient for citizenship in Canada. A further residence of two years will be necessary before an alien could become an imperial citizen. There is a general concensus of opinion in this country, that the term of residence for an alien is too short. In view of the bill, which will likely become law in England and throughout the Empire, the Canadian law regarding naturalization should be changed, so as to be uniform with the law of Great Britain.

If we have one flag, one king, one empire, we should have one citizenship. In the old Roman days, the citizen of that empire carried with him to the uttermost parts of its domain, the protection of Roman law, of Roman fleets, and Roman armies. To every citizen of Rome was accorded the same respect wherever the Roman Eagles flew. For a long time Britishers have adopted a superior attitude towards citizens of the colonies. They have not despised them, but rather have tolerated them, as a class or a people a shade below them. To such an extent has this attitude become widespread, that the word colonial has an unsavory meaning in the old country, and to a less extent, also in Canada. Men of the colonies, the pioneers of great nations in the Empire, are doing as much as the men of the Mother Land to make the Empire a substantial fact in the world. To have their status regarded as inferior, is manifestly unfair. The British Parliament has long recognized this anomaly, and at last the establishment of a world-wide British citizenship appears to be coming in the passage of an Imperial Naturalization Law.

A TIP TO THE COUNCIL.

THE CITIZENS of this city appreciate the efforts of the council to make Peterborough something more than a big village. The programme of street paving meets with general approval, but there is no use spending a large amount of the people's money to secure only half the improvement. The paved streets that are being laid will provide first class roadways. They will also provide most inconvenient factors for spreading dust and dirt that any city could have. The least breeze blowing over an asphalt pavement is loaded with every speck of dirt and dust that happens to fall on the road. This germ-laden wind blows the dust and dirt into every nook and through every crack possible. It comes in the doors and falls on clothing; it covers butter and provisions that are on the counters, or otherwise exposed for sale. It blows in our eyes, it lodges on our clothes, it spoils the best shine that a bootblack can put on. All of these inconveniences are greatly increased by a smooth asphalt pavement. You may say there are street cleaners, which is quite true, but street cleaners cannot make the asphalt roadway clean enough to keep down the dust nuisance. The Ottawa Citizen speaking of this matter contains the following:

> "Ottawa is accustomed to the street cleaner. He generally is an individual incapacitated for other forms of labor, and is, from all appearances, ready to risk his life as a distributor of dust and disease. He is one of the disappearing sights in the larger cities, and in New York, where the life of the average street sweeper has been computed to be five years, it was ascertained recently that one-third of the 5,000 men so employed were infected with tuberculosis. Every sweeper previous to his appointment had been examined and pronounced free from disease."

Now, there is one cure for this trouble, and there is no use putting down good pavements unless they are to be kept clean. The streets must be flushed. This city has plenty of water, the one thing necessary is the apparatus for flushing. Hydrants are conveniently located along the streets. Men will have to be employed as cleaners; they would be employed in a more healthful occupation and a more effective method of keeping the streets clean if they were driving a flushing waggon. The city of Hamilton has a good many streets paved with the same kind of paving that is being laid in Peterborough, and in place of sweeping, they are flushed and washed as clean of dust and dirt as it is possible to be. There is no use saying that to buy the flushing apparatus will increase the tax rate. These things will have to be bought sooner or later. The streets are being expensively paved at the present time. Why endure a great deal of inconvenience, why risk the spread of disease and dirt for a year or two before the flushing apparatus is bought? By all means let us have the streets flushed this summer.

A WORD ABOUT THE MARKET.

PETERBOROUGH has every advantage of being a first class centre for a large rural population and for trade. In the course of time, its market accommodations will have to be enlarged, but at this time, the present accommodation could be made much more convenient by the exercise of a little common sense and good manners. Quite a number of men and women have the habit of standing in the aisles and exhausting every topic of conversation before they pass on and make room for the buyers who wish to inspect the goods offered for sale. If those going to the market would cut out this bad habit of blocking the aisles, many people would be much obliged, and the convenience of the general public considerably increased. Conversations would be better out in the open air. Then in the matter of going up and down stairs, if some arrangement could be made whereby one side could be used for going up, and the other side for going down, the crowds that go to the market would be handled with more convenience.

FOR CLEAN ELECTIONS.

THAT THE Whitney Government is moving in the line of progress is in evidence from the legislation passed to secure cleaner elections. One act introduced by Hon. W. H. Hearst, prohibits political contributions by corporations, license-holders and public contractors. Heavy penalties are in store for those soliciting or giving such aid.

The other bill is an amendment to the Ontario Election Act, which provides that payments for a candidate's expenses are not to be made except through his official agent. Also a detailed statement of expenses and election contributions are to be sent by the agent to the returning officer, who shall have them published.

In the course of time, Canada may evolve a law or regulation covering every possible dishonest trick of elections. That does not mean that they will cease to exist, for men will likely try to evade or break the law no matter how strict it is, but the main point is that wrong election practices are becoming harder and harder to do without suffering a penalty.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE ORILLIA Packet, of the big pages, has about five feet of type in its last issue devoted to a report of an address by Mrs. Loosemore of Toronto to the Women's Canadian Club. The subject was "The Argument Against Woman Suffrage." This valuable document should be forwarded to the gentleman who introduced the Woman Surffage Bill in the Legislature recently. It would also be a great comfort to the Hon. I. B. Lucas, who opposed the bill because women were divided on the question. How true his reason is.

THE SPEECH which Mr. Asquith makes to his constituents in Fife will be awaited with interest and anxiety, for he may indicate in it the policy of the Government on the Home Rule problem. On the other hand, he may make a political non-committal speech, but whatever he does, the eyes of the Empire are upon him.

HON. GEORGE P. Graham feels "real bad" about the loss of the forty millions, and much worse at the way in which the big steal was exposed. Nobody likes to have a thing of that sort left on his doorstep. But it isn't sportsmanlike to abuse the court.

THE TOWN ROW

By Walt Mason

We had an ancient, vicious fray, at Punktown-on-the-Heights, and people raised Old Ned by day, and filled with strife the nights. I helped to paint the village red, and fought our faction's foes; one day I had a busted head, the next a ruined nose; and oft my eyes were in a sling, and life was so intense I couldn't smile or dance or sing for twenty-seven cents. One day I sat me down to rest, a poultice on my face, and then there came a stranger guest, a man of wondrous grace. "I've watched you scrapping far and near, to put your foes to rout, and now," he said, "I'd like to hear what all the row's about." I hemmed and stammered for a spell about our local war; to save my neck I couldn't tell what we'd been scrapping for. "I've asked and asked," the stranger said, as he prepared to go, "why this poor burg is painted red, and no one seems to know." Then I obtained a flag of truce, and sought my warmest foe—full often I had cooked his goose, and he had laid me low. "I welcome peace," said he, "by heck, so let the White Dove whiz!" And then he wept upon my neck, and I shed tears on his. We thus might squelch most village rows, and shake our load of care; but we keep wrangling till the cows come home, their tails in air.

NO NEWS OF THE SOUTHERN CROSS

Relief Steamer Is Ordered to Continue the Search.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., April 7.—The sealing steamer, Southern Cross, with 173 men on board is still missing. The steamer Kyle, sent in search of her by the Government was lying too in a heavy gale last night well out on the grand banks with all observation cut off by thick snow. She had been in communication during the day with the United States revenue cutter Seneca, on the ice patrol. Neither had found any trace of the missing vessel.

Although the underwriters have said they would post the Southern Cross as lost with all on board if she remained unreported at sundown yesterday, the Kyle was ordered to continue search for two days more.

Hope for the missing steamer has been practically abandoned.

So thick was the storm last night that the Furness liner, Eagle Point, was obliged to give up her trip to Halifax.

An Alibi For Krafchenko.

MORDEN, Man., April 7. — That Jack Krafchenko called on him at 4 o'clock on Dec. 3, the day of the Plum Coulee murder, and paid a deposit on the rent of a room, was the assertion of David Davis, 286 Aikens street, Winnipeg, who was the first witness called by the defence upon the resumption of the murder trial yesterday morning. Davis was positive as to the date, and in his identification of Krafchenko.

ATTACKED IN PRISON.

Mme. Caillaux Aroused Jealousy of Fellow Unfortunates.

PARIS, April 6.—Mme. Henriette Caillaux, who recently shot and killed Gaston Calmette, editor of Le Figaro, was attacked in the corridor of St. Lazare Prison Saturday by two women, who objected to the favors being shown to the wife of the ex-Minister of Finance. Mme. Caillaux and the two other women were exercising under the eyes of the guards when the attack occurred. As one of the women passed Mme. Caillaux she leaped upon her and pummeled her viciously. The two guards ran to the aid of their famous prisoner and then the other woman joined in the assault.

The combatants struggled for several minutes, but other guards were summoned and separated them. The two assailants were bustled into dungeons, still screaming protests.

Birthdays of Note

TUESDAY, APRIL SEVENTH

MANY good stories are told about DAVID McNICOLL, vice-president of the C.P.R., whose sixty-second birthday occurs to-day, but probably the most characteristic relates to the first year of his sojourn in Canada. On his arrival from Scotland in 1874 he obtained employment in the service of the Northern Railway and was sent to Collingwood to assist the agent there. The boys on the road soon began to call him "Oatmeal" because of his broad accent. After a time he was sent to Meaford to fill a temporary position and while there began to learn telegraphy. One day, so the story goes, having an idle hour, he grounded the telegraph wire and started with dogged determination to practice the code. Meanwhile the despatcher at Allandale wanted to send an important order but could not raise Meaford. He worked the key until almost frantic and then having a suspicion of what was wrong, called up Thornbury and ordered the conductor of a passing train to "take Oatmeal off the wire," when he reached Meaford. The conductor found the Meaford agent on the platform and informed him something was wrong with the telegraph. The latter hurried into the station and found McNicoll busily at work. "Hey, Mac," he shouted, "drop that key. You're holding up the whole blooming line." Luckily the novice was not punished, and "Oatmeal on the wire" became a standing joke among the railroad employes.

REFORMERS ARE BEATEN

MONTREAL ELECTION RESULT IS REVERSE FOR CITIZENS' ASSOCIATION.

MONTREAL, April 7. — Returns from the whole of the 31 wards of the city, with 13 polls to hear from, show that only half-hearted support was given in yesterday's civic elections to the slate backed by the Citizens' Association, which helped largely to clean up Montreal after the Judge Cannon graft enquiry some years ago. Major George W. Stephens was badly beaten by the French voters, his opponent, Mederic Martin, M.P., having a majority around 5,000 over the ex-chairman of the harbor board.

The figures for the Board of Control are:

The latter two were endorsed by the Citizens' Association, together with the runner-up, Duncan McDonald, who received 17,215 votes, and who was "knocked" in his campaign by the Graham papers, who put up the sixth man on the list, P. W. St. George, who had 16,544 votes.

Supporters of the Citizens' Association claim that Cote and Hebert with St. George, were practically nominees of the Montreal Tramway Company, which is seeking a renewal of franchise for forty years. In any case, say these supporters of the cracked slate, the net result of this election is the return of a reactionary administration.

Experience is valuable, provided you can sell it for more than it cost you.

Since a man always thinks of himself first and his wife last, it is little wonder that so many wives have no time to think of themselves at all.

ROSE CRAMER'S FORTUNE

How It All Came True

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Peggy Moffatt giggled softly as she stole down the front stairs in the darkness. Behind her crept three other girls clad in dark sweaters.

It was long past the hour when the pupils of Mrs. Dacey's boarding school were supposed to be wrapped in innocent slumber. Every light in the house was extinguished, yet the four conspirators moved as carefully as though a stern monitor lurked in every corner.

It was Peggy, the ringleader, who opened the wide front door and slipped the night latch so they could reenter without a key. It was always Peggy Moffatt who led her companions into mischief, but they were singularly ready to follow her leadership.

Now they gained the driveway and turned into the darkness of the evergreen walk. They held tightly to one another as they passed through the dark tunnel and finally gained the little gate that opened on to the highway.

"It is only a few hundred yards down the road," assured Peggy as they went hand in hand along the narrow path. "You can see the lights of the camp in a moment."

"There it is!" cried Grace Wilde.

"Romantic folderol," said Peggy Moffatt loftily. "It's merely a gypsy camp, and some of them really need a good scrubbing with soap and water. So there! Did you notice the children? One of them was eating half a pineapple and"—

"Never mind about that," interrupted Maud impatiently. "Remember our errand, girls. We happened to see the caravan this afternoon when it was making camp, and Miss Cramer has promised to take us tomorrow to have our fortunes told, and we want to give that fortune teller a little information about our music teacher that will create some fun. Won't it be great?"

"Ripping!" said Peggy slangily. "Have you decided whether it is to be De Mauros or Mr. Holloway?"

"Oh, Mr. Holloway, by all means! He's so tall and lank and gloomy looking."

"Hush! Here we are." The four girls walked boldly into the circle of firelight among the oak trees. In the surrounding gloom could be seen the dim outlines of gaudy wagons. A dog barked, and a man's harsh voice stilled the animal. Then the man himself appeared, a gray headed gypsy, yawning sleepily.

"WHAT YOU WANT?" HE DEMANDED.

"What you want?" he demanded shortly, staring at them with curious eyes.

Peggy Moffatt told him in a few words that they were from the boarding school, that they wanted to consult the fortune teller and that they would pay well for rousing her from slumber.

He nodded and went to one of the wagons, where he talked in a low tone for several moments. Then he turned and motioned them to sit down.

"Her come," he said briefly and disappeared.

The four girls sat there, alternately shivering with nervous dread and giggling hysterically over their plan for the morrow. It would be easy to persuade the fortune teller to pour a marvelous tale into Miss Cramer's ear. Rose Cramer was teacher of music in the school and as a newcomer was an object of amusement to the half grown girls.

Presently the door of the wagon opened, and a woman's fat form came down the steps and waddled toward them, adjusting as she did so a spangled scarf over her tousled dark hair. Her calico dress was tumbled and soiled, and she had every appearance of having slept in her clothes.

"You want me?" she asked.

"Yes," said Peggy, drawing out her pocketbook.

Then the firelight shone on five heads bent close together in eager conversation, four girls and the old gypsy fortune teller.

• • • • • • •

The next afternoon found Rose Cramer and a dozen laughing girls strolling toward the gypsy camp. The four conspirators lingered behind the group that surrounded the young teacher. Many of them were very fond of the dark eyed little woman, dressed in black, who brought such wonderful music out of violin and piano and whose sweet contralto voice had thrilled them with homesick longing in the twilight.

The gypsy camp looked like a stage setting. There were the half circle of wagons, the glowing campfire among the fallen autumn leaves, the picturesque people themselves moving about with the slow grace of their race or drowsing idly on the grass. The sun shone warmly over all.

Just as the girls and their teacher seated themselves about the fire another and an unwelcome element was added to the occasion. This was the unexpected appearance of Professor Holloway, the German instructor. His tall, lean figure was almost upon them before his nearsighted eyes discovered their identity. Then his face went scarlet, and he stood there, hat in hand, entirely embarrassed.

"Sit down here, do, dear Professor Holloway," she chirruped. "We are all going to have our fortunes told, and you must have yours."

"I—er—I was merely strolling through the camp. Very fascinating, you know—study of the Romany language," he said haltingly.

"Do sit down and have your fortune told!" pleaded Maud Beals.

So Professor Holloway sat down opposite Rose Cramer, and the group fell into silence while Fanita, one by one, took the little palms in her own and read them glibly, promising such fairy tale fortunes as all schoolgirls love.

Fanita took it in her brown palm and looked long and deep into Rose's lovely eyes. Then she glanced half contemptuously at the eager faces of the schoolgirls, and her eyes dropped to the rosy palm that lay in her grasp.

The girls cast a startled glance at their teacher's face. They had never thought of Miss Cramer as pretty, but now, with the swift blush on her pale cheeks, she was more than pretty. What wonderful eyes she had—blue or brown or gray?

"The pretty lady has traveled along a pleasant road," droned the gypsy. "The sun shone every day, but there came a time of storm and trouble, and the way led through the darkness of death; then music and the sound of young voices and through it all a love song.

"I see two men—one to whom you are indifferent, and he is unworthy. The other loves you, but he is afraid to tell. The lovelight shines in his eyes. Silly butterflies flutter about you. Brush them aside and take your happiness. I see a journey, a marriage and much happiness in a new place. It is in a warm land where the sun shines and the birds sing all winter. You will be happy."

Fanita dropped Miss Cramer's hand and for the first time smiled.

The girls stirred uneasily. There seemed to be an undertone of gravity in Fanita's voice. There was no joke about this fortune. It was not exactly as they had planned—to embarrass Miss Cramer. Rose was still blushing, but her long lashed eyes were studying the campfire.

"And now the gentleman's?" asked Fanita in a wheedling tone. Her big pocket was heavy with silver, and she was greedy for more, but, above the greediness, there was a note of eager interest in Professor Holloway. He had listened to the telling of Rose's fortune with impassive countenance. Now, at the suggestion that his own be foretold, he blushed like a schoolboy.

"Oh, be a sport!" burst out incorrigible Daisy Nevins, and she only laughed when Miss Cramer's delicately penciled eyebrows were lifted in mute surprise.

"Happiness for the gentleman," said Fanita softly. "His way leads wherever the pretty lady goes, even to the sunny south, where they will live in peace and plenty. Butterflies are about you, too, but brush them aside. Heed not their silly laughter. Love and happiness are more important."

"Thank you," said Professor Holloway gravely as he tucked a crisp greenback into Fanita's hand. He arose to his tall height and looked around at the group of girl faces. Then his eyes rested on Rose Cramer's delicate face.

"Come, Rose," he said simply. And she arose and walked beside him.

"Come, children," she said absently over her shoulder. And the girls followed silently.

Fanita smiled scornfully upon them as they passed her.

"Fortunes, love and happiness cannot be bought with money," she said. "I have spoken as it was written in the hand. It is well." She pointed at the hilltop, where the professor and Rose waited for the girls. Their forms were outlined against the primrose of the evening sky. They saw that Rose and Holloway were standing there, hand in hand.

"It is beautiful!" said Peggy Moffatt soberly as they went away.

Hunters are making preparation for spring's trapping. Some are wondering where to go as notices are conspicuously tacked in some of the bays and marshes where they were accustomed to trap, prohibiting trappers from coming in. Some one is not rightly acquainted with the hunting privileges of the aborigines, which were conferred to them by King George III. in such a manner that it remains so now. The notices tend to prohibit trappers from coming in.

WON HIS SUIT AGAINST WIFE

Former Millbrook Man Retains Possession of Property.

The following, taken from the Long Beach, California, Daily Telegram, of March 24, will be interesting to Mirror readers, as Mrs Wilcox and Charlie resided in Millbrook at one time. Mrs. Jeffrey Widdis, of Cavan, is a daughter of Mr. Wilcox.

Readers of the Telegram will remember the maritial troubles of Thos. Wilcox, aged 73, who married the nurse who attended his first wife in her last illness and who sought a divorce because he realized the disparity in their ages and thought she wedded him for his money. When they were wed, Wilcox deeded about $37,000 worth of property to her, but refused to give her property in Canada worth $60,000. During the pending of the case Mrs. Wilcox sued her step-son, Charles, for $30,000, alleging that he had alienated the affections of her husband. After a sensational trial the marriage was annulled and Mrs. Wilcox compelled to relinquish all property except a house in Pasadena valued at $4,000.

Now comes a final chapter in the effort of Mrs. Wilcox to retain the Canada property. The following is from the Manitoba Free Press of March 18.

"Court of Appeal

"Wilcox v. Wilcox.—The parties in this suit both resided at one time at Long Beach, Cal. In June, 1910, they went to Victoria, B.C., and there went through a marriage ceremony which, apparently, was legally performed.

"Previous to the marriage, plaintiff, the husband, indicated to the defendant that he would transfer to her, when she became his wife, certain properties in question in this action.

"Immediately after the ceremony the parties went to a lawyer's office in Victoria, where the plaintiff executed a deed conveying the property to the defendant. No money consideration passed. The plaintiff sued to set aside the conveyance, alleging that there was no consideration and that there was undue influence, fraud and misrepresentation on the part of the defendant.

"The case was tried before Metcalfe J., who dismissed the action, and plaintiff appealed.

The court held that the trial judge should have considered the decree of the California court as conclusive evidence that the marriage between the parties was a nullity because of bigamy on the part of defendant; her husband, Broberg, being presumed to be still alive at the time of her marriage to the plaintiff.

"The appeal should be allowed with costs, the judgment in the court below set aside and an order made for the reconveyance of the land in question from the defendant to the plaintiff, or for an order vesting the land in the plaintiff as to all the defendant's title and interest therein. The plaintiff to recover against the defendant's costs in the court below." Millbrook Mirror.

"Five years ago, I was taken down with what the doctors called Inflammation of The Bladder—intense pains in back and loins, and difficulty in urinating, and the attacks, which became more frequent, amounted to unbearable agony. I became so weak that I could not walk across the floor.

My wife read in the papers about GIN PILLS and sent for a box. From the very first, I felt that GIN PILLS were doing me good. The pain was relieved at once and the attacks were less frequent.

In six weeks, the Stone in the Bladder came away. When I recall how I suffered and how now I am healthy and able to work, I cannot express myself strongly enough when I speak of what GIN PILLS have done for me." JOHN HERMAN. 178

GIN PILLS are sold at 50c a box—6 for $2.50. Sent on receipt of price if your dealer does not handle them. Sample box free if you write us, mentioning this paper. Money back, if GIN PILLS do not give satisfaction. National Drug & Chem. Co. of Canada, Limited, Toronto.

C.P.R. MAKES ARRESTS.

NORTH BAY, Ont., April 6.—Detectives have been engaged by the Canadian Pacific Railway since the first of the year ferreting out cases of stealing goods in transit in freight cars. Complaints of shippers and claims for lost goods determined officials to make a thorough investigation from coast to coast, and the results thus far are alleged to have been startling, although reticence has so far been followed.

Three men from here were accused, A. T. Sweeny and R. N. Watt, freight conductors, and W. E. Martin, brakeman. They were remanded on bail of $3,000.

It is said that prosecution will bring witnesses from all over Canada to identify goods seized in houses of railroad men under search warrants. Searchers have thus far been made of thirty houses of railway employes in North Bay alone, and seizures have been made of over one ton of merchandize, including kodaks, boots, clothing, fur coats. At Chapleau a quantity of silverware was seized in the shack of silverware was seized in the shack of a railroad laborer.

SCREAMED WITH THE TERRIBLE PAIN

ST. THOMAS, ONT., April 1st. 1913.

"In 1911, I was laid up with Kidney Trouble and not able to get out of my chair. Had tried many kidney remedies without satisfactory results. The pain was excruciating and my screams could be heard on the street. One day a friend from Ottawa came to see me, and when he found me in such poor health, said he would send me a sample of "Fruit-a-tives", which he did and I commenced taking them. The results were so apparent with the first few doses that I continued to take "Fruit-a-tives" and was completely restored to my normal state of health. I would strongly advise anyone suffering with Kidney Trouble to take "Fruit-a-tives" and cure themselves" CHARLES CALVEART.

50c a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

SECOND READING OF HOME RULE BILL SHOWS SIGNS OF DWINDLING

Majority For Defeat of Amendment to Measure Is Only Eighty Votes, Whereas Second Reading on First Trip Through Commons Had a Majority of 101—Bonar Law Willing to Resume Conversations.

LONDON, April 7.—By a majority of 80, an amendment for the rejection of the Home Rule bill was defeated in the House of Commons last night, and without division the bill was given for the third time its second reading in the House.

The announcement of the figures evoked louder cheers from the Opposition than from the Ministerialists, the Opposition interpreting them as gratifying proof of a dwindling Government majority. But the diminution is accounted for to some extent by the abstention from voting of the O'Brienites.

The speeches yesterday were generally much more conciliatory in tone than those which marked the bill's earlier passages. John E. Redmond, the Nationalist leader, who opened the debate, again held out the olive branch to Ulster in a speech of great eloquence, but insisted that it was impossible for him and his colleagues to agree to the permanent exclusion of Ulster and to abandon in principle "Ireland a Nation."

Andrew Bonar Law, the Opposition leader, though professing in certain passages of his speech, to see hardly any hope of a peaceful settlement, and predicting that civil war was certain if the Government persisted in pushing the bill through, declared that he and his colleagues would gladly accept a proposal for the renewal of the conversations with the Government leaders, but feared nothing would come of it.

Augustin Birrell, Chief Secretary for Ireland, was most optimistic. Despite all adverse criticism, he was certain that great progress has been made towards a peaceful settlement, and civil war, he declared, was impossible.

The second reading of the Home Rule bill was carried the first time by a majority of 101, and the second time by a majority of 98. Last night eight O'Brienites abstained from voting and two Liberals voted against the Government. One Nationalist was absent through illness. Three Laborites were also absent, and Charles F. G. Masterman, who had previously voted as a member of the Government, lost his seat in the election for Bethnal Green last February.

Mr. Asquith took no part in the voting, as he recently resigned his seat to stand for re-election in his appointment as Secretary for War.

A large gathering of Irishmen, all carrying green flags, assembled outside Parliament last night to celebrate the passage of the bill. They cheered wildly when the result of the vote was announced and gave ovations to the members of the Government and the Nationalist leaders as they left the House.

"The real question of the moment is how far each side is prepared to advance toward an agreement," said Mr. Redmond.

The Nationalists, he declared, would have been glad to accept the scheme proposed by Mr. Horace Plunkett in February, by which a plebiscite would be taken after a certain number of years on the question whether any section of Ulster desired to continue subject to the Irish Parliament.

Mr. Redmond said he was in sympathy with the general proposal of a scheme of federation, but vague talk on the subject, he declared, was mischievous and could not solve the present difficulty.

Following his Nationalist compatriot came Sir Edward Carson, the Ulster Unionist leader, who declared that the Government's attempt to "jump" Ulster with naval and military forces had made him skeptical of any reality in their profession of peace and conciliation.

Sir Edward Carson suggested that Mr. Redmond, like the Government, was trying to create an atmosphere favorable to himself without an attempt to find a practical compromise. The talk of federalism had not, he said, advanced the settlement of the Ulster question.

MANY CHANGES IN THE TARIFF ARE ANNOUNCED

THE BUDGET IS PRESENTED

Sixty-Two Schedules Are More or Less Affected by Revisions, the Most Important of Which Are a Reduction on Harvesting Machinery and Slight Increases on Steel Products.

OTTAWA, April 7.—Nearly four hours were occupied by Finance Minister White yesterday in the delivery of his budget speech and upon its conclusion the debate was adjourned until to-day when Mr. A. K. MacLean of Halifax will fire the opening gun for the Opposition.

The first half of the Minister's speech dealt with the general financial situation. He pointed out that in spite of the financial stringency, the revenue for the year ending March 31, 1914, had fallen off less than $6,000,000 from the year ending a year ago last March. Out of this the current revenue, the big railway subsidies, and the public works had been kept going. The public debt is increased, however, by $19,000,000. Even as it is the net debt to-day is something less than it was when the Borden Government came to power.

After noting the passing of the financial stringency, Hon. Mr. White announced the tariff changes. Wheat schedules will remain as they are; there is a 5 per cent. reduction on harvesting machinery; a small increase in steel duties and minor changes involving 62 schedules of the customs act.

Mr. White, in opening, recalled the prosperous year ending March 31, 1913, when the revenue of the Dominion reached the enormous sum of $168,689,000. For that year the current expenditures of the Government were $112,000,000, leaving a surplus revenue over current expenditures of $56,630,366. The expenditures for that year aggregated $32,369,000 and left a clear surplus of over $24,000,000. Of this surplus $11,000,000 had been expended in the purchase of 3 per cent. Grand Trunk Pacific bonds guaranteed by the Dominion Government, and $2,200,000 had been loaned to the Montreal Harbor Commission.

For the fiscal year ending on March 31 last, the revenues of the Government were estimated at $163,000,000 or a falling off from revenues of the preceding year of nearly $6,000,000. During the first six months of the fiscal year there had been a gain of $5,499,065 but the falling revenues between October and March had turned this gain into a loss for the year of between five and six million.

The expenditures upon current account during the fiscal year ending March 31 last had aggregated $126,500,000, an increase of $14,500,000 over the preceding year. This left a surplus over current expenditures aggregating $36,350,000. The capital expenditures including railroad subsidies of $19,000,000 and the $15,000,000 loan to the Grand Trunk Pacific aggregated $57,000,000, so that the debt of Canada for the year was increased by $20,500,000. At the same time the Financial Minister pointed out that, in spite of the financial stringency, the revenues of the year closed had been sufficient to meet all current expenditures and also expenditures upon public works. The increase in debt had been entirely due to the large railroad subsidies, including the subsidy to the Canadian Northern, which had been necessary in order to keep railroad construction afoot and prevent additional financial stringency.

Coming to the trade figures, Mr. White said that our total trade for the year ending March 31st last, would exceed our total trade for the year ending March 31, 1913. Moreover the percentage of exports would show a considerable increase. Our exports were indeed increasing rapidly, having risen from $274,000,000 in 1812 to $355,000,000 in 1913. While our exports for the eleven months ending Feb. 28, 1913 amounted to $440,000,000, our imports for the same eleven months would exceed $597,000,000, so that our total trade for the eleven months ending Feb. 28, 1914, would amount to about $1,038,000,000.

The Finance Minister turning to the year 1914-15 said the estimates before the House called for an appropriation of $145,000,000 for current account and $43,000,000 for capital account. It was unlikely that all this money would be actually expended and he believed that our revenue for the year which began April 1, would meet all current expenditures and a considerable portion at least of our expenditure upon capital account.

"As for the financial stringency," Mr. White continued. "I believe the worst is over. Money is easier and we should have before us a year of great production. The financial institutions of the country will act with prudence and caution, but they will also be inspired with courage and confidence."

Coming to the demand for the removal of the wheat duty in order to secure free entry of wheat into the U. S. Mr. White said that the Government had decided that the wheat and flour duties should not be disturbed. It was hoped that with the completion of the Canadian Northern, the Grand Trunk Pacific and the Hudson Railway, together with the opening of the Panama route, that the western farmers would obtain competitive and therefore lower freight rates. Objection to free wheat had been voiced by millers and mixed farmers who relied on mill products. In view also of the enormous investment in railways such a step was not advisable.

Mr. White said it was not the intention of the Government to renew the old bounties, nor was it prepared at this time to give the bounty asked upon iron or manufactured Canadian ore, although an investigation would be made by the Department of Mines upon that particular branch of the subject during the recess, and such a bounty might be brought in at a subsequent session. The Government also felt compelled to refuse the request for an increase in duty upon pig iron and steel billets, as these were raw materials entering extensively into many manufactures.

Wire rods, heretofore on the free list, will hereafter, however, be subject to a duty of $2.25, British preferential, and $3.50 intermediate, and general per ton, and the Governor-General in council will have the power to equalize the existing schedules on rolled iron and steel beams, channels, etc. A drawback of 99 per cent. will be allowed on wire imported for fencing.

Mr. White also announced that the Government had determined that importers of bituminous coal for the manufacture of coke to be used for smelting or foundry purposes should be entitled to a rebate of 99 per cent.

The House was all attention when immediately after the dinner recess, Minister White took up the section on agricultural implements. He said that Sir Wilfrid Laurier in preaching free food at Hamilton and Montreal, was really preaching free trade. He now desired to say that when the Liberal party demanded free agricultural implements, it was really demanding free trade.

Continuing, Mr. White said that manufacturers of agricultural implements had to pay a duty on practically everything he used in his plant and in his business, including stone, brick, building material, engines, machinery, plant, iron, steel sheets, wire tubing chains, castings, etc. The duty upon these articles ranged from 20 to 30 per cent. In addition to this he paid 53 cents per ton upon the coal he used as fuel. Now in ordinary justice could this manufacturer who paid so many duties be stripped of all protection? If the Liberals were consistent in their demand for free agricultural implements they would have to favor abolishing all the duties upon all the raw and manufactured materials used by the implement manufacturer. He challenged them to announce such a platform. They would not dare to do so because it meant absolute free trade.

But even if the manufacturer of agricultural implements had no duties to pay he could not compete with his competitor in the United States because the latter had a far wider market. He believed that to abolish the duties upon agricultural implements would close out seventy-seven factories in Canada, would scrap an investment of $45,000,000 and throw ten thousand men out of employment.

The Government, however, was anxious to do what could be done for the farmer, and it was felt that upon one range of agricultural implements the duties might be reduced because of the extensive rebates enjoyed by the manufacturer.

Mr. White said that upon harvesters, binders, mowers and reapers the Government intended to reduce the duties from 17-12 per cent. to 12½ or two and one-half per cent. lower than the rate fixed by the reciprocity pact of 1911. Parts of ditching machines necessary for repairs would henceforth be on the free list also.

There is an increase in the duty upon building stone which at present comes in at 20 per cent., being pracipally imported from Ohio. Hereafter on stone sawn upon four sides the duty will be 15 cents per cwt., being equivalent to a duty of 30 per cent., and cut plain and further finished 45 cents per cwt.

Caustic soda and chloride of lime heretofore on the free list, will hereafter be dutiable. Brass, in sheets, bars and rods, now free, will hereafter pay a duty of 10 per cent.

No bounty will be granted to the flax fibre industry at this session, but the Government during the recess will enquire into the propriety of granting assistance.

Mr. White gave notice of an amendment to the Customs Act respecting the surtax, which is now an additional one-third of the duty. The amendment allows the governor-in-council to prescribe the surtax in any case against goods imported from a country which discriminates against Canadian merchandise or shipping, but said surtax is in no event to exceed 20 per cent. ad valorem. Mr. White also laid upon the table amendments of minor importance dealing with a number of other schedules not discussed in the budget speech.

Worse and More of It.

"How fat Eileen is getting," said the young man. "I think it's a shame for a girl to take on flesh that way."

"You shouldn't say that to me," protested the young woman archly. "I am a little plump, myself, you know."

"I know, I know," he hastened to apologize. "But it's all right with you. I mean it's a shame when a girl's young."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Off Guard.

"How did it happen that your friends got the best of you?" queried the inquisitive person.

"They got busy while I was watching my enemies," explained the man who had got the short end of it.—Chicago News.

A concert was held in the Town Hall on Monday night last under the management of King Dodo and Adams Plantation Co. The programme was as follows:

1. King Dodo, the peer of all Colored Comedians and Dancers.
2. Will Adams, Bertha, Singing Dancing and Malody.
3. Tillie and Billie, Sketch Artists.
4. Tillie, King and Billie, Comedy Sketch Artists.

Prof. Valentine, Musical Director.

Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Ormeston were in Campbellford on Friday attending the funeral of the former's sister, the late Mrs. Robt. Nelson, who passed away at her home, near Campbellford, on the previous Tuesday, after a brief illness.

Wm. Lee, of town, has purchased Thos. Keene's dwelling on Ottawa Street for the sum of $1,200, and has taken possession while Mr. Keene has moved to the brick cottage on Quebec Street, lately occupied by Mr. Jno. Easterbrook, which he has purchased from the Messrs. Stillman for the sum of $1,100.

The Coronation Lodge No. 293 Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, are holding an "At Home" in the Town Hall on Easter Monday night, April 13th.

Dancing commences at 8.45 p.m., with a good orchestra in attendance. The committee in charge of the event are Messrs. W. Buchanan, S. Deyo, H. Grey, W. Kelly and H. Dark.

Puffer Bros. have opened their new furniture store in the Squire Block, with a handsome stock of all kinds of furniture, beds, mattresses, etc., and an undertaking department in connection.

The funeral of the presumably murdered Bulgarian, N. Duloff, took place from the Town Hall on Tuesday afternoon to the Maple Grove Cemetery. Rev. C. W. Holdsworth conducted the services. A large number of the unfortunate boy's comrades and others attended the service.

Mr. W. R. Warren, of Peterboro, has sold his residence in that city to Mr. Fred Sedgwick, and has purchased Mr. F. F. Fry's country home, five miles east of Havelock, on the Cordova Road.

After a woman has waited hours and hours for a man who is proverbially late, she can't understand his philosophy when he objects to waiting five minutes for her.

A woman just has to overlook a man's faults, otherwise he would think her old and crabbed.

WHAT STUDENTS PAY.

Toronto Reaps a Generous Harvest From College Boys.

That a university is a profitable adjunct to a city is shown by the fact that the students of Toronto University bring to that city annually the sum of $2,814,000. This figure is obtained by reckoning the average expenditure of the 4,200 students enrolled at Varsity as $670 per annum.

There are very great extremes to be observed in the way of spending money and the amount spent at Varsity. A student who gets away with $1,200 to $1,500 in eight months is regarded as a top-notcher, while the lowest on which a man can get through by taking extreme care with his clothes and selling his books at the end of the term, is about $250. Some of the theologs, who make only $200 in the summer, are reported to be able to scrape through on such a sum, but this can only be done where they are exempt from tuition fees.

In some courses fees help very materially to swell the student budget.

Dentistry is probably the most expensive course as regards regular fees. The first year total is $156, counting anatomy and matriculation fees, as compared with $62 in the arts' course if examination and library fees are included.

Rooms come high nowadays for the students. Even if they double up, a good large, well-lighted and heated room in suitable locality costs the students from $4 to $6 per week. Meals can be had at $3.25 per week in the university dining hall and at $3.50 to $4 elsewhere. So many of the students eat at the university that the average expenditure for meals is down to a rock bottom figure. Thirty dollars a month is regarded as a good average and figures out at $210 for the terms of eight months.

Laundry is another little bill that grows by the end of the month into about upwards of $2.50.

Those college clothes also cost something. A freshman usually thinks the "seniors" dress too well. His contact with the co-eds at college functions changes his ideas. A student might be able to get along with one suit, one overcoat, and any kind of a hat, but not so in Toronto University. Hats must be in season. There must be a spring coat, a rain coat, and an overcoat at least. A couple of suits are an absolute necessity.

Amusements hold a firm place in the student's heart. They attend every kind of theatre from a nickel picture show to the best grand opera at the fanciest prices.

The social functions of university life are many and sometimes very costly, especially the formal dances. It is a very low estimate that the average student spends $17 or $18 a month on amusements. This amounts to $140 for the term.

The following is a table of the average cost of education at Toronto University per year. It is $30 less than that estimated for McGill:

Fees, instruments, books	$175
Board and room	210
Laundry	20
Clothing	125
Amusements and incidentals...	140
Total	$670

Information For Settlers.

In view of the fact that every year brings to the northwest many new settlers who are unacquainted with the methods of breaking and preparing land for crop, and that the success or failure of a new settler often depends on the method employed in the preparation of the land for his first crop, there has been issued by direction of Hon. Martin Burrell, Minister of Agriculture, a bulletin on preparing land for grain crop on the prairies. This pamphlet is of 23 pages, and contains many instructive illustrations. It was compiled by J. H. Grisdale, director of experimental farms. It presents a summary of many years of careful study of prairie problems, by Angus MacKay, who for 26 years was superintendent of the experimental farm for Southeastern Saskatchewan, at Indian Head. Some valuable points are also given as to the breaking and later treatment of new land by the superintendents of the experiment stations at Scott, Saskatchewan, Lethbridge and Lacombe, Alberta and Brandon, Manitoba.

Where Strathcona Rests.

The Highgate cemetery, where Lord Strathcona chose to be buried beside his wife, is a place of notable graves and is on the way to become by force of circumstances an open air Westminster Abbey for notable men.

George Eliot is there, and within a few yards Herbert Spencer. Sir George Williams, who founded the Y. M. C. A., and Rowland Hill, who achieved the penny postage, are in the upper cemetery.

Made Record Trip.

The Royal Northwest Mounted Police patrol which left Dawson for Fort MacPherson, at the mouth of the Mackenzie river, early in January, and returned a few days ago to Dawson, having made the 400-mile trip over the snow from Fort MacPherson in 17½ days, the fastest time on record.

Biggest In the World.

Plans to build the largest drydock in the world are being prepared in Halifax, N.S., by the Public Works Department, and surveyors have been sent to determine the exact location of the big dock. As soon as the site is selected work will at once be commenced and the construction rushed with all possible speed.

All the rich, rather dark shades of blue are fashionable this season, and both Worth and Paquin are using materials in the peacock tint.

LUCAS BRINGS IN AMENDMENTS TO SUCCESSION DUTIES ACT

Persons Who Distribute Portion of Estate Without Receiving Value For It Will Remain Liable For Tax as if it Belonged to Estate at Time of Death.

TORONTO, April 7.—The Provincial Government is determined to get after those who evade the tax on inheritances by distributing property before death.

In the Legislature yesterday afternoon Hon. I. B. Lucas asked leave to introduce a bill to amend the Succession Duties Act, the amendment being framed with a view to meeting an objection to the present act on the ground that it embodies a form of indirect taxation.

"I have no thought whatever of urging the question in detail at this stage," said Mr. Lucas. "We are making the beneficiary primarily liable for the duty instead of the administrator or executor, and so get rid of the idea of indirect taxation.

"As mentioned in the House during the Budget discussion, an effort will be made to meet the difficulty of distribution of estates before death. This method of evading succession duties has caused a good deal of trouble in the United States and England. Any person who distributes his estate one year before death, and actually parts with possession, evades all succession duties, and the experience of the department has shown that testators are doing this to a large degree.

"If we are to have succession duties at all, we must meet this condition, and it is proposed that any person who has distributed his estate without receiving any value for it, shall nevertheless remain liable as if the portion distributed were still part of the estate at the time of testator's death.

"Lest this should work a hardship as it might in cases where portions of estates have been distributed to carry on family businesses, or for such purposes, there is included a provision that this shall not apply to distribution made to any child, son-in-law, daughter-in-law, father or mother of the donors when the amount does not exceed $20,000."

Where the aggregate value of the property exceeds $50,000, and any property passes either in whole or in part to immediate relatives specified in the act, the following scale of fees shall apply:

Where the aggregate value exceeds $50,000, but not $75,000, the tax shall be 1½ per cent.; from $75,000 to $100,000, 3 per cent.; from $100,000 to $150,000, 4½ per cent.; from $750,000 to $1,000,000, 8½ per cent; and all in excess of $1,000,000, at the rate of 10 per cent.

Rare Pictures Bought.

Two portraits by Bartbel Bruyn, of Cologne, painted in 1544, have been acquired by the Museum of Ottawa. They will be the first examples of this early German master to be placed in a public collection in America. Only one other is in the possession of a museum outside of Europe, and that is the "portrait of a woman" in the Altman collection, now the property of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York, which will not be shown until next spring.

The portraits imported into Canada are from the Schnitzler collection of Cologne. They were executed in Bruyn's best manner eleven years before his death, and when he was 51 years of age. They are portraits of Christian Von Conersheim, a councilman of Colonge, and of his wife, Anna, a daughter of the burgomaster of Cologne, Anton Von Brauweller.

Was First Voter.

At the first election held in Turnberry Township, Ont., over half a century ago, there were only two votes to be polled. One of the voters at that time was James Hogg, who died this week at the age of 87 years. He was the oldest of the survivors of the early days in Huron County, and prided himself on being the first settler in the township. He was a staunch Conservative and a member of the Church of England.

Fooled the Canadians.

The making of sjamboks, or whips, from the hide is still a flourishing industry in South Africa, and during the Boer war an enterprising genius sold many strips of the thick hide to a train load of Canadian recruits by calling the stuff "biltong"—that is, sun-dried beef.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, April 6.—The display of fancy and extra choice stall fed stock at the local stock yards today was by no means as large as in former years, which was attributed to the fact that prices asked for such stock in the country were so much higher than in previous years and drovers did not feel disposed to take any wide chances in getting their own back. However, there was an ample supply of good to choice cattle for butchers and packers to choose from, which in every respect suited for the Easter trade, but there was practically no advance in prices paid a week ago, except for a few odd lots of picked steers. The weather was all that could be desired by the trade, and the gathering of buyers was large, including some from Quebec and Ottawa. Butchers' cattle, choice, $8.50 to $8.75; do., medium, $6.50 to $7.50; do., common, $5 to $6; canners, $4 to $4.25; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $7 to $7.25; do., medium, $6 to $6.75; do., bulls, $5 to $7.50; milkers, choice, each, $90 to $100; do., common and medium, each, $70 to $80; springers, $60 to $65; sheep, ewes, $7 to $7.50; bucks and culls, $6 to $6.50; lambs, $8.50 to $9; hogs, off cars, $9.75 to $10; calves, $5 to $15.

PETERBORO LACROSSE CLUB IS ORGANIZED

Ed. Dillon is Elected President at Largely Attended Meeting

Local lacrosse enthusiasts turned out to a man last night at the meeting in St. Alphonsus Lyceum, called for the formation of a Peterboro Lacrosse Club. This club is by no means a recent idea, but it has been lying dormant for a number of years and was slowly passing out of the minds of men in the sporting circles. The coast to coast campaign in order to bring back Canada's national game rested on Peterboro as well as the surrounding towns, and as there were great possibilities of having a district of the O.A.L.A. in this section of the province, the Peterboro Lacrosse Club has been organized for the purpose of entering a team into this district, and also to see that the coming generation of athletes are "born with a lacrosse stick in their hand."

The first business performed by last night's meeting was the election of officers. The result was as follows:

Patrons and patronesses: Mayor and Mrs. Buller, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Howden, Dr. and Mrs. Wightman, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Kendry, Hon. and Mrs. J. R. Stratton, Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Patterson, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Denham, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Hatton, Ald. and Mrs. Duncan, Mr. and Mrs. R. Breyfogle, Mr. and Mrs. P. Campbell, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Worth, Mr. and Mrs. C. Rutherford, Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., Mr. R. G. Doble, Mr. W. Rudkins and Mr. F. D. Kerr.

Hon. Pres.—Mr. Harry Phelan.
President—Ed. Dillon.
First Vice-Pres.—Geo. Robertson.
Second Vice-Pres.—R. J. Begley.
Sec.-Treas.—Harry Theobald.

Executive Committee: L. LeBarr, R. M. Glover, P. Treblicock, F. McGrath and A. Rose.

The committee appointed to look after the lacrosse in the public schools: R. J. Begley, Ed. Manning, W. J. Koster, F. C. Weber and P. D. Craig.

The selecting of delegates to the annual meeting of the O.A.L.A., which will be held in Toronto on Good Friday resulted in the appointment of President Dillon and E. B. Boswell.

Several local gentlemen have contributed toward the purchasing of sticks for the school boys and already the money for some four dozen has been realized. A list of the donators will be published at a later date.

The question as to having suitable grounds to practise on has been settled with the procuring of Central Park. This ground in itself is ideal and is also within reach of every prospective member.

An executive meeting will be held in St. Alphonsus Lyceum on Wednesday evening and a general meeting will be held next Monday night to receive the report of the delegates to Toronto.

Thomas Hardy on Love.

Thomas Hardy, the author, by committing matrimony for the second time, has gone a long way towards atoning for the many unkind things he has permitted his characters to say about love, marriage and women. One remembers a few "Love making and dishonesty are inseparable as coupled hounds. "Yes," says the Parish Clerk, "Matrimony do begin wi' 'Dearly Beloved,' and ends wi' 'amazement,'" as the Prayer Book says." "Men love with their eyes; women with their ears." "I like you to desert me a little now and then; love is the dismallest thing where the lover is honest." But Hardy can also say nice things, as when he assures women that the least of their lesser infirmities is love of admiration, and that fondness of jewelry need not make the higher life a failure.

England's Scriptural Place Names.

No other country possesses so many scriptural place names as England, and among these Jericho appears to be the most popular. The name of Jericho figures six times on the ordinance maps, Paradise five times and Nineveh, Mount Zion, Mount Ararat and Mount Ephraim three times each. In Bedfordshire there is a Calvary Wood and in Dorsetshire a Jordan Hill. Hampshire has a Land of Nod, Cambridgeshire a Noah's Ark and Worcestershire a Moab's Wash Pot. Other Scriptural names scattered about the country are Hebron, Joppa, Bethlehem, Jerusalem, Gideon and Herod.—London Chronicle.

GAME ON WEST COAST

Sir Henry Seton-Karr makes sport on Canada's Pacific coast the subject of an article recently published in the Royal Colonial Institute Journal. In the course of the article he makes some general observations respecting British Columbia and some respecting Canada as a whole.

"Of British Columbia and its Pacific coast, it can truly be said that here is an almost perfect temperate climate—south, at all events, of parallel 53 and along the coastline. Here the extremes of summer sunheat and winter frost can be avoided. In the Island of Vancouver, for example, the climate is as temperate as that of the United Kingdom, with a more regular wet and dry season.

"From a sportsman's standpoint, British Columbia in general and the Island of Vancouver in particular possess numerous attractions. Moose, caribou, deer, bear, big-horn sheep, wild goat and a few wapiti—to say nothing of grouse and wild-fowl for the gun—salmon and trout (particularly trout) in the numerous rivers and lakes of the Pacific slope for the rod; these provide for the sportsman and tourist on the British Columbia mainland plenty of scope for his energies. On the island of Vancouver itself, which is clothed with dense forest (including some of the finest spruce and cedar trees on the whole of the North American Continent), much and varied sport for rifle, gun and rod can be obtained. The main difficulty for the sportsman is to get about at all in the dense forests of this, the largest island on the west coast of North America. It is nearly three hundred miles long, and from forty to eighty across—nearly as large as Nova Scotia."

In concluding, the writer looks into the future. He says:—

"The Pacific coast is going ahead. What effect the opening of the Panama Canal may have on the industries of British Columbia, and of the British coastline from Vancouver to Alaska, no man can with certainty forecast; but that effect can only be in the direction of larger production, and greater prosperity."

Manitoba's Fat Boy.

Who has not chuckled over Dickens' "Fat Boy" in the Pickwick Papers?

John Slater, a Manitoba boy, might stand as a specimen of the "Fat Boy" species, though from his bright and alert countenance, it is hardly fair to classify him with the sleepy youngster whose main delight it was to "make you creep."

He is nine years of age, and his father writes:—

"He weighs 210 pounds, stands 58 inches tall, measures 45 inches round the chest, 50 around the hips; the muscle of his forearm is 14 inches.

John must be hard to beat for size and would seem to be good enough to be used as an emblem of bountiful Manitoba.

A Laggard Suit.

Justice Cross, who has been criticising severely the law's delays in Montreal, and blaming the lawyers for lax preparation of cases, is criticized in turn along with his colleagues of the bench by local wig wearers. One K. C. recently mentioned a case which has been "en delibre" for twenty-one years.

"All the parties are dead," he said. "The lawyer for the plaintiff is now himself presiding over a Montreal court, whilst the lawyer for the defendant is a member of the Parliamentary staff at Ottawa, and is nowise bothered about this or any other local court case."

Horseflesh Sold as Beef.

The civic health authorities recently admitted that there are large quantities of horseflesh being sold as sausages and beef in Montreal.

Steps are being taken to prevent it, although medical men are not in agreement as to its demerits as food.

SPORTS ARE CHANGING

Styles are changing in sports as in dances and other diversions. Once shinny-on-the-ice was quite adventurous and scientific enough to satisfy everybody. Hockey grew out of shinny. Now ice-crosse has been produced by a cross-breed between hockey and lacrosse. Ice-crosse is really lacrosse played on skates. We do not know whether this is a compliment more to hockey or to lacrosse. Ice-crosse will lengthen the lacrosse season to about ten months in the year. The rules of each game being similar, there is no difficulty in making an ice-crosse player of a lacrosse player on skates. There is, however, some handicap. The ice-crosse player who yearns to deliver an opponent a deadly blow on the back of the neck, just as he used to do in lacrosse, may find the ice suddenly rearing to hit him behind the ears. The comparatively gentle tactics of ice-crosse may have the effect of softening the manners of lacrosse players. The possibilities for scrimmage, however, are not lessened by the fact that a player does a mile a minute with the puck in his net and a pack on his heels. Some day it may be found possible to play hockey without skates; which following the method of name-making used in ice-crosse may be called sod-hockey.

Ski-ing is almost as popular in Canada now as it is in Norway, where it was born. There is no reason why the ski should not become almost national emblem in this country. We have as many varieties of hills and snowcapes and just as much snow as they have in Norway. There are already several ski-ing associations, which grew naturally out of the snowshoe club; and we have always understood that the ski is only a glorified snowshoe without the net. The snowshoe is as indigenous to Canada as the lacrosse stick. The ski is still imported; but with the development of the ski-ing pastime it should be possible to make as good skis in Canada as they make in Norway.

The newer Canadian sports are largely an evolution of older forms, just as the tango and the turkey-trot and the bunny-hug were all developed out of the old dances that served to satisfy our forefathers.

In fifty years from now it may be possible to still farther develop the genial cross-breeding among the sports. Now that we have lacrosse on skates, water-polo and motor-polo and indoor baseball, why not ice-crosse played on skis and baseball on snowshoes? Ski-crosse would probably require a little more ice than hockey; but the tackles and the scrimmages and the get-aways would be simply immense. Ice-crosse should furnish excitement enough even for this excitable twentieth century.—Canadian Courier.

Only Canadian Title of Nobility.

The late Baroness de Longueuil was the third daughter of Thomas Wayne, of Burleigh, Devonshire, and married Charles Colmore Grant, seventh Baron de Longueuil in England, in 1878. After the death of the latter, which occurred in 1898, she married Vice-Admiral Johnson.

The barony has the peculiarity of being the only Canadian title of nobility officially recognized by England. It was established in 1700 by France, and was the property of the Le Moyne family until the time when, owing to the absence of male heirs, a Miss Le Moyne became Baroness de Longueuil. She married David Grant, and at her death in 1841 transferred her title to her son, Charles W. Grant, who became the fifth baron.

It was only in 1879 and after several unsuccessful attempts that the 6th baron, father of Charles Colmore Grant, succeeded, through the influence of the Marquis of Lorne, Governor-General of Canada, in having the title recognized by England. The barony de Longueuil was officially proclaimed of English nobility in 1880.

SMITHERS, B.C.

I saw it on a map, most large and fine
(I saw it with the naked eye — no dream),
Showing how trains upon the Grand Trunk line,
Grand but Pacific, run along by steam
Right to Prince Rupert on the sea (a port)
And there are brought up short.

Smithers! I saw it on a map, I say,
A panoramic map in Cockspur Street.
And sudden in my heart began to play
Echoes of old romance, and all my feet
Fluttered responsive to the name's sheer beauty,
So rhythmical and fluty.

Smithers! The music of it filled my mouth.
I saw Provence and that enchanted shore,
And lotus-isles amid the dreamy South,
And champions out of mediaeval lore
Looking at large for ladies in distress
Round storied Lyonnesse.

I was a trovatore (with guitar);
Venezia's airy domes above me shone;
I heard Alhambra's fountains, faint and far;
I broke the Kaliph's line at Carcassonne;
All kinds of lost chords latent in my withers
Woke at the name of Smithers.

Ah, if in Avalon's vale I may not rest
When envious Time has worn me to a thread,
Then let me go to Smithers in the West,
And on my gravestone let these words be read:
Attracted by its name to this fair scene,
He died a Smitherene.

—Sir Owen Seamen, in Punch.

Coal and St. Paul's.

Time was when a prolonged coal strike would have meant a big difference to the revenue of the City Corporation, which until quite recently levied a tax of 1s. on every ton entering its jurisdiction. Many improvements were carried out by means of this coal tax, the most ambitious of which within living memory were the building of the Thames Embankment and Holborn Viaduct.

It was from the tax on coal, too, that the cost of rebuilding St. Paul's Cathedral was mainly met. Dean Milman made a careful estimate of the total expenditure on the Cathedral—so careful, indeed, that be was able to say that exactly £736,752 2s. 3¼d. was expended from start to finish.

He remarked that it was not long before the City coal had taken its full revenge on the cathedral by destroying and disfiguring its massive stonework. Of the shilling tax the cathedral was assigned 4½d.

Precious Salts.

What is known as "radium" is a radium salt, usually either radium bromide or radium chloride, sometimes radium sulphate. Tiny grains of these salts are extremely precious, and are usually sealed up in little glass bulbs. The radium in one of the first bulbs that were received in London had a curious history. A physician in Portland place was applying the bulb to a patient when he accidentally let it fall and a moment after crushed it under his foot. The value of the radium to the physician was very great. He removed his boots from his feet and cut out a square of his valuable carpet. He had boots and carpet burned, and out of the ashes refined the original radium salt.

England's Greatest Storm.

England's most violent storm was that of 1703. A strong west wind had set in about the middle of November, and it increased in violence until on the morning of the 26th few people ventured out of their houses, and on that night houses were unroofed, buildings torn down and thousands of people were killed. About 2,000 stacks of chimneys were blown down in and around London. In the Thames only four ships remained between London bridge and Limehouse, 500 wherries, 300 ship boats and 100 lighters and barges were entirely lost, and many were badly damaged. The damage in London alone was estimated at $10,000,000.

W. C. T. U. HEAD DIES.

Mrs. Stevens Was a Celebrated Temperance Worker in the U. S.

PORTLAND, Me., April 7. — Mrs. William M. N. Stevens, president of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, died yesterday. She had been ill for several weeks with kidney trouble.

Mrs. Stevens, who was born in Dover, Maine, 70 years ago. continued to the last the temperance work to which she had devoted most of her life. Her mind remained clear, and late last week she was able to dictate correspondence in connection with the duties of her office. With her when the end came were her husband, Michael Stevens; her daughter, Mrs. Gertrude S. Leavitt of this city, and Miss Anna Gordon of Evanston, Ill., vice-president of the National Women's Christian Temperance Union.

At conventions of the World's Christian Temperance Union at Geneva, New York and Boston, Mrs. Stevens, as vice-president at large, presided in the absence of the president. Her ability as a speaker and worker for temperance first became recognized in the campaign of 1884, which placed the prohibitory amendment in the Maine constitution.

English Publishers Anxious.

LONDON, April 7. — The London Chamber of Commerce yesterday passed a resolution expressing the greatest concern at the pronouncement of Postmaster Pelletier of the possible discontinuance, or alteration, of Canadian cheap postal rates for English magazines, and urging that they should be continued as at present. They urged that any increase would be a severe setback to the cause of Imperial unity.

It was stated that the cheap rate had resulted in wide distribution of the English magazines, and that large sums of money had been invested in the enterprise. The resolution will be forwarded to Hobhouse, British Postmaster-General, who is now in negotiation with the Canadian Government.

Took Chance; Three Killed.

ATTICA, Ind., April 7.—Three persons were killed and about 35 others injured when the Wabash passenger train No. 4, known as the Continental Limited, was wrecked when the bridge over the Wabash river, just west of here, gave way Sunday. The engine, a baggage car and the day coach dropped into the water.

The bridge over the Wabash river was weakened when a freight train was wrecked upon the structure, and the Continental Limited was stopped on the west side. A switch engine was safely sent across, and the limited was then ordered to proceed.

Duke Visits Woodstock May 8.

WOODSTOCK, April 7. — Mayor Hobson received a letter from Government House yesterday, stating that the vice-regal party would be in Woodstock on May 8 on their proposed trip through western Ontario. The communication also stated that the Duchess of Connaught and Princess Patricia would accompany the Governor-General on the trip. It is likely that the arrangements for the opening of the nurses' home will be changed to that date, in order to have the duke preside over the ceremony, together with Bishop Farthing.

Whites Assault Chinese.

VANCOUVER, April 7. — Several assaults by whites upon Chinese in the streets have been reported as an outcome of the murder of Mrs. Chas. Millard by her Chinese servant boy.

AT THE ROYAL

The opening bill at the Royal Theatre this week is featured by an exceedingly fine Lubin film entitled "The Sea Eternal." This picture is presented in two parts, and the tale of love and a heroic deed to preserve that love holds the audience till the last scene. The vaudeville is made up of singing and dancing.

LAID AT REST

That the late Robert H. Adams, during his long and faithful service to the city, made innumerable friends and the fact that many of these took the last opportunity of paying their last tributes of respect by attending his funeral to-day in large numbers, was a silent reminder that the city of Peterboro had not only lost an efficient and conscientious officer, but also an honorable and highly esteemed citizen.

In the presence of the most intimate friends and relatives, the impressive ceremony at the residence was conducted by the Rev. James Rollins of St. Andrew's Church, assisted by Rev. J. R. Webb of Murray Street Baptist Church and Adjutant McElheney of the Salvation Army. Rev. Mr. Rollins also conducted the service at the grave in Little Lake Cemetery.

Chief of Police Thompson, Sergt. Brown, Detectives Meagher and Newhall, High Constable Cochrane, Police Constables Reid, Patterson, Deannard, Phymster, and Hayward were present, and marched, as did Fire Chief Howard and a number of his men.

The Independent Order of Foresters and the Canadian Order of Foresters were represented.

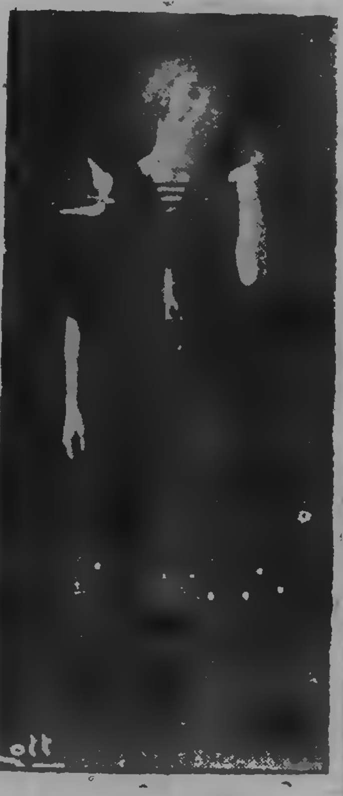
MAY OPPOSE ASQUITH.

Carson Talked of as a Possible Contestant in East Fife.

LONDON, April 7.—Nothing can be definitely ascertained regarding East Fife. Leaders of the Tory party in a division decided on Saturday night that there should be no contest and when the Conservative executive met yesterday it was assumed that the meeting would formally ratify the decisions of the chairman and secretary, but an obstinate minority, anxious for a fight at all costs, revealed itself.

It appears that the Ulster members of the Unionist executive at East Fife are very strongly opposed to the idea that Asquith should have a walk over, and are moving heaven and earth to get somebody to oppose him. They are ready with money, and are prepared to flood the constituency with missionaries from Ulster.

"The latest rumor," says The Daily Chronicle, "is that Carson is going to resign his seat in order to fight the Prime Minister. Should there by any chance be a contest, Asquith will speak at Leven on Thursday night.



A SUGGESTION

Every theatre-goer leaves a theatre after attending a performance much more satisfied if he has witnessed an elaborate display of scenery, beautiful costuming and dazzling electrical effects, as well as clever and artistic work of the people in the cast, than if the stage settings were of the ordinary style seen time and again, and almost in every-day life. Everyone will agree to this.

Should a production be offered Peterborough which makes an elaborate display of beautiful scenery, costumes and dazzling light effects, combined with artistic and finished dramatic work, dancing choruses, and comedy, would you attend it? Many chances to one that you would.

The Conservatory of Music Orchestra of Peterborough are offering such a production in "Zephra," under direction of Harry J. Booth, of Boston, Mass., at the Grand Opera House, April 14, 15, 16 and 17.

Tickets are on sale now, and don't refuse to buy one without considering these things.

THIS MILITANT USED HER VOICE

"Gen." Drummond the Cause of Court's Adjournment.

LONDON, April 7.—"Gen." Mrs. Flora Drummond, the militant suffragette, shrieked so loudly when she was arraigned yesterday at the police court in connection with the suffragette disturbance at the Unionist demonstration in Hyde Park on Saturday that she had to be forcibly removed, and her trial adjourned. She would not allow either the magistrate or the prosecuting attorney to utter an audible word.

When Mrs. Drummond entered the prisoners' enclosure she shouted at the top of her voice that she would not permit any one but herself to speak, because, she said, the magistrate and the police courts were doing the dirty work of Premier Asquith.

CANADA'S GREATEST BOY SINGER

The management of "The Grand" have arranged for a special program for Good Friday and Saturday. They have secured from the Famous Players' Co., of New York, a splendid three-reel film entitled "Chelsea, 7750." This is a thrilling detective story, and is bound to hold the audience in its grip.

In addition to this there will be three other reels of high-class motion pictures.

To secure this special programme it has been necessary to go to considerable extra expense, which no doubt will be appreciated by local patrons.

As a special added feature, Douglas Stanbury, Canada's greatest boy singer, son of Dr. Stanbury, of Toronto, has been engaged to sing at both daily performances. Douglas was specially commissioned to sing before the Duke of Connaught at the opening of the Howard Memorial Gates, Toronto, on Thursday, March 26th. His splendid rendition of "O Canada" being highly praised by the Duke, and also the Toronto papers.

Many Peterborough people have already had the pleasure of hearing this wonderful boy Contralto, as he appeared at the Grand Opera House during the last Local Option Campaign.

For this big programme the prices will be 20c. for the entire lower floor and first section of the balcony, and these seats can be reserved, and the box office will be open for this purpose to-morrow (Wednesday) morning at 9 o'clock. The second section of the balcony and the top gallery seats will be sold at 10c. These seats will not be reserved.

The matinee will commence at 2.30 each day, and the evening performance at 8.15.

This spring you will have two ears and one eye if you observe the fashions in coiffures and hats.

Authoritative Paris modes favor normal or high waist lines, though on the smartest coats it will be placed very low.

THEY SANG FOR HE'S A JOLLY GOOD FELLOW

Board of Education Congratulates Judge Hayes and Regret Losing Him

Imagine a sedate School Board rendering at highest note, "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow," but such was staged at the Board of Education meeting last evening in honor of Mr. L. M. Hayes, K.C., th newly appointed judge for Wellington, who resigned his position as member of the Board of Education after a service extending for nineteen years, during which time he had won the esteem and respect of the entire Board.

Chairman Dr. Morrison expressed the Board's deepest regret in accepting the resignation, but, most heartily expressed their happiness that his ability had been recognized by being appointed senior judge for the County of Wellington.

Mr. W. H. Hill spoke along similar lines, and voiced the same sentiments as Dr. Morrison.

The Board here rose and tendered Mr. Hayes the following resolution of congratulations and regret, moved by Mr. W. H. Hill, and seconded by Dr. Burnham.

> "That this Board extends hearty congratulations to Mr. L. M. Hayes, K.C., one of its members who has been appointed to the honorable and responsible position of Senior Judge of the County of Wellington. Mr. Hayes has been a member of this Board for over 19 years, Chairman of the Board, and for several years Chairman of the Finance Committee. And as a member and as chairman, and in other official positions on the Board, he has given valuable service to the schools of the city and to the people. We regret very much that Mr. Hayes will sever his connection with the Board, and will leave the city, as his excellent advice and aid have been of great service to the Board, and his thoroughly genial disposition and sterling qualities have made him a highly esteemed citizen."

Judge Hayes, in a gracious and appropriate speech, thanked the members for their regards and expressed great surprise after nineteen years and then at the eleventh hour to find such vocal talent in their midst."

A BAD DAY FOR BANK ROBBERS

New Haselton, B.C., April 8. — Of the six men who attempted to rob the Union Bank here yesterday, two were shot dead, two were seriously wounded, and another was captured, having broken his ankle while running through the bush, and one slightly wounded, is still at large.

Citizens began shooting as the robbers emerged from the bank,. One was shot through the heart, another through a lung, a third through both arms, of which he will likely lose one, through the stomach and hips, and one had his leg shattered.

ONE MONTH IN JAIL FOR THEFT

Robert Ryan, a local man, was sentenced to one month in jail this morning by Magistrate Dumble on the charge of theft of $15 from Peter Moffatt.

Acting Crown Attorney Wearing, conducted the prosecution, and Mr. V. J. McElderry acted for the accused.

Peter Moffatt, the complainant, had but a hazy recollection of the theft of his money. He admitted being the worse for liquor and discovering the loss of his $15 when he got home.

Questioned by Mr. McElderry, witness admitted he might have spent about $10. He was of the opinion he lost probably $5. He failed to remember where he received his first drink.

"Sure, you were in for a good time, and you went right ahead and had it," remarked Mr. McElderry.

"Well, I did not intend to get full, but I guess it got the best of me."

Witness couldn't say whether he ever saw prisoner or spoke to him.

"How much does it take to knock you out?" asked the magistrate.

"How old are you?"

"Well, I'll be blessed if I have not forgotten that."

Magistrate Dumble came to his rescue by stating that he had seen him for about forty years.

Stephen Grisdale stated he saw the accused put his hand into Moffatt's pocket and pulled out something. The something he transferred to his own pocket.

Samuel Newell, a boarder at the hotel, said he had noticed Ryan at the hotel numerous times. He never had any money and he had been thrown out twice. He, however, bought the drinks after Grisdale mentioned to him seeing Ryan pick Moffatt's pocket.

Hotelkeeper Got Off on Two Other Charges.

Port Hope, April 8.—The proprietor of the Queen's Hotel appeared in the Police Court on a charge of allowing liquor to be consumed on the premises during prohibited hours on March 21st. A week ago, the Queen's was charged with selling liquor on March 21st, but when the prosecution failed to register a conviction, they amended the charge to the one of allowing liquor to be consumed. The evidence showed that Mr. Bennett had no knowledge of liquor being consumed on the premises, and this case was also dismissed. For permitting games of chance, he was fined $30 and $4.50 costs.

MRS. J. F. GILL PASSES AWAY IN NORTH DAKOTA

Was School Teacher Many Years Ago in Victoria and Durham.

Mount Pleasant, April 8.—Mr. H. J. McLean received on Tuesday the sad news of the death of his sister, Mrs. J. F. Gill (Eliza McLean), of Cavalier, North Dakota. As there had been no intimation of alarming illness the news came as a great shock to the friends of deceased. Mrs. Gill was a public school teacher in the counties of Victoria and Durham about four decades ago, and managed the general store of her father, the late James McLean, J.P., for some time. With her husband, she moved to North Dakota in the early eighties, where she has since resied. There are lewt to mourn her sad death, besides her sorrowing husband, two sons and two daughters: Harry Gill, customs officer at S. Portal, N.D.; Fred Gill, merchant, of Montana; Mrs. C. Morrison, of Upham, N.D.; and Mrs. J. F. Blenkner, of Bowbells, N.D. The late Mrs. Gill had a great many friends in this part, and the surviving ones will note with sympathy her demise. To her host of relatives the warmest condolences are extended.

AN ARMED AND ARMORED AEROPLANE.

This engine of war, which is being tested by the French Army, is designed to carry two men, but in the opinion of experts the war-aeroplane will have a crew of three—a pilot, observer and combatant. It is not considered likely in case of a duel in mid-air that ramming will be resorted to, inasmuch as it would be equally destructive to attacker and attacked. The necessity for arming both heavier-than-air and lighter-than-air machines has been recognized for some time by various nations (witness Germany's armed dirigibles); as well as that for providing armies and navies with guns for use against air-craft in flight. The difficulty of hitting rapidly-moving monoplanes or biplanes is obvious, and even the much bulkier dirigible is by no means an easy mark; but when it comes to actual fighting in the air the gun on either type of craft must be of value; and, especially, it is likely to be of service to aeroplanes attacking dirigibles, although it must be confessed that the vulnerability of the envelopes of those fighting units is not yet altogether a known factor. The French Minister of War, to take one example, has placed in the 1914 programme of his country a series of armed and armored aeroplanes. The first of these to be tested is the two-seated monoplane, shown in the picture. The head and shoulders of the pilot are exposed above the armor; also those of the marksman, save in using the gun, when he has to stand.

LAD PREPARED FOR BURNING AT THE STAKE

Young "Desperadoes" Were Discovered Just in Time.

About five o'clock yesterday afternoon the police were called to a house on Pinnacle Street, when a rather weird story was poured into the ears of the officers of the law, says the Belleville Intelligencer. It was reported that two boys named Ben Lang and George Monaghan, both about thirteen years of age, had taken a much younger lad named Charles Fry, tied him to a post, piled dried burdocks and leaves about his feet and were about to light the pile when discovered. The police were asked to have the two boys punished for their act. Had they set fire to the dry material Fry would no doubt have been severely burned.

INTOXICATED MAN WENT TO SLEEP WITH HEAD ON CAR TRACKS

Ottawa, April 8.—R. Douall, of Notre Dame Street, Hull, was saved from instant death by the prompt action of Motorman Foley, of the Hull C. P. R. line, who saw his prostrate body on the tracks in time to avoid going over it. Douall, who was in a badly intoxicated condition, was sound asleep with his head on the rails when noticed by Foley, who immediately dropped the fender.

REV. A. L. GEGGIE IS MODERATOR

Toronto, April 8.—Rev. A. Logan Geggie, pastor of Parkdale Presbyterian Church, was yesterday appointed Moderator of the Presbytery of Toronto, succeeding Rev. F. J. Cameron. The appointment was made at the regular meeting of the Presbytery in St. James' Square Church.

ST. GEORGE'S DAY

The second annual St. George's Day Service will be held this year at St. John's Church, by the kind permission of Rev. Canon Davidson.

The service will be held on Monday evening, the 20th inst., instead of the 23rd, which is St. George's Day proper.

This change of date of the service is necessitated by the inability of His Grace the Archbishop of Ottawa to come to Peterborough on any other date during this month.

Although the Archbishop will be present, and will take part in the service, the sermon will be preached by the Right Rev. The Lord Bishop of Kingston (Dr. Bidwell).

The following particulars will show that St. George's Day Service this year will be of a very unique character, if not unparalleled in the history of the English Church in Peterborough.

To start with, an Archbishop, a Bishop, an Archdeacon, a Rural Dean, two Canons and a number of Rectors will be present.

Then His Worship the Mayor and members of the City Council will attend the service. Also Col. Clegg, officers and non-commissioned officers of the 57th Regt., the "Daughters of the Empire," and the "St. George" and the "Sons of England" Societies will be present.

All this shows that the service will be a very representative one of the English community of the city and its suburbs.

The details as to the order of the service, which will be fully choral, will be published on Saturday, the 18th inst. This service will be repeated at St. George's Church on Sunday evening, the 26th inst., when the sermon will be preached by the Ven. Archdeacon Ingles, of Toronto.

THE ONTARIO EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION

Problems of Rural Education Will be Given Special Attention.

At the meetings of the Ontario Educational Association, to be held in Toronto next week (April 14, 15, 16), special attention will be given to the problems of rural education. At last year's meetings two profitable sessions were held in this connection, and this year Wednesday afternoon is set aside in the Public School Department for papers and discussions on how the country schools can help in solving Ontario's rural problems through the introduction of agricultural teaching and the general "agriculturalizing" of rural school work. A report will be made also by the Director of Agricultural Education showing how the work has advanced throughout the province in 1913.

On Wednesday morning there will be a joint session of the High School Science Teachers' Section and the Continuation School Section, to discuss the Departmental plans for introducing agriculture into the regular work of the High and Continuation Schools, especially those situated in the smaller country towns and villages. A good commencement has been made in this already, the schools at Arthur, Drayton, Essex, Ridgeway, Vankleek Hill and Weston being engaged in the work.

In the Inspectors' Department both sessions on Wednesday are given over to rural school matters, and in the High School Principals' Section the High School Course in Agriculture will be discussed on Tuesday morning.

THE BOARD OF EDUCATION

ADDITIONAL INSURANCE IS TO BE PLACED ON THE NEW SCHOOLS

INSPECTOR'S REPORT

MOTOR VENTILATING SYSTEM RECOMMENDED FOR THE COLLEGIATE

At the Board of Education meeting last evening Mr. Vincent Eastwood reported that arrangements were in hand for placing additional insurance of $10,000 on each of the two new schools, and $2,000 on the contents.

The proposition submitted by Mr. Crane regarding new typewriters was left in the hands of the Supervision Committee. Mr. Crane reported that he had received a communication from the Underwood Typewriter Company to the effect that they take the nine old machines now in use at the Collegiate, and for $75 extra furnish ten new machines of the latest type.

Several members reviewed the merits of the different machines and the matter finally went to the Supervision Committee to bring in a report at the next meeting.

Two Months' Leave.

Mr. J. J. Turner, Jr., was granted two months leave of absence. Mr. Turner will take a trip to the Old Country this month.

Mr. Vincent Eastwood, chairman of the Technical Committee, was appointed to represent the Board at the convention of the Technical Association meeting to be held in Toronto shortly.

An invitation for the Trustees' Convention, to be held in Toronto next week, was received, and as many members as possible will attend the convention.

It was also decided to grant the Art Department of the Collegiate Institute $15 for supplies.

Reports concerning the claim of the Peterborough Light and Power Company were presented, and referred to the Building Committee. The latter reports stated that the transformer at the school burned out owing to improper connections being made.

Report on Collegiate.

School Inspector J. A. Houston reported favorably on the Collegiate Institute. The report was to the effect that the building was in good shape, but the ventilation system unsatisfactory. Additions were required for maps and art models. The general equipment was very good.

The organization and management was excellent. No school was superior. Ample provision was made for the pupils' work, which was not too heavy. The staff were all legally qualified.

Hiserecommendations were that more natural history cases be installed, and also a motor ventilation system.

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 8, 1914.

BIG LOANS TO C. N. R.

THE INQUIRY into the affairs of the C.N.R. having lasted up to the present time, the Borden Government will not likely declare its intentions concerning that railroad until after the Easter recess. The government auditors have been busily engaged in the head office at Toronto, and have just completed a thorough investigation, the result of which will be presented to the Conservative caucus and to the House presumably when the house meets after the holiday. Some interesting information as to the amount of assistance given to the Canadian Northern has come to light. The Honourable Dr. Reid has given out some details in order that the members may be posted when the discussion comes up.

Information furnished to Mr. J. H. Burnham, of Peterboro, showed that the following cash subsidies had been given to the Canadian Northern ; For Swan River and other western sections, $2,000,332, granted and paid ; to Canadian Northern Alberta Railway, $3,120,000, granted and $2,852,024 paid ; for Ottawa to Port Arthur line, $10,920,000, granted and $6,518,516 paid ; for Toronto to Sudbury line, $1,872,000, granted paid ; for the Toronto and Ottawa line, $1,600,000, granted and $1,363,122 paid ; for the Hawkesbury to Ottawa line, $369,872, granted paid ; for the Garneau to Quebec, St. Jerome and Rawden branches of the Canadian Northern Pacific, Quebec $707,568, granted and paid ; to the Canadian Northern Pacific, $6,300,000 granted and $4,349,930 paid ; to the Halifax and Southwestern, $1,364,210, granted and paid. This makes a total cash subsidy granted for the whole system of $28,254,942, of which $21,378,534 has been paid.

In addition to the above, guarantees to the amount of $59,746,582 have been made of which $39,937,822 have been paid

The Single Tax Association of Ontario has interested itself in the C.N.R. problem, and circulated a petition urging the Dominion government to take over the Canadian Northern, as a public work for the people of Canada, compensating the present owners for any money which they have supplied, and making them reasonable payment for the time and effort which they have spent in its conception and construction. Such action should not be taken, except as a last resort, for it appears drastic to a degree. Mackenzie and Mann have risen from the ranks and grown up with the development of the Canadian Northern. They have proven themselves captains of industry, masters of finance, great in conception and indefatigable in work. While they have received a great deal of assistance, while the road has not been as well built, perhaps, as it should have been, the principal thing required is to see that the road is properly completed and that whatever money is loaned to the road, is invested entirely in construction. This knotty problem bequeathed to the Conservatives by the slip-shod methods of the Liberals will likely be settled very soon, but in what manner remains to be seen.

CHINESE EMPLOYERS OF WHITE GIRLS.

YANG SHU WEN, Chinese Consul-General for Canada, and G. F. Ferguson, K.C., of Ottawa, have complained to Hon. James Duff, Minister of Agriculture, against the amendment to the factory act introduced last week which debarred Orientals from employing white girls in restaurants, laundries, factories, etc.

The opposition to this bill seems to be principally on technical grounds. In 1912 representatives of the Chinese nation appealed to the courts to have such an act set aside on the grounds that it interfered with trade and commerce. Verdicts have been given by the high court of Saskatchewan and by the Supreme Court of Canada against the Chinese, in trying to set aside such a measure. However, the verdicts have not been unanimous. At present it is before the Privy Council, and the measure will likely be held pending the decision of the highest court in the Empire. It has also been pointed out that such a measure might interfere with the rights of the Japanese conferred by the treaty between Great Britain and Japan. The recent murder in Vancouver has given added interest to the question of Oriental immigration into Canada. On the British Coast, the situation is acute, and the existence of such a bill seems to show that the presence of Orientals in Canada, is not to be desired. Doubtless there are many Chinese who are good, law abiding citizens, but as a people for immigration they are not suitable. The $500 head tax will not keep them out. If Canada does not want Orientals, she must say so. As for the bill in question it has been suggested that an amendment be made to the municipal act, empowering either factory inspectors or police chiefs to pass judgment on Orientals before consenting to their employing white girls. This proposal might answer for a short time, but in a big city like Toronto, the chief of police has enough to do without inquiring into the moral character of all the Chinese in the city, in order to decide whether they are suitable employers for white girls. The problem will likely be only half met by such legislation as is proposed. The real answer to the whole difficulty is the answer to the question whether Orientals should be admitted to Canada at all.

DEATH THE ADVENTURE.

'YEARS AGO Maeterlink wrote a poignant little drama, "The Death of Tintagiles." Yet the play never reached the stage in New York till the other day. Probably the chief reason is that death is therein symbolized as an inexorable and frightful monster. And the world has come to esteem as more precious the poets and philosophers who have passed over the sinister side to dwell on death with resignation and even exultation. For such thoughts no time is better than Easter. It is the true Easter spirit that Stevenson voices when he says of one who dies young:

> "In the hot fit of life, a-tiptoe on the highest point of being, he passes at a bound on to the other side. The noise of the mallet and chisel is scarcely quenched, the trumpets are hardly done blowing, when, trailing with him clouds of glory, this happy-starred, full-blooded spirit shoots into the spiritual land."

Turn back a few centuries and listen to the similar note in John Donne's noble words:

> "The sun is setting to thee, and that forever; thy houses and furniture, thy garden and orchards, thy titles and offices, thy wife and children, are departing from thee, and that forever; a cloud of faintness is come over thine eyes, and a cloud of sorrow over all theirs; when His hand that loves thee best hangs trembling over thee to close thine eyes, ecce Salvator tuus venit, behold then a new light. . . . Though in the eyes of men thou lie upon that bed as a statue on a tomb, yet in the eyes of God, thou standest as a colossus, one foot in one, another in another land."

There is a real bugle call of triumph in those four Latin words: Lo! thy Saviour cometh! Browning over and over spoke of death as some thrilling hazard against which the brave soul may prevail. From Browning to Barrie seems a long step, but no one can forget how Peter Pan, in the play, summarized his conception of death. The rising tide was creeping up to him; he was told that he had to die. "To die!" he cried, and there was the thrill of anticipation in his voice; "to die! That'll be a pretty big sort of an adventure!"'

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE MONTREAL Gazette regarded criticism of the newspaper situation in that city of sufficient importance to warrant an explanatory editorial saying that Sir Hugh Graham had no control whatever over the Gazette. Then the solicitors for the Gazette wrote Toronto Saturday Night, which had caricatured the situation, and the Toronto paper has made amends. The Gazette did not, however, state whether the policy of the Gazette was the same as that of Sir Hugh Graham, which would be almost as good as controlling it. What the Gazette said was doubtless true, but people have become suspicious of Sir Hugh Graham's manipulations ever since the Daily Mail got its probe into the Quebec Legislature.

The C.N.R. is said to have cost for construction some $34,000 per mile. The N.T.R. cost $100,000 per mile. Which indicates that the Laurier Government simply went ahead and built the N.T.R. without the slightest regard for cost—to put it mildly. If ever there was a brazen looting of the public treasury, it was in the building of the N.T.R. by the Laurier Government.

Lord Morley Remains in Cabinet.
Montreal Star.

There will be general satisfaction that Lord Morley has not resigned from the British Cabinet. No man of his time has a higher ideal of public service; and if he appears to many to be too much of a doctrinaire, no one can accuse him of neglecting the hard facts of public service on that account. His fine optimism, his calm judgment and his knowledge of public affairs, past and present, all make it desirable that he should not yet retire among the books he loves so well.

Who'll Write the Irish Epic ?
Catholic Register.

It is passing strange that in nine hundred years no Irishman has dramatized that most important of historical events upon western civilization, the battle of Clontarf and the death of Brian by the hand of a traitorous assassin and apostate, after the defeat of the Danes. On almost every other subject Irish poets have sung in heroic mode ; we await with impatience a great Irish epic on this grand theme.

WEARY OLD FATHER
By Walt Mason

When Father eats his supper, and sits down to read a book by Edith Tupper, or, peradventure, "Queed," oh, let him sit in quiet until the evening's through, and do not raise a riot o'er things he ought to do. Too often Weary Father can find at home no peace, his folks raise such a pother, their clamors never cease. It's "Dad, go split some kindling before you have your fun; the little pile is dwindling, and soon there will be none." "Oh, Daddy," says the daughter, "I wish yourself you'd hump, and bring eight tubs of water, and then some, from the pump." "Our Noah's ark is busted," complain the little boys, and Father, sad, disgusted, begins to glue the toys. "The cow is in the garden," shrieks Ma, "and you sit there, so help me Dolly Varden, and do not seem to care!" From suppertime to bedtime the old man's on the go, until his seeing-red time will cause some blood to flow. Some day, beneath the pressure, his brain will seem a blur, and then, from here to Cheshire, he'll strew the earth with fur. His endless worries rend him, they come in such a batch, and soon we'll have to send him to some one's booby hatch.

THE NEW AUTOMOBILE

Its Demonstration Trip Was An Eventful One

By F. A. MITCHEL.

I was shopping and had been looking at some laces. Leaving the store, I went out on to the sidewalk, intending to go home, but it was such a bright spring morning that I was loath to do so. Beside the curb stood a new spick and span automobile, the sun glistening on it and the cushions looking so comfortable that I wished I might have a spin in it. My husband was at the time trying automobiles with a view to buying a new one, and I wished he would select one exactly like the car before me. While I was coveting it Charlie Forsyth came along and after greeting me joined me in admiring the machine.

"I'd like a spin this morning," I said to him. "I haven't been out for a week. Our chauffeur has been laid up, and I'm afraid to go out into the country alone, for if my machine should break down I wouldn't know what to do."

"I DON'T OWN THIS CAR. ISN'T IT YOURS?"

"I'll take you out," he said. "Get in."

I knew that Charlie was fond of motoring, but was surprised that the car should be his. However, he owned several cars, and I expressed no surprise. The truth is I was thinking that I should decline his invitation. My husband was not at all jealous and permitted me to accept any attentions I saw fit. But I was quite sure that if he would be displeased at my motoring with any one that person was Charlie Forsyth. This was what occupied my mind as I stepped into the car.

only a short ride," I said. "Tom said he might be at home at noon today with a new car he is trying and take me out with him after luncheon."

"Just as long or as short as you like," he replied.

I knew Charlie to be a fine driver, and I was therefore surprised that he had some difficulty in getting under way, but I supposed that, his machine being a new one, he had not yet become familiar with it. However, we finally got out from the crowd of vehicles that frequented that part of the city, and it was not long before we were moving on a country road regardless of the speed limit. We had been out about half an hour when I asked Charlie how long he had owned the auto.

"Owned what auto?"

"Why, this one."

"This one! I don't own this car. Isn't it yours?"

"Mine! No. I never saw it before today."

I began to laugh.

"It's no laughing matter," he added. "The owner can make a lot of trouble for us if he likes."

"I wonder who the owner is?"

"I don't know, but I do know that I'm going to take it back from where I got it as soon as possible. I only hope—no, that cannot be expected—the fellow has been detained so that we can get it back before he misses it."

"For heaven's sake!" I exclaimed. "Turn around and go back as fast as you can!"

"It would be better to return by another road. We'll strike a crossroad presently. I'll take it and in a mile or so reach an asphalt paved way that will take us back to the city."

We kept on, but in a few minutes I heard an ominous buzzing behind. I turned and saw an auto coming like the wind.

"My goodness gracious!" I cried. "Suppose it should be the owner of the car coming for us!"

"Quite likely it is," said Charlie grimly.

I can understand the temptation of persons running autos when they knock down or run over some one to try to get out of the scrape by flight. The impulse to make a race for concealment is very strong. The almost certainty of final detection is lost sight of. This is the way I felt, and I fancy Charlie was tempted in like manner. But he never said a word, nor did I. I knew by the sputtering of the machine as he turned on more power and opened a valve to let out gas that he was going to run for it.

But both Charlie and I were fools not to turn about and, if we met the owner of the car we had taken, explain the mistake and throw ourselves on his mercy. As I have said, it was that desire inborn in humanity, and in the brute creation for that matter, for the excitement of a race.

"Don't look back," said Charlie.

I knew by this that my doing so would indicate that we were trying to escape by flight, whereas if we paid no attention to those behind us it would appear that we were simply going at high speed. But despite the caution I could not help turning my head. I could not see who was in the car behind us on account of the dust, and by other evidences of a breakneck speed I had little doubt that the driver was trying to catch us.

"I think they're gaining just a little," I said.

Tom pushed the speed gauge a trifle farther on—not to the limit, for we were already going at a tremendous gait. The telegraph poles flew like the spokes of a revolving wheel. Fortunately the road was good, but Charlie dare not turn when we reached the crossroad without slowing down, and this he did not wish to do. So we shot by it like a cannon ball.

Looking ahead, I saw what teams were in the road turn and as far as possible on the side. When we reached one of them the astonished face of the driver flashed upon me and vanished.

Looking back, I saw that we had gained on our pursuers. They were still under full speed, but they surely could not have as swift going a machine as ours. But at this moment something underneath our car began to rattle. Charlie instinctively moved back the speed gauge.

"I'm afraid we're beaten," he said.

Possibly, added to this view of the case, Charlie had had time to consider the folly of our course. The rattling continued, and he took off more power.

I looked back and saw that our pursuers were rapidly coming up with us. I think I would have renewed the pace if I had known we should be wrecked, but Charlie had got some discretion into him and kept reducing instead of putting on speed.

"When they come up," he said, "don't appear as if we had been trying to get away from them. Brazen it out. I'll declare, till otherwise convinced, that the machine is mine."

So we prepared ourselves for a bluff, and our pursuers, coming near, shouted to us to stop. Charlie obeyed, and the other car slowed down beside us. When I saw what it contained the heavens grew black, all about me whirled, and I sank back on the leather cushion.

I had been flying from my husband.

I didn't quite faint away. I was sufficiently conscious to see on Tom's face the look of a man who had caught his wife running away with a rival. The first words I heard came from Charlie, and it was evident that he had not lost his presence of mind.

"Hello, Tom!" he said. "What are you doing out here at this time in the morning?"

Tom made no reply. He was too appalled to speak.

"I met your wife," Charlie continued, "in front of Waterman's store looking at this auto. I thought it was hers, and she thought it was mine. I proposed a spin, and it was only a few minutes ago that we discovered our mistake."

I saw a look of mingled relief and doubt come over my husband's face. He seemed to wish to believe the story, but found it hard to swallow. Presently he said in a reserved tone:

"You are in a car I have been thinking of buying. I left it awhile ago before Waterman's, going in to buy a pair of driving gloves. When I came out the auto was gone. A policeman told me he saw a man and a woman get into it and drive off in this direction."

By this time I had recovered sufficiently to take my part in the conversation.

"We discovered our mistake," I said, "just as we heard you coming for us. Not knowing who you were, but supposing you were the owner of the car we had taken, we thought we would race you for it. Flying from my own husband—ha, ha!"

Tom didn't seem to think it funny a bit, the reason being plain. The idea that was uppermost in his head was that I was eloping with his rival. However, the fact that we had taken the automobile he had been using convinced him. If we had intended an elopement we should not have been likely to take that particular car. The fact of having been pursued by Tom began to strike Charlie as very ludicrous. The corners of his mouth began to quirk up. Tom's scowl also broke into a smile.

"We've got to get back to town," said Charlie. "Do you want your wife in your car, Tom, or will you trust her to me? I promise solemnly not to run away with her again."

Tom's smile broadened into a grin, and, starting his auto—he had borrowed it for the pursuit—he left us to go where we pleased. We followed him home, and I invited Charlie into luncheon. We found Tom opening a bottle of wine, and before the party broke up we were in a gale of laughter at our stealing an automobile, being chased for thieves and finally my being considered an eloper by my own husband.

WOMEN ALL DEFEATED.

Every One of Chicago's Nine Fair Candidates Snowed Under.

CHICAGO, April 8. — "Bath House" John Coughlin was re-elected alderman in Chicago's First Ward yesterday by a plurality over Miss Marion Drake of nearly 4,000 votes.

He received twice as many women votes as Miss Drake, the Progressive candidate. His plurality alone exceeded the total women registrations of the ward. All nine women candidates for aldermen in Chicago were defeated. Less than 100,000 of the 217,458 registered women went to the polls. That's the story of the first trial of women suffrage in Chicago.

COULD CRUSH CAILLAUX.

Editor Calmette Had Documents of Great Importance.

PARIS, April 8.—Louis Latzarus, associate editor of The Figaro in the course of examination by the magistrate, yesterday said: "M. Calmette talked with me in January about the part played by M. Caillaux in the negotiations with Germany concerning the Agadir incident in Morocco, while he was Prime Minister. M. Calmette had a portfolio in front of him from which he took two documents. These were of a diplomatic character of extreme importance and were so formal and so crushing that their publication would have stripped M. Caillaux of power without any hope of recovery.

"M. Calmette said to me that he could not publish these documents without fear of provoking foreign complications, nor would he give me an idea of what the documents contained."

FRUIT EXPERT APPOINTED.

Daniel Johnson of Forest, Ont., Is to Be Head of New Branch.

OTTAWA, April 8.—Hon. Martin Burrell has organized the fruit division of the Department of Agriculture as a separate branch of the Department. The first commissioner will be Daniel Johnson, of Forest, Ont., who will be directly responsible to the Minister. Since 1905 the fruit division has been under the general direction of J. A. Ruddick, the dairy and cold storage commissioner, with the late Alexander M. Neill as head of the fruit section.

However, Mr. Burrell is convinced that the fruit industry now demands the special attention of an expert head, and Mr. Johnson will begin his duties on May 1. He will have the supervision of the fruit industry and all matters in connection with it. There are now over 500,000 acres of Canadian orchards. Mr. Johnson was for two years president of the Ontario Fruit Growers' Association.

Have you seen this Car?

THE man with $1,650 to invest in a car cannot find a more substantial proposition than the McLaughlin-Buick Model "3."

We say "substantial." What other word could describe the quality that makes a car just as comfortable, easy-riding and reliable after a few thousand miles travel as it was when new?

Model "3" at $1650 has more life in it than a good many higher priced cars. We can show you why.

In the first place, it has the McLaughlin-Buick unit power plant—proven to stand up under years of service—full 32 h.p. for very low fuel cost. Such a motor will be a smooth-running machine when many another is ready for the scrap heap.

The body has wide U-shaped doors. It rides easy on extra long springs fitted with rebound snubbers. The wheels are large (35 x 4). This car will not jolt you or the machinery. It keeps its good appearance.

Model "3" has electric lights all 'round, canopy light under cowl, and extension trouble lamp. It is equipped with Gray & Davis Electric Starter, clear vision built-in windshield, mohair top with dust hood, besides the usual accessories, tools, etc.

$1650 f.o.b. Oshawa

By all means have a good look at Model "3" —the best $1,650 worth we ever offered.

OPPOSITION FINANCIAL CRITIC DISCUSSES BUDGET PROPOSALS

He Finds Fault With the Increase of Expenditures and the Refusal to Grant Free Wheat—H. B. Ames Says U.S. is Trying to Capture Milling Industry and Disable a Competitor in the Export Trade.

OTTAWA, April 8.—In the House yesterday three speeches were contributed to the budget debate. A. K. MacLean, the Liberal member from Halifax, and the financial critic of the Opposition, replied to Mr. White, dealing with the financial operations of the Government, the tariff changes, the demand for free wheat and the high cost of living.

Mr. MacLean, in opening, criticized the Government for having increased its expenditures in the face of a falling revenue. He pointed out that in 1909 the Laurier Government had cut the estimates severely. Expenses bad then been reduced to meet the situation presented by falling of the revenue. The present Government on the other hand paid no attention to the decline in revenue, but increased year by year the current expenses. In the Militia Department for example, there was a steady increase in the expenses from year to year. For the fiscal year ending March 31, 1912, the estimates for that Department aggregated $7,580,000. The following year they advanced to $9,111,000. For the year ending March 31 last they were $10,200,000, while for the year ending March 31, 1915, they would be $10,867,000.

Mr. MacLean then took up the tariff changes. He said that Mr. White had laid down the doctrine that free agricultural implements meant free trade. If that be true, then a reduction in the duties upon these implements must mean an approach to free trade. Nevertheless it was an announcement of a small reduction in these duties that elicited the most hearty cheering from Government supporters during the delivery of the budget speech.

Mr. MacLean then took up the question of free wheat. The Liberal position on this question, he said commanded the support of the public opinion throughout the country and was endorsed by the unanimous sentiment of the west. Even the Conservative Legislature of Manitoba had asked for free wheat. It was objected that to lower the wheat duties would be to destroy the Canadian railways. If that be true then our railways only lived at the will of Washington, because Congress at any time could admit Canadian wheat free of duty. The Canadian miller was credited with opposing the removal of the wheat and flour duty. If this is true, Mr. MacLean said, the Canadian miller stood in his own light.

He was to-day running at half capacity and nothing could benefit him more than free access to the American market.

Mr. H. B. Ames (Montreal) said that Canada was now fairly prosperous, but that even greater prosperity was at hand. The falling off in the customs receipts was not important. Stocks were now low in Canada and would have to be replenished, so a marked increase would soon occur in the customs revenue.

Mr. Ames vehemently argued against free wheat. The Americans, he said, did not want our wheat, nor did they intend to ship their wheat into Canada. What they wanted was to capture the Canadian market for the United States milling industry and put a competitor out of the export flour trade. Besides that, we had invested such enormous sums in facilities that it was only fair to require Canadian products to be shipped from west to east through Canadian channels.

Mr. Turriff (Assiniboia) said the budget speech refused all relief to the farmer who needed and was demanding wider markets. It added a trifle more to the load of protection instead of lightening the load.

ROADS TO BE RE-ORGANIZED

PLAN FOR EXPENDITURE OF $30,000,000 URGED BY BOARD.

TORONTO, April 8.—The program of the Highways Commission was laid on the table of the Legislature by Hon. ~~Dr.~~ Reaume yesterday. In it appears the outline of a plan by which the entire road system of old Ontario will be completely reorganized.

The outstanding proposal of the whole is a 30-million-dollar expenditure on Ontario market and trunk roads, the same to take place in the next fifteen years, and contributed to by cities and motorists, with a reorganized department under a Minister and deputy and an unpaid advisory commission of three. The capital sum is to be raised by a bond issue, the interest and sinking fund outlays bringing the annual expenditure on permanent highways at the close of fifteen years to $2,500,000, at the rate of $1 per head of population.

The immediate proposals of the commission are:

1. Counties now under the Highway Act should be encouraged to continue road work this summer, and the regulations should be made elastic to allow other counties to begin work and thereby take advantage of the aid thereunder.

2. There should be created a sufficient organization to carry on this summer the following investigations:

(a) A motor survey of principal roads to determine their physical condition.

(b) A traffic census to determine the present road needs of the province.

(c) An investigation of main township road conditions.

(d) An investigation of the Hamilton-Toronto and Ottawa-St. Lawrence roads, obtaining plans and specifications of same.

(e) An investigation designed to outline a plan of market roads for counties not now operating under the Highway Act.

(f) A determination of suburban areas about principal centres.

The commissioners divide the provincial highways into two classes, county or market roads subdivided into suburban, interurban and rural and township roads. Suburban roads lie adjacent to the city in an area to be fixed by the province, and are to be maintained by trustee boards, comprising representatives of city and county. The contribution of cities should be 30 per cent. on construction and 33 1-3 per cent. towards maintenance. Remaining construction charges would be divided into 30 per cent. for county and 40 per cent. for province, the last including motor fees. If the cost of construction exceeds $1,000 per mile, the excess would be raised by a local improvement tax.

Interurban roads, or large traveled highways between cities, would have costs apportioned at 33 1-3 per cent. to county and remainder to province, one-half of latter coming from motor fees. In maintenance, 60 per cent. would rest on county and 40 per cent. on province, but such roads as Toronto-Hamilton road would be supported largely by cities.

Rural market roads would remain under control of county councils or of permanent commission appointed by them, construction and maintenance charges alike devolving 60 per cent. on county and 40 per cent. on province. On township roads it is suggested that Ontario spend $250,000 annually for three years, apportioning $50,000 on basis of assessment, $50,000 on basis of population and $150,000 on area on condition that every township spend $4 for every $1 by the Government, that proper drainage be installed, that roads be dragged, that statute labor, be abolished or commuted, and that a proper road organization be established. The commission wants to bring the 42,500 miles of township roads to a high standard and to fit 7,500 county road mileage to bear the heavy demands of traffic.

To meet the scheme an expenditure of thirty millions is needed, and the province and counties would advance twelve millions apiece with cities six millions, this occurring over a 15-year period.

The revenue of the province would be supplemented by increased motor taxation fixed according to the ruling of the commission on horse-power for automobiles and per ton in case of trucks.

THE GANNON'S BRIDGE MIX-UP

Reeve Shaw Broaches the Subject to Mr. Burnham.

Mr. Burnham, M.P., being asked what the latest news was respecting this bridge said to-day that Reeve Shaw, of Harvey, had been in and had broached the subject of the bridge to him, and that he was surprised that Reeve Shaw did not seem at all anxious to take the matter up in a businesslike way with the hope of getting a new bridge. Two years ago a request of the minister was made for a grant towards a new bridge here. Last year a Harvey deputation saw the minister and at the request of Mr. Burnham he left the matter open for ufrther consideration. This spring Mr. Burnham, keeping the bridge in mind, got the promise of immediate help from a minister if others interested would do something also. But strange to say, nothing further was said in the matter to either the Dominion or the Provincial Governments by Mr. Shaw, and a grant was got by him from the County Council instead. Mr. Shaw said this morning. "Oh, I guess there is nothing more for it than to go on and repair the bridge with the money we've got." Mr. Burnham told Mr. Shaw that he was surprised that when he had the chance of getting a permanent bridge at Gammon's he should so deliberately throw away his chance. Complaints about the condition of the bridge are general. Unless a new structure is biult the trade of the north country will suffer. Mr. Shaw seems determined that the two governments shall get no credit for helping to build a new bridge. All Harvey needed to do was to give a little help. Mr. Shaw is too full of politics for the public benefit, and the result has been that the County Council is to pay for it, and to have a rotten old bridge at that.

RHEUMATISM

Sciatica and Lumbago, Quickly Cured by "Kephaldol."

A druggist in Toronto said that he was asking an Old Country customer of his about KEPHALDOL TABLETS. This customer told him "I suffered from severe Rheumatism and Sciatica for twenty years, hardly ever being free from these troubles. I read about KEPHALDOL in the Glasgow papers and sent for some. Three hours after taking two tablets, the pain was almost gone, and after taking six or seven, I hadn't a bit of pain."

This druggist went in to see his doctor about his wife and asked him if he had ever heard of KEPHALDOL. The doctor said, "Yes, I understand KEPHALDOL is a reliable sedative and anodyne, relieving pain without affecting the heart or vital organs. Since KEPHALDOL has been introduced into Canada, I have prescribed it in cases of severe Headache and Neuralgia, and just recently succeeded in helping a most severe case of La Grippe with it."

Since then, this druggist has ordered KEPHALDOL and recommended it to those of his customers who wanted something to relieve pain. If you are unable to get KEPHALDOL Tablets at your druggists, send 50c. to Kephaldol Limited, 31 Latour Street, Montreal.

AN INCREASE IN RECEIPTS FOR MISSIONS

Methodist Offerings Show an Advance of $55,000.

Toronto, April 8.—Receipts of the Methodist Missionary Society up to date amount to $181,031.82, or an increase of nearly $55,000 over the amount received during the same period of any previous year. The fiscal year of the Church still lacks two months of completion, and only 30 per cent. of the total estimated income has been received, but the outlook in spite of the money stringency of the past two months is considered unusually bright.

This was one of the most important announcements made yesterday at a meeting of the mission board of the Church in the Wesley Building. The board appointed missionaries as follows: West China, Rev. K. J. Beaton, B.A., Toronto; Rev. M. P. Smith, B.A., Toronto; Dr. A. E. Best, Bella Bella, B.C. Rev. A. N. C. Pound, B.A., British Columbia and Rev. G. S. Bell, B.A., Winnipeg, were accepted for West China, and provision was made to send two mission nurses to the same field. An evangelical missionary, yet to be named, will be sent to Japan. The missionaries returning to West China this year under the board after a furlough in Canada include Rev. W. R. Albertson, Rev. J. R. Earle, and Rev. D. R. Wilfendale, while Rev. C. P. Holmes is returning to Japan.

Among other things, the board decided to make a grant of several thousand dollars to the union university in China as its share of the budget of the institution. It was also decided to waive all claims against the Chinese Government for indemnity in respect to damage suffered by missionaries during the revolution. This will be publicly proclaimed by the missionaries at the various stations in the field.

A proposal was made to establish a union school for the blind in West China, but no final action was taken in this regard. The members regarded the suggestion favorably and will give it further consideration.

At the morning session, Dr. John R. Mott addressed the board on the work of the continuation committee of the Edinburgh conference. Dr. Mott emphasized the need of co-operation among missionary societies, and told of a three-year evangelistic campaign in Japan under the auspices of the continuation committee.

GROCER KILLED

Body is Found Buried Near Stable of His Home

MIDLAND, April 8.—Robt. Hayde, a grocer of Tomahawk Point, two miles north of Honey Harbor, was murdered on or about the night of Friday, March 27. His body was found on Monday night, buried in a manure heap near the stable of his home. There was a shot wound in the back of his neck, whether inflicted by a gun or a rifle is not known, but the weapon had been fired close enough to the neck to singe the hair. Three men, who were aiding in the search for Hayde, which had been maintained since his disappearance on March 27, found the body.

Hayde was a bachelor, about fifty years of age, and lived alone. A sister resides here. On the day he disappeared he was for a short time in Midland. For some days search was made for him in the channels among the surrounding islands, as it was feared he might have dropped through a hole in the ice and been drowned. Later some people advanced the idea that he had been murdered for his money, of which he generally carried a considerable sum on his person. This fear has now been realized.

The men who found the body were standing on the manure heap discussing what further steps should be taken in the search when they noticed an unusual conformation in the pile and made their search.

ASQUITH GETS SEAT.

LONDON, April 8. — Unless some surprise should appear at the eleventh hour, Premier Asquith will today, for the ninth consecutive time, be returned, this time unopposed, to represent East Fife. This follows upon the decision of the Unionist executive at Cupar yesterday, when they announced that, in deference to the wishes of delegates, Col. Sprot agreed not to contest the seat. It would be entirely unfair to blame the Unionist headquarters in London, or, indeed, the local executive, for hesitating to extend the Premier the courtesy of an uncontested election. Col. Sprot seems to have been almost alone among the executive in failing to appreciate the wisdom of the step taken by the Premier in going to the War Office.

In the series Crowley's team had a margin of 504 pins.

TROUT TO HAVE PERMANENT JOB WITH THE LEAFS

A Handy Man to Have Around, Manager Kelley Thinks

Arkandelphia, April 8.—Catcher Trout will become a permanent member of the Toronto Ball Club. At least this is the present intention of Manager Kelley, who figures that the team can afford to carry three catchers during the season. In the vent of an accident that might disable Kelly or Snell, Trout would thus always be available. He is an extremely valuable man to have around, and as stated previously, requires only weight to make him as good an average catcher as the Class AA clubs boast. He catches well, hits at a nice clip, is fast on the bases, and appears to have immensely improved since joining the Toronto club a year ago. Kelley wants him, and unless over-ruled by the people higher up will have him along all season.

BASEBALL

The following is the roster of the Hamilton club up-to-date, including both Red Fisher and Gilhooley, who are "hold-outs."

DR. F. L. ROBINSON ADDS TWO HANDSOME MARES TO STABLES

Dr. Robinson, the well known local veterinary surgeon, and proprietor of Robinson's Livery, has purchased two handsome mares from Miss Wilks, owner of the famous Cruickston Park stables, near Galt. Both the animals are standard bred, one is a 4-year-old bay, and the other a 3-year-old beautiful blue roan. Dr. Robinson, when exhibiting the pair to a Review man this morning, stated that his intention was to put them in training, and it would not be improbable to see them on the track this coming fall. The sire of the blue roan was the celebrated Jim Todd, whose mark was 2.09 1-4.

Dr. Robinson is now in his new office, immediately east of the corner of Aylmer and Charlotte Streets.

FINDING IN RATES CASE

SUBSTANTIAL REDUCTIONS ARE ORDERED BY THE RAILWAY BOARD

TERRITORY WEST OF THE GREAT LAKES DIVIDED INTO THREE SECTIONS

OTTAWA, April 8.—The judgment of the Board of Railway Commissioners in what is known as the Western Rate Case, which has occupied the attention of the Board in various forms since 1904, was issued yesterday afternoon.

The judgment covers some 200 pages and makes many substantial cuts. It deal with each contention in order, and refers frequently to the reports of the Board's chief traffic officer, and attaches his examples of reductions ordered.

After dealing with various arguments of counsel, the judgment proceeds to outline a comprehensive basis to tolls and a complete rate structure for all railways in western Canada subject to its jurisdiction.

The territory west of the great lakes is divided into three sections. The first is called the prairie section, extending from the great lakes to the mountains, the second the Pacific section, including mainland rail lines in British Columbia; and the third the B. C. lake section, including the inland navigable waters in that province.

A standard scale of maximum freight rates is fixed for each section. The lowest scale in the west, now known as the Manitoba standard has been amplified to show rates up to two thousand and one hundred miles, and will apply throughout the entire prairie section and on the the British Columbia lakes, abolishing the higher scale now charged in Saskatchewan and Alberta. What will be known as the Pacific scale is on a somewhat higher basis and will govern in Pacific territory. These changes result in substantial reductions from the present standard maximum scales in Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia.

Local grain and flour rates are substantially reduced by two methods, first by a direct reduction ranging from 20 to 30 per cent., and secondly by making the terminal Fort William rates the maximum that may be charged between intermediate stations. For example, Broadview to Winnipeg now twenty becomes fifteen cents, through the application of the Fort William rate as maximum. The west-bound rates on flour and other grain products are similarly reduced.

The United Farmers of Alberta also win out in their application for reduced rates on these products to British Columbia stations.

Coal rates from Lethbridge and other Alberta mines are substantially cut; for example, from Lethbridge to Calgary from $1.80 per ton to $1.45, to Edmonton from $2.85 to $2.20, Swift Current $2.40 to $1.90, Regina $5.10 to $2.65, Virden $4.10 to $3.40, Saskatoon $3.95 to $3.50 per ton. From the Souris mines reductions made by the board in the Alameda case are confirmed and others made.

Carload sugar rates from Raymond, Alta., to prairie points also receive substantial cuts.

The special mileage rates on butter, cheese and eggs, dressed meats and dressed poultry, between all prairie points come in for reductions.

The special mileage tariffs on vegetables in Manitoba are shown to be reasonable; the rates, however, in Saskatchewan and Alberta, which are on a somewhat higher scale, are reduced to the Manitoba basis.

The special rates on fruits and vegetables from British Columbia, which have been revised and reduced since the complaint against them was launched by the United Farmers of Alberta, are left untouched.

The rates on cement from Winnipeg are shown to be very little from those of Ontario, and are not reduced, but the higher rates from cement plants in Alberta and Saskatchewan are reduced to the Winnipeg scale.

No reduction is made in live stock rates, which are shown to be reasonable in view of the favorable carload minimum weights and the volume of traffic.

The rates on fence posts, firewood, brick, stone, gravel and sand are found to be generally lower than those applying in Ontario, but the higher scales prevailing in Alberta and Saskatchewan are reduced to the lower Manitoba levels.

Rates on ores, concentrates and smelter products in and from British Columbia are found to constitute a large percentage of the traffic of that province, and are found remunerative only in the sense of contributing to the general prosperity.

The rate on pig iron from Port Arthur and Fort William to Winnipeg is reduced from twenty cents per hundred pounds to three dollars per gross ton, or 13.4 cents per 100 pounds.

The board has considered the question of local passenger rates in British Columbia very carefully. It finds that the local passenger business is at present being conducted at a loss and will not move at present.

A WOMAN'S LAMENT

By "Ulster."

Oh! women dear, please sit down here,
While I my story tell;
Of a noble plan to foil a man,
—Oh, the story's sad you'll hear!!

But it was great to Head of State
To lay my story bare,
A dexterous plan to squelch a man,
For lack of judgment rare.

Och, Doherty, 'tis he I see,
—All afternoon and late.
"It 'tis not me but Foy ye see!"
Says Doherty the great.

From Doherty to Foy I sped
To sing my fearsome lay;
Foy is the man who may and can,
The man who has the say.

He listened to my story sad,
Like the dearest, sweetest dad.
He thanked me for the pains I took,
Then his head he gently shook,
But all he said to what I read
Was "Due Consideration."

Oh, listen here, I feel so queer!
For 'tis useless botheration,
To moil and toil and angrily boil
For man's mere toleration.

I say with many emotions,
That I should judge men will now say "Fudge."
To all our woman's notions.

May Make Armories "Dry."

OTTAWA, April 8.—To further the cause of temperance amongst the rank and file of the militia, the Hon. Col. Hughes said yesterday that he was seriously thinking of issuing an order forbidding the sale or use of intoxicating liquor in the drill halls throughout the Dominion.

"There are several drill halls in which the officers do not allow liquor to be used or sold, but as I have said, we are seriously thinking of closing it out of all the drill halls," said the Minister.

A drill hall order would banish liquor from the officers' and sergeants' mess in a number of places.

The steel rod from an old umbrella or parasol will make an excellent plant support next summer, and if painted green, will look well. The ribs, too, may be brought into use for a similar service.

In making fruit salad it is well to sprinkle the fruit, unless it is grape fruit or orange, with a little lemon juice; then it will not become dark colored.

WOMAN'S WORK

What it Should Be.

The various agencies of society, the home, the school, the shop and playground, are constantly seeking to establish systems of ideas. Hence it follows that education is not a mere natural process, not a process of acquiring experience in response to the demands of this or that natural need, but that it is a regulated process, controlled with the view of finally leading the child to acquire certain experiences, to organize certain systems of means for the attainment of such ends.

At different periods in history, the kinds of experience thought necessary and valuable for the child to acquire have varied and still vary, and must continue to do so according to the nature of the civilization into which the child is born and to which his education must adjust him.

In determining the nature of the experiences useful to acquire, we must take into account not only the civilization to which the child is to be adjusted, but we must also take note of the nature of the services which the given society requires of its adult members.

These services vary in character, and there can be no one kind of education which equally fits the individual to perform efficiently in every service. The aim of all education is, or rather should be, to correlate the child with the civilization of his time; to lead him to acquire those experiences which will in after life enable him to perform ably and rightly his duties as a worker, as a citizen, and as a member of an ethical and spiritual community.

Advance by Going Ahead.

The nations of the world have advanced from savagery to civilization by walking in the light that came from in front. Yesterday's candle is burned out; it's creeds are dead; to-day's lamp is dimming, its faith wavering; to-morrow's is the light that gleams, it's the promise that leads on. So we turn to it, face ahead. It is the new order, one from which we have much to gain, little to lose, less to fear.

MANY CHANGES TO BE SEEN ON GEORGE STREET ACCORDING TO RUMOR

Montreal Man Said to Be Connected With Property Deals—Mr. W. Oke May Give up Retail Business—Mr. J. W. Butcher Moving

Whether it be the weather or just the ever prevailing spirit in the spring time of "moving" is not known, but at any rate Dame Rumor has set this city into great confusion. The centrally-located stores have been occupied by the same parties for years, but lately it has been generally recognized that a change was due. Just how much property or how many people are connected with this change cannot as yet be learned, but it is certain that some surprises are in store.

About two weeks ago there was a story about the city to the effect that M. Pappas had purchased the stores occupied by P. Connal and Son and the Ten Cent Store. W. G. Ferguson, owner of one, and agent for the parties owning the other, informed the Review that the story was erroneous and nothing to it at all.

Mr. Oke to Move?

To-day the rumor that W. Oke, the local fruit merchant is going into wholesale business exclusively, with headquarters at his present wholesale department on Bethune Street is afloat. It is also stated that N. Douros, proprietor of the Boston Cafe, is to purchase Oke's retail business and will continue the same. Mr. Oke when interviewed by a Review man would not commit himself, although he did not deny it. The building is owned by the Toronto Savings and Loan Co.

J. W. Butcher of the Ten Cent Store informs the Review that he had been given notice by his landlord to quit the premises in the course of two months, and he is at present occupied in packing up. He has not as yet found another suitable place of business, but expects to at a later date. His landlord, W. G. Ferguson, stated that the leaving of the Ten Cent Store meant only that the building was in a poor condition and it is to be thoroughly renovated. Another authority says M. Pappas is trying hard to get possession of the place, and can, if he will accept Mr. Ferguson's agreement. The difference is that Pappas wants a thirty-year lease. Mr. Pappas is also very keen on getting Connal's store, it is said, and if he does, this will leave him with two big stores side by side, and a fellow Greek right beside him.

The question has arisen as to what Mr. Pappas is going to do with these two stores. That is hard to answer. The lease between the city and the Chamberlain Estate on the property now occupied by the Royal Theatre is about up, and the question is going to arbitration. There is a chance if the city buys the property that the Royal Theatre will have to leave the premises, and if such a thing takes place then Mr. Pappas will have the Ferguson property to fit up as another theatre.

Montrealer Here.

The presence in the city yesterday of a man from Montreal who owns a great deal of property occupied by Greeks in that city leads to the belife that be is financially at the back of the local Greeks in their real estate deals. In other words, outside capital is being worked into this city and has already purchased several stores. This gentleman looked over a great deal of property yesterday and is to return next week.

Other people besides Greeks have been busily engaged in making preparations for moving, however. The store now occupied by C. Banks under the market clock will be vacant when the building in front of the Curling Rink is completed, as the sporting goods store is to be located there, as is also the drug business at present carried on at the corner of Bethune and King Street by F. C. Weber. Gossip among the barbers says that Bruce Patterson is endeavoring to locate a barber shop in the vacancy made by the moving of Bank's store.

None of the men mentioned in these changes are willing to make any statement, but a few weeks will no doubt bring about a little more definite information.

JUDGMENTS IN COUNTY COURT

Mrs. Peirer Gets Judgment for $160 Against Sarazen.

ONE ACTION DISMISSED.

Judgment for $166 in favor of plaintiff, Mrs. Peirer against Evangelist Sarazen was delivered by Judge Huycke this morning at County Court.

The plaintiff claimed $300 damages arising out of a business transaction some time ago. The case was heard before Judge Huycke and judgment reserved.

Mr. G. N. Gordon acted for the plaintiff and Mr. D. W. Dumble, K.C., for the defendant. The counter claim of the defendant was dismissed.

At the County Court this morning, Judge Huycke dismissed the action brought by Mrs. Harry Carter of Havelock, against Harry Bowen of Havelock, for unlawful retention of a horse and outfit.

Mrs. Carter claimed that Bowen had unlawfully retained possession, but His Honor stated that he found the goods belonged to the business.

Mr. Dan O'Connel represented the defendant and Mr. G. N. Gordon acted for the plaintiff.

Peck, Kerr and McElderry, the solicitors for the town, have consequently been instructed to file the appeal. The case will now come up for a hearing before the Court of Appeal.

WERE MARRIED FIFTY YEARS AGO IN PETERBORO

Mr. and Mrs. F. Dawson, Lindsay, Celebrate Golden Wedding

Lindsay Warder.

Silver weddings are not at all common, but golden weddings are somewhat rare. However, The Warder joins with the many town and country friends of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Dawson, Bond Street, in congratulating them on the occasion of their golden wedding, which was commemorated in fitting manner by members and relatives of the family.

Frederick Dawson and Harriet Parker were married on April 7, 1864, in Peterboro, the officiating clergyman being the Rev. John Carroll. They were both at the time of their marriage residents of the Township of South Monaghan, but after their marriage they resided on a farm in the Township of Otonabee for upwards of five years. Later on they moved to Omemee and to Ops Township, thence to Lindsay in the year 1889.

The gold watches were presented to the bride and groom by their two youngest grandchildren, Dorothy and Horace Leigh. The other grandchild, Dawson M. Leigh, was unable to be present. Mrs. Coulter, of Millbrook, was bridesmaid, and in the absence of the original groomsman, Nichol Dawson, of Bailieboro, because of his wife's illness, Mr. Ed. Dawson filled that position.

Among the visitors present were: Mrs. J. Coulter, of Millbrook; Mr. Ed. Dawson and wife, and Clarence F. Dawson, of South Monaghan; R. E. Rutherford, of Peterboro; Robt. Waterman and wife, of Fraserville; Mrs. W. A. Beebe, of Port Hope.

Messages of congratulations were received from the groom's sisters, Mrs. John and Mrs. Chester Dixon, and from his brother, Alfred, and nephew Dr. T. B. Dawson, all of Maple Creek, Sask.; the bride's sisters, Mrs. Sadler, of Toronto, and Mrs. J. Sanderson, of Kansas; Richard Parker, of Bailieboro, and also from many neighbors and relatives.

EXPOSURE ALL NIGHT COST LIFE

Man Who Fell From Bridge Dies in Hospital.

Belleville, April 9.—After lingering for weeks, Charles Winfield Roberts, who fell from a bridge in Trenton last month and lay unconscious on the ice all night and suffered frost bites and exposures, passed away in Belleville Hospital. Everything possible was done to alleviate his sufferings but without avail. He was a farmer by occupation, nearly 37 years of age, and was born in Murray township.

Relatives are expected from Trenton to take charge of the remains.

FOREIGN HUNTERS TO PAY $50 LICENSE

Toronto, April 9.—"Deer and dog licenses have been the cause of most dissatisfaction in the older parts of the country," declared E. A. Dunlop, M.P.P. before the Fish and Game Committee at the Parliament Buildings.

Several members were opposed to the licensing of settlers.

"In the open season I am constantly hearing of the killing of some deer," said Dr. Reaume, chairman. "We have special men on the go all the time, and you would be surprised to find out the information we get. The game laws are violated, the same as the liquor law where there are 'blind pigs.'

"The professional trapper must pay a license, but how are we going to distinguish between him and the settler, who, perhaps, during the winter months, makes a systematic business of trapping?" asked Mr. Pratt.

"Is it agreed that we should raise the license to foreigners for trapping up to $50?" asked Dr. Reaume.

Those present assented, and it was also decided to recommend that fur dealers be licensed.

In reply to a suggestion that Americans should be taxed $50 instead of $25 when coming over to shoot feathered game, Dr. Reaume deprecated any alteration during the present year.

It was stated by Mr. Black that more deer were killed by wolves than by legitimate hunters. The bounty, he thought, should be increased from $15 to $25.

Dr. Vrooman complained of fish poachers, and Dr. Reaume said endeavors had been made to cope with the evil all over the province, but people would break the law.

MR. B. HUDSON IS REMOVING

Has Been in Business for Many Years on Brock Street.

The numerous changes in the business section of the city includes the removal of Mr. B. Hudson, artist and taxidermist, from premises on Brock Street.

Mr. Hudson is removing his business to his own premises on Stewart Street. The store on Brock Street has been occupied by him for so many years that many citizens can remember passing his store while on their way to school.

TWO AVIATORS ARE MURDERED

Moors Seized and Hacked Them To Death.

Rabat, Morrocco, April 9.—Capt. Herve, a French military aviator, and a Lieutenant he was carrying as a passenger, were hacked to death yesterday by insurgent Moors, after they had escaped uninjured from an aeroplane accident in the desert.

The two officers were engaged in a reconnoitering flight near Zenmour, when their motor became disabled while they were high up in the air.

The captain, however, piloted the machine in a gliding flight to earth.

Both alighted safely, and were endeavoring to repair the defective motor, when a band of Moors surrounded and seized them, and after torturing them cut them up with swords and spears.

The Moors also destroyed the aeroplane.

BOYS WERE WARNED.

The case against several young boys of East City for taking sap from Burnham's bush in Otonabee was dismissed yesterday afternoon by Magistrate Edmison. The lads took one pail and His Worship was of the opinion that its value would not be sufficient to warrant a conviction. The boys were, however, given a short talk on good behaviour after which they promised faithfully to keep on the straight and narrow path.

KILLED BY SPECIAL PASSENGER TRAIN

Wyoming, Oat., Apl. 9.—Miss Janet Goodhand was killed at the G. T.R. crossing here about seven o'clock last night, by a special passenger train. Miss Goodhand was very deaf and had also defective eyesight. She was about sixty years of age. A married sister resides here with whom she stayed from time to time. Other relatives live in Watford.

RETIRING ORGANIST WAS REMEMBERED

Purse of Gold for Miss Annie Deyell.

Miss Annie Deyell was very much surprised and delighted recently to receive from the members of Bethel Methodist Church, Otonabee, an address expressing their appreciation of her services as organist during the past few years, accompanied by the gift of ten dollars in gold.

Althought Miss Deyell as a member of that church felt it only a pleasant duty to help in the church services, it was quite gratifying to know that her services had been appreciated.

EMPLOY LOCAL LABOR WHEN IT IS PRACTICABLE

Clause to this Effect Will Be Included in Agreements With Contracts—Mayor Buller Says Local Labor Should Receive Preference.

Objections are being taken to the bringing to Peterboro of a number of men to work in connection with the street paving operations. It is felt that local labor should be employed.

Mayor Buller said this morning that he had not heard that men had been brought here, but he was firmly of the opinion that local labor should be employed, and he said that provision for this would be made in all future agreements. He, however, did not think that the present contractors would do anything unreasonable.

City Engineer Parsons said that such a clause was not in the present agreement with Messrs. Foley and Gleason, but that one would be inserted in the next agreement, providing for the employment of local labor when practicable. Mr. Parsons pointed out that there was certain work in which the men carried by the contractors were skilled, and to employ men who were inexperienced would put the contractors at a disadvantage and a loss. There were arguments on both sides.

Steel Rails Arrive.

Two car loads of steel for the Radial Company arrived in the city and the other materials for the special work, it is hoped, will follow in the near future.

The Company is desirous of providing a turnout on the south line so as to facilitate the handling of traffic on circus day.

"We are going to rush the paving work this summer," Mayor Buller said. "We called a special meeting to accommodate the Railway Company, so that they could order their material and we expect them to do their part."

PROTESTANT CHURCHES TO UNITE TO-MORROW

To-morrow being Good Friday, a service of unusual interest will be held in our city. The Ministerial Association have arranged for a union service of one hour to be held at three o'clock in Murray Street Baptist Church.

Two brief addresses will be delivered, the subject being "The Crucifixion of Christ."

The singing will be led by a choir composed of members of the city choirs of different churches, all of whom are asked to assist.

The speakers will be Rev. R. G. Peever, and Rev. H. J. Keith. The service will be conducted by Rev. F. J. Sawers, rector of St. Luke's Church, and president fo the Ministerial Association, assisted by the other city ministers.

Surely nothing could be more appropriate than that this one hour from three to four o'clock should be set apart by all Christian people of our city for such a solemn service on the day of the tragedy of Calvary and the completion of the work of our Redeemer.

It is expected that the church will be completely filled. All members of choirs are asked to enter by the Sunday School door.

ORILLIA MAYOR SEES PROGRESS IN THIS CITY

Chief Magistrate of Orillia is Here on Business.

"Peterboro is coming fast," said Mayor W. Crawford Goffat, of Orillia, at noon to-day to a Review reporter. Mayor Goffatt, who is the manager of the International Brick and Tile Company, Orillia, one of the leading brick concerns in Canada, spoke most favorably of this city.

"I believe you are here in connection with inspecting a local factory with a view of having one locate in Orillia," remarked the reporter.

"Well, this is news to me, answered Mayor Goffatt. "As yet," he continued, "I have not had the pleasure of viewing this particular place, but this trip is merely for private business. Of course, I am always on the look out for anything that will benefit Orillia."

Mayor Goffatt also gave the reporter some very interesting facts concerning the new $80,000 power house under construction, which will give the municipality some 5,600 horsepower.

The power house is being built just below the present site and will be a most important adjunct to Orillia.

ELECTIONS IN JUNE.

London, April 9.—The Standard asserts that the Government has definitely decided to dissolve Parliament in June.

SORRY TO PART.

Montreal, April 9. — Outgoing Mayor Lavallee, at his leave-taking of the employees at the City Hall yesterday, broke down and wept openly.

CONTRACTS AWARDED FOR CEMENT AND SEWER PIPE

Board of Works Against Practise of Tacking Cards On Poles

At the Board of Works meeting last night, the City Engineer asked that the city pay for the telephone at his house. He said the telephone was used mostly for city business.

The Board decided that the city should pay.

Plan of Lots.

It was decided that the Baker property on Patterson Street, where Mr. Baker intends to erect twenty-five houses, should be inspected before approval is given to the plan. Owners of adjacent property will be notified of the meeting at the property Friday afternoon at two o'clock.

The City Engineer reported on the application for a crossing, from Mrs. Parker, Park Street, and it was decided that the work at this point should be done.

Water, Water Everywhere.

Mr. Edgar, Water Street, North, complained of pools of water on the road. Drainage is needed at this point, and the Engineer will look into the matter.

Leonard & Son, London, sent a photograph of a boiler, but the Board was in no hurry to act. The boiler will not be needed till next winter.

Street Scrapings.

Street scrapings will be provided the Baseball Club for use on Riverside Park, although Ald. McIntyre's scheme to have the "gully" on the north side of the street at the old McAllister mill, must not be neglected.

Must Remove Material.

Lumber and wood on Smith Street, the property of a coal and wood merchant, it was ordered, must be removed.

Tack No Bills.

The Telephone and Power Companies will be asked to prohibit cards, etc., being tacked on the poles. Action such as this has become urgent because the poles have been brought into the sidewalk, as a result of the curbs being extended.

Ashes in Demand.

When the next contracts for garbage removal are awarded, provision will be made for ashes being carted as directed by the Council. At the present time, the garbage collectors are supposed to take the ashes to the most convenient place and the contractors, it appears, decide where the most convenient places are.

"We'll thresh it out here, to-morrow night," said Ald. Duncan.

Ald. McIntyre drew attention to the condition of the board walks over the culverts on Hunter Street, east.

Cement Tenders.

Tenders were received for cement as follows:

Peterboro Hardware Co. — Per barrel, $1.43, sacks extra; storage room, 2 cents per barrel.

Taylor and Son — Per barrel, $1.45; sacks, 10 cents, no storage price.

Morgan Hardware Co.—Per barrel, $1.49; storage, 4 cents per barrel.

The contract was awarded to the Peterboro Hardware on motion of Ald. Johnston and McIntyre. The cement is consideraly cheaper than last year. Taylor and Son were awarded the contract for sewer pipe. The Toronto Pottery Co. tender was higher.

INTERESTING LETTER FROM DR. McBURNEY

Dr. McBurney, a former resident of Peterboro, and now residing in Nestor, Cal., writes the following interesting letter to a friend in this city:

Nestor, Cal., March 4, 1914. — I have often thought of writing you a few lines. It is nearly six years since we came to California, and many changes have taken place during that time. We are still in the land of the living and enjoying good health. We have a small ranch with all kinds of fruit. It is fine to have fresh fruit at any time. There is always some kind of fresh fruit to be had. There is a great abundance of sunshine and fine weather here. There is really only two seasons in the year—spring and summer. The winters are just like your fine spring weather. This winter there has been no frost and the coldest was 38 on a few mornings. At this writing it is a beautiful sight to see many kinds of fruit trees in bloom. The orange and lemon trees are especially fine with their dark green foliage, golden fruit and blossoms. Of course you know we are located not far from the Mexican line—only about four miles from Tia Juana, which is pronounced Tuah Wanna, "reduced" to English it is plain "Aunt Jane." Many beautiful names in Indian, Spanish and Mexican when translated to English are very plain, for instance, the sublimely beautiful Yosemite Valley in English means "Grizzly Bear Valley"; not very poetical is it? Mexico is still on the war path, and no doubt will be for a long time. A battle took place at Tia Juana a short time before we came here, and it is reported that 180 men were killed. The battle could be seen from some of the bills on this side of the line.

San Diego and vicinity is improving right along, and no doubt the expositions next year at this place and San Francisco will draw great crowds from the East.

The Panama Canal will be a great asset in the building up of this state, and no doubt real estate will greatly advance in price. San Diego will be the first port of call in California. But Los Angeles "the Chicago of the West," says San Diego isn't in it. Los Angeles is a great and powerful city of about a half million inhabitants, and San Diego is a town of eighty thousand. Both are growing fast. Building improvements in San Diego during the past two years amounted to seventeen million dollars. Los Angeles in 1913 paid over thirty-one million dollars for new buildings. This year they say it will be forty millions.

We recently had a pleasant visit from Mr. and Mrs. Perry Clark and daughter, of Paxton. Mrs. Clark and daughter have been spending the winter in San Diego. Many thanks for the copies of your good Peterborough Review. I would not, I am sure, recognize the city now, my old home town, it is eighteen years since I visited you there.

Yours very sincerely,
(Dr.) E. McBURNEY.

RABID DOG BITES SEVERAL PEOPLE

Reign of Terror Until Animal Was Shot.

Guelph, April 9. — A mad dog created considerable excitement in that part of the city known as Brooklyn to-day. It was a large collie dog and had been acting strangely for several hours, but nobody bad any idea it was mad until it attacked Miss Caughan on Bay Street, as she was going up town. The beast bit her quite severely in the left forearm, and was only warded off the second time with difficulty. It was frothing at the mouth in a manner which left no doubt as to its being rabid.

After leaving Bay Street it attacked and bit Mrs. Reid and tore on up to the Agricultural College, where two students were also attacked. It was finally shot on Force Avenue by Constable McElroy and the body taken to the police station, where the head was severed and shipped to the health officer at Toronto for examination.

Dr. H. O. Howitt, medical health officer, intends to take every possible precaution and is insisting that the by-law regarding the tying up of dogs be strictly enforced all over the city.

PREMIER AND MRS. BORDEN LEAVE ON HOLIDAY TRIP

Ottawa, April 9.—Premier Borden and Mrs. Borden left yesterday for a ten days' holiday trip to New York and Atlantic City. The Premier, who is again in need of rest after the work and worry of the past three months, will endeavor to get in some golf, and will temporarily shake the cares of State from his shoulders. During his absence Hon. George E. Foster will be acting Premier.

Mr. Borden expects to return to the capital on April 20.

LIVERY SERVICE.

Garnet Innes, 297 Simcoe Street, has purchased two hacks, a team of horses and a quantity of harness from the Jones' Livery, to provide a livery service. He may also purchase an auto.

SUBSCRIPTIONS TOWARDS HELP FOR THE SEALERS' WIDOWS

Subscriptions to the Newfoundland Sealers' Widows' Relief Fund will be received at the Bank of Nova Scotia and forwarded to Newfoundland.

RADIAL SURVEY IS NEARING OWEN SOUND

Owen Sound, April 9.—In a little over a week the surveyors for the Hydro-Radial Railway line should be in Owen Sound. They have been working steadily up, and since Tuesday have made their headquarters at Bognor. It is probable that the line from Bognor to Owen Sound will follow rather closely the old survey of the Manitoulin and North Shore Railway.

ANNIVERSARY AT THE TEMPLE

Celebration of Five Days Will Be Commenced To-night

To-night will see the inauguration of a five days' anniversary celebration at the Salvation Army Temple, and the speakers will include Judge Huycke, Mayor Buller, and Magistrate Dumble.

To-morrow afternoon, at three o'clock, there will be a service for children, when 120 views of the Holy Land and the Life of Christ will be shown. These pictures will be repeated at night for adults.

To-morrow afternoon at five o'clock, the anniversary banquet will be held.

The celebration will be continued on Saturday, Sunday and Monday. Staff Captain McAmmond and Mrs. McAmmond, former officers of the local corps, will arrive Saturday night.

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, APRIL 9, 1914.

THE POWER OF PARTY.

THE QUESTION of Home Rule in the British Parliament has been the one great problem in Britain for some time. The Asquith Government is by no means weak; it has carried a number of far-reaching reforms, radical though they be, and it has undertaken, in a fearless and business-like manner, a settlement of the Irish question, which, even the statesmanship of Gladstone, could not accomplish. Yet, in spite of its sufficient working majority, in spite of the coherence of its following, it has, up to the present time, failed to carry the Home Rule measure, and in the attempt has brought the United Kingdom to the verge of civil strife. The strength of the Asquith majority, its helplessness to enforce its policy, the action of the army officers in resigning and the organization of the Ulster opposition furnishes some of the most interesting if not unique, details on the power of an administration.

People as a rule regard a party in power with a good working majority as able to carry almost any measure which, in its wisdom, it deems in the interest of the country. Gladstone, having a good majority in the House appealed to the electorate and was defeated. But times have changed since then; the House of Lords has been shorn of the power which left Gladstone little other course than that of an election. Home Home and Irish obstructionist methods have been so long distressing British politics that the people's gorge rises at it and they long for a final settlement. It is true the Asquith administration is committed to the Nationalist party's demands and that without them they might be unable to carry on the government. But in spite of the alliance with the Nationalists and the strength gained from constitutional changes, the government finds itself helplessly facing an apparently effectual barrier.

It is not our purpose to declare an opinion on the Home Rule question. The point is, that even a working majority relieved of check from an Upper Chamber, must have strong support outside its constitutional limits to be considered capable of enforcing its will. Whether a general election on the Home Rule issue would return the Asquith party is doubtful; possibly it would go back to power with added strength. In any case a general election is always a more or less uncertain quantity. The important fact is that the weakness of the Asquith Government in the present situation is the strength of the British constitutional system, for time and again, has a party been in power with a working majority that has lost office on an appeal to the people, simply because it lacked the necessary support which is beyond the shadow of the Houses of Parliament. This support secures the exercise of the will of the majority in the face of violent opposition; it establishes the rights of minorities much better than if written and defined by law; it throws one party down and gives victory to another according to the fortunes of various policies. You may call this intangible arbiter of cabinets and parties, public opinion, but whatever name is given to it, the fate of Asquith and Home Rule in the present crisis, rests not with his majority in the House of Commons so much as in the general support of the people.

EGGS FROM CHINA.

A SIDE LIGHT on the Oriental question was provided when the C.P.R. steamship Empress of Asia arrived in Vancouver early in March with a consignment of 12,000 cases of eggs; 6,000 consigned to San Francisco and 6,000 to Vancouver. It is stated that these eggs could be sold at a profit in the Vancouver market for twenty cents per dozen, the original price having been ten cents per dozen. The removal of the import duty on eggs entering the United States is causing importers of that country, and also of Canada to investigate the Chinese egg market. Chinese eggs are smaller than eggs from other countries, but the price is so low that the cold storage packers are interested. The price in Hong Kong is $5.88 to $7.84 per thousand. The eggs are received from the interior and packed in wicker baskets for export. The eggs are marketed, usually unsorted, through Chinese middlemen or the Chinese representatives of foreign or Chinese egg products manufacturers. for egg shippers. There are in China about twenty egg product factories, of which ten are under foreign control, the remainder being under Chinese management. They turn out egg albumen, egg yoke, and whole egg powder. The women in these factories who break the eggs. receive from five to seven and a half cents per day. The few other Chinese employees receive usually in the neighborhood of five or six dollars per month. In 1912, the export from China of fresh and preserved eggs reached 24,308,769 dozen, while the export of egg albumen and yoke reached 166,899 cwt., the value of the former being $1,194,511 and of the latter $1,418,973. About sixty per cent of the Chinese output of albumen and yoke is sent to Germany, while $382,515 worth went to the United States in 1913. These facts have been supplied to the Weekly Report of the Department of Trade and Commerce of Canada by United States consuls at Hong Kong and Shanghai. The important facts to be considered are first the growth of the Chinese exportation of eggs and egg products; secondly, the cheapness of these products and the investments of foreign capitalists in China. The influence of products produced with labour at five cents a day on the markets of the world, or on the prices of the products of other countries and on labour, can only be surmised, but surmised as it is, the effect will be to lower the price of articles and the price of labour, unless some effectual barrier is raised against the competition of Chinese products and Chinese labour in the markets of countries like Canada.

WHEN POLITICS IS MERELY A GAME.

THE WILES and absurdities indulged in by the Liberals since being relegated to Opposition gives a good insight into the "game" they are playing. "Game" is a very proper analogy, for, as in most card games, it is periodically necessary to shuffle the pack. This interesting operation is frequently being performed by the Liberal leaders. There is a constant shuffling of their pack of "policies." Some interesting metamorphoses have been effected since that fateful day, September 21st, 1911. Little effect has been produced, however, and they have generally been observed with cynical indifference. Seven distinct shuffles were made upon the Naval Aid question. Then the Reciprocity card was dropped from the pack and the joker, "Free Food," substituted. Of late have been added "Natural Resources" and "Free Agricultural Implements." And so the shuffling goes on. Incidents such as these, when viewed in the light of the conduct of that same party upon these questions when in power serve to show upon what farcical lines the present Opposition is run. Liberalism is to-day at the mercy of a coterie of political partisans, who invent policies whenever it suits their fancy, quite indifferent to the interest of the people they are supposed to represent.

THE NATIONAL DEBT.

DISHONEST BY calculated design, or unable to be thuthful even by mistake, the Liberal press is telling the country that the Borden administration is increasing the national debt.

The fact of the matter is, that the present Minister of Finance is being compelled to borrow money to save the unsound ventures of the Laurier administration. He is compelled to borrow money because of the legacies left him by virtue of the aeroplane finance of his predecessor. Yet, in spite of the obstacles, which the bungling incapacity of the late government left in his path, and in the face of a monetary depression that is world-wide, the Honourable Mr. White is not increasing the nation's debt.

The national debt of Canada will be smaller on aMrch 31, 1914, than it was on October 11, 1911, when the Borden administration took office.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

ONE OF the largest and perhaps the most important women's organization in the world the W.C.T.U., has lost one of its most prominent members in the death at Portland, Maine, of Mrs. Lillian M. N. Stevens. She was president of that organization in the United States and became known as a speaker and worker for temperance in the campaign of 1884, when the prohibitory amendment was placed in the Constitution of the State of Maine. Although many have very diverse opinions on the subjects in which Mrs. Stevens was interested, all agree that she accomplished a great work for her sex and particularly for the W.C.T.U.

A Year of Progress.

Brantford Courier.

When Hon. Mr. White brings down his budget speech next week he will show a record fiscal year with a total of nearly $1,200,000,000. This is an advance of about $150,000,000, and clearly demonstrates Canadian prosperity.

Two From Montreal.

Montreal Herald-Telegraph.

There is truth as well as humor in the epigram of the President of the Argentine, that the Monroe Doctrine might as well be called the "gutta percha message."

Major Stephens added the German language to his campaign repertoire last night. He still has Italian in reserve.

Bar Association Organized.

Montreal Mail.

With the organisation of a Canadian Bar Association. the societies of this country receive a valuable addition. The growth and prosperity of the American Bar Association, which held its last annual meeting in Montreal, shows what can be done by such a body. The activities of an association of this kind often result in valuable addition to contemporary public knowledge.

Champ Clark's Fireworks.

Hamilton Herald.

Speaker Champ Clark's recent oratorical display in congress, in which he lambasted Great Britain in a manner which must have satisfied the bitterest anglophobe, indicates the motive for his famous annexation suggestion of three years ago. It was not that he loved Canada much, but that he hated Britain more.

A Bituminous Billionaire.

Toronto Star.

Greene County in Western Pennsylvania has eighteen townships. Their total coal acreage is calculated at 340,000 acres. In seventeen of these townships Josiah V. Thompson, of Uniontown, Pa., owns 120,000 acres, probably the largest holdings of coal by a single individual in the world, unless the Czar of all the Russias surpass this ownership. All this coal is virgin coal, for Thompson, the coal king, does not personally attempt the development of these huge areas. Now the value per acre averages at $200, so that the value of the property is $24,000,000. But the marketed value of coal is $10,000 per acre; and so the value of the Thompsonion holdings, if ready for sale, would be $1,200,000,000. No wonder Old King Cole was a Merry Old Soul.

Wants Church and State Separate.

St. Thomas Times.

Since Rev. C. O. Johnston, pastor of the First Methodist Church in Hamilton, introduced politics into a recent sermon on Sunday, and eulogised the leader of the Liberal Opposition in Ontario, announcing his intention of voting for him and his party at the next election, the Hamilton Herald suggests that the church be turned into a political hall and the pulpit into a hustings. The Herald seems to think it would be perfectly proper so long as both sides of politics were discussed by competent speakers. But, in the meantime, where's a fellow going to do his worshipping? Interpretation of the Scriptures and the presentation of the plan of salvation doesn't seem to cut much figure in this proposition to turn churches into political campaign halls. Despite the increased enlightenment of the world it seems to be as difficult to pry Church and State apart as to separate a miser from his shekels.

KILLING TIME

By Walt Mason

J. Johnson Jinks has wealth to burn, though not a kopeck did he earn. His father croaked some years ago, and left him forty kinds of dough, and he has basked in gilded ease since he was lower than your knees. And life to him is bleak and drear, and every hour seems like a year. He does not work like useful boys, but buys new cars and other toys, and wearies of them when they're bought, for nothing seems to reach the spot. He travels here and travels there, and finds new boredom and despair; his only task is killing time, and that's a nuisance and a crime. There's naught on earth will take the kinks from out the soul of J. J. Jinks, because he never learned to toil, nor had to make the kettle boil. I'd rather labor in the ditch than be so useless and so rich. This world is but a poor resort for any overloaded sport who tries to purchase cheap renown with wealth his old man handed down. I'd rather have one silver bone, that I have earned, that is my own, than have a bundle in my till, awarded by some dead one's will.

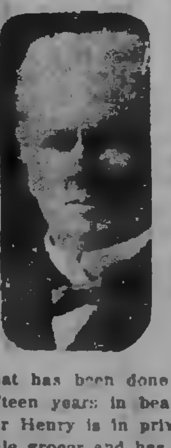
Birthdays of Note

THURSDAY, APRIL NINTH

SIR HENRY NEWELL BATE, whose eighty-fifth birthdays occurs to-day, has the reputation of owning more real estate in the city of Ottawa than any other man. It was largely because of his consequent interest in the welfare of the capital that he was made chairman of the Ottawa Improvement Commission in 1899, and to him must be accorded much of the credit for the splendid work that has been done during the past fifteen years in beautifying the city. Sir Henry is in private life a wholesale grocer and has been in business in Ottawa for the past sixty years. He is now a very wealthy man and despite his advanced years continues to enjoy a life of considerable activity. A few years ago he erected at his own expense All Saints' Church.



FRIDAY, APRIL TENTH

THIS is the sixty-seventh birthday of GEORGE BURN, who has been general manager of the Bank of Ottawa since 1880. He was born at Thurso, in Scotland, and earned his profession in the Royal Bank of his native country. Then he crossed to Canada in 1866 and sought employment in the Royal Canadian Bank in Toronto, later transferring his services to the Exchange Bank in Montreal, whence he was selected for his present position. He is to-day one of Ottawa's most prominent citizens, being interested in various artistic, musical and philanthropical undertakings. As president of the Schubert Club and a member of the Earl Grey Theatrical Competition Committee, he has shown himself anxious to develop the highest artistic life of the capital.

YOUTH KICKED A CAN.

And Explosive Therein Went Off Inflicting Serious Injuries.

TORONTO, April 9. — Peter John Bolahood, aged 12, of 123 York street, kicked a tin can in his back yard yesterday afternoon, and since then Peter John and all his family have been wondering what was in that can. Following the kick there came a tremendous explosion, which knocked the lad on his back, tore the left side of his face open, and cut open his leg from the knee half way to his thigh. He was conveyed to the General Hospital, where it is stated he may lose the sight of one eye.

Although careful search was made for any part of the tin can, not a particle remained to tell the police what had been placed inside. It is thought it contained explosive of some kind, but how it got there is a mystery.

Churchill To Aid Spain.

LONDON, April 9. — Winston Churchill, First Lord of the British Admiralty, is expected in Madrid, Spain, to-day. In official Madrid circles it is stated that he is coming to confer with Premier Dato in reference to the projected construction of a second squadron for the Spanish navy.

The correspondent adds that as Spain is practically attached to the triple entente, Great Britain's advice in the reorganization of her navy is very important at the present time.

LATEST NEWS PARAGRAPHED

A petition against Home Rule signed by adult Australians will shortly be presented to Premier Asquith; 75,000 signatures have already been received.

The election of Mederic Martin, M.P., as mayor of Montreal, will probably mean that he will have to resign his seat in the House of Commons at Ottawa.

The death has occurred in Montreal of Miss Edith Eaton, who wrote short stories of Chinese life in the United States under the nom de plume of Sin Sin Far.

Lord Joicey of Ford Castle, Northumberland, has just purchased 10,000 acres of veteran's lots in Northern Ontario. The sale was made through a large London firm.

The neighborhood of Richibucto, N.B., was visited by the worst storm of the season yesterday. There is four feet of snow in the woods and the banks about town are the highest for years.

Sir William Stephens is to be the Liberal candidate for West Salford division of Lancashire, succeeding Sir George Agnew, the present member, who intends retiring at the close of this Parliament.

Mme. Vitz, a prisoner in St. Lazare jail, Paris, was yesterday sent to an insane asylum, having become demented in consequence of her belief that favors were granted by the authorities to Mme. Caillaux.

Capt. Herve, a French military aviator, and a lieutenant he was carrying as a passenger, were hacked to death yesterday near Rabat by insurgent Moors after they had escaped uninjured from an aeroplane accident in the desert.

WINNIPEG GOT LITTLE.

Rates Decision Benefits Other Cities More Than Manitoba Centre.

OTTAWA, April 9.—The decision of the Railway Commission in the western freight rates case has elicited less comment and discussion than might have been anticipated. There was no reference to it in the House yesterday, and members of Parliament outside of the House were quite reticent.

Generally speaking, the judgment extends the principal established in the Regina rates case, and places the shippers of Saskatchewan and Alberta upon an equality with the shippers of Manitoba and main advantage distributing points, like Regina, Moose Jaw, Edmonton, Calgary and Lethbridge, which heretofore have been discriminated against by the railways in favor of Winnipeg.

But if some relief is afforded Saskatchewan and Alberta, no advantage is gained by Manitoba, which, indirectly at least, is injuriously affected.

Evidence Taking Ends.

WASHINGTON, April 9. — Taking of testimony by the Interstate Commerce Commission on the application of eastern railroads for a five per cent. increase in freight rates was concluded yesterday so far as the present phase of the proceeding is concerned. Protestants against any increase in the lake and rail rate closed their case with the testimony of Julius H. Barnes of Duluth, who urged that the lake and rail carriers were not entitled to an advance in rates, because their service was antiquated and unnecessarily expensive to shippers.

U. S. To Pay $25,000,000.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Twenty-five million dollars is the amount the United States agrees to pay to Colombia for the partition of Panama and the acquisition of the canal zone, in the treaty signed in Bogota by American Minister Thompson and the Colombian authorities. This was stated here yesterday at the Colombian legation.

Nationalist Move "Big With Danger."

LONDON, April 9. — The development of the Nationalist volunteers in Ireland is beginning to attract the attention of Unionist journalists.

After a tour of Nationalist Ireland one capable observer declares that the movement is "big with danger." The force has been organized since December by Sir Roger Casement, the consul who exposed the horrors of the slave traffic at Putumayo, and John McNeill, a professor at the Irish National University, who have spread the net so well that cities, towns and hamlets in all parts of Ireland are within its mesh.

Singsong Pete

He Proves a Blessing In Disguise

By CLARISSA MACKIE

The lower rim of the sun rested on the edge of the horizon, a huge orange ball against the background of copper red sky.

Nancy Barton watched it slowly sink below the flat Texas plain until all at once it was gone and the weird twilight was about her.

With a little sigh she turned her horse to the low hills that bounded the northeast. Her black Judy skimmed over the ground with velvet feet, and the passage of the graceful girl and the beautiful animal were almost like shadows fleeing before the light western breeze.

Then as they passed into the deep gloom of a walnut grove Nancy heard rough voices in discussion. For a moment her heart thrilled with terror, for the Barton ranch was very near the Mexican border, and in these uncertain days there was a growing spirit of lawlessness among the rough characters that infested the neighborhood.

The voices came from a little hollow on the left of the trail, and Nancy was glad of the protection afforded by the great trees that surrounded her.

She pulled Judy to a standstill and listened sharply.

Five minutes afterward she had emerged from the grove and was tearing down the trail toward home.

Her appearance in the yard brought her father into the porch and the cook into the doorway of the bunk house.

"That you, Nan?" cried her father relievedly. "I've been wild about you for the last hour. I know you can take care of yourself, but remember what I told you about staying out after dark. Why, what is it, child? You are trembling." Mr. Barton lifted the girl from the saddle, and she sank limply on to the steps.

"They will come later, Hep Loo," said Nancy faintly, and as the Chinaman returned muttering to his kitchen she said to her father: "Dad, what shall we do? I came home through the grove, and I overheard our men here plotting to burn the ranch and run the cattle across the border."

"You are sure, daughter?" demanded Barton sharply, for he had trusted his cowboys to a man.

"Yes. I heard all their voices. Singsong Pete seemed to be the leader. It is planned for tonight."

"I wonder if they are coming back to supper," mused Barton.

"No. They planned the raid, and after it is accomplished they are to rush in and appear to rescue me. Oh, dad, they said they would finish you, and you know what that means—and"— Nancy's voice broke a little, and her father knew that when his brave daughter's courage wavered there was danger indeed, and he guessed that she had not told him all she had overheard.

"We need help. How shall we get it?" he muttered.

"Let me go, father. I am safer riding than I am here," she shuddered.

"Where will you go, child? You could never ride to Fenby's in time, and"—

"I will go and get Roger Dare," said Nancy.

Mr. Barton started.

"Roger Dare?" he repeated. "He would never come after the way I treated him. I can't expect it. No man with red blood in him would do it."

"Roger would do it, dad," said Nancy quietly. "Just because he has got red blood in his veins would he forgive an injury and help. He's a man!"

Barton stared down at the girl.

"Nancy! I believe—I believe you really did care"— He stopped short as Nan lifted her gloved hand.

"Dad, you can believe almost anything of a foolish girl," she whispered. "Give me a cup of tea and let me go. They are cowards, and they will not shoot me if I run across the gang, but I will go the lower trail if it will lessen your anxiety. You and Hep Loo remain in the house and protect the place." Nancy arose and ran into the house, where Aunt Hepsy, the stout negress, was waiting impatiently to serve supper.

Nancy drank a cup of tea and ate a few mouthfuls of food; then, with a last close embrace from her father, who had protested even while he saw that her pistols were loaded and that Judy was ready at the door, she swung into the saddle and vanished into the night.

Then James Barton worked swiftly. Within an hour the house was closely shuttered and loaded weapons placed at all the upper windows.

Silence fell over the ranch. Hepsy lumbered uneasily about her room while Barton, kneeling in an upper window, watched the entrances by which the enemy might be expected. While he waited he thought of Nancy flying for help and asking Roger Dare, of all men!

In the darkness Barton blushed. When Roger Dare had first come to the cattle country the finger of suspicion had pointed heavily at him in a very dubious transaction. Barton had been one of his most relentless accusers; he had really believed the man guilty. There had been a lynching stopped at the critical instant by news of the capture of the guilty man, and Roger had been set free, but his stern attitude toward his accusers had told them that he had not forgotten the insult and injury their unjust accusations had brought upon him.

James Barton had made handsome apology for the injustice, and in more ways than one had he been of service to the young rancher, but quite unknown to Roger, for it is probable that that stern young man might have refused the aid that came from unknown sources. Then Barton's contrition had an added bitterness, for Roger had fallen promptly in love with Nancy, and there might have been a romance there on the Texas plain had not the unfortunate affair come up to blight it in the bud.

Now, this very evening Barton had discovered something in Nancy's tone that betrayed her secret. She loved Roger after all. That was what had worn upon her during the past year, although she had maintained her cheerful demeanor. He swore softly under his breath as he thought of how he had failed after all to make his motherless daughter entirely happy, and that was all he lived for.

So James Barton waited for the enemy to come and burn his home, if they could, but his thoughts traveled side by side with the gallant young ~~[illegible]~~ speeding through the night surrounded by unseen dangers.

* * * * * * *

The lower trail led away from the chestnut grove and its concealed plotters. The trail skirted the foot of a hill and then followed the dry bed of Cinder creek, plunged through the narrow confines of Cinder canyon and emerged on Roger Dare's north range.

Nancy Barton, leaning low in the saddle, rode the miles unflinchingly. Her pride must suffer in going to Roger Dare for help. But what mattered? She thought of her brave, gray haired father standing off the crowd of desperadoes single handed, and she spurred Judy to greater effort.

The stones rattled in the dry bed of the creek, and then the dark plunge through the little canyon was accomplished with heaven only knows what hairbreadth escapes from death or disaster, and then Judy's feet pounded over the grass of Roger Dare's land.

A dog barked in the distance, a light flared in a window, other lights sprang out around the house, and when Nancy arrived on the almost winded mare she was at once surrounded by a circle of excited men, with Roger Dare in their midst.

"What has happened?" asked Roger, his hand on Judy's neck.

In a few broken words Nancy told him, and then, reeling in the saddle, she murmured:

"I'm not going to faint. I never fainted in my life." And she straightway proceeded to drop into Roger's outstretched arms.

"She has fainted away," said Roger as he laid her on a sofa in the sitting room. "Eliza," turning to his grim featured housekeeper, "there is trouble at the Barton ranch, and I must go, but watch over Nancy. You will know what to do, and guard her as you would your own child. Ben and Gallagher will remain with you."

With a last glance at the sweet, pale face on the pillow, Roger turned and rushed out into the yard, where his men were piling on to their horses. In a moment twenty of them were flying toward Cinder canyon, and the disgruntled Gallagher and his companion were left behind.

Long afterward old Hepsy tried to describe the battle of Barton's ranch, but words were inadequate:

"Lawsy, chile," she told her listener, "I jest wish you could hev been dere and seen how Marse Barton pluged dem snakes wid his gun, and right in de midst of it dere was a rarin' shout from de lower gate, and I declar' if Marse Roger Dare and his men didn't come skyhootin' erlong, and—well, de war ended right off! Marse Roger and de rest of 'em jes driv dat Singsong Pete and de odder snakes clean off do place, and I heahs dey went ovah de bo'der inter Mex'co, and a good place for 'em, too, wid de greasers! Uh, huh! Marse Roger am sure a brave man, but he ain't no braver den Marse Barton—no, suh!"

Roger Dare, coming back from that wild chase over the border in pursuit of Singsong Pete and his band, rode into the Barton yard and met Barton's hearty hand clasp with one equally warm. No one heard the few words they uttered as they stood there side by side, but that very instant the feud between them died.

There was a light patter of hoofs at the gate, and Nancy came riding in on Judy. The girl, her face now pale and rosy, slipped from the saddle and looked from her father to Roger Dare.

"I am so glad you are safe—safe, father," she sobbed, clinging to Barton. "I told you he would come"—

"Yes, darling," smiled Barton over her sunny head. "He has come, indeed, and he tells me that he has come to stay!"

Nancy was silent for awhile, and then she timidly put a hand toward Roger, her eyes still hidden on her father's sleeve. And when she lifted her eyes at last and looked shyly around she found herself standing hand in hand with her father and Roger Dare.

And Aunt Hepsy, who was an interested observer of this scene, was scandalized to hear her master exclaim:

"Well, we can thank Singsong Pete for this!" and Roger's happy answer: "Heaven bless Singsong Pete!"

But on the wedding day Nancy explained what they meant.

Westbrook, Me. — "I was passing through the Change of Life and had pains in my back and side and was so weak I could hardly do my housework. I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has done me a lot of good. I will recommend your medicine to my friends and give you permission to publish my testimonial." — Mrs. LAWRENCE MARTIN, 12 King St., Westbrook, Maine.

Manston, Wis. — "At the Change of Life I suffered with pains in my back and loins until I could not stand. I also had night-sweats so that the sheets would be wet. I tried other medicine but got no relief. After taking one bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I began to improve and I continued its use for six months. The pains left me, the night-sweats and hot flashes grew less, and in one year I was a different woman. I know I have to thank you for my continued good health ever since." — Mrs. M. J. BROWNELL, Manston, Wis.

The success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, is unparalleled in such cases.

Gay Deceivers.

They say that figures will not lie,
And maybe it is true,
But they will lead a fellow on
Some phantoms to pursue.
You prove by them that you are bound
To make beyond a doubt
A fortune from a flock of hens,
And then your pipe goes out.

There's hardly any scheme in sight
That figures will not say,
If you will put it up to them,
But it must surely pay.
In every quarter of the globe,
Wherever you may go,
A pencil or a piece of chalk
Can make the profits grow.

And easier it is by far
Than falling from a train
To take a pen and writing pad
And show where you must gain,
And as you scratch from page to page
The profits multiply
Until you are a millionaire
Before the ink is dry.

Still figures dabble in the truth
If properly applied.
You only total up the gain
And let expenses slide.
Then, after things have fallen flat,
You look at every side
And find on summing up the loss
That figures have not lied.

Dentistry For Schools.

Pupils of the public schools of Edmonton will have dental work done at the expense of the municipality in the future. The Board of Education has accepted an offer of the services of 25 members of the Edmonton Dental Association a half day every month without charge. The board will furnish the equipment and materials used, also provide rooms in one of the hospitals or schools. S. A. Gordon Barnes, a member of the school board, announced recently that the dental department will be in operation this winter. The enrolment in the public schools of Edmonton is more than 10,000. Every child's teeth will be examined. The work will be done by experienced practitioners, each patient receiving the same attention that is required in regular practice. The plan is to install a complete dental ward.

Canadian "Alligators."

The unsophisticated visitor to the lumber districts of Canada may occasionally see what is to him a very remarkable sight, a primitive looking steamboat high and dry on a road, crawling along quite comfortably, apparently just as much at home as in its natural element. These boats are known as "alligators," and are used for towing the rafts of logs down the rivers and lakes to the mills, says The Wide World Magazine. Sometimes it is desired to transfer one of these craft to a new sphere of operations which can only be reached overland, and the boat is then hauled out of the water, placed upon rollers and travels to its destination by means of its own power.

Woman's World

MRS. LINDLEY M. GARRISON.

Mrs. Lindley M. Garrison, the handsome and talented wife of the secretary of war, is, like most of the cabinet ladies, a fine cook.

Among the many elegant wedding gifts presented to Miss Jessie Wilson when she became the bride recently of Francis B. Sayre was a cookery book consisting of recipes contributed by prominent women of the official Washington set.

Mrs. Garrison, whose culinary taste runs to desserts, contributed the following formula for plum pudding, which appears frequently during the year upon the Garrison table:

One pound of stoned raisins, one pound of currants, one-half pound of chopped suet, one pound of sugar, one-quarter pound of almonds chopped fine, one-half pound each of lemon and orange peel, two five cent loaves of stale bread crumbed fine, one nutmeg grated, one-half teaspoonful of allspice, two carrots grated fine, two apples chopped fine, four eggs, one-quarter pint of milk, one-half teaspoonful of salt and one cupful of best brandy. Boil seven hours, putting the puddings in small tin pails well greased and fastening lids tight. Set away until wanted; then boil two hours before using. Serve with hard sauce.

Mrs. Garrison, too, takes a keen interest in the affairs connected with her husband's official position as well as in her household and social duties, and she is following with much concern the Mexican situation.

Speaking of this turbulent country, one is reminded of the self sacrifice which has been demanded for the past few months of the American woman in Mexico. If she is not possessed of a goodly income life is a constant struggle against fearful odds, all phases of living having become frightfully expensive. Clothing, which has always been ridiculously high, has become almost prohibitive in price, and with the precarious condition of the postal mail service she cannot hope to receive articles from the United States either by mail or express safely and within a reasonable time, if at all.

In short, the American woman in Mexico, says a traveler who has spent many years in the country, under the existing conditions is not an object of envy.

Smart New Blouses.

There has been no abatement in the vogue for lace and net waists during the past year, and record breaking sales are indicated for the coming season, particularly on the medium and the popular priced numbers, says the Dry Goods Economist.

With sheerness such an important item, many of the new spring models have the sleeves unlined, but the body of the waist shows a low cut lining both back and front. This leaves the neck and the arms partially uncovered, the tint of the flesh showing through the lace.

When entire linings are used pale pink chiffon or net is particularly desirable, as this suggests the flesh tint. The tea shades are also becoming popular, especially those that have the tinge of yellow.

The front finish of the neck is changing somewhat from the sharp V outline. It is being widened at the sides and finished in a shallow point in the center.

Frosting Glass.

A frosting that is a very good imitation of machine work may be applied to glass. The process is as follows: Make a saturated solution of boiling water, epsom salts and pounded alum. Put in all the salts and alum the water will dissolve. When it is cold strain through coarse cheesecloth to get rid of sediment. Wash the windows and wipe dry; then apply the solution with a brush or sponge. Several applications may be necessary. Allow each to dry before putting on a second coat.

TWO BANDITS FALL IN BATTLE WITH CITIZENS

Six Men Rob Union Bank at New Hazelton.

VANCOUVER, B.C., April 8. — branch of the Union Bank of Canada at New Hazelton was held up yesterday morning.

Two bandits were kiled at 10.30 yesterday morning in a battle between the robbers and a big posse of citizens. Four others have got away, though the desultory firing in the long-distance fight was still to be heard last night. The quartette secured $1,100 in cash. The bank had opened for business only a few minutes when the robbery was pulled off. Two men, armed with rifles, walked up the road, two others appeared in the bush at the rear of the bank, while the last two came from another direction. The first two jumped inside the door of the bank, and with rifles raised, called out "Hands up!"

The other four appeared almost at the same instant, taking up positions outside the bank. The first two robbed a customer of a roll of bills he was depositing and as they backed out the clerks started firing.

The shooting alarmed the town, and several cowboys who happened to be in a hardware store, got their guns into play at once. They were backed up by citizens, and within a few moments, the fusilade was general.

Shooting from cover, the posse did such effective work that two of the robbers fell dead in their tracks as they raced along the road towards the bush. The posse gave pursuit and the chase is still in progress.

There have been several robberies in the province in the last few months.

Arms and the Child.

Girl scouts exist in Germany also. Instead of camp fire girls they call them something that sounds like a mixture of Fenimore Cooper and musical comedy—Pathfinderesses is the literal translation. Apparently, too, they go in for being military with true German thoroughness. One reads how a head game warden presented himself at the shop of a dealer in firearms in Berlin and desired to purchase a revolver. "A revolver!" said the dealer. "I'm sorry, sir, but I've just sold the last gross of revolvers in the shop to the Potsdam battalion of girl scouts."—New York Post.

ALGONQUIN PARK ADDITION OPPOSED BY THE LIBERALS

Opposition Whip Bowman Gets Into Hot Water When He Charges that Purchase of Timber Limit in North Country Is For Benefit of Government's Friends—Timber Cruisers Have Made Appraisal.

TORONTO, April 9.—A high state of tension prevailed in the Legislature last evening when Hon. Mr. Hearst crossed swords with Chief Liberal Whip Charles Bowman regarding the proposed addition to Algonquin Park.

The trouble started when the North Bruce member, in attacking the Government purchase of the Pembroke Lumber Co. timber limits, declared that the whole deal was for the benefit of political friends of the Conservative party.

"We desire to protest," declared Mr. Bowman, "in the strongest possible manner against this transaction, and claim that it should not be consummated, that the principle is entirely wrong and that this old, worked-out limit should not be purchased from active political friends of the Government for $185,000."

Mr. Bowman moved in amendment that the purchase price be reduced to $25,000, which he considered a reasonable value of the limits.

"If this bill becomes law," he declared, "it means a most deliberate looting and plundering of the Provincial Treasury for active political friends of the Government."

This brought the Minister to his feet with a rush. "I am not at all surprised at the remarks with which the member has brought to a close his speech," he declared, "but if any man, either inside or outside the House, should not have used such language, it is the member for North Bruce."

Mr. Bowman instantly demanded "an explicit statement" of what was meant.

"Why does he ask when it is a matter in the public records of the House?" was the retort.

Again Mr. Bowman came back. "I presume that when the hon. member says it is a matter of public record that he refers to my connection with the Algoma Central Railway Co., and I want to say that if my connection had anything to do with the loan of two millions to the Soo company granted under the legislation of the Ross regime, all I have to say is this, that if I had anything to do with it, it was a most fortunate thing for the member from Sar't Ste. Marie and the Province of Ontario."

"I have nothing to apologize for in that matter, and I repeat it was a most fortunate thing, and there is in that city to-day the largest and most successful company in the province, and if it were not for that the hon. Minister would likely be sitting in a deserted village with the green grass growing around him."

In reply to the charges which the Liberal whip preferred, the Minister said that the best timber cruisers in the north had been engaged in the appraisal of the land in question, and that persons from both political parties had agreed on the quality of the timber, and the value of the bargain. He quoted some of those in the House to back his argument.

Messrs. Proudfoot of Huron, Hartt of Simcoe, and others joined in the debate before the second reading was carried on division.

When W. K. McNaught asked the privilege of special expedition in handling Toronto's bill to enable the city to go ahead with its postoffice square scheme yesterday afternoon, Hon. Messrs. Lucas and Foy demurred until full explanation had been given. Permission was sought in the bill to allow the negotiations of the City Council with the Federal Government for the new postoffice square. The measure was allowed to go direct to the private bills committee.

CANADA TO GIVE $10,000

DOMINION'S AID AND SYMPATHY GOES TO FAMILIES OF SEALERS.

OTTAWA, April 9.—When Parliament met yesterday afternoon Premier Borden announced that he had been in communication with Hon. John R. Bennett, acting Premier of Newfoundland, in respect to the recent disaster to the sealers and had volunteered to give practical evidence of Canadian sympathy by a grant to assist the families of the lost. He would accordingly ask Parliament for a grant of $10,000 for the purpose.

"The action of the Government in this matter is worthy of commendation," commented Sir Wilfrid Laurier, "and will have the hearty support of this side of the House."

King and Queen Contribute.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., April 9. — Premier Morris of Newfoundland cables from London that King George and Queen Mary have headed the subscription list in The London Times for the sealing disaster fund, with a donation of $750, and that generous contributions from other sources are being received.

The acting Premier has contributions of $2,000 each from the Dominion and Nova Scotia Steel Companies.

The steamer Kyle sent a wireless yesterday, when 240 miles south of Cape Race, reporting she had seen nothing of the Southern Cross. She spoke yesterday morning to the Gloucester schooner John Hammond, on the banks 190 miles south of Cape Race, which reported seeing no steamers.

TORONTO, April 9.—A grant of $5,000 was made by the City Council to the survivors of those lost in the recent disaster off Newfoundland when a large number of sealers were caught in a blizzard.

NO CLUE SO FAR

The Murder of Robert Hayde is Still a Mystery

MIDLAND, April 9.—A post-mortem examination on the body of Robert Hayde, the grocer at Tomahawk Point who was found murdered, was held here yesterday. He was killed by a charge from a shotgun, the charge entering at the base of the skull at the back of the head, and lodging on the inside of his left cheek. The inside of his head was riddled in a frightful manner, and the left jaw was broken. An inquest will be held at Port Severn to-day. When the body was found the pockets were turned inside out, and the money all gone, which is an indication that robbery was the motive for the crime. His watch had not been meddled with. No clue to the assassin has yet been discovered, but a provincial detective has been applied for to work on the case.

BAR ABOLITION ASKED.

"No Booze" Petition Is Submitted to Ontario Government.

TORONTO, April 9. — Requesting legislation to abolish all liquor shop, bar and club licenses in Ontario, and one year later the submission of the question of prohibition to a plebiscite of the people, a deputation of the Ontario Young Manhood Association, headed by Dr. H. A. McKim of Toronto, presented a petition containing 9,000 signatures to the Ontario Government yesterday. In an address accompanying the petition it was pointed out that unless the Government would in some degree accede to their requests, the signers of the petitions who said they were all Conservatives, would have to ally themselves with the opposite party.

Hon. Mr. Foy, as acting Premier, replied. The Government, he said, realized the evils of intemperance as well as anybody, and wished to minimize them and check the use of liquor as much as possible, but he did not think abolition of bars would stop drinking.

Hon. W. J. Hanna said that the Government had further restrictions under consideration which could not be announced as yet.

NEWS NOTES FROM OMEMEE

Special Correspondence.

OMEMEE, April 8.—Mr. H. Bland and Master Aubrey, were in town on Saturday.

Mr. John Smith's brother, arhis arrived from England, a visiting him.

The Farmers' Club will be addressed in Coronation Hall on Tuesday evening, by the delegate, Mr. F. G. Sandy, who attended the Provincial meeting at Toronto.

Mr. S. Lowes of Peterboro called on Omemee friends on Friday evening.

The Adult Bible Class of the Presbyterian Sunday School have a guessing contest announced for their concert on Wednesday evening. Refreshments will be served. Everyone invited.

Mrs. T. W. McLean will not receive on 14th inst., or again this season.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. William Bannon on Wednesday afternoon of last week. His daughter, Miss Ethel was united in holy bonds of wedlock to Mr. M. Peel of Salem. Rev. D. H. Currie, of Cardinal, late pastor of the Omemee church was the officiating clergyman. The bride was a popular young lady of our town, having been a public school teacher for some time, and identified with the interests of the Presbyterian Church; the esteem in which she is held was marked by the number of beautiful presents she received. After a sumptuous wedding breakfast, the young couple took the evening train west. They will reside at Salem.

An old Omemee High School boy in the person of Rev. Cecil Best took the service in the Presbyterian Church on Sabbath morning last. Many of his old friends attended the service and were delighted with his pulpit ability. Mr. Best preached at his old home church at Mount Pleasant in the evening.

Rev. D. H. Currie of Cardinal was in town a couple of days last week and looked up old friends. He spoke optimistically of his new charge.

The two cannon for the Armoury have arrived and have been placed on the grounds surrounding the riuns. They are of small size and bore and are mounted on carriages. Major Fee deserves the thanks of our citizens for his unflagging zeal in the interests of Omemee.

Mr. George Cummings spent Sunday with his family at Mount Pleasant.

Mr. Robert Henderson of Sandy Hill made a business trip to Omemee last week. His residence was almost a prey to fire a short time ago. The family retired about the usual hour and there was no fire in the kitchen stove. About midnight his daughter awoke and called to her parents who discovered their room to be full of smoke. With alacrity, Mr. Henderson assured himself that the stovepipes were cold, rushed down to the kitchen to find the floor aflame. With his wife's assistance and a good supply of water at hand, it was not long till the flames yielded to their efforts. The damage was chiefly to the floor of the kitchen and to the walls from smoke and vapor. Mr. Henderson is congratulating himself on escape by a narrow margin. The cause is supposed to have been a coal that had fallen on the floor some time in the evening and grew in vigor till midnight when its smoke warned the family.

Mr. Chester Best was in Omemee the first of the week.

The Public Library Board is making preperations for a concert on the evening of May 25th (Victoria Day.)

Mrs. Robt. Toole changed residences during the past week. She and her daughter, Miss Myrtle are now domiciled in the first residence east of the Bank of Toronto on the north side of King St.

The Messrs. Courtney and Son are busy cutting lumber.

Mr. A. E. Byers of Toronto was the guest, last week, of his daughter, Mrs. White of Sturgeon St.

Mr. Albert Stinson is busy erecting buildings on his town property.

Farmers say that the run of maple sap is still quite small.

Major Fee, of Lindsay, was home on Sunday.

The two youths who burglarized some of Lindsay's stores, last week, spent Wednesday night in Sturgeon St. Station of our town. They had unlocked the building and the oil house and were around when Mr. J. B. Hayes, agent, reported for duty about 7 a.m. After the agent arrived, the youths returned for a pair of mittens they had forgotten and were interrogated by the officer who could not get any incriminating evidence from them.

Miss V. Wray of Lindsay was the guest over Sunday of her sister, Miss M. Wray of the Public School staff.

The present year will see the erection of several new station buildings on the line of the Grand Trung Railway. The enginneers of the Grand Trunk Pacific are, of course, busily engaged in the erection of a whole series of railway depots, but on the Grand Trunk proper there are also to be some notable structures. It was announced from the railway's headquarters in Montreal to-day that the new passenger station and offices at Pembroke, Ontario, will be finished about June 1st. The station has cost about $40,000. It is a three-storey building with a tower 60 ft. high. Indiana limestone has been largely used in its construction. Fine waiting rooms and ample trackage are features of the station. A freight building is to be erected near at hand.

Construction will soon be commenced on a new Grand Trunk station at Blackrock, three miles from Buffalo, with passenger, freight and customs offices attached.

MANY SALOONS ARE CLOSED

Women's Votes Add Sixteen Counties to Dry List.

CHICAGO, April 9.—Women voting for the first time in Illinois Township elections demonstrated their power Tuesday by closing the doors of more than a thousand saloons outside of Chicago, adding 16 counties to the 30 already dry and barring the sale of intoxicants in approximately 200 of the 300 townships in which local option was an issue.

Their victory included 11 of the larger cities of the state, including Springfield, the state capital, which, until the votes were counted Tuesday night were wet territory.

Approximately 70 per cent. of the women voters favored the anti-saloon ticket, while male voters divided approximately 60 per cent. wet and 40 per cent. dry.

Minnesota anti-saloon advocates were elated yesterday over victories in most of the cities of the fourth class, which held local option elections. Even St. Peter, where saloons have operated for more than sixty years, was swept into the dry column.

Local option voting in Michigan will close 53 saloons and one brewery.

BIBLE LECTURE

Beyond the Grave, the Subject of Opening Lecture.

A free public Bible lecture course is being arranged for this place, the purpose being to arouse interest in unsectarian Bible study and to explain many important and difficult questions not generally understood. "Beyond the Grave" is the subject of the opening lecture, which will be delivered Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Royal Theatre by Pastor T. Yeates of Hamilton.

A cordial invitation is extended to the public to attend the entire lecture course. Tickets will be unnecessary, since the work is strictly philanthropic. It is stated on authority that the collection basket will be conspicuous by its absence. It is especially urged that none miss the opening lecture of the series.

WORKMEN KILLED WHEN PART OF BURNED STRUCTURE FALLS

Third Man May Die While Four Others Are Badly Hurt In Collapse of Portion of Independent Cloak Co.'s Building in Toronto—Foreign Unskilled Workers Were Employed on the Job.

TORONTO, April 9. — Two are dead, one is dying, and three workmen were seriously injured yesterday afternoon by the collapse of part of the west wall of the Independent Cloak Co.'s building on Richmond street west, near Bathurst street. The building had been gutted by fire in February and those killed and injured in the collapse of the wall were engaged in cleaning away the ruins before starting to tear down the walls.

The dead are:

The injured are: Benny Finkler, address not known; now at Western Hospital in a critical condition with terrible head and internal injuries; Antony Visconsky, at the Western Hospital, fractured left arm; Mike Kernitsky, at the Western Hospital, scalp wounds; Benjamin Blatarockly, at the Western Hospital, fracture of the knee cap and scalp lacerations; Max Najmal, at the Western Hospital, bone of the face fractured and other injuries about the body.

Part of the wall fell across a lane on the roofs of two adjoining houses, caving in the roof of 589 Richmond street west and filling the bath room with tons of debris. In a room at the rear of the house an infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Sniderman was sleeping on a couch and narrowly escaped injury from falling plaster. Mr. and Mrs. Sniderman were working in a room at the front of the house, but were not injured. Bricks from the falling wall flew through windows on the ground floor of the house.

The cause of the catastrophe is not known, although acting City Architect Price and his employes, who were on the scene shortly after the accident, are of the opinion that it was caused by careless workmen. The Saturday following the fire Mr. Price and his men spent many hours in the ruins. They placed timbers and guy ropes on the building to prevent such an accident as this. Mr. Price thinks that some of the workmen, none of whom were skilled laborers, must have pulled a joist from the ruins, causing the wall to cave in on them. His opinion is shared by members of the fire department.

On Tuesday eighteen men were employed in the building, and yesterday several more were taken on. They were all foreigners working on the third floor of the building save two who were on the east wall. But for a warning houted by Mr. J. A. Lendreville, 618 Richmond street west, the toll of death might have been greater. He was standing in front of his house when he saw the wall swaying gently. He realized the serious position of those in the building and shouted to them. The workmen heard him and endeavored to escape. Many of them reached safety, but seven of the men were caught by the falling wall and carried into the basement when the charred flooring on which they stood was unable to stand the weight of the falling debris.

HEARINGS BEGIN TO-DAY.

Tolls Bill Will Be In Committee for Fifteen Days.

WASHINGTON, April 9. — Formal consideration of the administration bill to repeal the tolls exemption provision of the Panama Canal Act will begin on the Senate side of the capitol to-day, with hearings before the Interoceanic Canals Committee, to continue for 15 days.

While the committee preparations were under way yesterday, preliminary debate on the tolls issue occupied the greater part of the session in the Senate, where Senator Works of California held the floor for hours, concluding his analysis of the treaties involved, and his argument opposing the repeal.

Asserting that the United States had the right under the treaty to prescribe such tolls as it sees fit for its own vessels, Senator Works vigorously criticized the position taken by the President.

Thackeray's Criticism.

In "Bar, Bat and Bit," by the Hon. Sir Edward Chandos Leigh, is the following Thackeray story:

Thackeray and others were great frequenters of Evans', in Covent Garden, kept by Paddy Green, where the most beautiful glees used to be sung. There was a little coterie there, and I was honored by being allowed to join that coterie. We used to devour chops, baked potatoes and other adjuncts to a homely supper after the theater. One night I found Thackeray alone at the table when up came a small, obsequious gentleman, who rubbed his hands together and addressed Thackeray with the most fulsome compliments. When he passed on I said to Thackeray, "Pray tell me who is that?" His answer was, "He calls himself an artist, but he paints as much in butter as he does in oil."

To Hunt Deadly Parasite.

An interesting expedition is to be undertaken immediately by some of those who took part in recent Antarctic exploration. Dr. E. L. Atkinson, the navy surgeon who was parasitologist of the Scott expedition, accompanied by Cherry Garrard, will start this month from London with a small party and travel across northern China in order to track to its lair a minute creature which is the cause of a serious malady.

It is supposed that this parasite spends a part of its life in shellfish found in the Yangtzekiang and other Chinese rivers. At any rate, it is found in water and attaches itself to those who work in and about water. Then it penetrates the skin, and if the attack is severe it may cause death. The discovery of the life history of the parasite, it is hoped, will lead to the discovery of a cure for the disease caused by it.

Wrestling For Recruits.

An extraordinary method of obtaining recruits for the army was practiced by a British captain in India some years ago. Capt. H. R. Holmes, an officer of magnificent physical bearing and sporting prowess, went the round of Sikh villages challenging all and sundry to a wrestling bout.

One of the conditions of every match was that if the native lost he should join the officer's regiment, the Thirty-sixth Sikhs. The regiment was then numerically weak, but by the time the officer had finished his tour it numbered 777, and the smallest man was 5 feet 8 inches in height.

An Old Idea.

Macaulay was not the first man to frame the famous image of the man of a new civilization standing amid the ruins of that which we know to-day. Long before he wrote of his traveler from New Zealand meditating upon London bridge Mrs. Barbauld had used the same image, with the difference that she applied it to Blackfriars bridge. An earlier reviewer had used it in an article published in 1767, we are told by an English commentator, and Horace Walpole says in one of his letters, "At last some curious traveler from Lima will visit England and give a description of the ruins of St. Paul's."

The supply of cattle was small and the trade was quiet, owing to the fact that buyers generally provided for their Easter wants at the first of the week. The tone of the market was steady, with sales of choice steers at $8.50; good, at $8 to $8.25, and the lower grades from $6 to $7.50, while cows brought from $4.75 to $7, and bulls from $5 to $7.50 per 100 lbs., as to quality. Owing to the more liberal supplies of milch cows coming forward a weaker feeling has prevailed in the market, and prices have declined $10 per head, with sales of choice milkers, at $80 to $90, and the lower grades from $50 to $70 each.

Was Dead When Taken Out.

NIAGARA FALLS, April 9. — Mrs. C. E. Sanborn, of No. 445 Parkdale avenue, Buffalo, committed suicide in a sensational manner at the third Sister Island above the Falls at noon yesterday. She walked into the water and threw herself into the swift current, but was caught on a ledge of rocks.

Charles Martin, a policeman, who witnessed the woman's act, succeeded in drawing her to the shore with a pikepole after about ten minutes' effort. She was dead, however.

Religious War In Albania.

ATHENS, April 9. — An official communication says that Mussulman Albanians Tuesday entered Koritsa, in the vilayet of Monastir and, with the aid of the gendarmerie, who had previously disarmed the inhabitants, began a massacre of the Christians.

A Vienna despatch on April 3 said it was reported from Avlona that Greek irregular forces had fiercely attacked Koritsa but were repulsed by the Albanians.

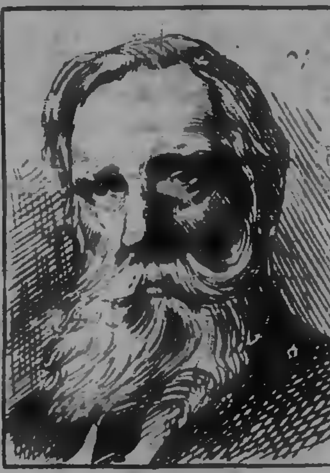
FRIEND OF CHILDREN

JOS. SANDERS OF LONDON HAS BIG OFFICIAL FAMILY.

Inspector For the Children's Aid Society Is a Veteran In the Service and Has Spent Twenty Years Rescuing Little Ones From Unhappy Surroundings — Is Also Secretary For Charities.

During the past twenty years thousands of children have come to regard Joseph Sanders, inspector for the London Children's Aid Society, almost as a father. Many have grown up, some from infancy, under his supervision. His thoughtful care, kindly counsel, and sage advice have shaped their lives.

Taken from surroundings that sadly handicapped them in life's race, they have been found foster homes through his influence and their welfare has been guarded through his oversight. Under his kindly and benign direction they have been guided into right paths. Mr. Sanders is justly proud of his boys and girls. Their records in many cases are highly creditable, and exceptionally good work has been done.



JOSEPH SANDERS.

Yet, as Mr. Sanders says, it is but little in the mighty undertaking of building up a healthy moral citizenship. His constant effort is to burn the heart of the community childward so that the care and proper upbringing of their own children will be the matter of first importance to every man and woman.

Mr. Sanders is a Cornishman. He served 21 years in the British army and was quartermaster-sergeant at the time of his retirement. He knows men. People of all ages come to him for advice and assistance regarding almost every conceivable matter. As secretary of the charities organization, he gives much in charity to the needy but his greatest work is in helping others to help themselves.

African Colony Is Rich.

The wealth of Rhodesia was discussed by Sir Starr Jameson, prior to his departure from Rhodesia. Dealing with mining, he expressed confidence in the future of the industry, which, he said, was the lifeblood of the country. The desire of the Chartered Company, he declared, was to assist both large mines and small workers in every possible way. Turning to agriculture, he said the time had arrived when Rhodesia must enter the world's markets, and pointed out that in order to do so Rhodesia must be prepared to produce in volume. The way to arrived at that result was primarily by co-operation. He looked forward to the extension of the principle of co-operation among the people of Rhodesia, and was already greatly satisfied with the indications he had seen during his tour of the growth of the co-operative spirit. The Chartered Company had begun the establishment of great ranches, and, although this enterprise had only been started within the year, the company were already the largest cattle owners in the country.

Vanity of the Peacock.

Our favorite and much-petted peacock, says a correspondent of The London Spectator, can be kept happy any length of time looking at his reflection in the window pane or in a looking-glass. He comes in daily to tea, making no mistake about the hour, and spends much time en route in gazing at himself as he appears by the glass of the French windows by which he enters the room. If I am sewing and do not speak to him when he comes into the room he will gently put his head quite close, almost touching my ring or needle, for he likes bright things, till I have to give up working and talk to him as with a small child whom one is afraid of pricking.

Club Stories.

Two stories are told of the time when the Athenaeum Club of London, which is largely made up of clergymen, while its clubhouse was undergoing renovation, was hospitably taken in by the United Service Club.

One was of a distinguished officer who, after a vain hunt for his umbrella, was heard to mutter, "That comes of letting those — bishops into the club!"

The counterblast is to the effect that when an Athenaeum man, while his club was still the guest of the other, asked for the librarian, the answer was, "Please, sir, he is in the dining-room carving the roast beef!" London Standard.

Saul of Spitalfields.

There was at one time a weaver in Spitalfields, Eng., named Saul, concerning whom a gravestone in St. Dunstan's churchyard was inscribed: Here lyes the Body of Daniel Saul, Spitalfields Weaver, and that's all.

BRANCH LINES OF THE GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC RAILWAY

With the approaching completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway's main line, the preparations that have been made to feed the main artery with a series of branch lines are of particular interest. When in 1903 the Canadian Government and the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway entered into an agreement for the construction and operation of a railway across Canada from the Atlantic to the Pacific, the necessity of these branch lines was kept in view and in 1906 a subsidiary company was incorporated under the name of the Grand Trunk Pacific Branch Lines Company, with the capital stock of $50,000,000. This company was authorized to construct branch lines through fertile sections of the country, with an aggregate total mileage of about seven thousand five hundred miles.

An early start was made on the construction of these branches and already, west of Winnipeg, about twelve hundred miles of subsidiary lines have been completed, while arrangements have been made between the various Provincial Governments and the railway for the construction in the near future of many hundreds of miles of additional branch lines.

That the Grand Trunk Pacific has the strongest belief in its revenue earning power is seen in the preparations that have been made for handling traffic in the future. It has erected along its route over 300 elevators at various points which will in the near future be grain producing centres. These are built in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. Its chain of hotels and terminals is rapidly being brought to completion to attend to the wants of its tourist traffic. Thus, even before its main line is completed, it is making every preparation for the traffic that is bound to come its way.

Playing the Piano.

Millions of people play the piano. Few people listen to them. Why is that? Let me remind you of a little story. One summer Joseph Jefferson, the dearly beloved old actor, spent a part of his holiday near a lonely little village. Early on Sunday morning he met the clergyman of the place. Church and stage instantly became friendly and Jefferson was asked whether he would care to read a part of the service. He consented to read the Lord's Prayer. After the service the white haired clergyman shook his hand. Tears were in his eyes as he said, "Ah, Mr. Jefferson, you ought to have entered the church!" "Why?" asked the great actor. "Because what you read sinks into the hearts of your hearers. I thought I had never heard the Lord's Prayer before, you read it so beautifully." "Well," said the modest old actor, "you know, don't you, that hardly one person in a million is ever rightly taught to read."

Similarly, few people are ever rightly taught to play. That is why, perhaps, so few care to listen to the average player.—Woman's World.

Suggests Prosperity.

"Why is it that all actors, whether great or small, always want to play Hamlet?"

"Let's see. Isn't that the show in which the ghost walks?"

THE SPORTING WORLD

BASEBALL CLUB WILL IMPROVE LEFT FIELD

The Peterboro Baseball Club is making a big effort to improve the left field territory at Riverside Park.

Now, the club is using a liberal quantity of cinders, and the covering will consist of road scrapings. A request for a few loads of these scrapings was granted by the Board of Works last night.

The yellow score card, with was sold last year at the Canadian League games here, will this season be replaced with a score book. This book will be composed of several pages, and will have a scoring blank, list of the Pete's games at home and abroad, and cuts of several of the local players. They are to be given away this year instead of sold.

Mr. Len Dobson will again occupy the position of travelling secretary to the Petes.

Accompanied by Stanley Cresswell, he will start for Youngstown next Tuesday. The directors held a meeting last night.

There will be no horse racing at the Ottawa Exhibition this year. The members of the committee were unanimous in the decision to eliminate the turf events.

JACK WHITE SIGNS WITH THE HAMILTON CLUB

He Will be Given Trial for Job in the Outfield

Hamilton, April 9.—Dr. Robert Yates, manager of the Hamilton Baseball club, arrived in the city last evening. It did not take the new manager long to get down to business. He was hard at it when the representatives of the press made their first call, and after wading through a most formidable collection of letters, was able to announce that Gilhooley, one of the hold-outs, had forwarded his signed contract and that the squad was now complete with the exception of Red Fisher. The advance guard is expected in this week; in fact, Emil Wein, the Detroit shortstop, made his appearance this morning, reporting at headquarters almost as soon as the manager. Dolan, the first baseman, and Darlington, and Baldwin, infielders, are also expected this week, while the balance of the squad will be on the job next week. Yates is somewhat dismayed at the backward weather, as he figured that conditions would be such that he would be able to start work at once. Yates is eager to get down to business. He has an idea that his team will prove formidable enough by the time the season is under way, but as he has many recruits to look over and weed out before May 7 he is eager to get at it. He is very well pleased with the college players he has corralled, and looks for a lot from them. He thinks he was lucky to land Baldwin, the Swartmouth college infielder. "I don't claim that Baldwin is any wonder," he said, "but I do know that he was offered a big salary by Bris Lord, the former Athletic player, who is now in charge at Mobile, in the Southern League. Baldwin passed up the Southern League job on account of the climate, and if he shows his college form should prove a real acquisition." Yates thinks pretty well of the local pitching staff. He has been given to understand that last year's staff was a strong one, and looks for much from Dolan, Dougherty and Donohue. Jack White's contract was received this morning. White is the former Peterboro player and former Berlin manager. He is to be given a trial for an outfield job.

CHAMPIONSHIP HOPES

Movements on Canuck Circuit

George Needham and Hugh Shannon, ex-Canadian Leaguers, are now managing clubs in the Pennsylvania-West Virginia League. No, we can't find Curtis Templin on any of the teams.

"Wild Bill" Baker will appear with St. Thomas again. They came through with the necessary.

Here's a pretty little note from London: Manager Curley Blount and his Peterboro White Caps appear to have an excellent pitching corps. Beiting, Sterling, Cresswell, Tracey and Schettler will find many holes in the bats during the coming race.

The Erie club will wear grey road uniforms with black trimmings and the letter "E" worked in the left sleeve. Their home suits will be white with black decorations. Heavy grey coat sweaters will be sported by the Yankees.

Erie claims to have the best infield in the league. It will consist of Gygil, first; Smith, second; Behan, short, and Wiltse or Warner third.

The Ottawa Citizen says: Every day brings optimistic reports from the headquarters of the opposing clubs, so it looks as if the race in the Canadian League would be the closest on record. Last year there were only three teams—Ottawa, London and St. Thomas—in the fight. Erie, Hamilton, Peterboro and Toronto should be right up with the leaders this summer, while Rube Deneau and his Brantford team may come through with a surprise. Much interest will centre in the Hamilton club, as it means much to the league to have a winner at the ambitious city, which has had a joke team for the past two seasons. All the managers are now on the scene, and baseball doings will fill the air for the next five months. It is impossible to gauge the strength of the various clubs until the race gets under way, as half the players who sign up in the early season are dropped before the bell rings. Nevertheless, everything points to an exceptionally good fight.

So far it looks as though Eddie Itolly will be the only shortstop in the Canuck league. Ottawa, Brantford, Peterboro and the Saints are Terry Turner's whip has at last rounded into shape, so Dunlap, the London recurit, will be frozen out. experimenting, while Erie has Petie Behan, who throws like Walter Johnson and fields .500.

And still no word from Joe Byrne. We'll miss his "Let's go, old boy. Let's go" this season.

ERIE CLUB GET CATCHER FOR DUMMY TAYLOR

Erie, Pa., April 9. — Manager Smith, of Erie, announced this morning signing John A. Butler as catcher. Butler was formerly battery mate for Dummy Talyor, and is an ex-big leaguer.

LACROSSE

An executive meeting of the Peterboro Lacrosse Club was held last night in St. Alphonsus Lyceum. The members were all present and were enthusiastic, which goes to show that the game has been founded on a strong foundation. An order was made out to have six dozen sticks purchased and distributed.

They have not as yet arrived at any conclusion as to how to pass the sticks out, but some plan will no doubt decided upon whereby all the schools will receive an equal share. Considerable discussion took place, but nothing of any importance was passed. The meeting of everyone interested in the club on Monday night, when the delegates from the annual convention of the O.A.L.A. will report, should be largely attended.

Besides the several well known old lacrosse players of the district now residing here, Mr. Herb. Stephenson, another old Norwood player is now making his home here and will likely be out to assist the boys in re-organizing this season. Only a few years ago Herb was a crack athlete of the big Illinois Athletic Club of Chicago and has toured much territory as a member of the club's team.—Norwood Register.

FOOTBALL

The opening of the football season is scheduled for to-morrow (Friday) at 10 o'clock, when the "Monaghan Shinscrapers" and the "Transformer Roughnecks" will clash in a sudden death game. It will undoubtedy be a terrific struggle from beginning to end, as the "Roughnecks" have their reputation to uphold and the Shinscrapers will surely stick to their motto: "If you kill me, I'll kill you." An ambulance brigade has kindly promised to be in attendance. Excitement is running high and the betting odds are 2 to 1 on the "Shinscrapers." After considerable discussion the promoters have decided not to charge admission, as the date unfortunately clashes with one of the Matthews-Laing porker days, and also regret they cannot provide the spectators with hot-cross buns as they would get cold in transmission, but nevertheless a good time is assured. Players are especially asked to be on hand at 9.45. Kick off at 10 o'clock sharp.

THREE ARRESTS MADE.

Three strangers, giving their names as Guardhouse, Patterson and Carson, were arrested this afternoon by Detectives Newhall and Meagher. They will be charged with gambling.

CALL GENERAL STRIKE.

London, April 9.—The Syndicalists are taking measures to bring about a general strike in the autumn, according to The Standard, in order to procure an advance of five shillings ($1.20) in the weekly wage of all workers. So far, however, many of the responsible leaders of the trade unions oppose the idea.

LIBERAL POLICY DESTRUCTIVE DECLARES W. F. COCKSHUTT

Brantford Member Urges Necessity for Steadying Business and Encouraging Investment Just Now in Canada—Eighty Per Cent. of Farmers Live In East He Says — House Rises For Easter.

OTTAWA, April 9. — The House adjourned yesterday for a week after hearing speeches by J. O. Turriff, the Liberal member for Assiniboia and W. F. Cockshutt, the Conservative member for Brantford.

"A raw cold deal for the farmers and the common people, with everything for the interests," was Mr. Turriff's description of the budget. "The manufacturers get everything, the rest of Canadians get nothing and pay more. However, I am not going to blame the Premier or Minister of Finance. They were not elected under false colors. They are protectionists and servers of the corporations. But the people are getting a serious lesson as to what it means to elect men of that ilk to handle their public affairs."

"The refusal of the Finance Minister to do anything reasonable or fair for the farmers in the matter of agricultural implements synchronizes with the party flap-over of Senator Jones. If there was any man in Canada who had good reason to stand by the Liberal party it was this man. When some years ago the Liberal Government decided to make some reductions in the tariff he was granted a drawback, and last year the Massey-Harris Company, according to the Auditor-General's report, received some $165,000 in drawbacks. But because Liberalism believes that the time has come to grant free implements to the farmers, this man, who has had all the favors, turns upon them. He was made Senator and knighted by the kindly offices of the former Government. I don't know that the present leader of the Opposition put the hyphen in his name, but he did almost everything else for him.

Then the storm broke. Several Government members shouted sentences inaudible for the noise.

There was an avalanche of expressions. "Selfish, spoon-fed sulker," was the alliterative comment of one western Conservative.

Mr. Cockshutt followed in defence of the national policy. He said the farmer was never so well off as he is to-day. Mr. Turriff and other western Liberals were continually talking about the grievances of the grain growers, and demanding free wheat.

They seemed to forget that eighty per cent. of the farmers of the country lived in Ontario, Quebec and the Maritime Provinces, and were a unit against removing the wheat and the flour duties.

The Liberal party, Mr. Cockshutt declared, in conclusion, in attacking almost every industry, was following a policy of destruction instead of a policy of construction. At this time, of all others, it was important to steady our business enterprises and encourage capital to invest. If the factories ran full time and the railways had plenty of traffic to carry, the farmer would benefit from a splendid home market, and better times and greater prosperity would soon return to Canada.

Premier Borden has gone to Atlantic City for the Easter recess and will not return until April 20. Hon. Martin Burrell and Chairman Drayton of the Railway Commission have gone there also. Col. Hughes has gone south and Hon. C. J. Doherty will go to Winnipeg in connection with the St. Peters' Indian Reserve case. It is understood that C. F. Fullerton, K.C., of Winnipeg, who was to have handled the case for the Government finds himself unable to act.

Hon. J. D. Hazen will go to St. John, Hon. J. D. Reid to Prescott, and the others will be in Ottawa most of the week. Hon. T. W. Crothers is still in bed. He has been dangerously ill of erysipelas, but is now recovering.

Province Gets Control of English Harbor and Spanish Banks.

VANCOUVER, April 9. — Judgment favoring the Province of British Columbia, was handed down yesterday morning in the case of the Attorney-General of Canada vs. the Attorney-General of British Columbia, over the right to control the Spanish banks, by Justice Macdonald, in the Supreme Court. The case was dismissed with costs against the Dominion Government. In his judgment Judge Macdonald rules that English Bay is not a public harbor and is, therefore, under control of the provincial and not the Dominion Government.

The matter is of great importance to local fishery and harbor affairs and means that the valuable deposits of Spanish bank will not go to the Silica Sand Co., to which the Federal Government gave a lease.

Saved Man From Drowning.

KINGSTON, April 9. — Norman Johnson saved George Simmons from drowning yesterday when he broke through the ice in the harbor. Simmons went on the ice to release a punt which had been frozen in all winter. When he went through Johnson crawled out on the thin ice and with a long pole succeeded in getting Simmons out.

Sclater Succeeds Ewart.

LONDON, April 9.—Lt.-Gen. Sir Henry Crichton Sclater has been appointed adjutant-general to succeed Gen. Sir John Ewart, who resigned with Field Marshal Sir John French because of the Ulster difficulty.

His Natural Mistake.

"How do you like my new hat?"

"Haven't seen it."

"Why, that is it."

"Where?"

"There on the table."

"What! I thought that was a basket off the vegetable peddler's wagon."

The Invertebrate Knocker.

I'm much inclined to knock about
And hit a friend or two.
Pick up a thing to mock about
And make a great ado.

But still I rather hesitate
When things are getting hot,
For I am not a vertebrate,
And courage I have not.

A Precedent.

"Why can't they harness wild geese and train them to haul flying machines?"

"Would it be practical?"

"Why not? I know a man who was out on a bet."

Fatal Mistake.

"What was he discharged for?"

"Insubordination."

"What did he do?"

"He told the boss' favorite joke in company before the boss got around to it."

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

If you don't want adverse criticism don't put yourself in the way of receiving it, for that sort of thing is neither timid nor shrinking.

It might seem reasonable to suppose that the people who point out your duty to you are the ones to help you to do it, but that's mere supposition.

And it sometimes happens that the things you did not say are more to be regretted than the things you did say.

The impossible happens occasionally, and then everybody murmurs "Of course."

Those people who really don't mind are pretty apt to be those who can't.

Be patient. It may not be effective, but it at least is not so expensive as some other things might be.

Take a Lesson.

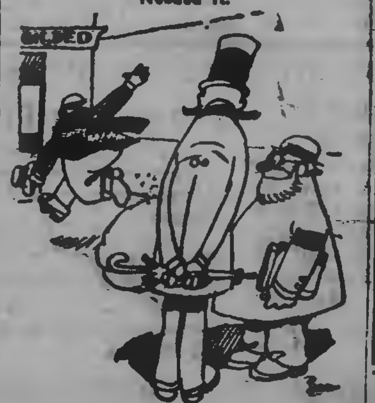
No odds how modest or forlorn
May be a fellow creature
He can to those who will observe
Be something of a teacher;
Yes, even from a humble mule,
The haw mule or the gee one,
A hint of conduct may be learned
And that is not to be one.

Not by examples that are set,
Marked out for one to follow,
May one perfection's goal attain;
The end is often hollow.
But seeing what one may avoid
And taking notice ample
Produces more concrete results
Than following the sample.

So when you see a gentleman
Bombastic, loud and silly
Who makes a riot of the night
That should be calm and stilly,
You know without a book or chart,
Without directions printed
That there are things you should not do
Though not a word is hinted.

So learn a lesson from the mule,
If one, perchance, is handy,
And be as different as you can
To marbles win, or candy;
And if a mule you do not find
His talents coarse displaying
Some man will make a substitute
Who does a lot of braying.

Needed It.



"He is going straight to Satan."

"He is?"

"I think so."

"Probably that is the reason he is stocking up with fire water."

RPOVIDE SIGNAL BELL AND SIGN

Grand Trunk Signal Engineer Tillett, of Montreal, was in the city yesterday, and informed a representative of The Review that to aid in the improvement of the Belleville line a signal bell is to be placed at the level crossing this side of Keene Station. When a train draws near the crossing a loud bell is rung which is audible for a long distance, and a large illuminated sign of "danger" is also provided.

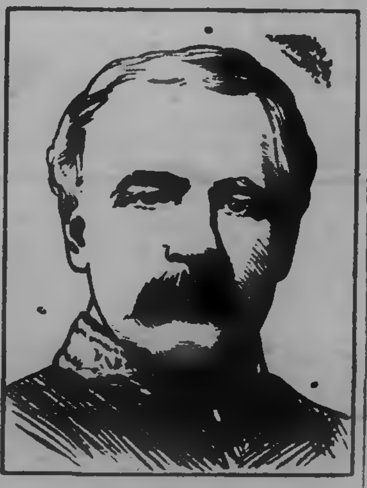
HE IS STILL IN THE HARNESS

HON. J. COSTIGAN IS VETERAN OF VETERAN LEGISLATORS.

He Is the Only Survivor of Canada's First Parliament Who Is Still Actively Engaged In Politics—He Has Been Fifty-Three Years In Arena of Public Life and Now Occupies a Desk In the Senate.

When a man has sat in the Legislature of New Brunswick for six years before Confederation, when he has had the honor of sitting in the first session of the first Parliament of the Dominion, and has continuously and uninterruptedly been in active politics since; when during the course of that long and eventful time he has never sustained defeat; when he has held an important Cabinet portfolio in the Administration of Sir John Macdonald for ten years; when he has been Secretary of State under the Government of Sir John Thompson; when he has been Minister of Marine and Fisheries under both the Bowell and Tupper Administrations; when he has occupied a seat in the Senate since 1907, and when now at the age of 79, he is hale and hearty, and physically and mentally strong, it is probable that such a man is exceedingly more interesting than the ordinary member of the human procession.

More than half a century in the political arena, in the public service, Hon. John Costigan is a real link with the stirring political past, the greatest political veteran of them all. He is the only man in Parliament to-day who was a member of the first Parliament of the Dominion. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Hon. Geo. E. Foster and the other veterans of the House of Commons are mere children in politics in comparison to this truly grand old man.



HON. JOHN COSTIGAN.

Like the majority of Canada's great Parliamentarians, Mr. Costigan came to Ottawa from the Maritime Provinces. He was born in the little County of Victoria in the Province of New Brunswick. His gifts for public life were soon asserted and at the age of twenty-six he was chosen to represent his native constituency in the Provincial Legislature. Those were the days when, as the late Thomas D'Arcy McGee so truly said, the tide of events had already shaped its course toward Confederation.

Often when in a reminiscent mood, Mr. Costigan is fond of harping back to those stirring days when men's souls were sorely tried, and he has been quoted as saying that the bogey of "Fenianism" was cleverly used to scare the Lower or Maritime Provinces into Confederation.

In that first Parliament young Costigan—he was then but 32—found himself associated with such giants as Macdonald, Brown, Cartier, Galt, Tilley, Peter Mitchell and D'Arcy McGee. Yet a search of Hansard of those early days will reveal the fact that Mr. Costigan took an important part in the debates, and as far back as May 23, 1882—at the age of 47—he entered the Government of Sir John Macdonald as Minister of Inland Revenue. It was in this year that Mr. Costigan moved his famous resolution in the House of Commons in favor of Gladstone's first Home Rule Bill, which was supported by, and drew from, Edward Blake what is considered to be the greatest speech of that distinguished Parliamentarian's career.

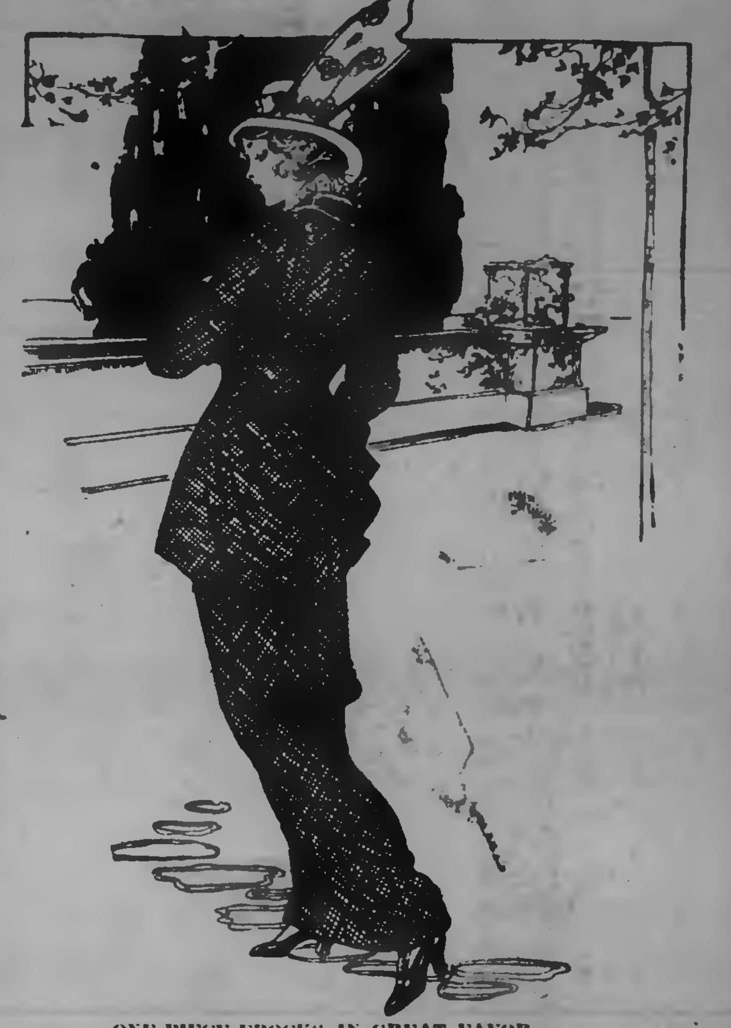
For reasons that are well known to all who are familiar with Canadian politics since '96, Mr. Costigan shortly afterwards found himself compelled to sever his connection with the party in whose ranks he had fought so long, and give his allegiance to Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

In 1907 he was appointed to the Senate, and in the deliberations of the Upper Chamber he has brought to bear a knowledge of conditions and a ripe political experience which have marked him as one of its most prominent members. He had the last word on the naval question last session, rising to address the Senate at nearly two o'clock in the morning.

On Sunday, Feb. 1st., Mr. Costigan quietly celebrated his 79th birthday. The years sit lightly upon his broad, rugged shoulders, and the mental vigor, which made him the worthy foeman of the great legislators of brave days of old, is apparently unimpaired now. A clean, well-spent life, a love of nature and the open air, hard work, and high thinking have brought their almost inevitable reward.

To the eternal credit of this great old gentleman it must be told that in all his long political career the breath of scandal has never once been raised against him. — Toronto Star

THE LATEST FROM DAME FASHION



ONE PIECE FROCKS IN GREAT FAVOR.

This costume of striped pussy willow taffeta, a delightful new stuff of the spring and summer, shows the wisdom of the present fashion for building frocks in one piece, since blouses and belts must be loose and hip draperies bouffant. Note how simple is the line of the frock, the hips built out by the peplum, cut lengthwise of the goods and draped into a bustle effect under the flaring panel back. Correctly hatted and booted with the correct buttoned boots, the frock is ideal for the afternoon.

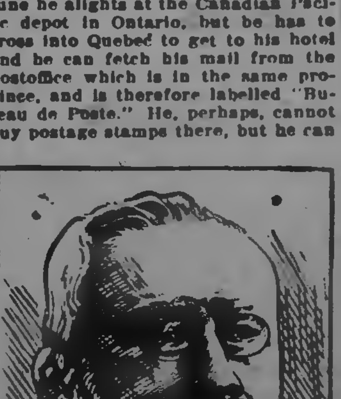
W. BROWN AGAIN CHIEF EXECUTIVE OF POINT FORTUNE

Half of His Village Is In Ontario and the Other Half Is In Quebec—The Mayor Is an Englishman, But Is Fully Bilingual That French Citizens Are as Loyal to Him as English—French Invaded Place.

Point Fortune is only a small town, like many hundreds of others scattered throughout lower Canada. Its inhabitants who work for a living, work in the sawmill, or the grist mill or in the stores, the bulk of its inhabitants don't work for a living, they are retired farmers mostly.

Point Fortune, however, has claims to distinction. The imaginary line which divides the Province of Quebec from the Province of Ontario runs through the town. Two-thirds of its inhabitants owe allegiance to the Legislature of Quebec, one-third to the Legislature of Ontario. It is sometimes a day full of bustle and importance on one side of the main street when the people of Ontario are electing representatives for the Toronto House, while on the other side of the street the Quebecoite doze peacefully in the knowledge that their tried and trusty representative is battling for the rights of their side of the street in Quebec.

When the occasional, very occasional visitor arrives in Point Fortune he alights at the Canadian Pacific depot in Ontario, but he has to cross into Quebec to get to his hotel and he can fetch his mail from the postoffice which is in the same province, and is therefore labelled "Bureau de Poste." He, perhaps, cannot buy postage stamps there, but he can secure "timbre postales" unless he cares to cross the street to the drug store and pay his little contribution to the Dominion revenue in English.



MR. WILLIAM BROWN.

Five years ago, French was an almost unknown language in Point Fortune, but to-day there is more French than English spoken there. The French-speaking citizens of the town with their high birthrate, assisted by many additions from points in Lower Quebec, have gradually forged ahead until to-day eighty per cent. of the population is French-speaking.

With all the change in the nature of the population, however, the inhabitants have remained faithful to their English-speaking mayor. Mr. William Brown has just been re-elected for the twelfth time. His name shows that he is not French, but he is equally at home in both languages, a fact which enables him to transact business. He is the postmaster of the town, and conducts a general store on the Quebec side of the street while he goes home every night to his home on the Ontario side.

Mr. Brown is also the magistrate of the town. He has been a magistrate holding a commission from the Quebec Government for forty-two years, and, when he found that culprits would cross the street into Ontario and set him at defiance, he applied to be placed on the commission in Ontario, and is now a Justice of the Peace in both provinces. No longer can a drunk and disorderly lurch across the main street and lean defiantly against a post in Ontario laughing at the Quebec officers and their writs.

A part of Point Fortune is in the County of Vaudreuil in Quebec, the other part in the County of Prescott in Ontario. Mr. Brown has been warden of Vaudreuil County for three times, but he has also had an experience in Ontario municipal politics, having served on the Prescott County Council for several years.

Applauded the Lightning.

In "The Country of Sir Walter Scott" Charles S. Olcott tells a story of Scott as a tiny boy of three or thereabouts. He was staying at his grandfather's farm at Sandy Knowe, under the shadow of the old feudal tower of Smailholm:

One day he was missed during a violent thunderstorm, and the household set out in search of him. He was found lying on his back on the rocks, kicking his heels in the air and clapping his hands with delight as he watched the vivid lightning, and as one flash followed another, each more brilliant than the one before, he would shout: "Bonnie Bonnie! Dae it again! Dae it again!"

Ellen Terry To Lecture.

Miss Ellen Terry, who is 65 years old, has just made arrangements with the London Entertainments Syndicate to give a series of lectures on Shakespeare in Australia and New Zealand. She intends to sail from England giving the first of thirty to fifty lectures in the town hall, Melbourne.

When baking bread or using the oven for other purposes, remember that it is an economy of fuel if vegetables are cooked, in covered dishes, in the oven at the same time.

So that endless stream pour on—the world passes in review at the docks in old Quebec, Halifax and St. John. The rich and the poor, the gypsy and the millionaire, the Briton and the foreigner, year in and year out, this seemingly endless human chain pours through the gateways of the promised Land.

The wide world parades through the concourse at Windsor Station, Montreal, every day. If you doubt the truth of that assertion or deem it too sweeping, just spend a few hours there any day and you will catch a glimpse of the "world and his wife" travelling to and from the four corners of the earth. It is the great nationality clearing house of the Dominion; it has only one competitor, too. That is the Winnipeg station—the gateway of the West—from which newcomers from the ends of the earth scatter for the free land and the big wheat fields of the boundless prairie.

Inside the big waiting room other crowds congregate waiting for their trains. It was warmer here and tedious hours were passing more rapidly and more comfortably.

Very noticeable is the increase in care and consideration given to the emigrant. Not so many years ago vast numbers of these had to cross the ocean in open steerage, herded together like cattle. Now the word steerage is practically abolished—from our British steamers at any rate. "Third Class" is how the emigrant travels to-day, and "Third Class" is not so very much worse than the average second-class hotel on land. But there were still inconveniences which the emigrant had to suffer, and one of the worst of these was the long waiting in the cold, early hours of the morning between the arrival of the trains and the embarkation on the steamer.

It is down below in the Immigration rooms of Windsor Station where the real scenes are to be found. Here from the ends of the earth strange people gather. On one side is a "store" where they can purchase what they require, but these travellers have few wants, other than food and that of simple quality. The place is warm, and with a blanket on the floor or a bench, or even without that, they sleep like children. Families camp there; it is no uncommon sight to find one with bundles piled high around, sleeping in a corner. By day there is something doing always. Scattered around the room are little groups playing cards, the table being a bench, a box or a cheap suit case. A mouth organ, a violin, or a wheezy accordion makes "melody," for it is rare indeed that there is no musical (?) programme being provided.

There is one character always in evidence. He is at the docks and at the station. He is not an arrival—he is generally waiting for a friend, and he is always anxious to converse with the casual visitor. This character is the man who has made a success of things in his own way, and who is always willing to impart his story to the more recent arrival. The casual visitor met him at the docks at St. John the other day. On this occasion the character was a Swede. "My first year I work on railroads, I make four hundred dollars. I took one homestead the next spring and work for a farmer near. He break for me ten acres and I pay him $40. I build small house on homestead and live on homestead. He pay me wages too. That winter I go into the woods and made $160, and in the spring I had $200 and buy a team of horses. I got seed and sow my ten acres in wheat and go off to work. I broke ten acres more early enough to sow oats on them. And later I sow five acres of flax of fresh sod breaking. I work hard all the time, very hard, but that fall I had $250 from my ten acres of wheat, $100 from my five acres of flax, and three hundred bushels of oats for next summer feed.

Plowed all the twenty-five acres of land and that winter I went into camp with my team. I had hard luck, too. One of my horses snagged himself and I had to shoot him. That was $250 loss. But by spring I had $300 with the other horse and returned to my farm to leave no more. The next summer I had good crops again and bought another team. When I came to deed my homestead this fall I had 120 acres ready for the seeder next spring and $700, besides 7 horses and colts, three cows and pigs and hens, like any farmer. I thought I'd go home for my brother and his family; and here we are. We go out to-night to my homestead in the Canadian West, and my brother will soon have one too. We are tired of Sweden, me and my brother with his children, where there was no hope for a man unless he had money, so we came here to live. My brother's five children will have a chance that is their right, a chance their country denied them. Canada is the place for all: English, Swedes and everybody who is willing to work and think and act with thought. God bless Canada, the land of the free, which knows no rich and poor, no disinherited classes and privileged classes as older lands across the sea, said the Swedish workingman in closing, a quiver in his voice as he spoke.

SECOND SIGHT.

Study of Phenomena Reveals Some Remarkable Facts.

The newspapers are constantly reporting cases of remarkable dreams and second sight, and that there is a good deal of truth in them is not denied by those who have studied the subjects.

On one occasion the Bishop of London told his congregation at St. Paul's, Harringay, that a girl who attended a confirmation service in Westminster Abbey suddenly exclaimed to her mother: "Do you see them?" "See what?" asked the mother, and the child replied, "Angels on each side of the bishop."

The bishop also mentioned the case of five girls whose father, feeling ill, went to lie down. A little later, when the youngest daughter was sent to bed, she ran from her room calling, "Come out, there are two angels walking up the staircase." A few moments afterwards the child again called out, "The angels are walking down the staircase and father is walking between them." All the five girls declared that they saw the vision, and, when they went to their father's room, they found him dead.

Prophetic dreams are not so rare as the average person imagines. For instance, a very remarkable case of telepathy was reported from Germany a little while back. The cashier of a bank fell asleep one evening after eating a hearty meal, and dreamt that two men had entered the bank where he was employed to set to work to open a safe.

When the cashier awoke it was ten o'clock, and thinking that the dream might be a warning, he strolled down to the bank, which was about a mile from his home. Reaching the building he found that a side door had been forced. Hurriedly calling a couple of policemen, the three entered and found two men exactly resembling those the cashier had seen in his dream drilling a hole in a safe for the purpose of inserting an explosive.

Early one morning an aged lady living in Milan awoke with a terrible nightmare, and shrieked, "They are about to kill my boy, Leopolodo!" Early on the following morning her son, Leopolodo, was found murdered in a little back street of Milan, having been shot through the head. From the appearance of the body, doctors were able to prove that the murder had been committed at three o'clock in the morning — the very hour when his mother, in her dream, saw him being killed. The bereaved parent described to the police the man whom she had seen in her sleep attacking her boy, and a man answering the description was eventually arrested and found to be the assassin.

A clergyman, living near Edinburgh, dreamt one night, when on a visit to that city, that his house was on fire, and that one of his children was in imminent peril of being burned to death. The clergyman rose, and rode home with all speed. Arriving there he found the place on fire, and was just in time to save one of his children, who, in the excitement, had been forgotten.

WOMEN SWINDLERS.

Some of the Cleverest Rogues Are of the Fair Sex.

"It has been said that women never make good criminals, but experience has taught me that in many ways the members of the fair sex who take to crime as a means of livelihood are often far cleverer than their male rivals," said a London detective recently.

Two of the smartest thieves who ever "worked" the Continent were an Englishwoman of middle age and her daughter. They robbed hotels wholesale in France, and made in this way within a few months over $15,000. With this money they set up a swell establishment in Paris, with carriages, horses and servants. They found their way into society, and as a result a wealthy merchant became susceptible to the charms of the daughter, who, by the way, was exceptionally pretty. An engagement followed, and the couple were to be married within a month.

A certain jeweler in a large way of business in London, a good deal of whose valuable property had been transferred to the pockets of numerous shoplifters, asked me to spend a few days in his shop as an assistant, and keep my eyes open for thieves. I agreed, and the day following my appearance behind the counter, a fashionably-dressed young lady strolled in and asked to be shown some diamond rings and brooches.

Whilst she was examining the tray of jewels I placed before her, a barrel-organ stopped at the door and commenced to grind out its music. Presently a little monkey hopped into the shop, and the young lady immediately placed something in its outstretched paw. The monkey darted away, and the man with the organ disappeared also.

A second later I missed a ring from the tray, and calling to the proprietor of the shop to detain the lady, I dashed after the organ-grinder and his monkey. Catching them up, I found the missing ring in the man's pocket. He also had in his possession several other articles of stolen jewelry, which had been banded to the monkey from various shops by the lady, who, it subsequently transpired, was his wife.

Another female shoplifter whom I caught red-handed carried in her arms a fluffy-coated pet dog, which she was in the habit of placing with childlike simplicity on the counters of the shops she entered. The dog was trained to thieve, and its owner had only to give it a touch on the tail to indicate the moment of action. Quick as a flash the dog's agile paw would seize some small article of value within reach and conceal it in the confusion of downy fur that covered its legs.

To be a successful sharp one must have iron nerves, absolute self control, and abstemious habits. The former two are not as a rule possessed by women, and this being so it is a remarkable fact that some of the cleverest card sharpers of the present day are of the fair sex. Female sharps are seldom brought to justice; their victims, mostly of the sterner sex, not caring to court publicity by prosecuting them.

I have found that the average female pickpocket is far smarter than the man who plies the same game. This is probably due to the fact that her hands are smaller. A woman thief who was charged with picking a pocket was acquitted owing to the efforts of her counsel she employed to defend her. Before leaving the court she walked up to the man of law and thanked him, and he assured her that he had never for a moment doubted her innocence, and that her thanks were quite unnecessary. Half an hour later he missed his gold watch. The woman had cleverly picked his pocket while speaking to him.

QUEST OF EL DORADO

That Elusive Land of Gold and Jewels in South America.

Guiana is bounded on the north by the great river Orinoco and on the south by the still greater river Amazon. These two grand rivers are connected with one another, the Cisiquiare, a branch from the Orinoco, falling into the Rio Negro, a tributary of the Amazon. Within Guiana itself are many rivers of very considerable size.

The kingdom of El Dorado was reputed to exist somewhere between the Rio Branco and the Essequibo, called by the Indians the Brother of the Orinoco. Manoa, the capital, was said to be somewhere between the Rio Branco and the Rupunuui, a tributary of the Essequibo. From the thirties of the sixteenth century some eighteen expeditions had been sent by the Spaniards to Guiana in search of the golden kingdom. Diego de Ordas, one of the captains of Cortes at the conquest of Mexico, led the first attempt in 1531. After him followed many a brave cavalier, but all was in vain, and disasters as well as failure attended nearly all the expeditions.

From a state paper in the public record office, London, it appears that in 1580 persons who traveled in America had reported that there was a place where the women wore great plates of gold, covering their whole bodies like armor. In every cottage pearls were to be found; in some houses a peck. Banqueting houses were built of crystal, with pillars of massive silver, some of gold. Pieces of gold as big as a man's fist were to be found in the beds of some of the rivers. Raleigh read accounts of these expeditions, but their want of success did not deter him from attempting to find the golden region.—Blackwood's Magazine.

A Singular Union

It Was For the Purpose of Spending a Fortune.

By SADIE OLCOTT

George Underhill on coming of age had everything to live for. He stepped into a fortune of half a million, or $25,000 a year; was in excellent health, a favorite with his friends, especially attractive to girls, and the management of his estate was likely to give him enough to do to put an edge on his leisure moments. This was the outlook before the young man the day he was twenty-one years old.

But on that same day he noticed a swelling in his neck about the size of a hazelnut. He had never had an excrescence of any kind on his body and could not understand the sudden appearance of this one. He stood before a mirror looking at it wonderingly. He pinched it, and it hurt a little, though not much. He thought he would show it to a doctor and get his opinion upon it, but since he expected to be busy with his guardian and the lawyers nearly all day, passing the papers in receiving his estate, he deferred the matter till the morrow.

During his birthday he was so taken up with affairs pertaining to his property that he forgot all about the swelling in his neck till preparing for bed, when he noticed it again. He was a bit troubled about it and resolved that the first thing he would do in the morning would be to show it to his physician, Dr. Franklin. So as soon as the office hour of the physician came round George was admitted to his consulting room.

George did not leave Dr. Franklin's office for nearly an hour, and when he did he was in a very different mental condition from when he entered it. The lump indicated an incurable disease. The doctor tried in every way to avoid telling him this, for the double reason that his patient would suffer in mind as well as in body and his knowing that he had not long to live would hasten the end. George, however, gathered from him that he had anywhere from a few months to a few years on earth. As to how much he would suffer the doctor did not tell him. Possibly he did not know himself. He convinced his patient that he had better remain ignorant of what the disease was.

George was a philosophic fellow, and when he had recovered, so far as recovery was possible from the shock, he began to lay plans for spending the brief unexpired term of his life in a way to alleviate the condition to the best advantage. Miss Alice Woodbridge was his favorite among his girl acquaintances, and he thought he would like to have her companionship for the brief season of life left to him. He called upon her, stated the case and asked her to be his wife, agreeing to settle half his fortune upon her, the other half to be spent in such comforts or pleasures or journeys as would help him to forget his coming demise.

Miss Woodbridge asked for a few days to consider the proposition, but, being a girl with an eye to improving her condition, when she gave her answer insisted that the whole amount of his estate be settled on her except the income during his life, which she considered ample for his purpose. Whether or no she was right he did not stop to consider, but broke off the negotiations.

George tried several other girls. One who had no especial affection for him refused him on the ground that she did not care to tie herself up for a money consideration to a man who would be in a dying condition during their married life. Others balked at this or at that till at last George had well nigh gone the rounds of the girls he would care to marry. One he had not tried. She was Lucy Ellis, an amiable, happy-go-lucky girl, from whose shoulders trouble rolled off easily and whose financial necessities were such that she was quite familiar with the pawnshop.

To Miss Ellis George concluded to make a proposal, but, being somewhat discouraged in his quest for a companion in his trouble, offered her much better terms than any he had yet proposed. After modestly telling her that he thought his income would suffice as well as a larger amount for the purpose of making him forget what was coming he promised to settle his whole estate upon her if she would marry him.

To his surprise, she threw her arms about his neck and said, with tears in her eyes: "We'll spend it all. And what will a lot of money be compared with the remembrance that we shall have at least a short time together?"

"But," he protested, "what will you live on when I am gone?"

"Why, I won't be any worse off for money than I am now, will I?"

She looked up at him from a pair of ingenuous, childlike eyes through her tears, and then and there his heart was won.

"Very well," he said. "Be it as you say."

Nevertheless it was not as she said, for George on the day of the wedding, unknown to her, placed $100,000 in trust for her. He did not give it to her direct, for he had no confidence in her holding on to it. Since she took no part whatsoever in the management of his affairs, he was enabled to do this without her discovering that it had been done.

George found in Lucy Ellis just what he needed. Perhaps she was too sympathetic, but sympathy in dealing with a sufferer is a good fault, and George would have rather had her sympathetic than cold. But his swelling grew larger and pained him, and he needed devotion as an invalid rather than a spender of money. For awhile after their marriage they spent money like water. In this George found his wife all that was to be desired. But his sufferings gradually increased, and he was obliged to give up pleasure seeking.

We can never tell for what persons are fitted until they are tried. Lucy, of whom her husband had expected nothing as a nurse, rose to the occasion. Her sunny disposition proved a great comfort to him. When he was much cast down, instead of speaking words of encouragement which she did not feel she wept with him. This did him more good than telling him what he knew was false, and he would say to himself: "Poor little girl! She suffers for me more than I suffer. I must brace up for her sake."

George's condition grew gradually worse. He would not have doctors to visit him, because he had been told that they could do him no good. Dr. Franklin came to see him occasionally and was now and then called in to effect some temporary relief. George asked him one day to tell him the nature of his disease, but the doctor convinced him that it was better for him to remain in ignorance of it.

One day Mrs. Underhill received a note from Dr. Franklin asking her to bring her husband to his office. Many cures were being announced for different diseases by investigators, but most of them excited wild hopes only to be crushed. A cure for her husband's disease had been discovered which—at any rate, in certain cases—gave temporary relief. She might tell this to the invalid, giving him to understand that the relief was expected to be only temporary. Any relief was acceptable, and, ordering a car, George was carried to the physician's office.

Dr. Franklin covered his neck with sheet lead with a hole in it large enough to admit the swelling. What else he did George could not see, and, as for Lucy, she did not understand what it meant. The doctor was bringing to bear upon the swelling some invisible current, but what it was she could not know without an altogether uncommon scientific knowledge.

Several visits were made to Dr. Franklin's office, and the swelling on the patient's neck began to recede, and after awhile it became diminutive. Then one day Lucy took up a morning newspaper and read to her husband an item of news. It was an announcement that the radium rays had been brought to bear on cancer and that the disease had been in certain cases undoubtedly interrupted. Whether or not radium would permanently cure it the operators had not considered themselves prepared to announce.

"Lucy," said George, looking at his wife with hope lighting his eye, "I shouldn't wonder if that's what my trouble is, and Dr. Franklin is applying radium in my case."

"I'm sure it is!" cried the wife with that impulsive embrace which was her treatment for both good and bad conditions.

George was to visit the doctor that morning. When he and his wife reached the office Lucy said to the physician:

"Doctor, my husband has cancer, and a cure has been found."

"Who told you that?"

"The newspapers."

"Well," replied the doctor thoughtfully, "we are not yet ready to announce that we have found a cure, but we feel very hopeful."

"You mean you are certain, but you won't say so for fear of raising false expectations."

"We're pretty well satisfied that radium is death to the cancer scourge."

The Underhills left the doctor's office a happy couple. Their visits to the doctor were continued, and with the continuance of the treatment the swelling returned to its original size. When it had almost entirely disappeared Lucy said to her husband one day:

"George, don't you think it time we were beginning to get rid of some of this property that I married you to help spend? We haven't used half the income."

"That's just what I was thinking about. I fancy I can keep up the treatment as well in one city as another. Suppose we go abroad?"

"It's just the time of year to go, especially to Italy."

"We'll do it. By the bye, sweetheart, this discovery of radium as a cure for my trouble just came in time to prevent you having to spend our fortune alone."

"It wouldn't have been half the fun, would it?"

"I don't suppose it would."

She gave him a kiss, after which he wrote a note to a steamship company asking for room on the vessel to sail that day two weeks and to his banker for a letter of credit.

They sailed in February for a trip to Naples and other Italian cities, and before their departure so great had become the confidence by the medical profession that efforts were being made to preserve the radium producing grounds in the United States for the benefit of the sufferers of the dread disease, which has always been one of the scourges of humanity.

And now George and Lucy Underhill are touring in Europe, but the money they were married purposely to devote to keeping up the husband's spirits is not needed. They have all the comforts and luxuries they require without encroaching on their capital.

A CRIPPLE FROM RHEUMATISM

RIDGETOWN, ONT., May 21st. 1913.

"Your "Fruit-a-tives" cured me of Rheumatism. It was the only medicine that made any impression on me. I was a terrible sufferer from Rheumatism. I was laid up for four winters with Sciatica and Muscular Rheumatism, and was a cripple completely, not being able to do anything. I doctored with four different physicians, but they did not help me. Other advertised remedies were equally unsatisfactory, and I have taken several.

Some neighbor of mine told me that "Fruit-a-tives" helped him, and I took them faithfully every day and the result was marvellous. For over two years now, I have been free from any Rheumatic pains whatever, and give "Fruit-a-tives" the full credit for making a remarkable cure".

TO AUGMENT REVENUE.

Hon. I. B. Lucas' New Bill Will Gain Province $600,000 a Year.

TORONTO, April 8.—An augmented provincial revenue of between $600,000 and $700,000 is provided for in a bill to amend the supplementary revenue act of the province, which was introduced in the Legislature by Hon. I. B. Lucas, Provincial Treasurer, yesterday afternoon. The bill, which follows along the lines indicated by Mr. Lucas in his budget speeches this year and a year ago as well, raises the taxes all round on banks, insurance and loan companies, trust companies, racing associations, telephone, telegraph and railway companies. Banks will pay twice as much, life insurance companies 75 per cent. more, fire insurance companies, will bring in $40,000 extra, loan companies 33 per cent. more, trust companies will pay a one per cent. levy on income and telegraph companies will be taxed twice as much. Railway taxes are also slightly raised.

On a date to be fixed by the lieutenant-governor in council, legislation comes into effect which will ordain that no Chinese, Japanese or other person of the Oriental race may employ in any capacity, or have under his direction or control, any female white person in any factory, restaurant or laundry in Ontario. This measure yesterday was passed through the Legislature following a non-partisan debate.

Some plain speaking was indulged in by Dr. Forbes Godfrey, who reintroduced a measure prohibiting employment of girls in Chinese restaurants. He claimed that the eastern idea of morals was so primitive and human life was counted so lightly that it was almost criminal to allow the present associations to continue. Even girls who, from a philanthropic spirit, had gone into foreign quarters to teach, had been led into ruin, and one of the greatest temptations was the "dope joint."

The bill introduced by A. C. Pratt (S. Norfolk) for the appointment of a racing commission, which would do away with the injustice now alleged to exist at meets was laid over.

Capitalship Costs.

One of the results of the advent of the Government to Delhi is to throw a very heavy burden on the municipal exchequer of that none too flourishing city. The Delhi municipality is faced with a deficit of a lakh and a quarter for the current year and a further deficit of the same amount for 1914-15. It is not likely that the elevation of Delhi to the dignity of an imperial capital will increase the rateable value of the old city—an increase which can only come from increased trade and population. The need of making Delhi decently habitable will involve, therefore, a heavy burden on the ratepayers unless the Government shoulders the liability. There is a good deal of justice in the contention that the Government ought to help the municipality liberally to meet the obligations which the transfer of the capital has caused. As a matter of fact, the cost of making old Delhi clean and sanitary ought to form part of the estimates of the cost of the new capital. Government has already tried to shoulder the cost of various improvements necessitated by the transfer on to other accounts, but to make the poverty-stricken municipality of Delhi responsible for making its new abode respectably clean strikes us as particularly mean.

Wireless as "Whip."

LONDON, April 8.—Wireless telegraphy was used as a "whip" for the first time in connection with Monday's Home Rule division.

Sir Robert Balfour and Hon. Joseph Martin, who were aboard the Lusitania, received an urgent message from the Government whip while still at sea. Reaching Liverpool, they took the earliest train and arrived at Westminster about an hour before the division occurred.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson II.—Second Quarter, For April 12, 1914.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Luke xxiv, 13-35. Memory Verses, 31, 32—Golden Text, Rom. viii, 34—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

This study might bear the title of the one for March 22, "Lessons by the Way," and it is also a good introduction to next week's lesson on "The Cost of Discipleship," for nothing helps one to be a disciple like the power of His resurrection (Phil. iii, 10). There were five appearances of the risen Christ on that first resurrection day, to Mary Magdalene, to the other women, to Peter, to these two men and in the evening to the ten (Thomas being absent). That which Jesus was and did during the forty days between His resurrection and ascension speaks to me of that which the saints will be and do in our resurrection bodies, for we shall be like Him.

As they talked of Him and of the things which had happened Jesus Himself drew near and went with them (verses 13-15). Many have been refreshed by the fact that He keeps a record of those who think upon Him (Mal. iii, 16). I like the words "Jesus Himself," "I myself," "Jesus shewed Himself," "He gave Himself," "His own self bare our sins" (verses 36, 39); John xxi, 1, 14; Acts i, 3; Gal. ii, 20; I Pet. ii, 24). No one can fill or satisfy the heart like "Himself," and we do not wonder that the psalmist said, "My meditation of Him shall be sweet; I will be glad in the Lord" (Ps. civ, 34).

The men asked if He was a stranger because He did not seem to know the great events of the past few days, and they told Him all (verses 19-24), evidently with much sadness and disappointment. They talked as if they had never heard that He was to die and rise from the dead on the third day, though He had repeatedly told them that it would be even so (Luke ix, 22; xviii, 31-34). It is written concerning John, whom Jesus loved, who leaned upon His bosom, that even he, as well as Peter knew not that Jesus must rise again from the dead (John xx, 9). This should lead us to ask ourselves in all sincerity if we are really believing all that is written concerning His present ministry, His coming again and His kingdom, and our share by grace in it all.

He told them that their difficulty was that they did not believe all that the prophets had spoken and were therefore foolish men (verses 25, 26), and that evening He said to the eleven and those gathered with them, that all things must be fulfilled, which were written in the law of Moses, and in the prophets, and in the Psalms concerning Him (verses 33, 44).

Many of these still unfulfilled prophecies are today wholly neglected or spiritualized into mere nothings. Take for example Israel becoming a righteous nation, Jerusalem the throne of the Lord, His feet standing again upon the Mount of Olives, the nations ceasing from war, Israel filling the earth with fruit, the whole earth filled with His glory (Isa. ii, 4; xi, 9; xxvii, 6).

The whole topic of all Scripture may be summed up in "the sufferings of Christ and the glory that shall follow" (verse 26 and I Pet. i, 11), of which He spoke to them as He walked, opening to them the Scriptures, and expounding to them in all the Scriptures the things concerning Himself (verses 7, 32). I think we may be certain that He did not fail to expound Gen. iii, 15, 21, 24; xxii, 8; Ex. xii; Lev. xvi; Num. xix; Deut. xviii; Ps. xxii; Isa. liii; and who can tell how many more. Is it your custom when you read your Bible to pray, Lord, by Thy Spirit, open to me this Scripture?

He made as though He would have gone further when they reached the end of their journey, for He does not intrude unless desired. It was not difficult to constrain Him to abide, for He is glad to enter every door that is opened to Him (verses 28, 29; Rev. iii, 20). As He sat at meat with them He took bread and blessed and broke and gave to them, and He was known of them in breaking of bread (verses 30, 31, 35). My own conviction is that they saw in His hands, as He broke the bread, the marks of the nails and thus recognized Him, even as the same evening He convinced the disciples that it was Himself by showing them His hands and feet (verse 39). As they knew Him He vanished out of their sight, so shall we do when we shall have obtained our resurrection bodies.

They rose up the same hour and started back to Jerusalem with such a heartburn as they probably had not known before. Compare the inward burning of Ps. xxxix, 3; Jer. xx, 9; Job xxxii, 18-20. The eight mile walk back to the city did not seem long to them, as they no doubt rehearsed all that He had told them. They found the disciples and others gathered together, talking of His resurrection, and of how He had appeared to Simon; so they told their wonderful story, and as they spake Jesus Himself stood in the midst of them and saith unto them, "Peace be unto you" (verse 36). The two men were sad as He joined them in their walk, and He cared and spent several hours comforting them by the Scriptures. The disciples are terrified and affrighted and troubled, and He quieted them by the revelation of Himself.

Nothing more is needed in all our troubles than Himself and His word. That our resurrection bodies of flesh and bones can be handled, and that in them we can eat and drink, is clear from verses 39-43, and chapter xxii, 29.

DEATH OF CY WARMAN.

Poet and Author, He Wrote Words of a World-popular Song.

CHICAGO, April 8.—Cy Warman died yesterday after a long illness from paralysis.

Warman was born in 1855 near Greenup, Ills., on a homestead presented to his father by the Government for gallant service in the Mexican war. He became known as the "Poet of the Rockies." His stories about railroad men were based on personal experiences at Salida, Col., where in the early eighties he worked as a wiper, a fireman and a locomotive engineer. He went to Denver and became a newspaper reporter. He later began publishing a railway journal. Meantime he was writing short poems and bits of prose, which after a time caught the public fancy. The poet later met and was married to Miss Marie Myrtle Jones, who inspired the lines, "For Sweet Marie," a song which has been popular all over the world.

Mr. Warman was connected with the Grand Trunk Railway's literary department, and was well known in Ontario.

Evidence From Sleuths.

MONTREAL, April 8.—Judge Lavergne yesterday granted the application of lawyer for Edward Beck for the appointment of a commission to go to New York to take the evidence of Burns' detectives, which, it is alleged, supplied Mr. Beck with the material upon which he based articles in a weekly paper against certain City Hall officials, for which he has been arrested by Ald. Thomas O'Connell. Judge Leet was appointed to take the evidence.

Bird Ballast—a Storm Sign.

"What is all that great crowd of crows doing?" we asked the aged lighthouse keeper.

"Them crows there," the old man answered, "is takin' on ballast—a sign of storm."

The beach, white in the winter sunshine, was covered with crows. They seemed to be feeding busily.

"No; they ain't feedin'," said the keeper. "They're swallerin' sand; ballast, you know—ballast for the high winds that are comin'. Yep, a storm is doo."

The crows rose, a trifle heavily, and flew back inland again. Soon, however, a fresh lot made a second great black blot on the white beach.

"Yep, them's my barometer," said the old keeper; "crows swallerin' sand for ballast—a sign a storm is doo."—New York Tribune.

Proud of His Infamy.

When the Volturno burned in mid-ocean a few of the men rushed the boats and were knocked down by the captain. What becomes of such men in after days? Do they hide in shame from their fellows, fearful that they may be recognized and their infamy proclaimed? Not necessarily. A public librarian was once visited by a man who came to him for a book on notable shipwrecks. He searched the pages eagerly, then pointed out a passage referring to a seaman who tried to take a woman's place in a lifeboat and had been shot by the captain. "I'm that man," he declared, proud that his exploit should appear in print, and offered to show the shot wound to support his claim.—Chicago News.

CELEBRATED ENGLISH JURIST RETIRES FROM THE BENCH

Sporting Justice, Who Was Described as the Most Popular Man at the British Bar, Has Been Equally Well-Liked in the Judiciary and Is the Hero of Many a Funny Story—A Born Poacher.

In the retirement, though ill-health, of Mr. Justice Bucknill, the English Bench loses one of its most distinguished ornaments, a judge who has discharged his duties with zeal and ability, and who has won the respect of everyone who appeared before him. He has always been what is known as a lenient criminal judge, his sentences never erring on the side of severity, and in one instance only has an appeal from him to the Court of Criminal Appeal succeeded, and that resulted merely in a slight reduction of sentence. Sir Thomas Bucknill, who is 69, has been a judge of the King's Bench Division of the High Court of Justice since 1899.

"If I were asked to decide who is the most popular man at the Bar," the late Sir Frank Lockwood once said, "I should say Tommy Bucknill." This popularity he maintained to the full on the Bench, as, indeed, in every circle in which he has turned. Sir Thomas Bucknill has been a thorough sportsman; not even the late Mr. Justice Grantham had better claim to be called a "sporting-judge."

For many years he was a well-known figure on many racecourses, and none was more familiar at the Bar Point-to-Point Steeplechases. Yet with all his devotion to the sport

he himself has declared that he never made a bet. Fishing, among other sports, he was also keen on, and he recently described himself as a born poacher. Once in Wales he showed a friend how to "tickle" trout. His movements were watched by a local lad, and on returning to the neighborhood the following year he was told the boy was in prison for "tickling" trout. During one Long Vacation he happened to be acting as Vacation Judge, and accordingly was available to deal with urgent matters either at his home or in Chambers. His home is at Epsom—he once sat for the Epsom Division in Parliament—and one day, during this particular vacation, he was out shooting when he was accosted by two legal gentlemen, and there and then granted an interim injunction in a certain pending action. Weeks later the action came on for trial, and one of the counsel engaged remarked that his lordship might possibly recollect that this was the case in which he granted an injunction when out shooting.

"Yes, I do," was the reply, "for I nearly killed a pheasant, a barrister, and a solicitor with one shot."

Once again Mr. Justice Bucknill was similarly interrupted when acting as vacation judge, but the recreation in which he was then indulging was golf. In his whimsical style he told the story to the Croydon Chamber of Commerce thus:

I had intimated that I might be found at home between twelve and two. One day, shortly before the stroke of twelve, I went to the golf club, and was about to drive off a ball, when I heard a voice behind me calling, "Mr. Justice Bucknill! Mr. Justice Bucknill." I then saw two gentlemen in high hats and with brief bags. I held a court there on the Downs and gave somebody an injunction which he did not deserve, for he put me off my stroke.

His lordship's humor once had exercise in the perpetration of a harmless and delightful practical joke. He was in the mood when on circuit to give a dinner to the members of his police escort, who, when they arrived at the dining place and proceeded to take their places at the tables, found themselves sandwiched in between members of the Bar. Neither counsel nor officers knew that the others had been invited, and probably to that was mainly due the complete success of the gathering.

Some time ago a reporter in Wales took his 10-year-old son to the assizes, at which Mr. Justice Bucknill was presiding. The boy's interest in his father's work attracted the attention of the judge, who sent a note from the Bench addressed to "The Little Boy by the Table," which read: "I see a nice boy watching his father, and I send him a shilling for his money-box.—T. T. Bucknill."

An Open Air School.

Over sixty girls are being taught in the open-air elementary school at Dyfatty, Swansea, notwithstanding biting winds and sharp frost. It is stated that the average weight of these scholars has increased by nearly three pounds during the past three months, whilst children in the enclosed school had only slightly increased in weight during the same period.

A CURIOUS EXPLOSIVE.

More Powerful Than Guncotton, Yet Safe in Careless Hands.

One of the new high explosives is so solid under ordinary conditions that it is perfectly safe and entirely practical to make billiard balls of it and play a game with them. It can safely be compressed to a greater degree than any other explosive now in use, as blocks of it can be compressed hard enough for billiard balls. A compressed block can then be sawed into smaller blocks, using a steel handsaw. The small blocks may then be placed on a lathe and turned until perfectly round balls have been made.

On the billiard table any ordinary knocks will not rouse the latent power of the explosive. If a careless player happened to drop a lighted match on one of the balls after lighting his cigarette it might catch fire, when it would burn rather slowly. Yet it is much more powerful than guncotton and, unlike guncotton, it does not deteriorate. Rifle bullets have been fired into a block of it at a distance of about sixty five feet without causing it to explode. Explosion is obtained by using a special form of detonator. The new explosive is made largely from coal tar derivatives treated with other chemicals.—Saturday Evening Post.

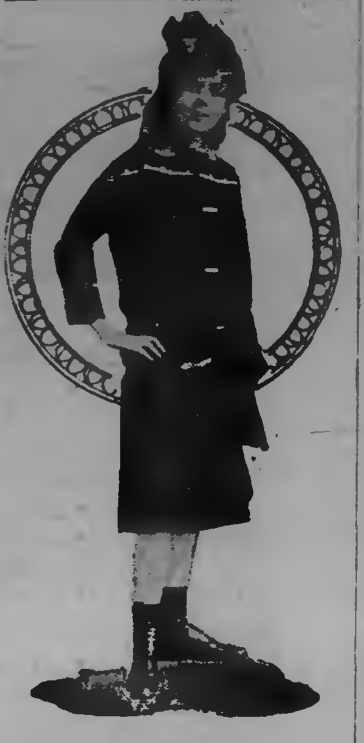
Up in a Balloon.

To remain motionless and watch the earth fall away from you as rapidly as a baseball falls from you when dropped from a window is the sensation of going up in a balloon.

There is only one cure for public distress, and that is public education, directed to make men thoughtful, merciful and just.—Ruskin.

SERVICEABLE SERGES.

They Make Nice Frocks For Girl's School Wear.



RED SERGE DRESS.

After all serge makes the most serviceable frocks for the little folks. The gown illustrated here is designed in red, with touches of white on the shoulders and sleeves. The blouse is fastened with fancy buttons and is brought low on the body, a wide girdle of satin encircling the hips. The skirt has a single box plait in front with another in the back. This makes a pretty and useful school frock for the little girl.

Lingerie collars will be worn on suits for late spring and summer, collars and cuffs of embroidered batiste, plain organdy or lace. Fancy silks, too, will be used in light colors and novelty printed effects.

FLORAL TRIMMINGS.

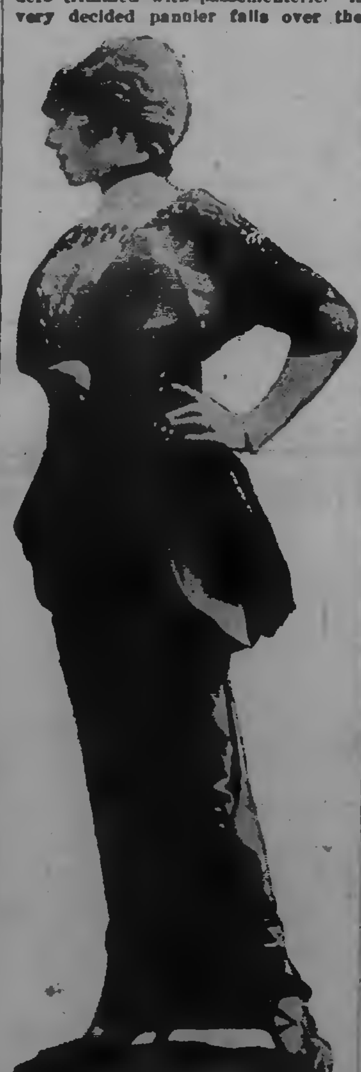
The use of a single flower on the corsage is one of the most effective decorative fancies of the season. The flower may be of satin or velvet. It is considered very chic to select a futurist flower, which is, of course, a somewhat bizarre variation of the natural type. The restaurant gown illustrated here is suitable for tangoing or for wear at a smart restaurant in the evening. It is carried out in one of the smart shades of green with the vest of embroidered net and the shoulders trimmed with passementerie. A very decided pannier falls over the skirt, which, while rather narrow, is slashed below to permit freedom of motion.



GREEN SATIN GOWN.

In many of the spring gowns there is evidenced a return of the pannier drawn in at the knees, which is usually becoming to the average figure.

Such panniers are draped with considerable fullness at the waist line in order that the puffed effect may be obtained below the hips. The hem is sharply drawn into the figure, and the waist line is accentuated by a wide girdle of velvet ribbon into which is tucked a careless bunch of roses.

Good Form

Correct Table Service.

The inestimable value and comfort of having the home table correctly served cannot be overestimated, as the refined home, where breakfast, luncheon and dinner are pleasant social occasions and where the maid is taught to serve deftly and noiselessly, need never fear the event of extra guests to luncheon or dinner, owing to the fact that the routine will vary but slightly from that to which the maid is accustomed.

"One does not grow old at table," is a favorite saying in Italy, and almost as important as the food is the way in which it is served and presented to us. Unfortunately many housewives think that with but the services of one general maid, who perforce is both cook and waitress, a perfect table is denied them and, unless she is already drilled in this most important branch of her work, expect but little else save the bringing in of the dinner and the changing of the plates between courses.

Simplicity in home menus as well as in more formal functions is now being adopted by even the most successful hostesses, and the dinner or luncheon of three or four courses, each perfect in itself and correctly served, is infinitely to be preferred to a more elaborate repast, carelessly cooked and presented.

The Motorcar.

Elegance has extended to the motorcar, and the smart woman spares no trouble to turn her automobile into a miniature boudoir or, as some cynics call it, dressing room. A very well known artist has been so busy for the last few weeks with commissions for painting the panels of motorcars that he has been obliged to refuse orders.

Some of the splendid new touring cars have their panels decorated with hand painted pictures representing favorite scenes or figure subjects recalling the days when Watteau and Fragonard were popular.

Inside the whole auto is lined with shot moire silk, and seats are on gilded swivels so that they may be turned in any direction. Small racks contain bottles of perfume, powder boxes in beaten silver gilt or in inlaid shell and the necessary stick of lip salve in a round receptacle of the same shell or metal.

A row of shelves is filled with the last thing in novels, and a neat writing desk is fitted so that letters may be dealt with en route.

The Hat and the Expression.

"Wearing the hat slightly to one side is very becoming to some faces—those with a dash of fun and coquetry in their expression," remarked an observing woman. "Gainsborough's famous 'Duchess of Devonshire' is an instance. But the present fashion of wearing the hat so one sided that part of the narrow brim points to the zenith, while its opposite side rests upon the shoulder, is likely to be grotesque rather than picturesque, especially when the wearer has an air of solemn gloom as her natural expression, as many of us have. A clever woman once wrote, 'Never cry in a rose colored hat.' The greater includes the less, 'Never look glum in a one sided hat.' Though it is a fashion of the hour to wear it so, no one need do it. The middle aged person frequently wears a look of anxious severity that sometimes amounts to scowling. It means short sight or a fear of looking too amiable, that is all, but to unite this fearsome expression with a hat standing on its own brim is to make a sartorial mistake of the first order."

Announce Names Distinctly.

It would be amusing were it not vexatious to note how seldom one hears a name clearly pronounced on introduction. A mumble, where only the word Miss or Mr. is clearly understood, and more often than not it is quite impossible to say whether one has been introduced to Mrs. or Miss. It is always embarrassing to any one to talk to a person of whose name one is in doubt, and few persons have the courage to ask to have it repeated.

While a loud voice is not proper or correct, the name should be distinctly pronounced or mistakes in addressing the person are very apt to cause embarrassment and often misunderstandings easily avoided if the names are known.

Very simple are the rules for making introductions by a host or hostess, as men are always presented to women, younger to the older, unmarried women to married, and only in the event of the guest of honor being a distinguished man are ladies presented to him.

Drinking Healths.

Since grape juice has become the fashion and temperance healths are drunk it is convenient to know just what is the etiquette of health drinking. When the health of a guest of honor is proposed every one rises, including the honor guest, and all drink. In responding one may just say, "I thank you and my kind host and hostess and beg you to join me in drinking to their very good health and happiness." This at once brings about another response and relieves the honor guest, who joins in drinking the toast.

A guest at a dinner party never "drinks alone." All drink whenever a toast is proposed to any one present or absent.

MINTO IN NORTHWEST.

In addition to having been Governor-General of Canada the late Earl of Minto occupies a humbler position in Canadian annals as a participant in the Northwest Rebellion.

At the outbreak of the rebellion, in the latter part of March, 1885, Lord Melgund (as he was then) was serving as military secretary of the Governor-General, then Lord Lansdowne. He at once volunteered for service, and was appointed chief of staff by Major-General Middleton. During the campaign he was chiefly connected with the scouts. After reaching the front, General Middleton sent in a report, dated April 18, 1885, that Lord Melgund had gone out with Major Boulton and his scouts to reconnoitre, and had captured three Indians of White Cap's band. At Fish Creek Lord Melgund was in charge of a section of the forces lying two miles from the scene of action, with the river intervening. A ferry was improvised by means of a wire rope, oars hewn out of timber, and reached the field just as the battle was over. He continued chief of staff, and had charge of the general arrangements in camp.

Lord Melgund was the principal figure in a rather comical adventure while the force was encamped at Fish Creek. He had been outside the line of sentries on some business or other and was returning at night. Challenged, instead of giving the stereotyped reply, "Friend," he gave his name. At this the sentry called out "Halt!" and bringing his rifle down to the ready position, cocked it by way of demonstrating that he was in earnest. His lordship continuing to advance towards him, the sentry called out, "Halt, and put up your hands, or I'll bore you full of holes!"

His lordship saw that the man was in earnest and put up his hands, the officer of the picket was called out, and the general's chief of staff was admitted to the lines, but had to relate the story to his friends before turning in between his blankets.

It was Lord Melgund's hard luck not to be in the decisive engagement at Batoche. He was sent back to Ottawa by General Middleton to lay the position of affairs before the Government, and asked for reinforcements. It was then thought that the affair was likely to be of longer duration than actually transpired, owing to the stubborn resistance of the enemy. Major Boulton, who was constantly associated with Lord Melgund during the rebellion, says in his history: "We were sorry to lose him, for a more kind and gallant officer no troops ever served under."

Earl Minto began his military career when he was twenty-two years of age by joining the Scots Fusilier Guards. The earl saw fighting long before he went to the Northwest Territories. He was in Paris during the bloody days of the Commune, and acted as correspondent of The Morning Post during the Carlist rising in Spain, writing from the Carlist headquarters in Navarre. He was on the staff of General Lennox, the British military attache in the Turkish army, when the Russians bombarded Nickopoli, in 1878. He served a while with Riouf Pasha in the same campaign, and had several narrow escapes. He also served under Lord Roberts of Kabul and Kandahar, in the Afghan War, and in the Egyptian War he was a captain of the Mounted Infantry. He fought at Tel-el-Kebir and commanded the Mounted Infantry at Cairo until it was disbanded.

When the Full Moon Lights Sahara.

"The stars spoke to us as we walked soft footed through the sand, and the pure wind of the desert spoke other words of the same language—the language of the universe and of nature. Here and there yellow lights in a distant camp flashed out like fireflies; far away across the billowing sands rocks bleached like bone gave an effect of surf on an unseen shore; now and then a silent, swift moving Arab stealing out of shadow might have been the white woman who haunts the sphinx hurrying to a fatal tryst, and the great pyramid seemed to float between desert sand and cloudless sky like the golden palace of Aladdin being transported through air by the genie of the lamp. There never was such gold as this gold of sand and pyramids under the moon!"

SALVATION ARMY HOLD ANNIVERSARY SERVICES

Veteran Members Will Have Part in To-night's Meeting

The opening meeting of the series held in connection with the twenty-ninth anniversary of the Salvation Army in Peterborough conducted last night in the Temple, Adjutant McElheney presiding. The speakers were Judge Huycke, Mayor Buller and Mr. R. J. Winch. Mrs. McElheney offered the opening prayer.

His Honor Judge Huycke, as the first speaker, referred to the work of the Army in this city and in other parts of the world, and also made special mention of the life and labors of the late founder, General William Booth.

Mr. R. J. Winch gave a recitation and made mention of the growth of the corps in Peterboro, and of the good work they were doing.

Mayor Buller said that as far as he could remember, twenty-nine years ago he sat in the Army's first meeting, which was held in the old hall on Aylmer Street, now occupied by the First Church of Christ Scientist. He was then impressed with their mode of worship and he had followed them as they grew and attained their present standing.

Mr. Winch gave another recitation. The band rendered special music under the leadership of Bandmaster Peryer

The Adjutant tendered a vote of thanks to the speakers, and then called on Rev. J. R. Webb to give the benediction.

Good Friday was pleasantly spent at the Temple. In the afternoon Adjutant McElheney gave an illustrated lecture to the young people, and at five o'clock the anniversary banquet was held.

The illustrated lecture was given again at the evening meeting, and altogether the service proved most interesting. During the progress of the banquet and before the meeting the band gave a musical programme

To-night will see the old-timers dressed in old time uniform and some of the veteran soldiers will give addresses. Staff-Captain and Mrs. McAmmond, former officers of the corps, will conduct the week-end services.

On Sunday afternoon Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., and Mr. E. A. Peck, M.L.A., will deliver special adresses at the Temple, where all friends and the general public will be welcomed.

SLIGHT INJURY WAS FATAL TO MAJOR COOPER

Was Clerk at Hotel National For Several Years

Major Cooper, for several years clerk at the Hotel National, died at the Nicholls Hospital Friday morning from blood poisoning, which followed a slight cut on one finger when he was opening a can of sardines.

As far as is known there are no relatives in this country. Major Cooper was not inclined to speak of his past life, but his intimate friends understood that he came originally from England and that his family was well connected and wealthy.

He was well liked and was always popular with guests at the hotel.

He came to this city from Bracebridge about five years ago, and it is understood he was to have continued as clerk at the hotel, under the new management.

Feeling reference was made to his death by Canon Davidson at St. Johns' Church.

The funeral took place this morning at 11 o'clock from Comstock's Undertaking Establishment to the Little Lake Cemetery. Rev. Canon Davidson officiated.

The pall bearers were: Major Bennett, Major Mills, Capt. Carruthers, Capt. McLean, Lt. Ackerman and Lt. Hall.

TROOPS AND RELIGIOUS PROCESSIONS

May Parade With Side Arms, But Will Not Represent The Militia

A few weeks ago the Canadian Baptist upbraided Speaker Sproule and the Minister of Militia for not having brought about reforms they promised, namely the withdrawal of troops with full equipment from religious processions.

The answer returned by the Department was that the order was made last year and is to be observed this year.

Troops with side arms only may join in religious processions. They shall not carry their rifles. When so doing, never shall they be considered in any way to represent the Militia.

The Canadian Baptist in a long editorial says this is entirely satisfactory and congratulates the Government in redeeming its pledges in this respect.

DATA REGARDING PAST WEATHER

A Resume of the Prevailing Weather Conditions.

Those who last fall prophesied that our late winter would be a comparatively mild and open one, proved to be a little astray in their forecasts. As the winter is (or should be) past for the present season, The Review has secured a number of facts regarding last winters' conditions locally, which will prove of interest at the present time and be a convenient source of information in the future.

The first snow flurries came October 21st. The ground was white with snow for the first time November 10th. Sufficient snow for sleighing did not come until the day before Christmas, and sleighing continued fair to good until March 15th. In connection with this it may be mentioned that continuously good sleighing has extended over a longer period during late years than formerly. And this notwithstanding that the average snowfall has not been as great as in former years.

First zero weather, Dec. 5th, 5 degrees below. December had two days below. January had 11 days below; the lowest on the 13th, 32 degrees below, the coldest of the winter, and for a score of years. February had 18 days below zero; the lowest on the 12th with 27 below. March had three days below; the coldest day the 20th, with 12 below.

December had 10 inches of snow; January 30 inches; February 12½ inches; March 16 inches. The snowfall for the winter was considerably less than average. January and February had an average daily temperature of 10 to 21 degrees below normal; March was just average.—W.P.

RECORD IS EQUALLED.

The firemen answered a call on Thursday afternoon, a few minutes after four to a chimney fire at the rear of G. W. Green's office. There was no damage.

This was the first call for twenty-eight days, which is equal to the record made in the fall of 1912.

Eggs for Easter. They were very plentiful this morning on the market and sold for 18 and 20 cents. Butter went from 28 to 31. One large turkey, weighing a trifle over 24 pounds, sold for $5.00. It was the property of Miss Rutherford of Campbellford, who informed The Review that it was a July bird.

Maple syrup sold for $1.50 per gallon, but there was a limited amount.

COMMITTEE HEARD THE OTHER SIDE

ALL EAST CITY RESIDENTS DO NOT OWN CHICKENS

DEPUTATION URGE GARBAGE COLLECTION FOR THE EAST WARD.

SEVEN MONTHS' CONTRACT IS AWARDED FOR AREA NOW COVERED.

"We have decided objections to the action of Council in cutting off the garbage section in East City," said Mr. A. G. Carruthers, who, with four other residents of the East Ward waited on the Property Committee Thursday night. "We were astonished to find a deputation protesting against it," Mr. Carruthers continued. "There were men who signed that petition who did not know what they were signing. There are names of men who have absolutely no interest in East City" Mr. Carruthers said there were many residents who did not have chickens.

Mr. Gus Hay claimed that East City wanted the garbage collection, and Mr. W. F. Turner said that the garbage in some cases was left exposed.

Ald. Duncan, who at Council meeting spoke in favor of the system being extended to East City, said that the question should be re-considered by the Council and the service given immediately or as soon as possible. The best people in East City wanted it.

Ald. McIntyre noted the fact of the deputation being a small one. If, however, they could get up a large petition, he was sure the Council would consider it. He was not knocking, because he had a large lot, and he ventured to say that they could not add five more to the deputation.

Mr. Turner said they could get the influential men who had signed the petition, but who would not do so again.

Asked for his opinion, Sanitary Inspector Spence said garbage collection was necessary in the East Ward.

A Wrong System.

Mr. Carruthers said the system was wrong and that the city should own its own wagons.

Chairman Langford promised that the deputation would receive consideration, although he did not hold out much hope for them for this year.

"Get up a petition and see what you can do," suggested Ald. Duncan, as the deputation was leaving.

"Why, you can get a petition to kill a dog," returned Mr. Carruthers, who apparently has not much use for petitions.

Contract Awarded.

Tenders for garbage collection for seven months were opened, and E. K. Graham's tender of $3,900 was accepted. Messrs. Graham, Hare and Downer submitted tenders for the present area as follows:

E. K. Graham,	$3,900.
W. G. Hare,	$4,150.
A. B. Downer,	$3,850.

Justin Blodgett gave a price of $1,400 for the western division. Mr. Spence recommended Mr. Graham as being the most satisfactory man to get along with, but he preferred that the Committee make the decision.

The sale of ashes by the contractor will not be allowed, and all ashes must be dumped as directed by the Inspector.

AN EASTER ODE

(By F. A. Conners, pastor Park St. Church.)

O let the joy of Heaven to-day,
Be shed upon our earthly way,
Since Christ our Lord has risen;
Out of the pit of death He came,
The subject of our guilt and shame,
His life so freely given.

All our guilt on Him was laid,
All our debt by Him was paid,
He died that we might live;
Such was the way that He should go,
For by our sin we made it so,
That He His life should give.

The gloomy grave couldn ever hold,
Him who was thus by sinners sold,
For He was God Incarnate;
The power of Satan thus was spent,
For all who will of sins repent,
E'en though they be as garnet.

All glory unto Him be given,
Who intercedes for us in Heaven,
His name we will adore;
He is our Prophet, Priest and King,
Unto His Cross we'll ever cling,
And praise Him ever-more.

In His victory we rejoice,
As we sing with heart and voice,
"Glory to His name;"
Till this life on earth shall cease,
And our souls arrive in peace,
Ever be the same.

GOOD FRIDAY SERVICE WAS VERY LARGELY ATTENDED

A BUILDING INSPECTOR

CITY ENGINEER IS WILLING TO ASSUME THE DUTIES.

HE GETS THE JOB.

ALDERMEN FEEL THERE IS GREAT NEED FOR PROPER INSPECTION.

City Engineer Parsons is willing to assume the duties of building inspector so Ald. Duncan reported at the meeting of the Property Committee, Thursday night and it was recommended that Mr. Parsons be appointed.

He will not receive an increase in salary for so doing.

Ald. Duncan spoke of the need for a building inspector in regard to the erection of houses. He said that cement foundation walls were being made where the thickness was in some cases, was not more than nine inches.

Ald. Saunders reported the statement of one man who said "it was ridiculous the way things were going on."

THE PEACE PROBLEM

An Interesting Article Dealing With Peace and Reasons for Increasing Naval and Military Forces, Written Exclusively for the Review

By John Powell Laycock, M. A.

The problem, at present, perhaps, most talked about and least studied is the problem of peace. Movements are made by men and the people follow the prophets, pursue their principles, and are guided by their understanding. Boch preached from his wildnerness and the Hague Conference heard, Norman Angell now speaks and the White World listens. As a result many Canadians dream that permanent peace has dawned, that the British Lion and Persian Lamb can lie down together free from the aggression of the Russian Bear, and that naval speeches are a remnant of a bye-gone age, as the German Eagle will swoop no more. But this long sight which sees the vision but overlooks the reality is a dangerous thing. The tendency must not be mistaken for the actuality; the teachings of peace prophets must be studied along with the limitations of the age.

The Book of Books is in harmony with this statement. Christ realized that practical idealism is the need of every age, and that progress is the result of progressive compromise with the status quo. With both eyes open, one to the far-flung vision of the future, the other to the ugly portrait of the present, He commended temporary support to the Ceasars He came to dethrone. "To everything there is a reason," say the Scriptures, "and a time for every purpose under Heaven: a time to be born and a time to die . . . a time for war and a time for peace," and again: "They have healed also the hurt of my people lightly, saying, "Peace, peace, when there is no peace." If the Old Testament refers to the brief span of human life, the lesson is obvious; if it teaches, in its application to the present age, that the time for war has almost passed and the time for world peace is almost here, the deduction still remains that until the mark is reached, precaution is essential to avoid disillusionment.

People are prone to accept as a platitude that the mass of men the world over have acquired the peace outlook; but have they? Where is this pronounced sentiment in the Moslem, the Hindu, the Brahminist, the Buddhist, the Confucianist worlds? If it exists, have not their foremost leaders been remarkably silent upon what we would suppose a foremost tendency of their time? Taking even the White World, can this adoption of peace principles be said to be universal? If so, the statesmen of Graeco-Latin and Slavic Europe particularly have shown a wonderful lack of voice in what has been so loudly proclaimed as the universal song of praise. There is dissention over this matter in France, in Teutonic Europe, in Scandinavian Europe, and even in the British Empire; and yet there are those with vision so keen as to tell us that these clouds of dispute are but the sunshine of the milennium already here! After all, is not this movement for peace at the present confined chiefly to the Anglo-Saxon and secondarily to the Western Euro-

Canadian Press Despatch.

Kingston, Ont., April 11.—Miss Lulu Smith, second year arts student at Queen's University, and a daughter of Dr. Smith, Presbyterian minister at Glencoe, died at the hospital this morning from burns received when she upset her lamp after studying all evening. Miss Smith was born twenty-one years ago in China, where her father was a missionary. She was conscious to the end, and thinking she would recover, asked her friends to arrange with the University Registrar to have her examinations postponed.

The right of the Independent Order of Foresters, one of Canada's leading fraternal societies, to increase its insurance rates was affirmed by a decision handed down recently by the Appellate Division, Supreme Court. Suit was brought by Harry J. Simmerlink, of Rochester, N.Y., who asked for an injunction restraining the organization from putting into effect an increase in the assessments of all members joining the order prior to 1908. The increase affected about 10,000 members. Supreme Court Justice Sutherland decided against Simmerlink, who appealed. The Appellate Court affirmed the decision of the lower court.

INVESTIGATION INTO PLUMBING INSPECTIONS

Ald. Langford Given the Task With a Request to Report

DISSATISFACTION

As to Present Manner in Which Work is Being Done

Ald. Wm. Langord, chairman of the Property Committee, will investigate the manner in which plumbing inspection is being carried on and report.

Ald. Duncan for one is not satisfied and to show that he is serious in the matter he offers to pay the expenses of a man from Toronto, who, if after inspecting some of the work that has been inspected, or is supposed to have inspected, makes a satisfactory report.

The question was discussed at the Property Committee meeting, Thursday night.

Ald. Duncan said the city was paying $600 at the present time and not getting anything for it. Speaking of Mr. Thompson's work, he said "we know that for years he has not been doing his duty." There were two applications for the position at a salary of $900.

Ald. McIntyre—What do the plumbers say?

Ald. Duncan—They say the work is not being done properly.

"He passed a public building, recently and did not provide for vents," said Ald. Duncan. "We have a smoke test and he won't use it. Any man will tell you that a smoke test is very important. Take a man over to the new school and see if the work in done right."

Ald. Stratton thought the matter should be investigated. The city should be protected by having a man who did his duty. He had heard, he said, of one place where the vents had not been put in and afterwards "blinds" had been used.

VISITOR HERE FROM MONTANA

Appearance of Peterboro

Mr. Morgan O'Connell, of Clifford, Montana, who has been visiting friends in Lindsay, was in the city yesterday. Speaking to a Review man, Mr. O'Connell remarked on the great strides toward advancement made by this city during recent years, and spoke very highly of the city lighting and paved roads, and was particularly enthusiastic over the excellent class of residences being erected.

When asked if the money stringency affected his State to any great extent, he replied that money has been exceedingly free and the past winter has been by no means marked with the generally prevailing hard times. He further stated that many of the farmers who went from the States to Canada are returning and that Montana was the drawing card. Sheep and cattle ranchers are being shoved back, and the land is par excellence for growing grain. The Dakotas are going back and a few more years will see Montana producing the greatest portion of American grain. Mr. O'Connell is living on a farm which he homesteaded five years ago, and with 160 out of 320 acres under cultivation he reckons it is worth between $9,000 and $10,000.

A GOOD MOVE.

THE MOTION in the Ontario Legislature of Mr. G. H. Gooderham (South Toronto) for a full investigation into the working of the present system of municipal government in this province should not pass without some action being taken. The problem of municipal government is one of the most important, with which this province has to deal. It is the city problem, the town problem, the country problem. The importance of such a question may be realized from the size of the municipal budgets that are presented in cities, particularly the large centres. The city of Toronto for example has a larger budget than the whole province of Ontario. The expenditures of municipal bodies are rising in most cities, and involving heavy sums of money for public improvements and utilities. The people of municipalities are mortgaging their future for twenty, thirty and fifty years in the debenture debt, that will have to be paid from levies on future assessments. The importance of the problem is recognized, not so much as one of spending money as of manamement.

While the chief difficulty has always been, and still is, the scarcity of men properly qualified for the administration of municipal affairs, yet the investigation ought to be productive of great benefits.

One ground for complaint is the lax or unsound method of municipal book-keeping, and a commission investigating the actual condition of affairs, could recommend certain standards to be followed throughout the province in this regard. It might also recommend certain improvements in the inspection and overseeing of municipal public works under construction. In the matter of assessment, it might recommend certain procedure to be followed to secure equalization. It might also make recommendations for the teaching of civics in the public and high schools. Such an investigation would likely be productive of many other improvements. Mr. Rowell, leader of the Liberal Opposition, in supporting the motion pointed out that it would touch social problems, such as housing and town planning. The Honourable Mr. Hanna, while admitting that the motion, had every merit in it, pointed out the difficulty in securing proper men for such a commission. Mr. Gooderham withdrew his motion for the time being or until he can recommend men for such a commission, but he should be supported in his effort to secure a better administration of municipal affairs in the province of Ontario.

CY. WARMAN.

THE DEATH of Cy. Warman in Chicago will be a distinct loss to the literary sphere of Canada and the United States. His connection with the Grand Trunk Railway as Chief Publicity Agent marked a new field for the exercise of literary ability. In Roman days Horace the most finished writer of the Augustan age, composed his immortal odes under the aegis of the wealthy Maecenas. Moliere, the greatest composer of comedy, wrote under the munificence of Louis XIV., England's Dr. Johnson starved on classics for many years because the monarchy and political leaders were out of sympathy with letters. The poet Burns was made a custom's officer whose principal duty was to inspect whiskey barrels and whose main occupation excepting his literary work, was imbibing their contents. All great nations have had their literary hacks, and some of their greatest men have lived in poverty and slept in death a generation before receiving recognition of their genius. Only at great intervals in the world's history has the way of letters for those of merit been smooth, and when, as has often been the case, the road is rough travelling, the light of genius shines in strange uncooth nooks and corners. The new field which absorbed the work of Cy. Warman was the service of a great transportation company. True, this writer was not one of the soaring kind and therefore not one of the greatest. Much of what he wrote will die with him. Perhaps the struggle for health denied him first rank. His most famous poem "Sweet Marie" is pleasing and beautiful, but like most popular pieces lacks depth. Nevertheless, he was a widely known writer and produced some excellent work, but a most interesting point about his work is the field in which he was latterly employed.

The conditions of the present age are such that the best literary writers do not drift into the service of great commercial enterprises. But the field in which Cy. Warman worked has not by any means been fully developed and presents great possibilities if the heads of railways realise its importance. After all it does not matter so much how or where a man works so long as he is using his talents to the best advantage. If a man can go to his work with a song in his heart, foolish would he be to pine after other perhaps more showy but less happier employments.

The poem that gained Cy Warman his first recognition is worthy of a place in memory, for, if he did not compose any chef d'oeuvre, he at least wrote two or three really good pieces which will last. He had gone to Denver and was engaged in newspaper reporting. Having started a railway journal which did not prove a success he became engaged in writing short poems and bits of prose, but there seemed to be no sale for them. One day when he was feeling unusually down-hearted he wrote:

"But there's a consolation
In the thought that when we're dead,
If we have written something good
Our efforts will be read,
And friends will plant for-get-me-nots,
And come and sit and sigh,
And irrigate our grave with tears
When we go off and die."

This attracted attention and his success was continuous after the publication in a New York newspaper of a column of his verses. Having written something good he has lived up to his own philosophy and an ideal worthy of emulation, besides doing, at the same time, exploration work in a field that may be fruitful of even greater men.

THE FEDERAL BUDGET.

FOR A considerable time, Parliament and the public have been awaiting the budget speech of the Honourable W. T. White, Minister of Finance. The speech gives little room for adverse criticism, and will appeal to the people of Canada, as a strong, sane analysis of business conditions, and as an explanation of the essential principles on which the fiscal policy of Canada is based. Few tariff changes have been made, but such alterations as have been made, are important and reveal the government's intention to follow on the whole, the protective policy.

Among important tariff changes, was the announcement that there would be no free wheat and no iron bounties, while the tariff on mowers, binders and reapers, would be reduced from 17½ per cent. to 12½ per cent. or two and one half per cent. lower than the rate fixed by the reciprocity pact of 1911. Mr. White's reply to the Liberal agitation for free agricultural implements was conclusive and overpowering. He recognized that the Canadian farm implement industry could live and prosper with reduced duties, and in providing this, the government has shown its desire to avoid over protection. To follow the Liberal policy would be certainly unjust, when any of the raw materials imported by implement manufacturers undergo high duties. The free implement agitation of the Liberals, was nothing else than a policy of absolute free trade.

The government is to be commended for its stand on the free wheat phase of the tariff problem, for refusing to be stampeded by the west into radical, and perhaps detrimental changes in the tariff. Such a change would be very unwise at the present time, in view of the railway situation in this country. The building of the Hudson Bay railroad, and the marked reduction in the duty on agricultural implements, ought to be an adequate compensation to the western farmer.

Mr. White's analysis of the financial conditions of the country, were clear and fraught with optimism for the future. While the revenues have fallen off, the national debt has been increased only through the assistance given to railways by a little over twenty millions. Even this increase in the debt still leaves it below the amount as it stood when the Liberal party handed over the reins of government to the present Conservative administration.

The whole speech shows that the Borden Government has been conducting the affairs of Canada in a business like manner; that it has carried the country through a period of financial stringency, without serious variation in the national credit; that it has revised the tariff so as to make it fair to all the provinces in Canada, and that the protective policy will secure the growth and prosperity of all parts of the Dominion.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THOSE Toronto doctors who were flim-flammed by gypsy fortune tellers out of a little cash and squealed, have certainly published themselves as easy marks. When wheedled out of only three dollars, the maintenance of a judicious silence would have been the part of wisdom.

We walked into Yeotes Bros. shoe-shine parlor the other night with the avowed purpose of getting a shoe-shine. This we bought without prolonged negotiations. In the course of the shine we overheard part of a conversation. "Where does he come from? Montreal. He's worth a lot of money. What does he do? Oh nothing—real estate."

WITH a following wind blowing about 63 miles an hour, two German army airmen, Captain Fiegel and Lieut. Hesse, claim to have flown from Hanover to Berlin, a distance of about 160 miles, in an hour. This is pretty speedy, but there are some other things that surpass it. We might just mention the speed with which the C.N.R. and N.T.R. gobble up money, the way Toronto blows about its skyscrapers and population, and the hurry some people are in to collect their bills.

Germany's Three World-Beaters.

Vancouver Province.

Germany now lays claim to the three biggest things of their respective kinds in the world. One is a bank, the Deutsche, of Berlin, which by absorbing a smaller institution has run up its capital and reserve to $106,250,000. and its assets to $554,000,000. Another is a steamship company, the Hamburg-American, with $62,375,000 capital, and an ocean fleet of 191 vessels and 1,307,411 tonnage. And the third is a brewery.

Bishop of London's Visit.

Vancouver World.

There is a good deal of clean, rich human nature about the Bishop of London—he is a man of the Empire. It is interesting to note that the Bishop of London visits the suffragettes in prison. Is he an advocate of Woman Suffrage? At the moment we can not say. Not placing himself on record as a violent suffragist, he is content and happy in visiting the suffragettes who are sick and in prison.

A Left Handed Compliment.

Brockville Times.

Kingston is always careful to refer to the "Portsmouth Penitentiary" rather than the "Kingston Penitentiary." Oh, well, Kingston needn't be so sensitive as all that; the prisoners probably prefer life at Portsmouth to the monotony of Kingston. The drive through Kingston from the outer station is what reconciles 'em to the isolation cells at Portsmouth.

FRESH PAINT

By Walt Mason

It keeps the beauty lover yelling to see a dingy, shabby dwelling, that shrieks aloud for paint; it jars his nerves and racks his spirit, and blasts his eyes, or pretty near it, and makes him sick and faint. Some folks will wear such costly raiment you wonder how they make the payment, or keep their standoff good; and all the while the shacks they live in are bum and shabby past forgivin', old piles of dingy wood. I hold that painting is a duty of every man, a debt to beauty, a debt that should be paid; no odds how high you may be flying, you'll stack up cheap if occupying a battered house and frayed. Then let us buy some oil and ochre, and clean up our old house and soak her with paint that hits the spot; red paint is best—it's rich and mellow—but you can use pea-green or yellow upon your humble cot. Some paints are bright and others duller, but any old three-cornered color will beat no paint at all; so let's go painting, all together, and brighten up our dwelling whether it's hut or stately hall.

Birthdays & Note

SATURDAY, APRIL ELEVENTH

REV. GEORGE B. CUTTEN, President of Acadia University, Wolfville, N.S., the institution to which the Baptists of the Maritime Provinces give undivided support, was born forty years ago to-day in Amherst, N.S. He has the distinction of being the youngest university president in Canada, being at the time of his selection for office only thirty-five years of age. After a brilliant course at Acadia and Yale, where he distinguished himself alike in the classroom and on the football field, he entered the ministry of the Baptist Church and held important charges in various American cities. He returned to his native province four years ago and took up the duties of his present office in 1910. He is the author of several books, his specialty being psychology.

SUNDAY, APRIL TWELFTH

HON. ALBERT SCOTT WHITE, one of the judges of the Supreme Court of New Brunswick, celebrates his fifty-ninth birthday on this date. He has had a lengthy career and was for several years a minister of the Crown in the Provincial government. Born in Sussex, N.B., he was educated successively at Mount Allison and Harvard Universities. Then he took up legal practice in his native town. In 1886 he was elected to the Assembly for King's County and held the offices from time to time of Speaker, Solicitor-General, Attorney-General and Commissioner of Public Works. He was raised to the Bench in 1908.

MEXICAN POTTERY.

Primitive Methods of the Skilled Workmen of Durango.

Practically all the pottery used in the Durango section of Mexico, from the tiniest teacup to the largest flowerpot, is fashioned by hand from Durango clay. There are about twenty such factories in the city, employing from five to fifty men each. The clay used in this industry is obtained from the base of Durango's famous Iron Mountain, one mile north of the city.

The vessels are all fashioned by hand and foot power. The only instrument used is a large wooden wheel, through the axis of which passes a pole about three feet in length, terminating at the other extremity in a small wooden wheel set parallel to the big wheel. The operator sits so that he may turn the large wheel (set horizontally near the floor so that it will move freely) with his foot, which in turn causes the little wheel above, on a level with his chest, to revolve very rapidly. A convenient sized lump of the clay dough is placed upon this little wheel, and as the mass revolves by the impulse of the laborer's foot, he hollows out and fashions the vessel.

The skill and dexterity of these workmen is little short of remarkable. With only the eye to guide, he fashions with astonishing rapidity vessels which do not differ one from the other in either size or shape. A single laborer is able to complete about thirty-six dozen jars of nearly a quart capacity in a day.—Argonaut.

Fewer women ride astride in Rotten Row and Hyde Park than formerly, and just the other day out of seventy-one feminine riders twenty-two rode astride, ten being children.

LURE OF THE ANTARCTIC.

Shackleton's Daring Scheme to Conquer the Icy Continent.

What is left of polar exploration now that both the poles have been discovered? What is there to tempt intrepid men to the ends of the earth now that the American and the Norwegian have planted flags on the apexes?

Apparently the last chapter has not even yet been written. Sir Ernest Shackleton, one of the gallant knights of the antarctic, has planned an expedition far more perilous than any of those undertaken by the searchers for the pole.

Amundsen, Scott and Shackleton himself elaborately planned their dashes to the antipodal summit. Amundsen reached his goal, Scott perished, and Shackleton was forced to turn back. Each of them prepared for his return by establishing a line of supply depots. Even the supply depots were insufficient to save the lives of Scott and his party. No man ever came near succeeding who had not thus provided for his retreat to his base of supplies.

Now Shackleton purposes not only to attain the pole, but to pass beyond it and to traverse the vast antarctic continent from shore to shore. His task will be exactly twice as difficult as that of the man who seeks and attains the pole. His course will be steadily forward; he will have no line of retreat.—Ohio State Journal.

"Of course."
"Why of course?"
"Well, wouldn't it be humiliated after it?"

All Settled.

"Why does he want to marry her?"
"Because she won't have him."
"Why won't she have him?"
"She will."

Broken By The Tango

By MARJORIE CLOUGH

From the time when I came to be old enough to think of marriage I looked upon it in a feminine way. I didn't say when I was grown I'd be a teacher or a lawyer or anything like that. I said I was going to be married and live in a nice, cozy house and thought of my dolls as real children.

When I was eighteen years old my father died and left me little or nothing. It looked very much like my being forced from the domestic life I had laid out for myself when a child. Will Isham and I were spoons, but Will was such an easy going fellow that he didn't fill my ideas of a husband at all. What I wanted was a strong character, who would make up my mind for me, relieving me of forming decisions, which I always disliked. Will was an amiable chap, and I was very fond of him, but it seemed to me that we were too much alike.

I was hesitating between Will and stenography—Will was perfectly able to take care of me—when Warren Robbins came along. It seemed to me that Mr. Robbins was just the man I wanted. It was not long before he proposed to me, and I accepted him at once.

I confess it seemed very nice to have some one to obey. There are two divisions of mankind and womankind in these days. I may call them pleasureites and nonpleasureites. Formerly the pleasureites played cards and the nonpleasureites didn't. Now the pleasureites dance the modern dances and the nonpleasureites are shocked thereat. I found very soon that I was a pleasureite and Warren was a nonpleasureite. I became infatuated with the tango. Warren declared that any woman who danced the tango was not the wife he should like to marry.

We hadn't been long engaged before Warren made this known to me, and I felt called upon to defer to his wishes. Somehow this particular deference was not pleasant. I didn't see why I shouldn't dance the tango so long as I danced it properly. Warren argued that I could not always rely on finding a partner who would dance it properly with me and that, the tendency of such dances being bad, by dancing it I was encouraging vice. I told him that I didn't agree with him and should dance the tango.

Warren was somewhat surprised at this and reminded me that I wished to follow a leader. To this I replied that in the tango the man guided the woman's steps.

You should have seen the look he gave me. "That's the most brilliant bit of logic I ever heard," he said. "It's worthy of Archbishop Whately, who wrote a book on categorical syllogisms and other points pertaining to the subject. If he heard it he would turn over in his grave."

"I don't see anything the matter with it or the tango either," I replied with some curtness.

"It's about like the clinging vine and the sturdy oak. A flagpole set up near the oak, the vine unclings from the oak and clings to the flagpole."

"The vine wouldn't do that unless the ants had got in under the oak's bark and rotted the trunk."

"Perceiving that your logic and your similes are altogether beyond my poor intelligence, I bid you good evening."

I didn't feel very good over this. Somehow I felt that, irrespective of the morality or immorality of the tango, in dancing it despite my fiance's wishes I was not following out that for which I had agreed to marry him. While I was thinking about it I was called to the phone. Will Isham was at the other end. Will and I were good friends. We had simply not mated, that was all.

"Do you go to the —— ball tonight?" he asked.

"No. Warren doesn't approve of these modern dances, and just now the old ones are not danced. He won't take me."

"Do you suppose he would let you go with me?"

"Let me?"

"Yes. Haven't you said you were going to marry for the purpose of having a master?"

"I'll go with you."

"Thanks awfully! I'll call for you at 9."

When 9 o'clock came I was dressed in a new ball costume just come in and waiting in the drawing room when who should call but Warren. He had come to make up, but when he saw my clinging skirt and my decollet waist, with only a little lace over one shoulder, he forgot all about what he had come for and began to abuse my costume.

"Looks like an elegantly folded sheet," he said sarcastically, "only the sheet must have been taken from a crib."

I fired up at this and gave him such a tongue lashing that while about it I didn't notice the entrance of Will Isham. When I did notice him he was grinning like the cat that ate the canary.

Warren left me, slamming the door behind him. I went right out with Will, got into the carriage, and we were driven to the ball.

What a softening influence there is in the tango! It made me forget the disagreeable episode.

I have engaged myself to Will. He says he always wished to cling to a woman, and I'm just the woman he prefers to cling to.

Hail to the Chief!

Jones had not wanted to go to the gregarious feast where the speeches strung out endlessly. Circumstances obliged him to stay. The speeches were strung out partly because the chief and dullest orator was not expected until late. Finally he came, and there was a rush of committeemen to escort him to his place.

"Hello!" exclaimed Jones' companion, "what is that they are making such a pother about?"

"We still follow," answered Jones sourly, "the ancient custom of bringing in the bore's head."—New York Post.

GETS EIGHTEEN YEARS.

Jekyll-Hyde Millionaire Robbed Women of Jewels.

NEW YORK, April 11.—Edward Mendel, a millionaire Jekyll-Hyde who was a respected iron and steel merchant in Newark by day and a thug in New York by night, was yesterday sentenced to spend the next eighteen years of his life in Sing Sing prison. Mendel, who in Newark was a member of many fraternal orders and clubs, lured Mrs. Pauline Koetsel to an upper west side freight yard in New York and there tore her diamond earrings from her ears. He was captured as he was running from the yard.

In court later three other women identified him as the thug who had similarly assaulted and robbed them. Many letters and petitions from Newark clubs and associations came to the judge who sentenced Mendel. All these insisted some mistake had been made.

LUCK IN PHOTOGRAPHY.

When the amateur photographer's friend asked him why he looked peeved the other was glad to explain.

"A friend of ours just asked me to come over and take a picture of her baby," he said. "She apologized for asking, which was unnecessary, because I was glad to do it, but she spilled the beans by giving as her reason that I had such good luck taking pictures."

"Well, you do, don't you?" inquired the friend.

"There you go," the photographer exclaimed. "There is no such thing as luck in my photography. What vexes me is that every one seems to consider them inseparable.

"Photography is as exact a science as running a survey nowadays with those who know how to handle a camera. With the photometer and exposure tables, proper developer and a thermometer for determining its temperature, every last element of luck is removed from exposure and negative making. The same is true of the printing processes. You know in advance how much light you have and how much you need. Factorial tables tell you how long to leave a plate in the developer. Every step is timed with a stop watch. And that's why it annoys me to have people say that my art is a luck proposition.

"Before I had taken as many pictures as stand to my record now there was sometimes luck, mostly bad. Although, as it appears to me at present, I got better results than I should have obtained. But if a man with a little experience and the proper outfit exercises as much intelligence as is necessary to boil eggs, photography is no longer a matter of luck, and I thank nobody to call me lucky."—Philadelphia Ledger.

FRANCE AGREES TO LOAN.

She Will Get Certain Advantages In Turkey In Exchange.

PARIS, April 11.—The French Government yesterday signed an agreement approving of a French loan to Turkey, according to a semi-official announcement. In return for the loan France is to be accorded certain economic advantages, the nature of which has not yet been disclosed. The amount of the new loan and the terms of which it is to be issued also have been kept secret.

Djavid Bey, former Turkish Minister of Finance, who has been engaged in negotiations for the loan in Paris for the past six months is to leave shortly for Constantinople to arrange for the issue by the Sultan of Adecree authoring the transaction.

Stole To Help Sick Wife.

NEW YORK, April 11.—As he left the bedside of his wife in the Presbyterian Hospital, Sigmond Hauer, of 402 East 69th street was arrested on Thursday on a charge of grand larceny. His employers, Gottlieb Bros., of 22 and 24 West 27th street, alleged that he stole fur valued at about $600. According to Detectives Bauerschmidt and Tait the prisoner confessed, saying. "My wife was in the hospital and I needed the money for an operation."

Pennsylvania Mine Closed.

PHILADELPHIA, April 11. — Bituminous coal operators representing 25 per cent. of the output of Central Pennsylvania decided yesterday by a vote of 30 to 2 to close their mines pending the signing of a new wage agreement with their employers. It is expected the operators will order their mines closed to-night.

WOMAN IN TERRIBLE STATE

Finds Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Cape Wolfe, Canada.—"Last March I was a complete wreck. I had given up all hope of getting better or living any length of time, as I was such a sufferer from female troubles. But I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and today I am in good health and have a pair of twin boys two months old and growing finely. I surprised doctors and neighbors for they all know what a wreck I was.

"Now I am healthy, happy and hearty, and owe it all to Lydia E. Pinkham's remedies. You may publish this letter if you like. I think if more women used your remedies they would have better health."—Mrs. J. T. Cook, Lot No. 7, Cape Wolfe, P.E.I., Canada.

Because your case is a difficult one, and doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has remedied many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, and it may be exactly what you need.

LYDIA E. PINKHAM

The Pinkham record is a proud and peerless one. It is a record of constant victory over the obstinate ills of women—ills that deal out despair. It is an established fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored health to thousands of such suffering women. Why don't you try it if you need such a medicine?

PHOTOGRAPHIC JUDGES.

A Lesson That Was Learned at the Last Olympic Games.

Photography failed as a means of deciding winners in the races and other contests at the last Olympic games in Stockholm. But because of that lesson stereoscopic photographs are proposed as an improvement and are to be tried out in England. At the Stockholm games photographs were taken of the runners as they reached the tape, but in every instance where the judges differed among themselves as to who was the winner the additional evidence of the camera was not sufficient to bring about an agreement. The only instances where the photographs were assumed to be decisive were those in which the judges agreed with the photographic record anyway.

The trouble was apparently due to lack of stereoscopic effect. So it is now suggested that the pictures be taken by a stereoscopic camera. In other words, two pictures are taken together from cameras side by side, so that when the developed prints are put in a stereoscope—like the one which used to be found always on the center table in the parlor—there will be depth to the picture, and in consequence it will be possible to determine beyond dispute the exact position of each runner.

An advisory trainer of the British athletes who competed at Stockholm and who has trained many Cambridge university athletes uses high speed photography regularly in his training work. Many photographs of runners and jumpers are taken, each exposure being a high speed snapshot. Then the photographs are examined to see in what way the runner or jumper can improve his style.

It may be found, for instance, that he has acquired a habit of making some motions with his arms that use up little of his strength, yet slightly hinder instead of help his main effort. Motion pictures did not prove of value in these studies owing to the fact that the ordinary motion picture camera is not equipped with a high speed shutter.

Italy's Piuma Grass.

Piuma grass, used in Italy for the manufacture of brooms for sweeping highly polished floors, is a product of swampy regions, particularly in southeastern Lombardy, southern Venetia and northern Emilia, in which sections it is said to grow abundantly. Mantua, Lombardy, is the center of the trade in piuma grass. Peasants around Mantua gather it during the first three weeks in September, about two weeks before it begins to blossom.

Self Pity.

Self pity, morally, mentally and physically, tends to depress and weaken the victim, to render him ineffective and impractical. The person who is chronically sorry for himself becomes a nuisance. He thinks the world owes him something, and his one ambition in life is to collect the debt.—Woman's World.

A MOTHER'S PRAISE OF BABY'S OWN TABLETS

Mrs. Fred Tinkham, South Canaan, N.S., writes:—"Please send me another box of Baby's Own Tablets as I do not care to be without them. I have used them repeatedly and consider them the best medicine in the world for little ones." Thousands of other mothers say the same thing. The tablets cure all the minor ills of childhood such as constipation, sour stomach, colic, colds, simple fevers, etc., and are guaranteed to be absolutely safe. Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

For the Children

Leopold of Belgium Would Be an Air Man.

Prince Leopold, heir to the throne of Belgium, doesn't care very much about his prospects as a ruler; he would much rather be an aeronaut. The young prince, who is besides, Duke of Brabant, was thirteen last November and is a very robust and handsome lad. For some time he has taken the keenest interest in flying, but as yet his father, King Albert, has refused to gratify his heart's desire. Before he was set on being an aviator he was a poet. But his younger brother Charles, Count of Flanders, and his little sister, Princess Marie, made so much sport of his productions that he gave up writing verse. Perhaps in a few more years, if some new fad does not catch him, he may have an aeroplane of his own.

If the Shoe Fits.

For this game have each child remove his shoes and place them in a big box having a lid that can be partially removed. When all are in mix them thoroughly and then have the children each draw two shoes from the box. These he must put on whether they fit him or not, and thus shod he is to follow the leader wherever he may go. Some will be wearing two rights, some two lefts, some shoes in which they can only get their toes and some shoes much too large for them. The leader may go up or downstairs through a darkened cellar or over chairs and stools with his ever lessening band of followers, for many will fall by the way. When time is called the one nearest him wins the prize.

The Wearing of Hats.

Jews wear their hats in the synagogues. The Friends also sit covered during the offering of prayers, which are said aloud.

Formerly it appears that the custom in the Church of England was for the men to sit covered during sermon time.

In an old book it is asserted that when Richard Cox, bishop of Ely, died in 1581 and was buried in Ely cathedral the congregation, a very great one, sitting in the choir to hear the funeral sermon, all covered.

Evelyn in 1664 mentions in his diary that he had caught a severe cold by flinging off his hat at dinner.

The hat, therefore, was very much more popular in ancient times than it is now.

Trick With Numbers.

Tell your friends to think of a number, multiply by 6, divide by 3, add 40, divide by 2; then let him name the result and you can tell him the number he thought of. The method is: Multiplying by 6 and dividing by 3 gives twice the number. Add 40 and you have twice the number plus 40. Divide by 2 and you have once the number plus 20; hence, if you subtract 20 from the result he gives you, you will have the number he first thought of.

Saved by Boy Scouts.

A recent fire in the Stoddard Baptist home at Garfield Heights, near Washington, D. C., endangered the lives of the seventeen aged inmates. A party of boy scouts from Anacostia, on a march in the neighborhood, carried out those who were ill, crippled and infirm from age. All the inmates were negroes.

A Vacuum Abhorred.

A hole in her stocking.

The Frost Fairy.

I wonder who sits up all night,
 All night in the cold and rain,
To make the little stars of ice
 That stick to the window pane,
The stars of ice and tiny ferns,
 Just like all the ferns that grow
Down by the summer wood, except
 That these are made out of snow.

I've blown on them until they melt
 Right down the long window pane.
Next morning when I come to look
 They are shining there again!
Some fairy with her scissors comes
 When I am asleep, I know,
And clips the little stars of ice
 And the tiny ferns of snow.
I don't see how she cuts them out
 So straight in the dark—do you?—
And never nips a single leaf
 Or cuts any star in two.

LIGHT AND THE EYES.

Glaring or Dazzling Effects May Result in Permanent Injury.

In a paper read before the International Exposition of Safety and Sanitation in New York city G. H. Stickney called attention to the fact that the most common defect in lighting is excessive glare and absence of diffusion. Glare may emanate directly from the light source or be reflected to the eye by a glossy surface; it can also be caused wherever excessive contrast of intensity appears in adjacent fields of vision. The dazzling effect is unpleasant and interferes with seeing. Under continued exposure eye strain and even permanent injury to the eye may result.

An unshielded light hung over a machine is a common source of eye fatigue. The glare may not be so evident on first glance, but when the workman's eyes have been subjected to such light for a long time discomfort and inability to see result.

Glare from glazed paper, desk tops or polished metal often induces eye trouble, headache and other indisposition, though the sufferers may not be aware of the cause. The remedy is to change the relative positions so that the reflected light is kept out of the eyes as much as possible and to enlarge the dimensions of the light source.—Engineering Record.

Popular Judgment of Genius.

Fabre's first entomological work gained the honors of the Institute of France and a prize for experimental physiology. His extraordinary absorption in his entomological pursuits was a source of perplexity to those among whom he dwelt. One morning he was passed by three women vintagers on their way to work. When they passed him again at sunset he was still seated on the same stone, with his eyes fixed on the same spot, whereupon he saw one of them tap her forehead as she whispered, "A poor innocent." But more than one country guard suspected that he was up to no good in his mysterious wanderings about the countryside. However, the sight of the little dark ribbon of the Legion of Honor, with which he had been decorated by the French government, was generally sufficient to allay suspicion.—Westminster Gazette.

YOUNG MEN WHO MUST DIE AS JOYOUS EASTER WEEK BEGINS

THRILLING SCENE IN GLOOMY SING SING — WITH DREADED CHAIR ALMOST IN REACH OF THEIR FINGERS, BOYISH GUNMEN WHO MUST DIE FOR KILLING OF GAMBLER ROSENTHAL, PROTEST INNOCENCE — THREE JEWISH PRISONERS UNSELFISHLY PLEAD FOR DAGO FRANK

BY NIXOLA GREELEY-SMITH.

Written Especialy for The Review.

NEW YORK, APRIL 11, 1914.

"WE ARE ALL INNOCENT, AND WE THREE JEWISH BOYS—LEFTIE LOUIE, WHITEY LEWIS AND GYP THE BLOOD—SAY TO YOU NOW AS SOLEMNLY AS WE WERE AT OUR LAST HOUR, THAT THAT ITALIAN BOY OVER THERE WASN'T WITH US AT THE TIME HERMAN ROSENTHAL WAS MURDERED.

"OUR FATHERS CAME TO AMERICA THAT THEY MIGHT FIND FREEDOM AND JUSTICE. THEY CAME FROM RUSSIA AND FROM AUSTRIA AND POLAND. YET HERE ARE THEIR SONS IN THE DEATH HOUSE OF SING SING PRISON, ASKING THE AMERICAN PEOPLE TO GIVE US ONLY A DOG'S CHANCE FOR OUR LIVES!"

It was Louie Rosenberg who spoke to me, a slender Jewish boy with black eyes, and the oval face of a poet, yet Louis Rosenberg is NOT A POET BUT A GUNMAN, who, with his three companions, "Gyp the Blood," otherwise—Harry Horowitz; "Whitey" Lewis and Dago Frank Cirofici, must die on April 13, the day after Easter Sunday, for the killing of Herman Rosenthal, the gambler, in front of the Metropole Hotel. Charles Becker once police czar of the tenderloin in New York, convicted of inspiring the crime, has been granted a new trial, but the court refused to review the death sentences of the gunmen.

"WHITEY" LEWIS.

"LEFTIE LOUIE" ROSENBERG.

I was seated in the death house of Sing Sing, the FIRST WOMAN NOT A RELATIVE OF A CONDEMNED MURDERER WHO HAS EVER BEEN ADMITTED TO THAT GLOOMY CORRIDOR. At the end of the long gray aisle of death were the four cells of the gunmen. On my right were Dago Frank and "Whitey" Lewis. On my left stood "Leftie Louie" and "Gyp the Blood." Hardly more than boys, the oldest, Dago Frank, is 28, the youngest, Left Louie, but 23. They stood, feverish hands clasping the grim bars of their cells.

Just around the corner from us was the little green door, the dreaded door that leads into the throne room of death, or as I view it, the throne room of legal murder, where these four young men will die.

Later I passed through that little green door and sat in the grim electric chair. Within reach of my arm was a concealed panel holding the death-dealing apparatus and a printed card of directions.

One bell, turn on current!

Two bells, more current!

Two bells is the death sentence, the fatal phrase which shuts off human life. Within four feet of that frightful inscription stood the four gunmen clutching the bars of their cells, and telling me their story.

Save for Louis Rosenberg, the gunmen are typical products of a big city's streets. They look like overgrown newsboys.

HARRY HOROWITZ (GYP THE BLOOD).

"DAGO" FRANK CIROFICI.

"We are delighted to see you," said "Lefty Louie," with a bewildering courtliness. "Through you we four boys who are about to die, MAKE A LAST APPEAL TO THE AMERICAN PEOPLE. All we want is justice.

"Lieut. Becker has been granted a new trial. Must we boys, not one of us 30 years old, go to the chair without the same chances that Becker has?

"We claim that Becker was 'framed up' just as we were. We tell you as we would tell it to you on our last day, that the murder of Herman Rosenthal was committed by Bridgie Webber, Harry Vallon and by a strange man who we had never seen before.

"We saw all these men fire at Rosenthal. We don't know which shot killed him, but as he lay dead on Broadway, we realized that we had been 'framed up,' brought there by Jack Rose, so that he would have somebody to lay the murder on.

"But that Italian boy, Dago Frank, wasn't near there.

"Since we boys came to the death house, 16 months ago, 14 men have passed through the little green door to death.

"We have prayed with them all night!

"We have sung hymns with them as they went to die!

"When dawn came and they were taken from their cells, we called out 'Good-by' to them!

"Some were brave as we hope to be if we go through that green door. Some were not brave, but don't ask us to tell you about that.

"We're here under sentence of death. We're gunmen. We're everything that society regards as hardened and depraved, but we haven't got the nerve to talk about that."

"Gyp the Blood's" voice had become inaudible, his loose mouth seemed as unhinged as his spirit. It continued to move, but no audible words came from it.

GEORGE STREET CHURCH.

The Easter services at George St. Methodist Church will be of a particularly interesting character. The Rev. R. G. Peever at the morning service, will speak on the subject, "Should we believe in the Resurrection?"

There will be an Easter praise service at 7 a.m., under the auspices of the Epworth League. The choir will render special music at both services.

"GUNMEN" ARE PRODUCTS OF CHILD LABOR.

Three of the "gumen" in the "death house" at Sing Sing had to go to work before they were 15 years old. "Gyp the Blood" worked as an errand boy when he was 13; "Whitey" Lewis was apprenticed to a bookbinder and later to a tinsmith; "Dago Frank" worked in a department store.

"Lefty Louie" was flung into the street when he was only six. He was a sickly child and the doctor ordered fresh air. The street was the only place fresh air was to be had free. Louie's parents were poor, and the street was the best they could do for him. At seven he was a confirmed street gamin; at 13 he was a pool-room frequenter; at 16 he was a pickpocket.

MANY ATTENDED FUNERAL OF LATE MISS I. TUCKER

Special Correspondence.

Apsley, April 2.—The remains of Miss Ida Tucker, who passed away at Nicholls Hospital, Peterboro, on Monday of last week, were brought to the family home here on Tuesday. Deceased was nineteen years of age, and was the third eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Tucker of this neighborhood. It was with sadness the news of her premature death was received here. She was held in high esteem by all her friends and acquaintances.

She leaves to mourn her loss her parents, five brothers and four sisters, all of whom were present at the obsequies.

The funeral took place on Friday afternoon to the Methodist Church where service was conducted by Rev. J. Prosser, thence to the Union Cemetery for interment.

The pall bearers were Messrs. John, Zack, Joseph and David Tucker, and W. and Z. Miller, all cousins of the deceased.

The coffin was covered with many beautiful floral offerings from her many friends.

SERVANT KILLS HIS MISTRESS

Japanese Boy Then Commits Suicide in Basement.

STOCKTON, Cal., April 11.—Mrs. Ellis R. Harbert, wife of a prominent physician and surgeon of this city, was shot and killed by a Japanese servant while she was in one of the upper bedrooms of her palatial home in the suburbs.

After killing Mrs. Harbert, the slayer locked the door to the room and busied himself gathering up silverware and other valuables. The crime was not discovered until night, when Dr. Harbert returned home. Finding no one about the living rooms, he made a search of the house, only to find his wife's body, still and cold, stretched upon the bedroom floor.

The servant later took refuge in the basement of the house, where he killed himself as he was about to be taken.

Suffragette on Rampage.

LONDON, April 11.—With a butcher's cleaver, which she had concealed under her cloak, a suffragette started Thursday afternoon to demolish a glass case and its contents, consisting of valuable porcelains, in the Asiatic gallery of the British Museum. At the time there were few visitors in that section, and on this the suffragette doubtless counted for long enough freedom from interruption to complete the work of destruction.

But the sound of splintering glass carried far, and before she had struck many blows two attendants reached the spot and seized her and turned her over to the police.

Paralyzed Woman Nearly Perishes.

WINDSOR, Ont., April 11.—A fire which broke out in the grocery store of James Barker, on Howard avenue, yesterday, completely destroyed the building and almost resulted in the death of Mrs. Barker, who is a paralytic. She was carried to safety just as the flames reached the room in which she was lying helpless in bed. The conflagration resulted from the throwing of a match near a gasoline tank at the rear of the store by Mr. Barker, who had been attempting to thaw out a frozen water pipe.

KRAFCHENKO MUST HANG

July 9th is Set as Date on Which He Pays Penalty.

MORDEN, Man., April 11. — On July 9, John Krafchenko is to be hanged at Winnipeg, for the murder, on Dec. 3, of last year, of H. M. Arnold, manager of the Bank of Montreal, at Plum Coulee, Man. The close of a long and sensational trial came at four o'clock Thursday afternoon, when the court met after a two-hour intermission, which followed the jury's verdict of guilty. When the court resumed Krafchenko made a statement to the court, in which he did not deny that he had been concerned in the hold-up of the bank, but in which he asserted positively that he was not the man who killed Arnold. Then Chief Justice Mathers imposed sentence. From the moment of the reading of the indictment to the last scene of all, the prisoner preserved the same steady attitude, and he showed little or no emotion even when the death penalty was pronounced.

TREATY IS RATIFIED.

Anglo-American Arbitration Pact Continues For Five Years.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—Secretary Bryan and Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British ambassador, yesterday exchanged ratifications of the arbitration treaty which will continue for another five years.

The original form of the treaty of 1908 was preserved without change.

Great Britain advanced the suggestion that there be incorporated in the terms of the treaty a provision similar to that contained in various commercial treaties by which the life of the treaty continues until one year after notification from one or the other of the contracting parties that that party desires to terminate the agreemen. This proposition was not objectionable to this Government, but the necessity of sending the treaty to the Senate for ratification and the possible entanglements likely to arise in the present stress of feeling over the tolls question dictated the wisdom of adhering to the old form and not trying to attempt any new arrangement.

Secretary Bryan signed the treaty for the United States and Ambassador Spring-Rice performed the same function for the British crown.

Lights of Mars.

It is claimed that curious lights have been seen on Mars and have been believed to be signal lights sent by the inhabitants of that distant world. This phenomenon can be easily explained as follows: The prevailing color of Mars is opal. When seen by daylight there is a mingling of this color with a pearl white, a rose suffron, and a robin's egg blue. When the sun's rays stream along its surface at certain angles flashes of curious light are produced that resemble somewhat the color rays of flashlight. These have, doubtless, been mistaken by the curious for flashlight signals. They are nothing new.—Christian Herald.

Her Greatest Trial.

A lady, whose husband was the champion snorer of the community in which they resided, confided to a female friend the following painful intelligence:

"My life has not been one of unalloyed delight. I have had the measles, chickenpox, typhoid fever, rheumatism and influenza, but I never knew what real misfortune was until I married a burglar alarm."—Pearson's Weekly.

Classes in Russia.

There is no upper middle class in Russia. A family is either of the peasantry—although this term has now a very wide inclusion—or of the aristocracy. And at court no one has precedence according to inherited rank, only according to official position in the government.

Another Cure for Tuberculosis.

CINCINNATI, April 11. — By breathing sulphurous acid fumes incipient cases of tuberculosis can be frequently cured, according to a public announcement made yesterday in the convention of the American Chemical Society, meeting here, by Dr. Edward Gudeman of Chicago. Dr. Gudeman stated that while this fact had been known for some time among certain physicians and chemists, yet the demonstrations along this line had not progressed far enough to make the announcement public, until yesterday.

Final Vote By June 1st.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—Consideration by the Senate committee on interoceanic canals of the proposed repeal of Panama Canal toll exemption for American ships was interrupted by lack of witnesses and further formal discussion of the issue was postponed until Monday.

It was apparent last night that the tolls controversy probably would not get formally before the Senate for two weeks, and the general opinion prevails that the vote on the repeal will not be taken before June 1.

Two More Hindus Implicated.

FERNIE, B.C., April 11.—By the confession of Mohammed Kahn, made as soon as he learned he was to be removed to Cranbrook, where he had no fear of violence, two other Hindus are implicated in the murder of the two men who were done to death in the shack at Bull River some three weeks ago. The men implicated, Budghram Singh and Behr Singh, are under arrest, and another man, Ram Singh, is being held as a witness.

The Brass Agraffe Guards Tone

The purity of the New Scale Williams Tone is guarded at our patented Harmonic Bar by the use of anti-rust "Brass Agraffes."

There are three strings for each note in the treble scale of a piano. In the each note has an individual Brass Agraffe as shown. Each wire is strung through a separate eyelet, giving perfect individual tone and yet blending with the other two wires to give a complete note of wondrous purity, free from any metallic ring.

BRASS AGRAFFES in the HARMONIC BAR remove all possibility of any wire ever touching any other, or rust ever reaching the point of contact. Just one of a hundred mechanical betterments that make the incomparable tone of the New Scale Williams Piano. 2B pean peoples? Has not this talk about world-wide sentiment been due to the tendency of Britons to regard their sphere of influence as the universe? Permanent disarmament can only come with the standardization of peace principles in all parts of the globe, which seems probable with the final triumph of Christian missionary enterprise everywhere. Premature action in reality is inviting the less righteous peoples to draw across Europe and its dependencies once more the scene of disruption of civilization, once more the veil of a Dark Age.

That ideas combatted at their birth by consituted authority are unchallenged commonplaces of present thought is no reason why they should have been established at their origin. That disarmament will be world-wide in perhaps a hundred years is no ground for its universal adoption to-day. Do not the existing deep-rooted differences on this issue prove more than anything else possibly can that a nation if it does not want disaster to tread in its line of march, should not adopt a policy of disarmament until there is greater unanimity of opinion upon the subject? Can there be anything more disastrous to progress than the premature adoption of radical measures not thoroughly in accord with the existing views of the people concerned? Puritan Cromwell sought to introduce the nineteenth century in the seventeenth; and what was the result? The demoralization of British brain in the days of Charles II.!

It is true that peace sentiment is on the increase. From the view of the economic good of the world as a whole, war is poor business. It cuts the throat of commerce; it withdraws multitudes from productive industry; it assists in bringing hard times; it turns into the military chest the millions which might solve more rapidly the social and domestic problems of empires, and it hinders the realization of the Christian principle of the brotherhood of man. God has said that war must go; men are taking up the cry. Science is eliminating political boundaries in trade, international policy and common comity. The power of neutral nations to withhold loans is being tested. Working men of rival countries realize that only in co-operation can they prevent fratricidal bloodshed. There is sufficient peace sentiment to accomplish much, but not all. Leading statesmen on whose shoulders rest the worries of the world, warn us that a premature triumph of roses to-day may mean the cross to-morrow.

War for Self-Defence.

The Arch-"Angell" of the present peace movement, in his work "The Great Illusion" (1912 edition, p. 329), admits that as long as "current philosophy in Europe remains what it is," war for self defence is justifiable, as the aggressor would be actuated not by his "interests," but by what he imagined his interest. Thus, whether right or wrong, the governing classes in Germany, inspired by ambition for colonies, for commerce, have refused the advances of the United Kingdom in the interest of partial disarmament, compelling the insular nation for self protection to augment military expenditure and to check the movement for the exemption of neutral ships in days of war. Still those who have eyes but do not see, have declared the latter to be an aggressive move on Britain's part, when, as an island nation, she depends upon foreign food supply, and when, as a country with only a voluntary army, she must retain this weapon if desiring to compel a land nation quickly to sue for peace! The Liberal administration came into power in the mother-land on the policy of reduction of armaments; Germany knew this and seized the opportunity to augment her naval expenditure. The result was that the peace government had to return to the old policy. A comparison of the appropriations for the navy in both countries, when the additional fact is considered that it is the amount spent in the building of new vessels which is the real criterion, reveals the surprising manner with which Germany has gained on her competitor. These military preparations show that at least one government has not taken to its bosom the peace prophets.

Disciples of Norman Angell are prone to declare that the modern commercial system now renders war for property or conquest economically futile. Experience, however, has shown that while international interdependence of nations has shortened wars it has not prevented bellicose outbreaks. Either the unprepared nations, as in the case of Russia and Turkey, or the nations absolutely inferior, as in the instance of Spain, are defeated. If the contestants be equally balanced the war must be brief and indecisive; but this brevity of contest is no safeguard against tests of strength. A clash between Germany and the United Kingdom, particularly if the former was successful, would be sharp and short: the British Fleet struck, defeated; the food supply cut off; the thousands of trained native troops succumbing to the tens of thousands of continental invaders. The shortness of such strife would not embarrass seriously the industrial machinery of the victor, while the harrassed land could be impoverished for a generation. Thus it is possible under favorable conditions for a nation with a commercial rather than a moral soul to profit financially at the expense of British and world welfare.

But disciples of the "Angellic" school would retort: German destruction of British trade would deprive Germany of commerce with the very nation to which she sells twice as much as to any other and which disposes of to her more than to any other country, with the exception of the United States and Russia. It would end in the capitalists of the United Kingdom withdrawing their enormous investments in German industry with the result that the latter would be ruined.

Let us see. Roughly speaking, Great Britain's import and export trade with Germany-in-Europe is only one-tenth of her whole commerce. The problem then is, does this continental nation stand to gain by risking this tenth? In the first case, if victor, could she not forbid English buoycott of the trade with herself? Futhermore, would not Britain, her own industries in a wrecked condition, be obliged to secure her supplies from the cheapest and most available source, and would not Germany be one of these sources, probably the chief? Is it not therefore clear that in proportion to the damage done to British trade would Germany increase her export trade in this direction? Now as to the import trade from the United Kingdom, the latter having her hands full in meeting internal needs, does it not also stand to reason that German home industry might increase in the same ratio? In addition, there would be the question of Britain's foreign trade with other nations. Is it not conceivable, in the case of the wrecking of the mercantile machinery of the United Kingdom, that the richest prize here would fall to the second commercial nation of the earth, Germany? And what a heritage!

Then, as regards the question of British capital invested in Germany, there would still be the other monetary centres of the earth from which the victor might replace the capital withdrawn. Moreover, the wresting of a huge war indemnity from the United Kingdom would delay the financial recuperation of the nation now Germany's chief commercial competitor, and at the same time strengthen the conqueror's credit when applying for loans.

The necessity of the empire providing for efficient naval defence is thus apparent. Yet we behold the pitiful scene of certain Liberal papers in the Dominion declaring with the advocates of war for self-defence that a local Canadian navy is necessary, and asserting with those of peace that the need for a navy has now passed. Are not Canadian citizens apt to consider this remarkable quality of consistency, this sitting on the fence, due to a desire to appeal to voters on both sides at once?

III.—The Policy of Compromise.

In conclusion, it is possible to be an advocate of peace and of war for self-defence at the same time. The needs of imperial defence can be met at the very time that Britons and Oversea Britons are aiding with all their might the education of the world in peace principles. The United Kingdom has already shown that its peace policy is one of practical idealism. In spite of the refusal to entertain the proposal for reduction of armaments, she still persists in her offer as the proposal for a naval holiday shows. Why then isolated action on the part of Canada?

The natural steps towards world tranquility would be from the races now educated in peace principals to those less educated: an empire fleet to extend the Pax Britannica of the nineteenth into the twentieth century; Anglo-Saxon co-operation in both hemispheres to represent each other! in their respective continents; alliance of the Great Powers to safeguard the status quo; and lastly, international agreement of all peoples.

One plan that has been suggested is the establishment of a world police force under the control of an international committee to enforce the decisions of the Hague Tribunal and to compel unruly nations to resort to its arbitrament. Such can only come by the unselfish co-operation of the Great Powers by land and sea, and would afford the necessary protection of the Christian World while the lesser civilized nations were acquiring peace ideals.

However, decades must pass before these dreams may be realized; and our present duty is to educate, watch, and wait. Still the Dominion, the United Kingdom, and the United States can assert in the preambles of all statutes for the augmentation of naval and military expenditure the proviso that such policy is due to the failure of other nations to meet their advances in the interest of peace, that its continuance is dependent upon the attitude of other nations towards disarmament; and that their navies and armies are at the disposal of the world as part of an international police force. The rank and file of progressive nations in time might demand a similar policy on the part of their governments, and thus pave the route to united action. At present it is lamented that a section of the Canadian people seem only too willing to neglect their obligations to the mother country and to the empire at large, but in reality any inertia on the part of the native born is due rather to the belief that war is out of date than to any lack of national honor. What these voters need is not denunciation but education, and we believe that the insertion in the permanent naval bill of some such preamble would rally the most intelligent of these to the governmental standard.

In addition although we must wait many a weary hour till the day dawns, what can be more inspiring to Britons and Over-sea Britons that the Empire as of yore sets the example to the world, that still she leads up the rough incline to the Higher Civilization, that still she blazes the path for other nations to follow.

NO HOPE FOR THE GUNMEN

GOV. GLYNN OF NEW YORK STATE WILL NOT GRANT REPRIEVE.

MUST DIE MONDAY

ALBANY, N.Y., April 11.—A memorandum of the cases of the four gunmen, sentenced to die Monday for the murder of the gambler, Rosenthal, last summer, setting forth in the main a reputed alibi for "Dago Frank" Cirofici, which was forwarded to Governor Glynn yesterday by C. G. F. Wahle, their attorney, failed to change the executive's position on his refusal to grant them a reprieve.

Eleven words written on a slip of white paper which on Thursday was found in a bundle of old correspondence by L. B. M. Brown, of New York, it was believed, would prove the means of obtaining a stay of execution for the four gunmen.

According to Mr. Brown, the note, which contains a warning against giving credence to statements of Morris Luban and Max Margolis, who were witnesses against the gunmen, was written by a former assistant to District Attorney Whitman. It was intended, says Brown, for the guidance of former Governor Sulzer, in whose behalf it was reported at the time communication was indited.

"I have received and read your supplemental application in the case of your clients," the governor telegraphed Wahle last night. "I find nothing therein which I had not previously considered and nothing to justify a change in my decision."

Another eleventh-hour effort to save the four men gave signs of being more successful last night when Supreme Court Justice Goff signed an order making it mandatory for District Attorney Whitman to show cause why the four gunmen should not be granted a new trial.

The order is returnable to-day before Justice Goff, who presided at the trial of the gunmen, and was obtained on the ground that new evidence had been discovered.

This evidence, in the form of affidavits, was presented to Justice Goff by Charles G. F. Wahle of counsel for the condemned men. The signer of one affidavit swore that a man he could identify, and who was not one of the gunmen, was in the firing party whose shots killed Rosenthal. The other declared that he saw Sam Schepps, "Bridgie" Webber and Harry Vallon, the informers, and not the men convicted, in the car that raced away from the scene of the crime after the tenderloin gambler had been shot to death in front of the Metropolis Hotel.

Besides receiving the memorandum, the governor yesterday heard a personal appeal for the gunmen from Mrs. William Vanamee, of Newburgh, the wife of an attorney for the convicted men, who was too ill to appear in person. Mrs. Vanamee was accompanied by the mother of "Lefty Louie" Rosenberg, but the executive remained firm in his decision not to talk with any of the relatives of the condemned men, and saw Mrs. Vanamee alone. Her appeal was in vain, the governor saying that his decision was final.

Rabbi Brown, who Thursday injected a note from Frank Moss, a former assistant district attorney of New York, into the case, did not appear at the capitol yesterday. The note now is in the hands of the gunmen's counsel, and it is supposed Brown went to New York.

PELTS FOUND

Ominous Flotsom May Have Come From Southern Cross.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., April 11.—Seal pelts thought to have come from the missing sealing steamer Southern Cross were sighted yesterday, seventy miles south of St. Mary's Bay by the steamer Kyle, which has been searching the coast for a week. This is the first definite clew to the fate of the vessel, which was last reported off the southern coast on March 31.

The pelts are skins which have been roughly removed and to which considerable fat usually adheres, causing them to float readily. It is believed that they either were washed from the decks of the sealer or floated to the surface after she went down. None of the sealing fleet which came in last week from the St. Lawrence grounds, where the Southern Cross had been seal hunting, lost any pelts off the southern coast in the vicinity of St. Mary's Bay.

The Kyle reported by wireless that she would continue search though the weather was foggy.

TO PURIFY LAKES.

Commission Seeks Remedy For Pollution of Water.

WASHINGTON, April 11. — With the extent of pollution in the international waters along the boundary between the United States and Canada established, the international joint commission has undertaken to find and apply a remedy.

Chairman Tawney said yesterday that at the conference just concluded here the commission decided first to employ leading sanitary engineers to study the problem, then to give them a hearing, which will be about the middle of May. After that hearings will be held in the various cities and towns affected. Buffalo and Detroit, as the two largest, being the first to be visited by the commission.

The commission will meet again at Sault Ste. Marie May 4 to investigate the water power project which American and Canadian concerns desire to build at that point and which will affect the level of Lake Superior.

ROUT INFLICTED ON THE FEDERALS

Villa Drives Huerta's Generals Out of San Pedro.

JAUREZ, April 11.—As a climax of the second campaign of the Coahuila country the Federals, under De Moure and Maas, were driven out of San Pedro de Los Colonias and back to Saltillo. This information was relayed from the front last night by Gen. Villa, who has sent his chief commanders to San Pedro to overwhelm the Federal forces. After an eight days' battle between the Federal reinforcements from Monterey and Saltillo and the joint commands of Ortega, Hernandez and Benavides, the Federals were driven from the streets of San Pedro after the most severe hand-to-hand fighting, back into the desert beyond the irrigated district of San Pacio to the east. The losses on both sides were heavy, and the rebels suffered from lack of supplies and ammunition.

Ortega and Hernandez were twice forced to withdraw to their base at Sacramento, but renewed the attack with the receipt of supplies from Torreon, and finally drove the Federals out of their well-fortified positions.

Velasco, in command of the Torreon column, and Hidaljo, who commanded at Saltillo, have formed a junction, and are now near Saltillo, having slipped around the San Pedro command of rebels before the battle started. They are preparing for an offensive campaign against Torreon, and will make an effort to drive Villa out of the town. They have the necessary elements, and with the supplies that are at Saltillo they can accomplish much against Villa's exhausted army.

The compaign against Saltillo has not yet been undertaken by Villa, who is holding his main column in Torreon and Gomez Palacio.

Torreon's Fall Admitted.

MEXICO CITY, April 11. — The first admission that Gen. Villa and the rebel army have occupied Torreon was made by The Mexican Herald on Thursday. The newspaper, however, states that Gen. Aurelliano Blanquet declares that Gen. Jose Refugio Velasco, the Federal commander, has not evacuated the city in the full sense of the word. The Minister of War says the Federal commander has made a strategic move which is expected to give the best results on the arrival of the Federal columns now on their way to Torreon.

Will Use Guillotine.

ELPASO, April 11.—Gen. Eulalia Gutierrez, who is in command of the San Luis Potosi district, held by the rebels, and is now in Juarez conferring with Carranza, was advised yesterday that his troops surrounding the city of San Luis Potosi Thursday killed 200 Federals, who attempted to make a sally out of the city against him.

Gen. Gutierrez yesterday described a guillotine which he has constructed for use on Federal prisoners when captured. "We tested it on sheep," he said, "and it worked beautifully."

Asked if he had used it yet on a human being, he said, "No, not yet, but there are plenty of Federals and there is plenty of time." He said the machine was portable and would be carried on a flat car with his army.

Two Huertists Executed.

NOGALES, Sonora, Mexico, April 11.—Standing blindfolded on the brink of their open graves, Francisco Fimbres and Jose M. Canoba, members of a Huerta junta on the American side of the line, were executed in the cemetery yesterday. Fimbres was captured several days ago while carrying a message from the junta to Canoba, who was then at Montezuma.

WOMAN MEETS INSTANT DEATH

Either Fell or Jumped From Motor Cycle to Path of Street Car

TORONTO, April 11.—While riding on the rear of a motor-cycle driven by William Thompson, 90 1-3 Markham street, Mrs. Emma Belz, aged 19, of 90 Markham street, fell or jumped off the machine at the corner of Markham and Arthur streets at seven o'clock last evening was killed instantly by eastbound Dundas car, No. 2,000, driven by Motorman William Goodenough of 107 Laughton avenue. Both Goodenough and Thompson were arrested by the police of No. 3 division after the accident, and are being held on charges of criminal negligence. The accident occurred while the motor-cycle was going south on Markham street, when at the corner of Arthur it was almost struck by the eastbound Dundas car.

The woman's body was dragged 100 feet beneath the car trucks before Motorman Goodenough brought his car to a stop.

One eye-witness to the accident gave his opinion to the police that the girl purposely fell off the machine, which she believed was about to be struck by the car. He said he thought he saw her push herself off the back seat, and prepare for the fall on the roadway. Instead of toppling backwards, however, she fell forward, directly across the north rail of the south track, and the next instant was lost to view beneath the car.

The dead woman was formerly a Miss Cosgrave, and after her marriage to Belz less than two years ago, the couple occupied rooms in her mother's apartment house at 90 Markham street. She leaves a 10-months' old baby.

OKUMA FOR PREMIER.

He Has Been Recommended by Statesmen—Coronation Postponed.

TOKIO, April 11.—Count Shigenobu Okuma, former Minister, was recommended to the Emperor yesterday by the elder statesmen for the office of Premier, in place of Count Gombei Yamamoto, whose Cabinet resigned in consequence of the naval scandals connected with the receipt of illicit commissions by officers.

The coronation of the Emperor, which had been fixed for Nov. 10 next, has been postponed until 1916 owing to the death of the Dowager Empress.

The reason for the prolonged delay of the coronation is that the seed of the rice used in the sacred ceremony must not be ripened during the period of national mourning.

Shinbones Come In Handy.

NEW YORK, April 11.—News of two remarkable operations at the Post-Graduate Hospital came out yesterday.

Arthur Lang, a Brooklyn boy, was cured of spinal curvature by the insertion of a ten-inch strip of shinbone. This operation was performed by Prof. F. H. Alvee.

The other operation was upon Ambrose Duffy, a Yorkville boy, who when a baby, had his skull fractured and had been a constant sufferer. This condition was corrected by the insertion of a piece of shinbone.

In both cases the operations were successful.

Chatham Again Visited by Fire.

CHATHAM, Ont., April 11.—Starting from an explosion, the cause of which is unknown, fire yesterday morning completely destroyed the plant of the Canadian Wolverine Brass Co. on St. Clair street, causing a loss that is estimated by officers of the company at from $25,000 to $30,000. The fire is the most disastrous that has occurred in Chatham since the Planet disaster almost a year ago, but unlike that catastrophe, no lives were lost.

NATURAL ELECTRICITY.

Tapping the Air For It a Problem That Baffles Science.

In answering the question, "Is the prophecy that 'went the rounds' about twenty years ago that some way of 'tapping nature' and thus securing unlimited supplies of electricity from air or from space coming true?" Edgar Lucien Larkin in the New York American says:

The nearest approach to the great work of tapping nature's unlimited store of electricity is the act allowing irrigating streams from high mountains to turn turbine generators over and over again in different power plants along down the sides of the mountains and then after securing all mechanical work of gravitation secure growing work in the growth of food plants. This is the height at present of human skill in the work of "tapping nature."

Windmills turning armatures is another way of tapping. And the capture of water in tides, using the force of outflow, is still another. We still have the dynamos with us. We must turn armatures with their polar fields of magnetic lines.

We must use running water or flowing winds to tap nature or burn carbon under boilers, which is too expensive and prosaic to be called the high art of tapping, as one would turn a faucet.

I suppose my correspondent means just tapping a free supply. This auspicious event has not arrived unless using solar engines is tapping. Heat reflected by mirrors directly from the noonday sun upon boilers has been made to generate steam and turn armatures.

Another way of tapping is to allow the sun to shine on thermo electric piles, unions of ends of bars of unlike metals.

What my friend evidently wants is electricity as cheap as air, water and sunlight. This really is the dream of electricians. Since nothing exists but electrons, and these are electricity, it does seem that we ought to get all we want for nothing by merely taking or tapping the supply. But Edison, Thomson, Rutherford and Tesla and Steinmetz have not blazed the way into this unknown problem of the ages.

I have no doubt that man will make this conquest, for the mind phasing in man is illimitable.

NEW ZEALAND'S GUM MINES.

Gathering a Harvest That Ripened Ages and Ages Ago.

Gum digging in New Zealand offers one of the most unusual and interesting forms of labor, partly because of the ease with which the work may be carried on and partly because it is said New Zealand is the only country where gum digging is done.

Originally the gum which is now brought to light came from the kauri tree, which is now scarce, but ages ago great forests of it probably covered most of the northern part of the North island. These forests were swept away by fire, and today the landscape is mostly low brown hills with occasional swamps. Gum burns very easily, but such as was covered by the dank forest debris escaped the fire.

Hardened and preserved through uncountable ages, this is the gum the gum digger seeks today. By paying 5 shillings a year he may wander and dig where he likes over enormous areas of government lands. All that is required is a kind of spear to locate the gum, a spade to dig it and a bag to put it in. At night it is scraped and sorted, according to size and quality.

"In digging," says a writer in Pearson's Magazine, "you enjoy all the excitement of gambling without incurring the sin. And then to work for yourself when you like, where you like and how you like is delightful beyond belief. Also you are free to live as your fancy turns and to have as many friends as you wish or as few."

The climate is pleasant, and the returns from the work, though not financially great, ranging from $1.75 a day upward, are perhaps all that the enterprise warrants.

Wheels in a Watch.

The main wheel in an ordinary American watch makes four revolutions a day of twenty-four hours, or 1,460 in a year; next, the center wheel, 24 revolutions in a day, or 8,760 in a year; the third wheel, 192 in a day, or 59,080 in a year; the fourth wheel, 2,440 in a day, or 545,000 in a year; the fifth, or scape wheel, 12,900 in a day, or 4,728,200 in a year. The ticks or beats are 388,800 in a day, or 141,882,000 in a year.—Milwaukee Free Press.

Music and Medicine.

A reporter asked an opera manager one day if he believed in the new therapeutic idea that music was a medicine. "Believe in it? Of course I do," the impresario replied. "I know at least three operas that are a drug on the market, while as for popular songs there isn't one of them that doesn't make me ill."

His Luck.

"Don't you know that your husband is walking the floor because of his debts?"

"Isn't it fortunate?" replied young Mrs. Torkins sweetly. "You know the doctor said that Charlie simply must take more exercise."—Washington Star.

Perhaps It Would.

Gibbs—I believe in early rising, don't you? Dibbs—Well, there's no abstract excellence in early rising. It all depends on what you do after you rise. It would be much better for the world if some people never got up.—Boston Transcript.

ALL STRIKERS MAY GO BACK

After Nine Months, Calumet Men Likely to Go Back

CALUMET, Mich., April 11.—Copper country locals of the Western Federation of Miners decided yesterday to take a referendum vote next Sunday on the question of calling off the strike which has been waged since July 23, 1913.

The action of the locals resulted from reports of the district officers which were submitted to five meetings held in various parts of the strike zone. It was said that the district officers informed the men that no more concessions could be expected from the copper mining companies. It was also stated that the union rank and file was told that the companies have established a substantial eight-hour day and have arranged to hear grievances once a week. Recognition of the union, they said, had been steadily refused.

It was reported that some of the union members criticized the officers for not proposing the referendum a month ago when there was better chance of obtaining work.

MANY RIOTERS ARE RELEASED

All But Six of Vancouver Island Miners at Liberty

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C., April 11.—Twenty-two Ladysmith miners sentenced to varying terms in jail for participation in the riots on Vancouver Island last August, by Judge Howay, at Nanaimo, have been released from the Burnaby prison farm at Okalla, orders to that effect having reached the warden from the Department of Justice at Ottawa.

With the release of these men the last of those convicted of participation in the disorders are at liberty save Joe Angelo, who was given a penitentiary term by Justice Morrison at the close of the special assize here a fortnight ago, and five given penitentiary sentences by Judge Howay at Nanaimo.

HORSES FOR THE MILITIA

Government Makes Arrangements For Breeding a Supply

OTTAWA, April 11.—An important arrangement has been made by the Minister of Militia with the National Live Stock Exchange, Limited, whereby the latter will lease for twenty-one years 65,120 acres of crown lands in Alberta, south of the Red Deed river, and will breed thereon cavalry remounts for the Canadian militia and the British army. The annual rental will be two cents per acre, and the exchange undertakes to raise not less than 1,500 horses per year, the price to be paid by the Militia Department and the British War Office not to exceed $250. The exchange has agreed to purchase as far as practicable such half-bred yearlings as it may require from the smaller breeders throughout Canada, the purpose being to distribute the purchase money over as wide an area as possible and among the smaller breeders.

The Government of Canada is to have right of pre-emption in respect to all these horses raised by the exchange, and the company must hold and mature until the age of three and a half years all horses which the Minister of Militia may desire for military purposes.

It is further agreed that the War Office of Great Britain may have pre-emption rights at the same prices and terms in respect of such horses as remain "after the Minister has made his choice." The exchange must have the right, however, to retain fifty fillies and fifty colts each year for breeding purposes.

Col. Hughes submits that the lease "will be in the interest of the public, as it desired that every encouragement should be given for the production of horses for cavalry and other war purposes."

When the leaves of tea were first brought to England they were eaten.

MONOPLANE FALLS.

German Aviator and Woman Passenger Are Killed.

DRESDEN, April 11. — The German aviator, Reichelt, carried a woman passenger with him on a flight last evening. At a height of 200 feet the motor exploded and the monoplane shot blazing to earth. The woman was dead when extricated. Reichelt died in a hospital.

On several previous occasions the deceased aviator had narrow escapes from death. Once, in 1913, with a passenger aboard, when at a height of 6,000 feet, his motor stopped and he had to plane downward through a heavy fog in the darkness. He landed on a house, crushing the roof, but he and his passenger escaped injury.

Coin In Letters Permitted.

OTTAWA, April 11.—The recently issued order by the Postoffice Department that all letters containing coin which were transmitted through the mails were to be sent to the dead letter office unless registered has been suspended.

The new regulation caused much adverse criticism in the country, and a day or two ago the deputy minister, Dr. Coulter, stated that amounts up to one dollar would be accepted unregistered. An order has now been given out that letters containing coin are to be forwarded in the regular manner.

TELL THE BOYS TO CUT OUT BOOZE AND CIGARETTES

---RUBE WADDELL

Rube Waddell is one of the imperishable names of baseball. He start in a minor league and ended in the same company. In between he reached the topmost rung of fame as being beyond question the greatest left-handed pitcher the national game has produced.

Waddell made millions of dollars—for club owners. His big, jolly nature never permitted him to turn his jesting to his own pecuniary benefit. For Rube for a jester, baseball's first and only. Beside him Germany Schaefer and Nick Altrock are only suer-clowns.

Waddell has pitched his last game. He pitched it at Duluth, June 26, 1913, as a member of the Virginia team of the Northern league. Those 2000 fans who sat on the bleachers or in the grand stand and doubled up with laughter at the jester's antics never will forget that eventful day. Perhaps Rube knew that would be his last fling. The more one thinks of his work in the 12 gruelling innings the more he is impressed that Rube felt the intuition of an invisible fate. Rube ever was fate's plaything. Fate moulded him into a jester and has crossed and criss-crossed his eventful life since.

Rube admitted it. He never could explain why he went fishing on the day he was scheduled to pitch while fans called for him and irate managers scoured his old haunts, gnashing their teeth; he never could explain why he went to a fire in the midst of an exciting game or why he rescued drowned men from the bottom of a lake.

Rube's last year in baseball was filled with misfortune. He was stricken with fever at the training camp of the Minneapolis American Association team at Hickman and was not in shape to pitch at the opening of the season. This led to his Cantillon's little Millers.

Rube pitched several games for the Little Millers and was given several of the severest drubbings ever recorded. The old listless, wandering nature seemed to grip him and he became careless.

Spike Shannon, of St. Paul, and formerly of the Giants, manager of the Virginia team which was in the last place put in a bid for Rube. Probably Spike figured him from a gate standpoint. His team was a poor attraction because of its cellar position almost from the start. If that were his motive he made a shrewd move. Rube Waddell always was a drawing card, and this power he held until the last.

Waddell joined the Virginians at Duluth one rainy day early in June. He still was suffering with a "game" leg, although it had begun to mend, and he was able to be in a game once in a while.

For a time while a member of the Shannon outfit Rube was among those missing as far as the public was concerned. Shannon knew where he was, but beyond an evasive answer he would shed no light on Rube's whereabouts.

The team travelled about the circuit and the fans called for Rube, but Rube was not there. Then, one day, press despatches carried a thrilling story, and the secret was no more.

It appeared that Rube was camping on a little lake near Virginia in an attempt to regain his health. Two men were capsized in a rowboat and one was drowned. Searchers could not find the body. Waddell took a hand. He dived into the lake and returned with the body.

Soon after he rejoined his team and came to Duluth for a double-header game, June 26. Waddell was advertised to pitch the first game. The curious fans filled the grand stand and bleachers. When the big fellow stepped out to warm up he was cheered to the echo. But underneath it all there was a note of sadness. None could help recalling his career. They saw, in their imagination, Rube Waddell standing in the pitcher's box at Shibe Field, Philadelphia. They saw him in the height of glory striking out man after man, and heard again the plaudits of the fans. Then in reality they saw him in a minor league, one of the newest and greenest in organized baseball—and Rube Waddell was pitching for the tail-enders.

Waddell had the art of jesting down to a fine point. He never displayed it to better advantage than that day. He knew when to pull the funny stuff and when to tighten. He did his best to win that game because he knew the crowd expected it. But he was pitching against a youngster who was hitting his best stride, and it was youth against ill-health and stiffened joints. Duluth won the game, 2 to 1. Rube fanned 12, but his team did not give him the slugging support. His opponent struck out 17 of the Virginians.

The game was called. Rube walked to the plate, keeping step to the hand-clapping of the crowd. He surveyed carefully the pitcher's box, gave his outfield a careful glance, turned, bowed to the crowd, motioned to the batter to get closer to the plate, and put over the first pitched ball—a strike. The catcher returned the ball, but Rube's back was turned. He was looking at something out in centrefield. The fans shouted, but he never looked around. Suddenly he made a quick step, his face still turned away, put his hand behind his back and caught the ball.

He retired the batter in short order on strikes. Rube smiled.

"That's the way, ain't it, kid, eh?" he called at the chagrined one. Rube knew he controlled the situation from that time. He went back the next inning. Sam Meniece, a left-hand batter and a man as old as Waddell, faced him. Possibly it was the combination of southpaw against left-hander, for he delivered one just to Meniece's liking and he slammed it to deep right for two bases.

"Then Rube pretended he was mad. He tore off his cap, stamped the ground, and paced back and forth. Then he put up his hand. The fans interpreted it to mean "never again."

It didn't work, however, for the fates intervened again. Meiece came up again in the fifth. Perhaps Rube wanted to see what the left-hander could do with a groove. So he put one over. Bat and ball met, the sphere sailed over the fence.

Again the big southpaw tore off his cap. He sat down on the plate and watched the ball until it dropped from sight and the umpire had given him another. That hit was for a circle and meant the first score in a tight game where one score might have decided the winner. Rube arose, brushed himself off, waved his hand at the panting Meniece as he touched home plate and returned to earth.

Rube's particular target that day was Darby O'Brien, manager and second baseman. He was a jolly Irishman and attempted in a small way to bring some funny stuff into the game.

Darby had knocked out a little grounder to short, who fielded it to first almost before the manager had left the plate. When he saw the out he started to return to the bench. Rube dropped the ball, ran over, and, grasping his arm, escorted him to the dug-out.

How Rube manage to hit the ball when it came his turn at bat none could figure. There is where he displayed his science in the art of jesting. He would take the hickory, amble to the plate, and, raising the bat to his shoulder would squint along its glossy surface like a rifleman posing for a difficult shot. The pitcher would wind up and throw. The ball sailed straight for the plate. But Rube was ready and waiting. When the ball reached a point to his liking, he brought the bat from his shoulder with a chopping stroke and met it. He always managed to hit the ball, but at running to first he was a joke. He never wanted to reach the plate, for it meant too much exercise if he was called on to count a score.

Rube saved his best vaudeville trick until near the last. After he had retired two men he called his outfield in. After all had been seated on the bench Rube made up his mind to show the class of pitching. Standing on the field alone, facing a batsman eager to soil his act with a healthy clout, the big southpaw delivered three swift strikes. It was all over but the shouting.

Rube Waddell had had his fun. He had become on intimate terms with more than 2000 bugs, and he knew they would never forget him. It was a fitting end to what proved to be his final fling. He started the game as a jester, and he ended as one.

Before Waddell died he sent out a little message. He said it in a few words, but it was a sermon. Had the commandment been followed by the author the name of Rube Waddell might have been with that of Mathewson to-day, and fans would have been speculating on when he would be too old to pitch.

This is the sermon-message:

"Tell the boys to cut out the booze and cigarets."

BOUTS DREW LARGE CROWD

WRESTLING PROGRAM AT THE Y.M.C.A. MADE BIG HIT.

Success was written in big letters over the wrestling matches put on by the Y. M. C. A. on Thursday evening in the gymnasium. It was the best amateur attraction of its kind ever put on in this city and it was indeed gratifying to the promoters to see the large audience sprinkled with ladies and clergymen. The bouts were arranged between men from the Central "Y" of Toronto and members of Mr. H. B. Cowan's class in connection with the local institution. Although the visitors were successful in all, it reflects no discredit to the local boys, as they have been in training only a short time, and are not as well scienced as they will be by the time another tournament is arranged for.

Lees vs. Hood.

The first bout between H. Lees, of this city, and Hood, of Toronto, 115 pounds, was a grand opener. For six minutes they worked hard, Lees displaying more strength than this opponent, but lacking in the fine arts of the game. When neither had a fall at the end of the six minutes and neither could be given the decision on ponts, they were called upon, after sufficient rest, to go six minutes more. Hood soon assumed the aggressive, and in 4 minutes 47 sec. he secured a fall with a scissors hold.

Hartiken vs. Durnan.

In the 135 pound class Hartikanen the city champion, and Durnan, of Toronto, went six minutes without a fall, but in the second session the local boy conceded a fall on account of injuring his side.

Forbes vs. Walsh.

An exhibition bout between D. Forbes, of this city, and Walsh, the Toronto City Champion, resulted in a win for the Toronto boy, Forbes giving in after five minutes.

Torner vs. Harpley.

It took Harpley, of Toronto, 5 min. 20 sec. to take a fall out of M. Turner in the 145 pound class. Both boys showed great alertness, and Harpley's superior science alone saved him from defeat.

Gibson vs. Scott.

In another 145 pound bout A. Gibson threw W. Scott in 2 min. 40 secs. The physical development of Gibson drew a great deal of admiration from the crowd, and when he threw Hartley, the winner of the other 145 pound match in 2 mins. 45 secs. he received a well earned ovation.

Durnan and Walsh, both Toronto men, gave a well received exhibition bout, as did the two Gibson brothers, both of the Central "Y." Between some of the bouts, attractions such as pillow fights and blindfolded boxing amused the spectators. Mr. H. B. Cowan acted as referee, and Messrs. H. Cooke, of Toronto, and J. J. Thompson, City, were the timers.

GOLF

The annual spring meeting of the players of the Peterborough Golf and Country Club for the election of committees and captains, will be held on Thursday evening, April 16, at the Bank of Montreal Chambers, at 8 o'clock sharp. All players are requested to attend.

DARING BASEBALL PLAY.

Three Stolen Bases and a Run on a Scratch Infield Hit.

"The greatest baseball play I ever saw," says a writer in the American Magazine, "occurred in a game between the Philadelphia Athletics and the Detroit Tigers in Shibe park, Philadelphia, June, 1912.

"Ty Cobb, his first time up, hit a nasty grounder toward the first base. The ball had a deceptive bound and Stuffy McInnes had some trouble reaching for it and keeping hold of the ball when he got it. But he managed to scramble over and touch first just as Ty raced over the bag. Connie Mack's loyal rooters declared the 'Georgia Peach' out by a mile, but the umpire had ideas of his own and Tyrus rested safely on the initial suck.

"The unexepected usually happens when this star swatsman is running bases, and on this occasion he did not disappoint his admirers. After the pitcher had thrown the ball Ty, having a fairly good lead, decided to amble along down to second, figuring, no doubt, that Lapp (the Athletic catcher) would be taken off his guard and throw wild. To try for second after a catcher of Lapp's ability has the ball requires nerve of a high order. He is usually there with the perfect peg, but the sight of Cobb jogging along was too much for him and he heaved the ball into center field. Cobb saw Barry crouched in front of the base waiting as if to receive the ball, so, gathering speed, he made one of his bent leg slides and landed behind the bag. Then seeing that the ball had gone to center field, he started for third base at top speed. Some one, I think it was Collins, made a beautiful throw to 'Home Run' Baker, who stabbed Cobb with the ball as that well known gentleman was in the act of sliding head first for the third haven of rest.

"The crowd groaned when the umpire motioned Cobb safe at third. While admiring his nervy exhibition the fans really wanted the dangerous fellow disposed of, and he had reached third by the closest kind of a margin.

"Ty slapped the dust from his togs and, as usual, ran several feet up the path toward home each time the pitcher started to wind up. The batter had now gathered two strikes, and with the next wind up Cobb raced for the plate at full speed, sliding with great force against Lapp, who was waiting for him with the ball. But the throw had been a little too high, and the catcher was taken off his feet before he could touch the daring base runner.

"Cobb therefore stole three bases after having reached first by a lucky scratch hit and made the first run of the game before the next batter up had hit the ball."

Hotel Room Keys.

A locksmith employed in one of New York's largest hotels explained the lock system of the house, saying that there were 1,500 rooms in the hotel with individual keys, each of which will open only the lock it was made for. The "master key," however, will open or lock all of the doors in the hotel, and the "emergency key," besides doing this, will lock a door so that no other key will open it. The "master key" and the key made especially for any one of the doors are useless after the "emergency key" has locked the door. With it a man may be locked in or out of his room, and if so he will remain locked in or out until the "emergency key" is used again. It sets a lock so that no other key can turn it.—New York Times.

Do You Know Her?

"I do have the worst trouble with the phone!"

"What's the cause?"

"The service, of course. Let me show you: 'Hello, exchange, hello! Why don't you answer? I want Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Julia Brown. What number? No. 63 Tanglefoot street. Number? I just told you. Oh, that? You mean her telephone number? Why, it's—there, you've gone and put it all out of my head. I'll have to look in the book. Dear, dear, the book is upstairs! Well, I never in all my life saw such service!'"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A little salt sprinkled around the wick of a candle will greatly lengthen the time the candle will burn.

HOT AIR

To prove that our claims for the Bosch-Ford Magneto are not composed of Hot Air, we make the following offer: We will install a Bosch-Ford Magneto on any Ford car, and if the owner is not perfectly satisfied, we will remove it, and refund the money.

Would not do without it for any amount, is the verdict of all purchasers.

We cannot recommend these outfits for Ford cars too highly. Come in and talk it over.

Let us prove our Assertions.

The soft, lustrous pussy willow taffeta is much used for hat crowns and for under-brim shirrings but it is scarcely crisp and stiff enough for a big upstanding bow.

The total sales of the "SALADA" Tea Co. last year amounted to as much as the total business during the first twelve years they were introducing Ceylon tea into Canada and the United States. Their increase alone in 1913 over 1912 amounted to more than the total business done during the first five years of their existence, and during the first three months of 1914 their ratio of increase is the largest they have ever had.

A Maker of Cripples.

Dr. Charlton Wallace once investigated with great care 400 cases of hip joint disease—tuberculosis of the hip. He found that of this number 70 per cent came of tuberculous families or had lived in houses where there had been known cases of active tuberculosis within a year. In both cases the explanation was the same—exposure to infection. When the tubercle germ cannot murder a victim it does its best to cripple him. The only safeguard is to make sure personally that your house does not harbor this greatest of human enemies.—Chicago Journal.

OFFICIAL INSPECTION OF GRAND TRUNK'S ONTARIO LINES

Three of the Grand Trunk Officers—Mr. H. E. Whittenberger, General Superintendent of Ontario Lines, Mr. W. P. Fitzsimons, Commissioner of Industries, and Mr. J. E. Duval, General Superintendtnt of Car Service, have just completed a tour of inspection in the St. Catharine's, Thorold, Welland and Port Colborne districts. The Grand Trunk has a network of busy lines in this southern section of Ontario, and the officials journeyed from point to point in a special train. The road and its equipment were found to be in excellent condition, with an ample supply of cars to meet the demands of the ever growing traffic. The requirements of the new industrial plants, including calls for the construction of sidings, were examined, and plans were made to supply extra shipping facilities where necessary.

"Industrial development is proceeding rapidly in these districts," said Mr. Fitzsimons, Commissioner of Industries, in speaking of the inspection tour.

"There is no pessimism among the manufacturers; but on the other hand a hopeful outlook is general. New patterns, better designs, are being sought, and they are looking forward to a future not of commercial depression but of active trade."

"The deepening of the Welland Canal is causing quite a 'boom" in trade in that zone. Agricultural and fruit growing prospects are very bright and new industries in connection with fruit growing are being planned. The Forest-Sarnia district between the Grand Trunk main line and Lake Huron is coming along very fast and will soon be a real rival of the Niagara territory in fruit raising, for a great deal of money is being spent there on the orchards. The flour mills at Goderich and the pig iron plant at Port Colborne are busy—indeed industrial conditions generally were found to be very satisfactory."

BALANCING BOWLDERS.

Two of These Natural Curiosities Sway in the Berkshires.

For many years one of the greatest natural curiosities in Berkshire county and which in earlier and later years has been visited by armies of the curious is Balance rock, four miles north of Pittsfield and near the south line of Lanesboro.

This great marble bowlder is now of a deep brown color and is scarred and riven by the storms of centuries. It is thirty feet high, fifteen feet wide and is so wonderfully poised on a few feet at its base as to tremble at the slightest touch.

It weighs many hundreds of tons and resembles from several points of view a huge egg, a blacksmith's forge and the back of an elephant. It resembles no rock to be found on the Taconic mountain range or its foothills, near which latter it stands in sphinxlike grandeur and silence.

It is not generally known that there is another balance rock in Berkshire about of equal interest with that in Lanesboro. It is on the highest point of the Monument mountain, where it slopes toward the east, and is 700 feet above the river at the village of Housatonic. Its estimated weight is over 100 tons.—Pittsfield (Mass.) Cor. New York Sun.

A Daring Skater.

Shortly after the fight at Jena in 1806 Napoleon dispatched an officer to Marshal Mortier requiring him to seize certain important towns without delay. When the officer arrived at the mouth of the Elbe, where the river is seven and one-half miles wide, he was threatened with serious loss of time. The river was just covered with ice; therefore to row over was out of the question. He could not cross by the nearest bridge without going twenty miles out of his way on roads heavy with snow. So he resolved to skate across the thin, freshly formed ice. Had he tried walking he would have sunk at once, but by skimming along on his skates at the top of his speed he got over the river both dry and unharmed. By this daring deed he saved six hours, did what Napoleon bade him do and won great credit for his bold and clever exploit.

Why Not?

Among the mountaineers of Carolina there is a strong feeling of resentment toward anything that savors of charity. In illustration of their independence Miss Margaret W. Morley tells this story in "The Carolina Mountains:"

A stranger fed a mountain woman who, having come to town to "trade," stopped at the door, tired and hungry to sell her butter. The next day the woman came back with a chicken.

"Why, no," said the lady. "I cannot take your chicken. I gave you the dinner."

"Say you did?"

"Yes."

"Say you gave me the dinner?"

"Yes."

"Well, if you can give me a dinner why can't I give you a chicken?"

At the Wrong House.

"Have you a Charles Dickens in your home?" asked the polite book agent.

"No!" she snapped.

"Or a Robert Louis Stevenson?"

"No."

"Or a Gene Field?"

"No, we ain't, an', what's more, we don't run a boarding house here either. If you're looking for them fellows you might try the house across the street. I understand they keep roomers."—Detroit Free Press.

CANINE COLLECTORS.

Charity Dogs In London Are a Highly Trained Class.

Many of the general public, as well as the employes of the London and South-Western Railway, will sincerely mourn the recent death of Wimbledon Nell, the retriever which collected money for the Railway Servants' Orphanage. With a box attached to her back, Wimbledon Nell walked the platforms of Wimbledon Station for seven years, and during that time collected £775 in the cause of charity. A special steel collar was worn by Nell, the gift of the orphanage authorities, who also presented her with a silver medal for every £100 raised. These medals were worn by the dog, attached to her collar.

Nell was one of a dozen collecting dogs to be found at various stations on the London and South-Western Railway. The animals collect on an average about £500 a year, or about a quarter of the amount required to pay the annual expenses of the total number of orphans. It was in 1894 that an employe hit upon the idea of training a dog as a collector for charity. The animal was a cross between a retriever and a Newfoundland, and was known as Jack I. He was the first of the three Jacks of Waterloo Station, who, between them, collected over £3,000. After their death the bodies of Jack I. and Jack II. were stuffed and enshrined in glass-cases, which have long occupied prominent positions at Waterloo Station.

No less famous than the Jacks of Waterloo is Tim, the Airedale terrier, at Paddington, who has collected over £1,000 for a widows' and and orphans' fund. The total sum collected by the dogs on the Great Western Railway—between £200 and £300 per annum—provides enough to meet the assistance given by the institution to twenty-five widows out of the 1,500 who are dependent on the fund.

There are dozens of collecting dogs on the various lines throughout the provinces, most of them being the gift of railway servants themselves, who train and look after the animals. Many interesting stories are told of their extraordinary intelligence. Southampton Jack used to be quite famous for his ability to collect from the passengers of both the up and down trains that stopped at Southampton West Station within a minute of each other. In order to work both trains before they departed, Southampton Jack, with almost human intelligence, would wait on the platform at which the earlier train was due, and after romping and barking through the passengers for pennies, would fairly fly over the bridge and give the passengers of the other train a similar opportunity to contribute before their train left.

Mention should also be made of another Jack, a retriever belonging to Fireman Heyward, of Tunbridge Wells, who, some time ago, added to his record of services in aid of charity by collecting £10 for the families of miners whose lives were lost in a terrible disaster. During six years this animal traveled 13,000 miles, collected £518, and won thirteen medals.

Varicose Veins Tuberculous.

That varicose veins are a species of tuberculosis is the new theory advanced by Professor Landouzy, dean of the faculty of medicine, Paris. Before the Academy of Medicine in that city a few weeks ago he announced that he had found the Koch bacillus in the lesions of varicose veins and that guinea pigs inoculated with it developed tuberculosis.

A NEW WORLD MAP.

All Civilized Nations Have Combined to Make It a Success.

In 1909 a movement was begun looking to the preparation of a map of the world on a millionth scale, equal to fifteen miles to the inch. Such maps have already been made for some countries, particularly England and Scotland, but a map of the world on such a scale is an immense undertaking, and as such the different nations of the world were asked to co-operate in its production.

The first conference was held in London four years ago, and another international conference, participated in by government delegates of thirty-two countries, has been in session in Paris. Specimen sections of the map were presented at the conference, and further details of organized or international team work were gone over.

As the first map on such a scale and one requiring years for its completion and co-ordination of work in practically all the civilized countries of the world, the map will not only be the greatest ever constructed, but it will record the present status of geographical science as well.

COOL NERVE OF A BRAVE BOY

Courage, Presence of Mind and a Lucky Knife Thrust Put Him Out of Peril. Curious Experience With a Vicious Man Eater In South Africa.

"Bulala" Taylor was one of the early settlers in the South African country that is now Matabeleland. He was the Chartered company's right hand man in those days, and the natives held him in wholesome respect. More than once he checked threatening disorder almost single handed, and whenever there was an uprising it was Bulala who took command of the white forces. But this is a story of Bulala junior, his son, a stocky little chip of the old block. It happened during one of the father's absences in the field. The youngster, left in charge of the family commissariat, spent two or three evenings each week in hunting—and with invariable success, for he was a "crack" shot, for all his youth.

One morning he was late—hours late. His mother became anxious and sent some Kaffirs out to take up his spoor. A little way out they met his horse limping home, shivering and bleeding from many wounds.

The little baas must be killed!

The Kaffirs were off along the track as fast as their feet would carry them. They wanted to save the boy's remains before the lion could eat them. They found the remains—of a leopard—and Bulala junior was calmly skinning them. A few feet away was the torn carcass of a freshly killed buck.

In awe the Kaffirs squatted round and with only the interjection of an occasional "Aough!" of admiration listened to the man-child's story.

"Insimbe," said Bulala junior, addressing himself to the eldest Kaffir, "you see the little duykerbok. I killed him, and he afterward saved my life. I thought the bok would be enough meat for all of us, and was slowly riding home. The ground was stony and the bush thick. The sun made me drowsy, and I wasn't careful to look about me. The horse had to pick his way. Just as he turned that big bush he almost ran over this leopard.

"I don't know which was most surprised, the horse or the leopard or I. The leopard had no time to turn back; he just had to spring. Before my eyes could open and close twice the leopard was on my horse's shoulders, trying to get a grip with his claws into the bok in front of me.

"The horse squealed and jumped, my gun flew out of my hands, and I found myself lying on my back on the ground. The little bok was lying across my stomach and legs, and the leopard was clawing and biting him frantically. I felt the blood from his body trickling through my shirt. Insimbe, I was frightened!

"From the corners of my eyes I saw my rifle, but it was too far off to reach. I just had to lie and play dead. If I moved a muscle and the leopard saw it he would give me one blow and finish me. Once or twice he looked up at me, and through my half closed eyes I saw the blood dripping from his jaws. It was lucky he was so hungry.

"At last his hunger wore off, Insimbe. He got to his feet, and came and smelled my face. Spots of thick blood dripped on to my cheeks. Oh, Insimbe, did you ever lie and let a snake's tongue lick your face? He breathed over me and smelled me carefully, then, satisfied I was dead, went back to his meal.

"For minutes which seemed like hours the leopard tore and chewed and as he became less hungry he became more particular. Two or three times he changed his position and each time I wanted to shout in fear. If I could only get at my hunting knife, which I could feel in my belt; but I dared not move.

"At last the beast began to drag the bok off me in order to get at its other side. As the bok slipped off I moved with it as part of it. And I grasped my knife. Even then I dared not get up. I just waited and waited. At last a chance came to make my one stab. I was desperate, and I took it. The leopard stood up to stretch himself and looked away from me.

"I jumped to my feet and made a blind slash at his hind quarters. Then I sprang away; not a bit too soon either. See my shirt, Insimbe?

"He leaped on me and his fore paws grazed me and threw me on my face. When I scrambled up again and reached my rifle he had collapsed and was snapping and spitting like a cat. My wild cut had hamstrung his near hind leg.

"He only sat and snapped for an instant though; then the pain and anger made him mad and he rushed at me on three legs.

"I shot him. See how the hair is singed round the bullet hole, Insimbe?"—Youth's Companion.

Explained at Last.

"At your age," said young Robert's father, "I was compelled to wait and eat at the second table when we had company."

"Mother," the child remarked, "you have often wondered where dad got his table manners. Now we know."—Chicago Record-Herald.

APRIL CROP BULLETIN

The following information regarding agricultural conditions in this province is contained in a bulletin prepared by the Ontario Department of Agriculture, based upon information furnished by a large staff of correspondents under date of April 1st:

Fall Wheat. The new fall wheat, according to the November returns, had found a good seed bed, and was then looking strong and promising. The crop is starting April in nearly the same condition in which it entered the winter, having received but little injury from the low temperatures occurring at times during January, February and March, as the fields were nicely protected by snow. A few returns describe the young plants as looking rather brown, but the bulk of the correspondents regard the present appearance of the crop as most encouraging. However, the first half of April with its tendency to freeze by night and thaw by day is considered the critical time for fall wheat and clover, and that period has yet to be encountered.

Clover. This crop, like fall wheat, has so far come nicely through the winter. Should it escape injury from heaving during the first couple of week in April, pastures will get off to an excellent start.

Fruit Trees. Notwithstanding the unusually low temperatures that were registered at times during the winter, orchards have come through in a fairly satisfactory way. Reports are frequent that peach buds have been more or less frozen, but the actual injury will not be known until the period of blossoming. So far, however, no serious loss is apprehended from root freezing. A number of the more tender bush fruits were nipped by the severe cold, but no serious harm is anticipated. Judging by the remarks of some correspondents, however, the San Jose Scale and the tent caterpillar are more to be feared by fruit raisers than occasional dips in temperature during midwinter. Scattering reports of injury to young orchard trees by field mice and rabbits were received from several counties.

Live Stock. The wintering of live stock caused anxiety to many farmers owing to the severe cold occurring at times during the winter, but some correspondents claim that the rather steady cold weather was much better carrying farm animals through than in the case of a so-called mild winter.

Horses, with the exception of some cases of distemper, wintered well, and are generally in excellent shape for spring work, although perhaps a little lean from economical feeding. Unfortunately, at present there is less demand for horses than for any other class of live stock.

Cattle have also wintered well, and are remarkably free from disease. Dairy cows are described as being thin but thrifty, the result of the careful feeding demanded by the comparatively spare stores of fodder. Both fat and store cattle are in good trim generally, but are scarcer than in recent years, as the great demand in the all for all kinds of beef cattle made a big clearing. The cattle on hand are much younger than in former years, many of them being yearlings, as most of the beef cattle are now turned off at about two years. Several correspondents state that most of the calves are now being kept on the farm, and where sold are commanding higher prices than ever before.

Sheep are reported to have come through the winter in prime condition, but they are fewer in number than they should be.

Swine are marketed regularly, there being a steady and strong demand for this class of live stock. The chief incident of the winter has been the large number of hogs in many counties of the province subject to a crippling which is described by some as a stiffening of the hind quarters, while others allude to it as a form of rheumatism. Several correspondents ascribe the trouble to injudicious feeding; others assert that the animals lacked a supply of earth or charcoal, which they believe is essential to a hog's good digestion during its winter confinement; others, again, lay the blame on cement floors and a lack of sufficient bedding during the severe weather. Young pigs have been the chief sufferers from this complaint.

Fodder Supplies. Careful winter feeding of live stock is now a habit with the farmers of this province, and fodder supplies are much more economically and effectively used than in former years. In nearly every county hay has been fully sufficient for all needs, although in a few instances it had to be purchased for local emergencies. Straw has been scarce, and its excellent feeding value has constrained many farmers to be rather too sparing of its use for bedding in the stable. Roots are helping to make the rations succulent for live stock until the animals get on the grass, and there is a sufficiency on hand. Grains of all kinds are somewhat scarce, but with careful handling, the supply will be equal to the demand. Corn in the form of either stover of ensilage is not so plentiful as in recent years, but there is neough to help to keep things going until the pastures are ready. Every year our farmers have a good word to say of corn as standby for the raiser of live stock.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Fruit as Medicine.

The use of fruit diminishes the acidity of the body and thus antagonizes rheumatism and gout. The acids in fruits undergo changes which diminish the acidity of the blood and aid in the elimination of uric acid. The most digestible fruits are ripe grapes, peaches, strawberries, apricots, oranges, whortleberries, very ripe pears, stewed figs, dates, baked apples and stewed fruits.

A dietary consisting wholly of fruits is a valuable means of overcoming biliousness. Such a dietary may be maintained for one or two days or a week. A modified fruit dietary is highly beneficial. Two meals may be eaten, the breakfast of fruit only and the ordinary dinner, or, if three meals are taken, the first and last meals should consist of fruit only. The most laxative fruits are apples, figs, prunes, berries and peaches.

JUDGING PAINTINGS

Expert Advice on How to go Through a Picture Gallery.

I should recommend you to go through a picture gallery as one seeking the face of a friend in a crowd and to let yourselves be led on by your sympathies. If you admire the work of a man, find out all you can about him; see his work as much as you can, especially his beginnings.

In our times a distinction is made between painting which is decorative and painting which is pictorial, which is, I think, an unfortunate distinction, and one which should not exist, for all pictures should decorate the walls or places on which they are placed. That this distinction should exist is perhaps our own fault in forgetting as we do sometimes that a picture should be agreeable to the eye in its color and masses—the good old painters never forgot that.

It seems to me that taste in a picture is something like natural good manners in man, not depending on the elements—the clothes—of the picture, but on the temperament it displays and the measure of its harmony with our acknowledged standards, for a man's picture reveals his outlook on the world and is in that sense a part of him. If we choose a person for a friend, we like him, let us say, to be simple and natural, reliable and without swagger. Whether he is rich or poor, grave or gay, does not matter so long as we can depend on him.

And it seems to me that a picture to be in good taste must have analogous qualities—that it should, like our ideal friend, be in accord with the best standards. It should be in harmony with the best we know.—From "Royal Academy Lectures on Painting," by George Clausen, R. A., R. W. S.

MIGRATING BIRDS.

Shore Lines and River Valleys Help Them In Their Flight.

Experiences of aeroplane pilots with air currents have given to a noted English naturalist an explanation for the fact that some birds in making their annual migrations fly along coast lines and along river valleys. Judging from aeroplane experience birds would find it required less effort to fly along such routes. In the daytime water cools the air on most days, and over the water there is a downward current of air, as indicated by the noticeable sinking of aeroplanes and balloons crossing over a pond. At the same time there is more or less of an upward current of air along the shore line.

Upward currents of air greatly help flight, and many kinds of birds are known to take full advantage of them. So the naturalist sees an opportunity for birds to take advantage of upward currents of air in migrating by day if they follow the coast of a sea or the bank of a river. The effect would be most marked on the windward side of the water, so that if the birds do not fly along that side near the water they ought to. Whether at night there is an appreciable upward current of air over water is not so clearly established, but he believes it is likely and so would be of advantage to birds if they wished to use it.

A further explanation of such routes is that the birds might learn them in their migrations, for shore lines are the easiest of all markings on the earth for an aviator to see and follow, while on a still night the waves on the shore can be heard high in the air, marking the shore line.—Saturday Evening Post.

Europe Has Largest Tunnels.

The United States has for so long been pre-eminent in the realm of size that it comes almost as a shock to realize that the largest railway tunnels are on the continent of Europe. Of these the longest is the Simplon, twelve and a quarter miles through the Alps. Two others, the St. Gothard and the Lotschberg, are over nine and one-third miles long, and the Mont Cenis is over seven miles long. In all there are fourteen tunnels over four miles long. The longest tunnel in this country is the Hoosac, four and one-third miles long.—American Machinist.

KEPHALDOL

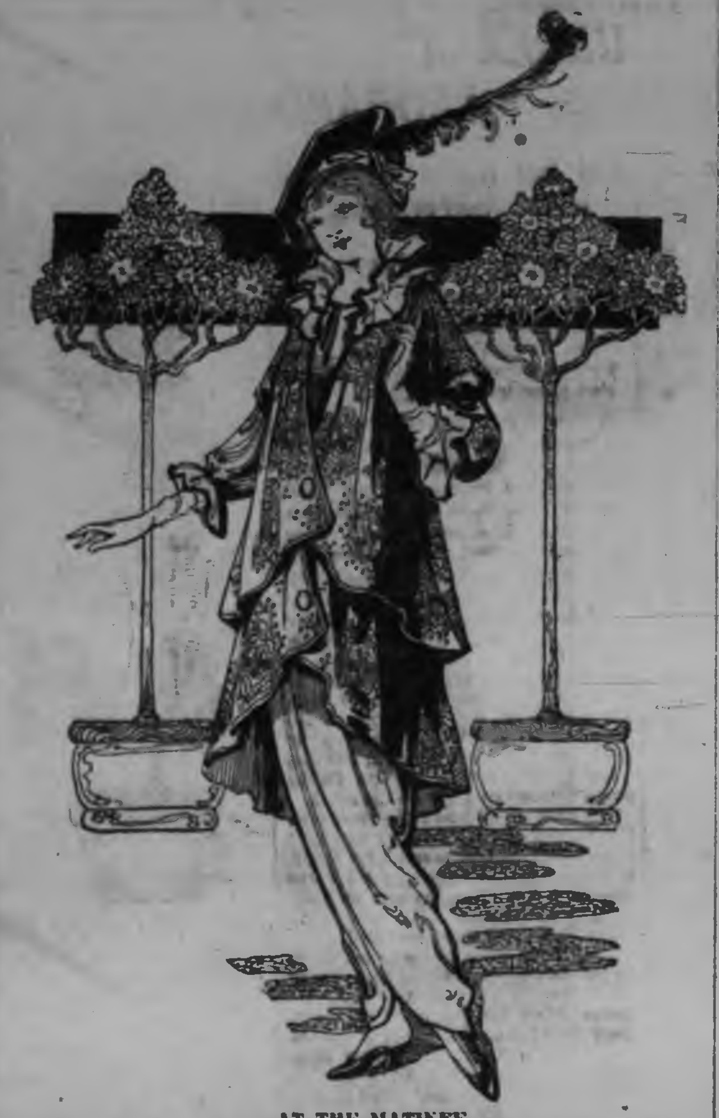
"IS ABSOLUTELY MARVELLOUS AS A PAIN KILLER"

Mrs. Beatrice Cassey, of Swalecliff, England, knows what it means to be bed-ridden with pain. She also knows now how easily the tortures of Rheumatism and Lumbago may be overcome. She says, "My experience with KEPHALDOL as a pain-killer is absolutely marvellous. I had a fearfully acute attack last year of Neuritis, Sciatica and Lumbago, and suffered in bed for many days. Finally, I heard of KEPHALDOL, which did wonders for me. I shall always feel most grateful for what it has done, and I am most happy to let others know of its wonderful effects as a pain destroyer."

KEPHALDOL is the only pain reliever that does not affect the heart. It acts directly on the nerve centers, easing and quieting the pain. KEPHALDOL is the favorite combination of nerve stimulants and tonics prescribed by the famous Doctor Stohr, of Vienna, the great nerve specialist.

KEPHALDOL is now sold in Canada by druggists in 50c tubes or may be had by sending 50c direct to Kephaldol Limited, 31 Latour Street, Montreal.

THE LATEST FROM DAME FASHION



AT THE MATINEE.

The type of outer wrap that is coming in for spring is shown in this loosely alluring affair that was worn by a dainty lady who stepped from her limousine into a metropolitan theatre last week. It was built on the flaring shapeless lines of the houppelande coat and was developed in figured blistered crepe in tones of apricot and old blue, an apricot frill at necks and sleeves corresponding with the tone of the lining. Taffetas in plain and figured and in the much favored pussy-willow effects are much used for these dressy coats.

A LIGHT IN AN AUTOMOBILE.

Use One of the Spark Plugs When You Have No Matches.

Did you ever while making an automobile tour find yourself on a lonely country road, perhaps miles from the nearest house, and suddenly discover that you had no matches? If you were anxious to light the lamps or eager for a smoke such a discovery would not prove at all conducive to the smoothness of your temper.

There is a simple way in which any one may secure a light without the aid of matches. You may be anxious for a smoke or it may be getting dark and you want to light your lamp, but in any event you can secure the necessary light if you will follow these directions:

Unscrew one of the spark plugs and let it lie on the cylinder head. Wrap a small wisp of waste around the end of any small stick of wood or if there is none handy wrap it around the end of a screwdriver or any other tool. Dip the waste in the gasoline until it is thoroughly soaked. Of course you should have only a very small piece of waste; otherwise the blaze will be too big for you to handle. After dipping this in the gasoline lay it close to the spark plug and turn the engine over until this plug sparks. This will ignite the waste and you will have a little torch sufficient for lighting your lamp. Even if there is a heavy rain or snow, you can secure a light in this manner sufficient for your needs.—Detroit Free Press.

Fear of Old Military Service.

A prisoner's appeal to the court of criminal appeal for a longer sentence, although the first on record before that tribunal, is not altogether unparalleled at the assize, for offenders who have had the advantage of inside knowledge of the working of the prisons acts have been known to ask the judge to give them penal servitude instead of a short period of hard labor. They shrink from the more Spartan diet and severer restrictions that attach to the nominally lighter sentence. A century ago, when capital punishment was inflicted for many trivial crimes, a prisoner was sometimes given a choice—death or service in the army or navy. And the services in those days had such a terror for some criminals that many elected to be hanged instead of serving their country.—London Spectator.

VENUS AND MARS.

The Theory That Life Exists Upon Both of These Planets.

We are bound to hold life to be a general phenomenon in nature, developing wherever the stars are shining on their attendant planets, and thus wherever a star twinkles in the depths of the firmament.

Now as for Mars and Venus, in our own system, it need hardly be said that they are surely inhabited by living beings of some kind. Observations show that Mars has a rare atmosphere, a day thirty-seven minutes longer than our own, seasons of the same type, but longer duration; and snow caps at the poles, and thus water vapor, though the amount is small. Mars is a desert planet, with a very rare air, about like that in the higher regions of the Himalaya mountains. But as life on the earth extends to the highest plateaus and mountains, except when perpetually frozen, it may also exist on the planet Mars, which has a moderate temperature, as shown by the formation of clouds in the twilight belt, after the sun has set for the Martians.

The probability of Venus being inhabited is much greater than that of Mars, for Venus rotates in 23 hours 21 minutes and in all respects so closely resembles the earth as to be called her twin sister. Venus has an abundance of air, clouds, water and also mountains and therefore seas, lakes and rivers. The seasons are like ours except they are shorter, the year being 225 days in length. Why should not such a planet be inhabited? If a man were transported to Venus and landed there without injury it seems certain that he could live and flourish physically under the air and temperature of this beautiful planet.—T. J. J. GLOOMY CARLYLE.

Thomas Carlyle's friendship with Ralph Waldo Emerson is a matter of history, but Charles Eliot Norton tells in his published letters that Carlyle marveled at the optimism of the American philosopher. Writing in 1873 Norton says: "As we were sitting together just after my coming in this afternoon, Carlyle spoke of Emerson. 'There's a great contrast between Emerson and myself. He seems verra content with life and takes much satisfaction in the world, especially in your country. One would suppose to hear him that ye had no troubles there and no share in the darkness that hangs over these old lands. It's a verra strikin' and curious spectacle to behold a man so confidently cheerful as Emerson in these days.

"'I agree with ye in thinkin' that the times that are comin' will be warse than ours, and that by and by men may through long pain and distress learn to obey the law eternal of order without which there can be neither justice nor real happiness in this warld or in any other. The last man in England who had real faith in it was Oliver Cromwell.

"'Well, it may be as yon say. I'm not such a verra bloody minded old villain after all (here a cordial laugh) not quite so horrid an ogre as some good people imagine. But the warld is verra black to me, and I see nothin' to be content with in this brand new, patent society of ours. There's nothin' to hope for from it but confusion.'"

A Scoop.

John L. Toole, the famous English comedian and practical joker, and Mr. Justice Hawkins, who was afterward Lord Brampton, were great friends. They were at supper together one evening discussing the events of the day. The judge incidentally mentioned that he intended on the morrow giving the man he had been trying fifteen years because he deserved it.

As Toole was leaving he blandly inquired:

"Oh, would you mind calling at the newspaper offices and telling them about that fifteen years? It will be a tip for them—exclusive information, you know—and will do me no end of good with the press."

"Good gracious! No, sir!" exclaimed the judge, who took the precaution of accompanying Toole to his hotel and seeing him safely to bed.

SLEEP IS AN ILLUSION.

It Is Not Yourself, but Your Invisible Double That Demands It.

You may probably believe that you need a night's sleep, if not regularly, at least now and then. But Gabriel d'Annunzio, the Italian poet, a believer in the occult and a student of psychical phenomena, thinks otherwise.

After many months of investigation, during which he has attended with leading scientists of the day numerous seances, at which the services of the best known mediums were invoked, d'Annunzio has arrived at the conclusion that man does not live an undivided individual life. Always by his side, he insists, is his double, magic being, working for him and prompting all his actions.

"Man himself," the poet asserts, "does not require sleep, which is only an illusion. It is his invisible prompter that tires of performing for him those everyday actions which man attributes to his own personality.

"When man's mysterious partner requires rest all he does is to remove from the mundane body something essential to man's wakefulness, whereupon sleep supervenes.

"The process is like that of the mechanic who, wishing to damage a piece of machinery, removes an essential part. Exactly what man's magic aid removes in order to send him to sleep I do not know, but I am convinced we shall discover in time."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Strong Minded

A Third, Ordinary Person Proved a Dark Horse

By F. A. MITCHEL

How Edgar Marston met and wooed Julia Spingler does not pertain to this story. It is sufficient to say that he won her consent to their marriage when she was passing out of her teens and her ideas of the stand she should take in the world were in embryo. Soon after her engagement Julia fell under the influence of Margaret Halsted, an elderly unmarried lady—to avoid the unpleasant term old maid—who wrought a considerable change in her.

Miss Halsted was what was called a strong minded woman till the more pleasing term "new woman" was invented. Under the tutelage of the stronger, or at least the more developed, intellect Julia conceived a different notion from what she had held of the part of women in the universe. That it was a woman's part alone to bear children she did not believe. Under the new dispensation the professions were open to the gentler sex, and she saw no more reason why a woman should not enter them than a man. After consultation with her mentor she resolved to become a lawyer.

Marston was not considered bright, but was universally respected. Some of Julia's intimate friends who looked upon her as a talented girl wondered how she could fancy one who was intellectually her inferior. He regretted that she had entered a field which has been occupied almost exclusively by men, for he was not up to the new departure. He had looked forward to having a wife who would rely on him to provide the home and on herself to run it smoothly. Being one of those persons who believe in the adage "All things come to those who wait," he took no action upon his fiancee's becoming a lawyer, leaving the matter of his relationship with her to work itself out.

Julia consulted Miss Halsted with reference to her engagement with Marston, but did not act on her advice, which was to remain single. The fable of the fox who had lost its tail suggested itself to the pupil, and she saw no reason why because a woman adopted a profession she should give up wifehood and motherhood, so she continued her engagement.

But while pursuing her studies Julia listened to a course of lectures from an eminent member of the bar, by whom she was very much impressed. It seemed after hearing the keen logic of Cyrus Underwood that Edgar's talk was extremely commonplace. Mr. Underwood, who was a bachelor in middle age, took a great fancy to Julia and, not being aware of her engagement, showed her attention.

Julia, who realized that she was bound in honor to Marston and was extremely fond of him, now entered upon one of those periods of indecision that are extremely trying. But whatever there was in him was not glittering and did not appear to advantage beside the brilliant mind of Underwood. In her perplexity Julia made a confidant of Margaret Halsted.

Perhaps if she wished for advice she would have done better to go to a married woman who had had experience in such matters. But even this would not have been likely to avail anything, for Julia was pretty likely to make up her own mind about what she would do in her own affairs without the advice of any one. However, Miss Halsted gave her a couple of pictures, the one of a union with a commonplace man, the other with a brilliant lawyer with whom she might in time be a partner not only matrimonially, but professionally. It must be confessed that this second picture was very attractive. Julia saw herself and her husband working together on interesting cases, each assisting the other with suggestions and oftentimes supplying each other's deficiencies.

It was this that finally determined Julia to break with Edgar Marston and accept Cyrus Underwood. Relying on a certain sense of justice she had observed in the former, she laid the case before him, telling him that she saw in a union with Underwood a brilliant future for herself, and, though it pained her to pain Edgar, she thought that in justice to herself she should make the change. But on no account would she do so unless Edgar assured her that he thought her perfectly right in the matter.

If Marston had a fault it was not in opposing persons whose minds were made up. He said that her problem was altogether too deep for him to solve, but if it was better for her to marry a lawyer it was certainly better for himself that she should do so, inasmuch as he was not a lawyer, but a plain man of business. Nothing would be well for either that was not well for both.

Julia, whose mind at the time was fixed upon the brain union that promised such brilliant results, was much pleased with her lover's statement of the case, not so much on account of its good sense as because it left her free to enter upon a new alliance that appeared so advantageous. A few weeks later she wrote a very kind letter to Edgar, regretfully breaking her engagement with him, and not long afterward her engagement with Underwood was announced.

By this time Julia had been admitted to the bar. The first problem that came up for her to solve after becoming a lawyer was whether she should better practice awhile independently of her fiance or form the expected partnership with him at once. Underwood urged her to be married and enter his office as his assistant for one year, with the partnership in view. This she rejected as incompatible with her ideas of equality between the sexes. She demanded a partnership, and Underwood yielded.

Singularly enough, before consummating the arrangement she wished to ask her former lover what he thought about it. Why she should wish for the opinion of a man she had discarded because he was not intellectual enough for her does not appear. She could probably not have explained the matter herself. It had been agreed between her and Edgar that they should remain friends. She did not, therefore, hesitate to ask him whether she would better remain for awhile independent or enter upon a partnership at once.

Edgar looked at her stupidly for awhile before replying. She was about to turn away from him disappointed when he said:

"Before tying yourself professionally with any lawyer meet him in court as his opponent."

There was something far down at the bottom of this advice that appealed to her, though she could not exactly explain what it was, since she didn't exactly see how such a situation could be brought about. Edgar, who was connected with a corporation having considerable law business, said he would watch for an opportunity. It was not long after this that his company proceeded by law against a man for a debt. The defendant's counsel being Mr. Underwood, Edgar Marston secured the appointment of his former fiancee as counsel for the company.

Mr. Underwood was a lawyer—not a jurist, but a practical court lawyer—from the crown of his head to the soles of his feet. Miss Spingler opened the case by stating the company's claim against the defendant, showing conclusively wherein he had acted with intent to defraud and how he had laid himself criminally liable. She had studied the law in the case carefully and made an excellent presentment of both the law and the case. There was no doubt but that the defendant would be worsted unless his counsel could either throw dust in the eyes of the jury or work upon its sympathies.

When he arose to speak he referred admiringly—somewhat patronizingly, Julia thought—to his "young opponent," as he called her, and to the ingenuity she had displayed in making the law appear to be on the side of the company, while he was prepared to show that it was all on the side of his client. He would also show that the facts in the case favored the defendant. As he warmed up he began to whirl both the law and the facts over the heads of the jury, at the same time appealing to the prejudices of the twelve men in what he called an octopus corporation sucking the blood out of an innocent man whom it had purposely ruined for the sake of sucking the little business he possessed into its capacious maw.

Miss Spingler, who had considered Mr. Underwood to be full of the dignity of the law, was appalled at what she considered an attack on plain justice. Mr. Underwood, who had won success by such handling of his cases and had fought his male opponents with far more defiling weapons, breaking a bottle of wine with them after the trial, was oblivious to the fact that his opposing counsel considered his statements untrue, that he knew they were untrue and, moreover, that he was personally attacking her from the opening to the close of his speech.

The next matter that occupied the court was the examination of witnesses. Miss Spingler's indignation at the treatment she had received was so great that she could barely settle herself to the work of drawing out the facts. While she was doing so her opponent further antagonized her by apparently paying no attention to her. When she had finished Mr. Underwood in cross examination destroyed every point she had made, proved her witnesses perjurers and turned all her efforts to ridicule. His summing up was rather an attack on corporations than a statement of his side of the case. The jury acquitted his client without leaving their seats.

"Come, dear," said the defendant's counsel after all was over and they were gathering lawbooks and putting them in green bags; "let's go to lunch."

To his surprise, Miss Spingler swept out of the courtroom without replying to his invitation or otherwise noticing him. Then for the first time it occurred to him that a woman might not be constructed to stand the browbeating he had been accustomed to visit on his male opponents. He looked after her with a troubled expression and wondered how he could have been so stupid. He must call in the evening and undo the damage he had done.

But before leaving his office that afternoon he received a note from his fiancee stating that, whereas she had considered him a jurist and found him a pettifogger, she felt constrained to break her engagement.

The subsequent career for a year of Miss Spingler was one of indecision. What other women may be fitted for, she was not adapted by nature for a lawyer. She gradually fell back into a reliance on plain matter of fact Edgar Marston. It never occurred to her that in the only advice he had given her he had hoped to show her the true situation in her own individual case. She finally married him, and after the birth of her first child, instead of concerning herself with the meshes of the law, she gave herself up to the best treatment of babies during the teeth cutting period.

A Wonderful Bullet.

It is claimed by M. Rogouea, a Spaniard, that he has invented a marvelous bullet, destined to revolutionize the art of warfare, for, fired from an old smoothbore gun of 1830 pattern, with a charge of but nine grams of powder, it can destroy walls or houses at a distance of 1,200 yards, or, discharged from a modern rifle, at a distance of over 3,000 yards. The bullet is seven inches long, pointed like an arrow and weighs about seven ounces. It is a diminutive shell rather than a bullet. One of its many qualities is that, though fired with black powder, not the faintest trace of smoke issues from the gun at its discharge. The bullet proceeds even from a smoothbore gun in a straight line, not in a series of loops, as it ought to do, according to the laws of ballistics.

A FORGOTTEN EXPLORER

LITTLE KNOWN OF WM. BAFFIN BUT LETTERS ON MAP.

Brave Navigator and Geographer Who Sought the Northwest Passage Appears In the Records of Several British Expeditions as Pilot and Master—Was Shot During Engagement In the Orient.

The promoters of an English expedition now being fitted out believe that they possess information to justify a search for gold on Baffin Land, and that search is to be made during the coming summer.

All this recalls the man whose name is preserved in the geography of that sub-Arctic region, and that man is William Baffin, one of the first to navigate these northern waters, after whom the island was named. Baffin belongs to that band of fearless and able navigators whom the historian, Froude, calls "England's Forgotten Worthies"—such men as the Jones, the Smiths, the Davises, the Drakes, the Gilberts, and later such men as Cook, Vancouver, Barker, and many others, whose names could be recalled.

William Baffin was an Englishman, probably a native of London, but nothing is known of his early life. The earliest mention of him is in the year 1612, a few years after the death of Queen Elizabeth, when James I. was on the united throne of England and Scotland. In that year Baffin was appointed pilot of the ship Patience, fitted out by James Hall, of Hull, for a voyage to Greenland, accompanied by a ship, the Heartsease, of which Andrew Barker was master.

On his return from America, Baffin entered the service of the Muscovy Company, which had for some years sent ships to catch whales near Spitsbergen. He made three voyages to Spitsbergen, and then he took service with the company for the discovery of a northwest passage that would enable vessels from Britain to skirt the northern end of America and so enter the Pacific Ocean by a route shorter than the long voyage around Cape Horn. That passage was long sought, and when found it was found to be impracticable for purposes of commerce.

One of the ships of this expedition of 1615—almost three hundred years ago—was the Discovery, commanded by Captain Robert Bylot, with Baffin as pilot. An account of the voyage was written by Baffin, and the original manuscript with maps is in the British Museum.

As pilot of the Discovery, Baffin carefully examined Hudson Strait and the eastern coast of Southampton Island, which stands in the northern outlet of Hudson Bay. He passed up the great bay, which curves into the southwestern coast of Baffin Land and is known as Fox Channel; but finding the land heading them, and, he says, "very thick pestered with ice, and the further we proceeded the more ice and shoaler water, with small show of any tide, we soon resolved there could be no passage in this place, and presently we bore up the helm and turned the ship's head to the southward."

In the following year, that is, in 1616, the ship Discovery, with Baffin still as pilot, again visited those northern waters and discovered Lancaster Sound along the north side of Baffin's Land, Wolstenholme Sound, and many others, and made a chart of the whole coast. Only a garbled report of his voyage was published without charts, and after a time wild statements were made respecting the shape and size of Baffin Land, so much so that the whole story came to be doubted.

Time, however, justified Baffin's work, for in 1818 Captain Ross rediscovered those Sounds, and without difficulty identified the localities Baffin had discovered and named.

The remainder of Baffin's life—only six years in all—was spent far from those sub-Arctic islands and waters which now form part of the geography of Canada. The closing events in the life of this brave old navigator took place in the East.

On the ship, Anne Royal, belonging to the East India Company, and commanded by Captain Andrew Shilling, Baffin spent the year 1618-19 in the Red Sea and the Persian Gulf, during which time he was engaged surveying and charting his observations, returning to London in September, 1619.

Early in the next year, Captain Shilling, in the London, a new ship, sailed for the East Indies in command of a company's fleet of four ship's; and Baffin accompanied him as master. They arrived at Bombay in November, 1620, and having learned that a combined force of two Portuguese and two Dutch ships, making common cause against the English, were waiting at the entrance to the Persian Gulf to attack such of their ships as came that way, sailed at once to look for them. On December 16 the two fleets met and fought. They fought for nine hours, and then separated to make repairs. Twelve days later they met again, and we have an account of that fight in the words of Captain Swan of the English ship Roebuck. He writes: "Our broadsides were brought up, and the good ordnance from our whole fleet played so fast upon them that, doubtless, if the knowledge of our people had been answerable to their willing minds and ready resolution not one of the galleons, unless their sides were impenetrable, had escaped us."

The East India Company sent out a fleet to attack the Portuguese at Ormus, and with the fleet went Baffin's ship.

The attack began with the capture of an adjacent island on which Ormus was largely dependent for water, and here, on January 23, 1622, William Baffin, whilst taking the angles of the castle wall, in order to measure its height and distance, received his death wound. According to the account given by a contemporary, "Baffin received a shot from the castle in his stomach, wherewith he gave three leaps and died immediately."

The Review has been handed a copy of the Canadian Police Bulletin with a request to publish the following:

A Merited Rebuke.

Busybodies of that class who are never satisfied except superintending the affairs of the universe, received a rude shock when His Honor Judge Huycke, Chairman of the Board of Police Commissioners of the City of Peterboro, undertook to tell them just what he thought of their meddlesome interference in the matter of the appointment of a Police-Woman for which they were agitating, and in support of which a petition had been presented supplemented by every modern device known to the lobbyist with the object of forcing the Board to make the appointment. A deputation had also waited on the Board and, in that arbitrary manner usually characteristic of the impertinent meddler, urged them to immediate action. At a subsequent meeting, when announcing the Board's unanimous decision not to make the appointment, His Honor spoke at length and in scathing terms denounced that class of agitator, who in their determination to accomplish a purpose, be it wise or unwise, will stop at nothing. "Even the Bench," said His Honor, "is not immune from their assaults."

There is such a wholesome lesson, both for the Police governing bodies of Canada and for the meddlesome agitator, in the address, that the Bulletin will publish it in full in its next issue, as reported in the Peterboro Examiner.

Can Women Make Good as Police?

A Scotland Yard Police Inspector who frequently makes trips to this side of the Atlantic, was interviewed on the use made of women by the most renowned Police and Detective Force in the world.

"The Criminal Investigation Department," said the Inspector, "employs only two women, whose sole duty is to keep in touch with and report on women convicts who are on ticket-of-leave. Another woman has been retained by Scotland Yard in connection with the new White Slave regulations, but she is called only when some girl's story of betrayal or abduction cannot be told to a man. She is, in fact, more of a mother confessor than a detective. After long experience in dealing with the crime of the world, we do not find women effective."

How Whisky Eats Up Corn.

Five Illinois distilleries in the Fifth district are the largest in the world. To operate the largest of the five plants, having a capacity of 65,000 gallons of spirits daily, requires the corn from 400 acres, taking forty bushels to the acre. If all six of the central Illinois distilleries should be in operation at one time it would require the entire product of 1,000 acres for each day's run. Although corn is the principal grain consumed, rye is also taken in large quantities.—Argonaut.

Lowest Infant Death Rate.

New Zealand produces with its 5.1 per cent by far the lowest infant mortality rate in the world, London's record being about 11 per cent and Russia's nearly double that. In one town in New Zealand, Dunedin, where the Society For the Promotion of the Health of Women and Children started only six years ago, only 3.8 per cent of babies die in their first year.—London Globe.

Millions in Automobiles.

According to the Engineering News, the automobile factories of Detroit put out motorcars worth $650,000,000 last year. They have a total annual capacity of 400,000 automobiles, are capitalized at $100,000,000 and employ 120,000 persons, the weekly payroll being more than $1,500,000.

THOUGHT IT WOULD KILL HIM

Terrible Torture From Chronic Indigestion, Short Treatment With "Fruit-a-tives" Completely Cured The Whole Trouble.

C. T. HILL, Esq.

Chatham, Ont., April 3rd, 1913

"Some two years ago, I was a great sufferer from Indigestion. I treated with a prominent physician here for some time, but I did not get any better so I went in to see him one day and said "Doctor, what do I owe you? I am not getting any better and am going to quit you." I paid him his bill and he remarked to me, "Charlie, you have a case of chronic Indigestion that will be hard to cure."

I left his office and as I stepped out on the street my eye caught a bill board advertisement of "Fruit-a-tives"—that big "Fat Man and Thin Man" and I said to myself, "If Fruit-a-tives will build me up like that, it's good enough for me." I walked directly over to Park's Drug Store and I bought a box of "Fruit-a-tives." After taking these wonderful tablets for only three weeks, I found myself greatly improved. I continued taking them for a short time longer and cured myself entirely. My case was no light one either, for many times when I was on the street, I was compelled to go into some store or business place until the acute spasms wore away. Gas would often form in my stomach and I was in daily fear it would get around my heart and kill me. To-day, I have no such fears. "Fruit-a-tives" is the only remedy for Indigestion, Dyspepsia and Stomach Troubles." C. T. HILL.

Perhaps your case is exactly like Mr. Hill's. If so, do exactly as he did—take "Fruit-a-tives" and cure yourself. "Fruit-a-tives" will prevent the formation of gas in the stomach by making digestion complete. It will insure the food being promptly digested by providing an aboundance of gastric juice in the stomach. It keeps the stomach sweet and clean, not only by helping the digestion but also by regulating Kidneys and Bowels and toning up the system.

If you suffer with Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Sour Stomach, Belching, Gas on the Stomach, Heart Pains after Eating, take "Fruit-a-tives." 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. at all dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Loss of Appetite.

There are chronic diseases that cause, among many other symptoms, a great loss of bodily weight. Among these are tuberculosis and cancer, often diabetes, especially in the young, and of course any trouble with the mouth or throat that makes it difficult to swallow. But there are other cases in which there is loss of appetite and weight that are more difficult to understand. One sort of anorexia or lack of appetite seems to be purely nervous. Young girls are especially liable to it. It sometimes occurs without any other symptom or nervous trouble and may bring the sufferer so near to complete starvation that her friends are greatly alarmed. In the early stages of the trouble her family usually try to bring her back to a normal habit of eating and accuse her of wishing to look slender and interesting; but all to no avail. Later it becomes clear that something really is wrong, and the physician is called. That course should not be too long delayed, for a long period of starvation, even if recovery occurs, often leaves serious physical weakness behind it. If there is a latent tuberculous state at the bottom of the trouble a speedy examination and then a persistent course of treatment are the best things that can happen.

So popular has taffeta become in New York that dealers are complaining that there will soon be a famine of it.

RENTING ROOMS

The total amount of rent money paid for furnished rooms in this city each week is enormous! Nobody knows how much. It goes to thrifty people, who like to lessen their own rent or living expense by sub-letting one or more spare rooms to an agreeable person. If YOU have a desirable extra room you can become a receiver of rent by ordering a "Furnished Room to Let" ad. in the Review. The cost is nominal—one cent a word for first insertion and half a cent a word for subsequen insertions, run consecutively.

Two On A Tour

In Which the Conventionalities Were Rudely Ignored.

By TROY ALLISON

The elevator of the Washington monument reached the ground after its solemnly slow descent, and Rhoda Jamison, feeling somewhat overawed by the world as seen from the top of the monument, sat down on a bench near the elevator door. She needed a few minutes to readjust her thoughts and to plan for the rest of the day.

Rhoda had saved every possible penny from her salary during the school term in order to take this Washington trip and had determined to crowd as much sightseeing into her ten days as any other Washington tourist had ever done.

She had spent hours with the visiting milliner in her town planning every detail of the time and had finally arrived in the city and taken a cab directly to the quiet lodgings she had recommended. The milliner had, however, forgotten to take into consideration the fact that the girl had never been accustomed to a city and to city ways and had therefore failed to prepare her for the feeling of desolation and loneliness that grew more and more oppressive every minute.

The Congressional library had satisfied her love of beauty, the capitol and the White House had seemed like old friends from the pictures in the geography and history from which she had taught for months, but in her classes she had been the personality. Here she seemed to dwindle into nothingness, and the things that had been mere ideas and pictures towered over her oppressively, and she was overcome by her littleness and her loneliness and longed for some one to speak to her with a hint of friendly interest.

The big, broad shouldered man sitting on the other end of the bench she had seen walking down the steps of the monument. He had evidently felt so secure in this superb physical strength that he walked down to examine more closely the inscriptions on the stones that cannot be studied so well from the elevator.

She saw him take a fountain pen from his pocket, adjust it and finally sort a package of souvenir post cards and begin writing industriously.

She remembered the package she had bought to send her pupils, so she took her own pen from her hand bag and commenced racking her brain for little things to write that would amuse them.

The postal she liked best of all, a daintily colored view of the monument itself, she addressed to her mother. Across it she wrote, "It's so very big, and I feel so little and so lonely."

She leaned forward to flirt a bit of dust from the tip of her pen, and a whiff of air blew the postal from her lap and left it lying at the big man's feet.

He saw it there and, thinking he had dropped one of his own, stooped and picked it up, reading it leisurely.

"I feel so little and so lonely," he read, and, surprised, turned to meet the flushed face of the girl.

"It's mine," she said, holding out her hand for it.

"Do you feel that way, too?" he asked eagerly. "That's me exactly!"

"I shouldn't have called you really 'little,'" she answered, with the frank friendliness of a girl who had never met with a circumstance that would cause her to be suspicious of humanity. "I reckon you are referring to the first part of the sentence. 'It is so big' would really seem more suitable."

"That's right," he laughed, looking at the postal, "but that just proves that I can hold more loneliness than you, for I am feeling lonely from the soles of my feet to the top of my new felt hat that I bought in Carson City to see the sights of Washington in."

"At least you are farther from home than I. I'm from South Carolina," she chatted, three days' abstinence from conversation having left her with a surplus on hand.

"I was just sending some of these things to the boys," he said. "They are living in a shack near mine, and it will tickle 'em immensely to get these pictures of civilization. You see, we had been out there for two years digging away for gold without any success, and just as we'd fallen into a fit of gloom and shortage of grub why, we struck it rich."

"How lovely! Did you find it in chunks?" Her eyes sparkled like a child's.

"That's about the size of it," he laughed, with a whole souled heartiness he hadn't experienced for days. "We sure found it in large sized pieces and I just thought I'd take a vacation to see the world. I've never been east before."

"Do you like it?" She failed to put as much doubt as to the charms of Washington in her tone as she might have put half an hour earlier.

"I've been about the loneliest person the dome ever shadowed. I could get on very well in the daytime, but I've wanted to sit around the fire at night and talk it over with the boys. How long are you going to stay?" he asked eagerly.

"Ten days. I've been here three." His face lengthened visibly.

"I'll be here a whole month," he added dolefully. "Why don't you stay longer?"

"You see, I haven't struck it rich—in huge chunks. The trustees of my school are rather a parsimonious lot."

"I don't know much about eastern etiquette, but I wonder if it wouldn't be tolerably proper for us to do some sightseeing together this afternoon?" he said, with a touch of boyish shyness.

"I wonder," she said slowly.

The joy of companionship settled the question for them, and he called at her boarding house morning after morning, guidebook in hand, the plan for the day already laid out.

* * *

They had left the trip to Arlington for the last afternoon of her stay, and they wandered through the grounds, more beautiful than ever in their early summer foliage, until they reached the spot overlooking the Potomac where the tall shaft rises in honor of the heroes of the Spanish war.

"This is the loveliest spot of all," he said as they sat down on the grassy slope with their faces turned toward the river. "Washington will seem dead after I put you on the train this afternoon. Have you enjoyed this week, little woman?" a slight nervousness in his voice.

"It has been—perfect," she said softly. "After I had you to talk to the crowds didn't seem unfriendly at all. They changed into a set of good natured passersby."

"I—er—haven't seemed to miss the boys much lately, either," he said absentmindedly, watching her slender fingers arrange the largest daisies and clover leaves that she found near her, "but I'll go to missing them again the very minute your train pulls out this afternoon."

He sat up straight suddenly and looked at her almost sternly.

"Do you think a man ought to be forgiven for telling a lie?" he demanded abruptly.

Her face paled slightly, and her eyes were large with a fear that he might in some way confess himself unworthy of the friendly confidence she had placed in him. The unconventionality of their acquaintance stood out in her mind suddenly as viewed from the world's standpoint.

"You haven't—lied to me?" she asked faintly.

"Absolutely! No one ever told a bigger one," he said, with his eyes fixed on the clover leaves, failing to see her pallor, "for it will not be the boys I'll be missing; it will be—just you."

Her color came back with a rush, and she avoided his eyes as she rose hastily to her feet, the daisies and clover leaves falling to the ground.

"I'm sure I will be late for my train if we don't hurry back," she said abruptly.

"I almost wish you would miss it—it seems a shame that you cannot afford to stay longer when I have more money than I can possibly spend—unless the town will let me build 'em another library. You couldn't let me—er"— he stammered, not knowing how to express himself.

"No, I couldn't," she blazed, catching his half formed idea.

"There—there — little woman — don't get huffy. I suppose I do bump up against conventionalities occasionally, but somehow I hate for you not to have everything you want," he blurted out.

Her eyes softened, and when they reached the station she watched his broad shoulders as he elbowed his way through the crowd at the ticket office and wondered why, now her face was turned homeward, she should feel more homesick than ever.

* * *

When he had put her on the train he leaned over and spoke determinedly.

"I'm coming to South Carolina before I go back west."

She didn't answer, and he took from his coat pocket one of the clover leaves she had dropped on the ground at Arlington and held it up before her. She saw it had four leaves.

"Do you know what I am going to wish? That when I go back west—you'll go with me"—he waited, a big, awkward boy in his embarrassment, for her to look at him.

"I—I—the train is starting," she said, holding out her hand hastily, "but—if one finds a four leaf clover—he is supposed to get his wish."

Molasses For Shoes.

Shipping Louisiana molasses into New England by the hogshead and sending the same hogshead back south again with shoes were incidents of the shoe trade of Avon years ago. It was back in 1840, when the present town of Avon was East Stoughton, that two brothers were in company manufacturing shoes and as a side line ran a grocery and general store in a spot where now stands the postoffice building. One of the brothers went south and located in New Orleans in the grocery business, leaving his brother here to manufacture shoes and boots, according to E. Dexter Littlefield. The brother who was in the South would ship a hogshead of molasses to his brother in Avon and as soon as the hogshead was empty it would be cleaned and would be filled with boots for the southern trade. This practice was kept up for years, and in this way a good trade was built up for Avon footwear.—Boston Globe.

Saved by Artificial Breathing.

Dr. S. F. Derioujinsky, a Russian surgeon, reports the case of a peasant of twenty-one who, following an angina of probably diphtheritic origin, was stricken with paralysis. After two weeks of total paralysis some movements of the arms appeared, but a few days later respiratory trouble began. The breathing rose to forty to the minute and became superficial with momentary stops. It was necessary to resort to artificial respiration. With the assistance of pupils in the infirmary school this was kept up day and night from Feb. 5 to Feb. 20. On the latter day the patient began breathing naturally, but difficulty in swallowing arose about the same time. On Feb. 26 it became necessary to begin artificial respiration again. This was maintained until March 1, when natural breathing returned, and the patient recovered.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Baby's Outing.

Frequently a baby is seen on the street in its coach out for "an airing," and the little face is all bundled up with the covers or a heavy veil bound around its face and head. That child is getting little or no fresh air. It is breathing between its face and the covering and taking in and out of the lungs the same air. This air would be found just as stuffy as in a closed room.

The mother wrongly believes that she is keeping the child from catching cold by keeping the cold air away from the face. It is perfectly proper to keep the entire body in winter well covered to prevent chilling, but decidedly wrong to cover the face. If it is so cold and blustery out that one fears the child's face will be frostbitten, then it is better policy to keep the child in a well ventilated room.

The same thing applies to adults. What is the use of opening wide the windows if you bury your head in a lot of soft pillows and cover your face with the blankets? No one would consider sleeping out of doors with a sleeping bag on and a bag to cover the head and face.

BRANCH LINES OF THE GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC RAILWAY

With the approaching completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway's main line, the preparations that have been made to feed the main artery with a series of branch lines are of particular interest. When in 1903 the Canadian Government and the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway entered into an agreement for the construction and operation of a railway across Canada from the Atlantic to the Pacific, the necessity of these branch lines was kept in view and in 1906 a subsidiary company was incorporated under the name of the Grand Trunk Pacific Branch Lines Company, with the capital stock of $50,000,000. This company was authorised to construct branch lines through fertile sections of the country, with an aggregate total mileage of about seven thousand five hundred miles.

An early start was made on the construction of these branches and already, west of Winnipeg, about twelve hundred miles of subsidiary lines have been completed, while arrangements have been made between the various Provincial Governments and the railway for the construction in the near future of many hundreds of miles of additional branch lines.

That the Grand Trunk Pacific has the strongest belief in its revenue earning power is seen in the preparations that have been made for handling traffic in the future. It has erected along its route over 300 elevators at various points which will in the near future be grain producing centres. These are built in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. Its chain of hotels and terminals is rapidly being brought to completion to attend to the wants of its tourist traffic. Thus, even before its main line is completed, it is making every preparation for the traffic that is bound to come its way.

Five Daily Calls to Prayer.

At sunrise the light sleepers are awakened by the long, mellow cry of the muezzin from his tower:

God is great!
I testify that there is no God but God!
I testify that Mohammed is the prophet of God!
Come to prayer!
Come to salvation!
Prayer is better than sleep!
God is most great!
There is no God but God!

As one hears five times each day from the minarets of the mosques of Cairo this summons to prayer, as one beholds the faithful reverently bowing their bodies in their shops or in the public highways, one readily perceives that in Cairo he is near the heart of the Moslem world. These prayers occur at sunrise, midday, 3:30 in the afternoon, at sunset and an hour and a half after sunset. The faithful must attend their prayers with bows and prostrations to show perfect devotion.—Clayton Cooper's "The Man of Egypt."

FORGOT AMERICA'S SIZE.

A Stupid Oversight on the Part of His Lordship.

An English peer, noted for his wealth and his peppery temper, who is president of a large British corporation, with American headquarters in New York, arrived in San Francisco recently from the orient. It was his first American visit.

On the day of his arrival, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, he sent an urgent telegram to his company's New York manager at the latter's office. The message called for an immediate answer.

Receiving no reply by 4:30 o'clock, the peer sent another message expressing his exasperation at not having had a reply sooner. Another hour went and still no answer. Thereupon a thoroughly angry nobleman wired a third time. It was a characteristic pepperbox message. No answer.

Early the next morning the peer got his reply. It was just a crisp business wire, giving the information he wished. There was no explanation as to the delay.

When the Englishman reached New York he went to the manager's office with fire in his eye.

"Why didn't you answer those telegrams of mine promptly?" he demanded. "Do you mean to say you stop business here at 3 o'clock in the afternoon?"

And then he got five minutes' relief by storming around the office, threatening all kinds of disaster to the entire force. He had been nursing the grievance all the way across the continent.

When the peer subsided the manager remarked quietly:

"When you sent your first message it was 6 o'clock in New York and when you sent your last it was 8:30."

The Englishman stared. Then he showed he wasn't such a bad fellow.

"By Jove!" he cried. "How stupid of me! What a bally ass I am! I forgot the size of your country."—New York Times.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

BEFORE AND AFTER.

YOU can't in every instance tell
Just how a gentleman will act
Before he takes his office on
And is elected for a fact.
His promises look fine and fair
As presents on the Christmas tree,
But practice when he gets the power
With promises may not agree.

When he is running for the place
His hand is like a garden pump.
His words of honey have a taint
When he is talking from the stump,
And everything seems on the square
When he is spouting in a hall,
But when he lands the easy job
Quite likely he forgets it all.

He wants to turn the rascals out
And give the honest men a chance—
That is, if you can take his word,
The burden of his song and dance.
Then when he sits in places high
And hails the speaker from the floor
In very many cases he
Out-rascals those who went before.

The voter has an awful time
In governing his native land,
In picking winners from the list
Who for the right will always stand.
So many men are candidates
Who for the places are not fit,
No wonder that the man who votes
So often makes a mess of it.

Short Cut.

A large, portly person, starting to come down a long flight of stone steps in front of his residence, stepped on a banana peel and made connection with the sidewalk below in less time than it takes to tell it. As he picked himself up, suppressing a groan, a kind hearted neighbor came running to get the first report on the killed and wounded.

"Are you hurt much?" he asked, with some solicitude.

"Hurt! Why should I be hurt?"

"Didn't you just tumble downstairs?"

"Tumble nothing! That is the way I always come down when I am in a hurry." And he stamped off down the street.

Overlooked Nothing.

"I can't do business with him."

"Why not?"

"Too grasping."

"Tries to hog it all?"

"Worse than that. When I asked him to lend me his ear he wanted me to pay rent for it."

Evening Up Things.

A heart that is light
And a wad that is tight
Can seldom get on together,
For the light heart, perverse,
Shakes up the old purse
Until it can slip its tether.

GUNMEN DIE IN ELECTRIC CHAIR

Current is Turned on and Last Statement of Whitey Lewis is Cut Short---He Said He Did Not Kill Rosenthal

Canadian Press Despatch.

Sing Sing Prison, New York, April 13.—Frank Cirofici (Dago Frank), Frank Seidenchner (Whitey Lewis), Harry Horowitz (Gyp the Blood), and Louis Rosenberg (Lefty Louie) were electrocuted in the order given above between five-thirty and six-thirty this morning for the murder of Herman Rosenthal, the New York gambler, in July, nineteen hundred and twelve. Only Whitey Lewis made a statement.

"Gentlemen," he mumbled, as he was strapped in the chair, "I did not shoot at Rosenthal; them who said I did was perjurers. For the sake of justice, gentlemen, I say I didn't, the witness Stannish ———" He had meant to continue that Stannish had lied, but the current was turned on and his body shot forward in the chair.

The executions occupied forty minutes and would have been over sooner but for the large number of newspaper reporters, which crowded the room.

DID SOME OF THE GUNMEN CONFESS?

Albany, April 13.—Some of the gunmen executed at Sing Sing this morning are believed to have confessed. Supt. Riley of the State Prison Department, says statements will arrive today which will show that no injustice has been done, although he knows nothing of the nature of the statements.

NEW MASTER IS WELCOMED AT CALGARY

F. L. Clarry Takes Up His Duties as Master-in-Chambers

Calgary, April 13.—A pleasing incident took place in the supreme court chamber room, when the new master-in-chambers, L. F. Clarry, formerly deputy attorney-general of Alberta, was welcomed to the city and his new office on behalf of the barristers of Calgary, by Stanley Jones, K.C., who introduced the master in a neat speech in which he recalled the old days when Master Clarry practised in Calgary and the high esteem in which he was held by all the members of the profession.

Replying to the official welcome, Master Clarry said he was delighted to be back in Calgary where he had many friends and he was sure that the same kindness that had been shown Master Blain during his tenure of office in this city would be extended to him. He looked forward to his work in Calgary with much pleasure and thanked the members of the bar for their cordial welcome.

Lewis Frederick Clarry was born at Millbrook, Ontario, and for some years he practised with great success in the province of Ontario. He came West in 1899 and 11 years later was appointed deputy attorney-general for this province. He held this position with distinction for four years when he was appointed master-in-chambers at Calgary. The new master will take chambers for four days each week until he comes to reside permanently in this city.

H. J. McCANNON MOVES REAL ESTATE MARKET

That real estate is again on the move, and that people have confidence in Peterboro property, is evidenced by the fact that Mr. H. W. McCannon last week closed a number of sales, the amount involved being $12,260.

IMPROVEMENTS AT BERT HEARD'S STORE

Mr. Bert Heard, a progressive young grocer, at the corner of Sherbrooke and George Streets, has altered and improved his store, so that now he is able to carry a larger stock of goods and give better service to his numerous customers. He has made a big change at his store and has added an automobile for his delivery business.

A SUICIDE IDENTIFIED

BROTHER COMES ACROSS ATLANTIC TO VIEW YOUNG MAN'S REMAINS.

TORONTO, April 13.—By means of a picture and a description published in local papers, the young lad who committed suicide at 920 Dundas street on the morning of Feb. 18 by shooting was identified by his brother, who came from Liverpool, England, for that purpose. The dead youth was Edward Johnson of Liverpool.

The lad's brother is unable to account for the suicide other than the fact that he was suffering from a religious mania when he suddenly left his home in England two years ago. Every effort was made by his parents to trace him, but without success.

Recently a newspaper with the lad's description was received by his brother. It tallied so closely that the brother at once left for Canada to claim the dead man's effects.

The suicide was one of the most peculiar that the police have had to deal with. Previous to taking his life Johnson destroyed all papers which would lead to his identity, and during the three days before he took his life he had occupied rooms in three different lodging-houses, all of which he paid for in advance and left without using. After his death a letter was received from a man in Hamilton, containing a quantity of religious tracts and offering some advice.

MR. AND MRS. FRANK SANDY WERE SURPRISED

Presentation of Silver Tea Service, Morris Chair and Club Bag

At three o'clock this afternoon, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sandy were honoured with the presentation of a handsome Morris chair and a silver tea service, the gifts coming from the business men of the city.

Mr. Sandy was also presented with a club bag by Mr. G. A. Gillespie, on behalf of the cheese buyers.

The pleasing event took place at Mr. Sandy's office at the Grand Trunk station, among those present being Mayor Buller, and Messrs. G. A. Gillespie, J. A. Cameron, J. H. Ferguson, R. Hicks, R. Fair and J. White. There were 147 names attached to the testimonial.

Short speeches were made in which Mr. Sandy was assured that the pleasant associations which had been enjoyed here, were about to be severed with deep regret, and that he would at any time be welcomed back to Peterboro, whenever his new position at Lindsay would permit him to do so.

This evening at six o'clock another presentation will be made to Mr. Sandy by the employes of the Grand Trunk.

BEST REPORT ON COLLEGIATE IN SEVERAL YEARS

Inspector Houston's Report to The Board of Education.

The Editor of the Review:

Dear Sir,—The report of Inspector Houston re the Collegiate Institute, which was read at the last meeting of the Board of Education, is the best that the school has received for several years. REV. E. A. PEARSON IS TRANSFERRED TO LONDON CHURCH

At a meeting of the Methodist Transfer Committee at Toronto last week, Rev. E. A. Pearson, of Hamilton, formerly pastor at George Street Church was transferred to London.

THEY ALL HELPED.

Yesterday Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Todd were the readers at First Church of Christ, Scientist, their daughter, Grace, sang a solo, with her brother, R. S., of Toronto, playing the accompaniment, while the elder son, Wm. Jr., sang the solo part of an anthem in the Presbyterian Church in Cornwall, Ont.

CASE WAS DISMISSED.

The charge against Frank Burke, with assaulting Jos. Cohen, aged 14, heard before Magistrate Dumble this morning, was dismissed.

GOD SAVE EMMELINE PANKHURST SUFFRAGETTES CHANTED IN CHURCH; BISHOP DISTURBED IN HIS SERMON

LOWESTOFT, Eng., April 13. — A large number of suffragettes disturbed the service at St. John's Church yesterday while the Bishop of Norwich was officiating. Several days ago the bishop was visited by a delegation of suffragettes, and after a long parley consented to see two of them. They protested to him against the forcible feeding of women, and he promised to take their protest under consideration.

Yesterday they kept up a continuous chanting of "God save Emmeline Pankhurst." Several were ejected, then others ran to the foot of the pulpit and exclaimed: "My Lord Bishop, will you protest against the torturing of women?"

These disturbers were also dragged from the edifice, after which the bishop was able to deliver his sermon.

A START IN GRASS FIRES

Telephone Might be Used Instead of the Alarm Box

A grass fire near Driscoll Terrace yesterday afternoon, a chimney fire last night at ten o'clock at the corner of Bethune and London Street, and another chimney fire this morning at eight o'clock in Campbell's terrace on Water Street, caused the firemen three runs. They were all extinguished before any damage resulted.

The grass fires will soon be common occurrences, and it would help the department if persons sending in alarms for them would use the 'phone and acquaint the firemen with the fact that it is a grass fire. There is a class of apparatus for grass and chimney fires, and in the case of grass fires, it is not necessary for the whole department to turn out.

WAS BOUND OVER TO KEEP THE PEACE

Found guilty of assaulting his wife, Arthur Sims, a baker, was bound over to keep the peace by Magistrate Dumble at Police Court this morning. He gave securities of $400.

Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared for the wife. She claimed that her husband used the worst kind of improper language to her on various occasions.

On Friday morning he had struck her twice. She retaliated once.

"Bonds of peace will never change the conditions of affairs," remarked the husband.

FINE OF $20.

A fine of $20 was imposed at Police Court this morning in a case of assault.

SPENT YEARS IN DUNGEON FOR HONOR OF THE FAMILY

Italian Nobleman Incarcerated His Two Daughters in Dungeon.

One Dead After Fifteen Years and the Other is Insane.

NAPLES, April 13.—Investigation into the incarceration of the two sisters of Baron Domenico Camarda shows that the young women were placed in a dungeon in the Camarda castle by the father of the baron, who was arrested Friday, and that the latter on his father's death continued the treatment meted out to the girls because they had dishonored the family name.

The girls were placed in a dungeon in the family castle eighteen years ago, and one of them died after fifteen years' torture, while the other was found insane a few days ago.

It appears that Teresina Camarda was in love with an army officer, and that their child was killed by the order of the baron's father. Isobel, the other sister, also had an illicit love affair, but the father of her child is not known.

Both sisters were incarcerated in the dungeon of the castle near Mairato and ill-treated, being supplied with just enough food to keep them alive.

After the death of the old Baron Camarda, his eldest son, the present baron, took upon his hands the torturing of his erring sisters. In this he was abetted by his brother, Francesco, and his sisters Antonia and Garcia.

It was not until last February that rumors of the tragedy came to the ears of the police authorities. When the latter heard about the matter they demanded the keys to the castle on threat that if the keys were refused they would break down the walls. The police found Isobel in the dungeon completely nude and looking like a skeleton. There was at the time some plausible explanation of her condition, because she was handed over to her relatives with nothing more than a severe reprimand.

The investigating judge of Monteleone went to the place afterwards and found that Isobel had been again placed in the dungeon. She was taken from the castle and sent to the hospital of Girifalco, and the investigation into the whole circumstances of the case was begun. The physicians at the Monteleone hospital are endeavoring to ascertain from the woman in their charge the origin of the affair.

A FLYLESS TOWN

Proper Thing to Do is to Swat The Early Comers.

Calgary, April 6.—"I wish every citizen of Calgary might read the warning issued by the Merchants' Association of New York regarding the fly," said Dr. Mahood, medical health officer for the city. "If I could make them aware of the nature of this warning and impress upon them the importance of killing the early spring flies, we could make this practically a flyless town. In a few days now the observer may expect to see a pair of flies sunning themselves on the window pane. He may see several pairs, in fact; but if he sees only one pair it is up to him to swat them without delay, seize their carcasses and incinerate them in the nearest flame. In case he fails in this duty to civilization nobody knows what might happen. To be sure, the chances are that most of the progeny of a single pair of flies will die before the end of summer; but if no death intervenes, if all the descendants of that original pair could live and should be compressed into a solid mass early next October, they would occupy a space of more than 14 billion cubic feet."

BALL PARK WILL SOON JOIN WETS

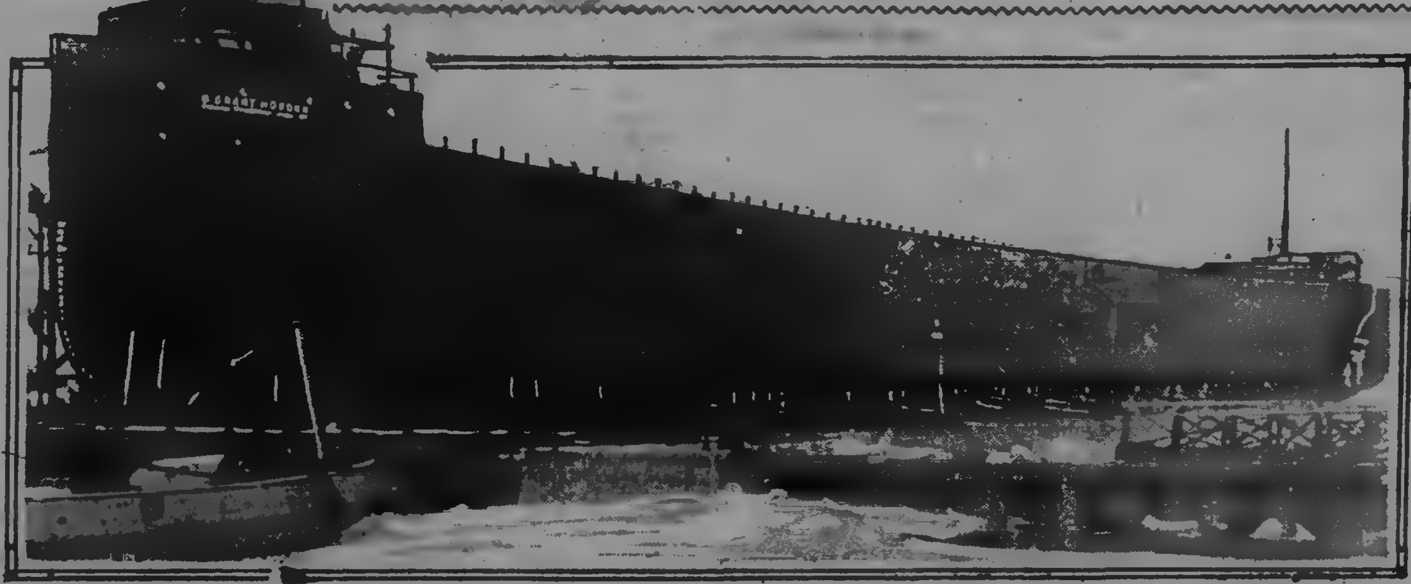
Water in River is Rising and Will Likely Continue.

With the Otonabee slowly but surely rising, the ball park will soon be wet territory. Since yesterday the river has risen fully five inches and from indications will continue to rise.

Word received fro the back country is to the effect that the ice is rapidly breaking on the lakes and with mild weather, the lakes will be open in a week or so.

PAVING OPERATIONS.

The first of the season's operations for paving is billed for to-morrow, when the firm of Foley and Gleason will commence work on George Street.



THE W. GRANT MORDEN, THE LARGEST BULK FREIGHTER IN THE WORLD

What has been claimed to be the largest bulk freight steamer in the world, is being built at Port Arthur, Ont., for Canada Steamship Lines, Ltd., and was launched Saturday, April 4th, the christening ceremony being performed by Lady Williams-Taylor, of Montreal.

This huge freighter has room for 585,000 bushels of oats, or approximately 20 trains of 30 cars each. She is 625 feet long, 59 feet beam and 32 feet deep, with a water bottom and side tank 5½ feet extending from the keel up to the main deck. She is divided into 15 water-tight compartments, which may be flooded or pumped out individually, as conditions may require. The cargo hold, extending 436 feet, is divided into six compartments by five solid steel bulkheads, entrance to which will be gained by 38 steel hatches opening from the spar deck.

A feature very seldom found in the freighters will be the installation of an ice machine large enough for refrigerator coils and ice tank of two tons' capacity.

The spar deck forward is fitted up for passengers and is finished in mahogany.

A HAPPY DAY AT THE SALVATION ARMY TEMPLE

Bright Services and Fine Addresses—Final Meeting To-night

Easter Sunday at the Salvation Army Temple will be a day long to be remembered by the members of the Army and their many friends. It was a day of gladness from early morning till late at night. The band was out between six and seven o'clock, and a service was held in the Church of the Christian Scientists, in which building the Salvationists held forth for their first meeting in Peterboro nearly thirty years ago.

At 9.30 Adjutant McElheney and Staff-Captain McAmmond held a service for the prisoners at the County Jail.

Interest was added to the service in the afternoon because of the attendance of Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., Mr. E. A. Peck, M.L.A., Mayor Buller, Ald. Johnston, all of whom gave addresses.

Mr. Burnham in opening his remarks said that it was interesting to compare the conquest of India by the British under Clive and the successful efforts for the conquest of India made by missionaries and particularly those of the Salvation Army. The chief unit of the Salvation Army and the source of its power lay in the absence of creeds and of denominational pride.

He himself, although in no sense qualified to speak to them on the topic of Christianity, could not help observing that the Saviour favored no denominational name. It was a matter of astonishment that people could rejoice in denominational names in view of all the circumstances. The evidently sincere desire of the Salvation Army to get to the People and make them worthy of the world we live in was especially praiseworthy. A man who does his best here can hardly fail to have the approval of Christ and of those who rule in Heaven. The idea of relegating all earthly things to Satan and of resigning it to his dominion and control was so far as he could see the error of the past. That day was going by. Nothing that God had made and nothing that God permitted to be made in this, His own world was beneath the notice and earnest effort of even the most sanctimonious of God's creatures. The energy infused into all walks of life by Jesus was wonderful. He dealt with the things of Caesar as well as with those of God. Those people who pretend to despise the things of Caesar have not profited by a very noble example. We must remember and we must never forget that nothing is bad until we have made it so. Bearing this in mind we can improve our methods very much with the exercise of a little common sense but with a good deal of firmness and resolution to accompany it. What we all chiefly lack is quite evidently not firmness toward others but towards ourselves. He praised the army and its work and said that everybody nowadays had a good word for it.

Mr. E. A. Peck congratulated the local corps on the good work that had been done by the Army in the city. He also spoke about the great work performed by the late General Booth, how he had labored in the poor districts in the city of London, and had achieved so much good by his self-denying efforts in the cause of humanity. He also referred in a general way to the problems of the future, the necessity of the better housing of the working classes, the doing away with slum conditions, etc., and the necessity of preventing the development of such conditions in this country.

Ald. Johnston also gave a very fine address.

There was another large audience at the evening service, when Staff-Captain McAmmond was heard again.

This evening a special service will be held for the young people.

MISTAKEN FOR A BEAR

James Kelly is Perhaps Fatally Wounded by Cousin

Belleville, Ont., April 12.—James Kelly, a resident of Umfraville, a small village in the backwoods of Hastings county, was brought here to the hospital with a serious gunshot wound in his thigh.

Kelly was visiting a cousin by the name of Patrick Kelly, in North Hastings county. Together they set out on a hunting trip at midnight. At two o'clock in the morning, James was bending over some mink traps, examining them, near where a bear trap was set. His cousin came through the woods at some distance away, and, thinking the dark form he saw moving was a bear in the trap, fired at it. The bullet tore through the ligaments of James' thigh.

He was carried three miles to Wm. Leavitt's residence by Patrick, and from there rushed to Belleville, where he now lies in a serious condition.

CHURCHILL IS ROASTED

AUSTRIAN MINISTER OF DEFENCE ALLEGES BAD FAITH.

SYDNEY, N.S.W., April 13.—Hon. E. D. Millen, Australian Minister of Defence, has issued on behalf of the Commonwealth Government an important and comprehensive statement on the whole question of Imperial naval defence, in which he severely criticises Mr. Churchill's recent speech and emphatically defends the Australian policy.

Australia, declares the Minister, is irrevocably committed to an Australian navy policy and needs her own ships. If Churchill's references to battle cruisers mean that the British Government thinks such vessels are unnecessary in the Pacific, then a most startling departure has been made by the Admiralty from the agreement of 1910 between Australia and the Mother Country.

It is impossible, he proceeds, for the Commonwealth Ministers to accept the existence of the Japanese alliance as a reason for this departure. Mr. Millen cities instances in which the Admiralty has violated the 1910 compact without acquainting the Australian Government, and declares that while the Imperial aspect of the Australian naval unit scheme still cordially commends itself to the Australian people, the latter are also wedded to the local control and defence system, as determined five years ago. He insists that until the Australian unit is placed on a thoroughly sound foundation Mr. Churchill's suggested Imperial squadron will not appeal to Australian sentiment.

In concluding, Mr. Millen says that Mr. Churchill suggests a reversion to the discarded policy of a contribution. He quotes Admiral Sir Reginald Henderson, in his report with regard to the establishment of an Australian navy, who said that continuity of policy was essential. "Yet almost before the foundations of the policy inaugurated in 1909 have been laid we are urged to adopt a radical modification."

Father's Sacrifice in Vain.

PARIS, April 13.—The eight-year-old son of a chauffeur was knocked down and seriously injured by an automobile Friday evening. Seemingly the only chance to save his life was by the transfusion of blood, and the boy's father at once offered himself for that purpose. A large quantity of blood was transfused but in vain; the boy died, and the father is in a critical condition.

PETERBOROUGH, MONDAY, APRIL 13, 1914

ST. GEORGE'S DAY.

APRIL 23rd will be St. George's Day, when the people of England will honor their patron saint and when the Catholic Church throughout the world will remember one of its early martyrs. Most people of this country have heard of St. George from childhood, they have experienced in early youth admiration for his fearless encounter with the terrible dragon which he slew, but, as years developed the faculty of criticism, they have asked who was this George? what did he do? and how came a mythical dragon into his history?

The story undoubtedly springs from the life of a man who actually lived and suffered death for his faith; but the history of this hero of the early Christian Church, was influenced by pagan myths and historic inaccuracies, so that the simple tale of his pure life and glorious death became entwined in legend, as an ivy creeps around an archway or a stained glass window of a great cathedral or an abby church. According to the legend given by Metaphrastes and substantially repeated in the Roman acta sanctorum, Saint George was born in Cappadocia, of noble Christian parents from whom he received a careful religious training. Having become a soldier, he rapidly rose under the Roman Emperor Diocletian to high military rank. He did excellent military work in Persian Armenia and visited Britain on an imperial mission. When the Emperor began to show pronounced hostility to the Christians, George sought a personal interview with him, deliberately professed his faith and resigned his commission after remonstrating against the persecution of the Christians. He was shortly afterwards arrested, and, having suffered various tortures, was put to death in Nicomedia on April 23, 303. His body was later removed to Lydda. His festival is observed by the Roman Catholic Church, the Spanish Catholic Church, the Orthodox Eastern Church, and by the people of England, particularly the Anglican Church. The Council of Oxford in 1222 ordered that his feast should be kept as a national festival, but not till the time of Edward III. was he made patron saint of England.

The historical basis of the tradition is particularly unsound. The accounts of his life vary in important details such as the year of his death, the place of his death, and confuse him with others as well as draw on Pagan mythology. Calvin impugned the saint's existence, and, in the Canon of Pope Gelasius (494) George is mentioned in a list of those "whose names are justly reverenced among men, but whose acts are known only to God," a statement which implies that legends had already grown up around his name.

The dragon has been associated with St. George ever since the Golden Legend of Jacques de Voragine and is traced to the 6th century. At Arsuf or Joppa—neither of them far from Lydda—the Greek hero Perseus had slain the sea-monster that threatened the virgin Andromeda, and George, like many another Christian saint, entered into the inheritance of veneration previously enjoyed by a pagan hero. The exploit thus bears a close relation to the common Aryan myth of the sun-god as the conqueror of the powers of darkness.

Although historical criticism has torn the beautiful story into fragments in order to understand its truth, the real truth of the story still lives and has a worthy application to the people of this materialistic age. The truth of the tradition is that a man, having risen to high military rank in the armies of the one great nation in the world, having excellent prospects for a successful career, sacrificed his career and his life for the principles of his religious faith. This beautiful example of sacrifice, this fine illustration of the firmness, and integrity to conviction of a real hero, is worthy of emulation, in the daily struggle to live wisely and rightly. The story has an application which should not be forgotten in the celebration of St. George's Day.

RESURRECTION.

MOST OF US ought to be keenly interested in death, for we never have been really alive. We have never reached our height, never measured up to what possibilities are within us. The proof is a matter of common observation. A big company gets into serious business difficulties, and the officials, who had been fussy, vain, and pompous, become men again, call their subordinates in and plan the campaign so that everyone goes out a hero—to win. Like Kipling's gluttonous old Roman general, they become "young again among the trumpets." In flood time a telephone call may mean safety or destruction to many people, and a naturally careless or flippant girl becomes a heroine, sticking to her switchboard all night to send the messages through while a rising river gnaws at the building's foundations. Caught by a cave-in, a foul-mouthed old miner walks off into the gas to die alone so that his younger comrade may have what air there is and the chance of getting back to his family. Some rough fishermen stranded on a perilous reef haul down their signal of distress because they know that a small boat cannot live in that mad sea. So it goes year after year—these people might easily be thought of as ordinary, dull, and mean, the commonest human animals, but when the hour strikes life flames up within them and they rise to meet their fate with as calm a soul as one who goes to pick flowers in his mother's garden. What will this world be like when we get into the habit of living up to something near the best that is in us?—Colliers.

THE HOWL RE DISMISSALS.

The Liberal members have been howling lately over their dismissals. To believe the Maritime members one would imagine there was a wholesale firing of officials, and that not a solitary officer remained in his position after 1911. Just how much truth there is in the Liberal screams was shown by Hon. J. D. Hazen, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, the other day. Of 7,000 officials in his department, only 510 have been dismissed, or 7 per cent. On the other hand, the self-righteous Liberal party, in 1896, fired no less than 16 per cent. of the officials in his department.

The hypocritical talk of the Liberals on the subject of dismissals, in view of the wholesale manner in which they dismissed officials in 1896, is nothing short of nauseating.

SCORES GRITS ON T. V. C. SCANDAL.

THE Grain Growers' Guide commenting on the Trent Valley Canal Scandal scores the late Laurier administration in no uncertain manner when it says:—

> "Mr. Stratton unfortunately is ill and has not been able to make any explanations, and judgment on his conduct must be suspended until he has been heard from. McClellan, however, has admitted his guilt, and the investigation has certainly revealed a very rotten state of affairs, for which the late Liberal Government must be held responsible. If members of the government knew what was going on, no condemnation is too strong for them. On the other hand, if the Minister of the Department did not know, it shows that there was something radically wrong with the system amounting to almost criminal negligence. If the Liberals had remained in office instead of being defeated in 1911, all this graft would probably never have been uncovered and would have still been in progress, and that condition of affairs probably had something to do with the fact that Peterboro assisted in the downfall of the Laurier Government by defeating J. R. Stratton, and electing J. H. Burnham in his place. All these serious charges by Mr. Ferguson will, of course, be threshed out in Parliament.'

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE Budget speech of the Honourable W. T. White to a certain extent has "dished the Whigs." The Liberals went out of power talking Reciprocity and made a big bid for support in the Prairie provinces. Now the Conservatives have made the duty 2½ per cent. lower than that proposed by Laurier's Reciprocity deal. Verily the Liberals are standing first on one foot and then on the other, for as to real policy they have nothing substantial to offer.

The Educational Association for Ontario will be in convention in Toronto next Thursday. The program is lengthy and interesting. Here are some of the items: An address by Dr. Pyne, Minister of Education; a simplified school program; superannuation fund; religious education; labor and learning; the house fly. Let us hope that the meeting considering these practical subjects will accomplish something more than merely a discussion of them.

WHEN Wm. Weise of Mount Hope, N.Y., saw the Easter finery of his wife and three daughters he committed suicide. The strange thing is that occurrences like this one have been so few. Some new styles would drive a man insane far quicker than sleeping under the old-time crazy quilt.

ATLANTA, Georgia, is going to forward the temperance movement by prohibiting strong liquors like whiskey being sold in bars, but will permit all soda water fountains to bubble with lager. We have a strong impression that soda water will be rare in Atlanta.

THIS is the way most people around this office count time: Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, pay-day. For future reference go back to the first and repeat.

DID you go to church yesterday? If not why not?

Couldn't Stand Ridicule.

Port Arthur Chronicle.

Poor Harry Peck. A year ago this brilliant Columbia professor had a national fame as a Latinist and a humorist. He was sued for breach of promise, and his love letters were read in court. The man who made fun of other people became a butt himself. His suicide is another proof that the average man can stand anything but ridicule.

Sees Improvements.

Dundas Star.

The Peterboro Review, of which Thos. W. Whalley is managing director, has just concluded a successful subscription contest, in which the principal prizes were a McLaughlin-Buick automobile and a piano. The mayor of the city and two leading business men acted as judges in the counting of the votes, and the contestants were therefore assured of receiving a fair decision. Since Mr. Whalley purchased The Review the paper has been greatly improved, and he has made it a very creditable newspaper for the city of Peterboro.

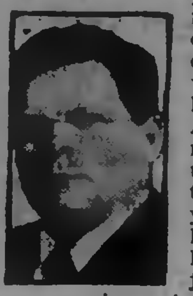
All People Are Human.

Stratford Herald.

There was a small knot of dark-complexioned laborers, foreigners as they are called by us, gathered together on the street corner. I came up close to them, a little curious to learn what the centre of interest was. One of them was reading aloud a letter he had just received from home. It was to him alone, as I ascertained later; but he was sharing it with his comrades. There was a new look in their faces as they listened, and I had a flashing glimpse of what these men really are. Not as we see them, dull, dirty and careless, apparently, whether they live as beasts or humans; but as home-loving, affectionate fellows, in a land where they are strange, and whose customs and laws are strange to them, plodding along as best they can, to lay by a little hoard against the day when they will return to their native land and live in comparative comfort. We blame them for this. But isn't it just what we would do ourselves under the same circumstances?

POOR WORK

By Walt Mason



You can't afford to do poor work, so, therefore, always shun it; for no excuse or quip or quirk will square you when you've done it. I hired a man to paint my cow from horntips to the udder, and she's all blotched and spotted now, and people view and shudder. "Who did the job?" they always ask; and when I say "Jim Yellow," they cry, "When we have such a task we'll hire some other fellow." And so Jim idly stands and swows bad luck has made him nervous, for when the people paint their cows they do not ask his service. And thus one's reputation flows, a'skiting, here and yonder; and wheresoe'er the workman goes, his bum renown will wander. 'Twill face him like an evil ghost when he his best is doing, and jolt him where it hurts the most, and still keep on pursuing. A good renown will travel, too, from Gotham to Empory, and make you friends in places new, and bring you cash and glory. So always do your best, old hunks; let nothing be neglected, and you will gather in the plunks, and live and die respected.

Birthdays of Note

MONDAY, APRIL THIRTEENTH

O. S. CROCKETT, M.P. for York, N.B., and one of the most promising of the later members on the Conservative side of the House, observes his sixty-sixth birthday to-day. He was born in Chatham, N.B., but since his graduation from the law school has been living in Fredericton where he has a fine law practice. From his father, a noted Scottish educationalist, who was for many years superintendent of education in New Brunswick, he has inherited a strong love for the land of the heather, which he has shown by causing the erection of a statue to Bobby Burns in Fredericton. He was first elected to Parliament in the general election of 1904 and has held his seat in both subsequent elections.

BRAZIL AND ITS COLORS.

Flag Day There Has Now Become the Great National Festival.

In the republic of Brazil, where the ruling language is Portuguese and a welcoming hand is extended alike to the European and the Asiatic immigrant, great attention has been paid for some years to the cultivation of a spirit of patriotism.

The cult of the flag has become more and more ardent in the hearts of that people, and the "feast of the flag" each recurring November is celebrated with more and more pomp and enthusiasm all over the immense empire and on every Brazilian ship, wherever it may be. In a country noted for its numerous saints' days the celebration of Flag day has become the true festal day.

Commenting on this, Le Bresil Economique of Rio Janeiro says: "Our people are imaginative and simple. A flag undulating in the breeze as it passes by to the strains of martial music, that the officers salute with the sword and before which everybody uncovers, speaks more strongly to the heart of the people than any dry historic date which presents nothing in the concrete and which to the ignorant recalls nothing of significance."

The lesson of the flag is taught to all the children of the schools in Brazil, and on Flag day they gather in the public squares of the city and town and, as in the United States, sing patriotic hymns.—Indianapolis News.

Something Practical.

"What is your son going to be?"

"A great inventor."

"What is he working on now?"

"He is trying to graft an alarm clock on a rooster so that it can be regulated to go off at whatever hour is wanted in the morning."

Only Thing on Tap.

"How did they treat you out there?"

"With the greatest of kindness."

"Well, that's about the only way they could treat you since everything has gone prohibition."

Different Now.

The heights that great men reached and kept
Were not attained by sudden flight,
But that was e'er the airship came,
Before the days of Wilbur Wright.

Inferential.

"He is so perfectly silly."

"Who?"

"Percy."

"I was sure that you would find him congenial."

Know the Road.

"They say she drove him to drink."

"But they live in a prohibition city."

"Just shows that much more ability on her part."

COLLEGE HAZING.

It Was Called "Wrecking" In Carthage In St. Augustine's Time.

At most American colleges it is called "hazing;" at West Point it is called "crawling" and at English schools "fagging" is often applied. When St. Augustine was a boy they called it "wrecking."

In a translation of his "Confessions," for which I am indebted to a learned clerical friend, St. Augustine relates what the boys did at the University of Carthage:

"I would take no part in the wild doings of the 'wreckers,' a cruel and devilish name, which was looked upon as the stamp of the best set. I went about with them, and of some of them I made friends, yet I always disliked their ways of going on their wreckings, their wanton attacks upon the shyness of freshmen and the unprovoked affronts with which they carried on their malignant amusement. Nothing could be more like the conduct of devils, and what name could be fitter for them than 'wreckers.'"

That sounds as if the Carthage sophomore was fully as much endowed with self importance as the American sophomore. I may add that St. Augustine's criticism of "wrecking" is one more ancient proof that "boys will be boys."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Labby's Long Walk.

In "Bohemian Days In Fleet Street" is this Labouchere incident, which happened when he was in the diplomatic service and was sent on a mission to St. Petersburg:

Before starting he had a dispute with the foreign office about his expenses. The foreign office had its idea of the scale; Labouchere had his. But the office refused to reconsider its decision. Labouchere took his leave, crossed the channel and was to all appearance lost. A week after the appointed time he had not arrived at St. Petersburg. A representative of the foreign office was sent out on his trail. He was traced to Paris and from thence to Vienna, where he was run to earth. In reply to his discoverer he coolly said, "The foreign office refused to pay me my expenses, and I'm walking to St. Petersburg."

"And do you love your teacher?" I asked.

"Aber nit!" said little Willie. "The old hen's too old fer me."

Save the Babies.

INFANT MORTALITY is something frightful. We can hardly realize that of all the children born in civilized countries, twentytwo per cent., or nearly one-quarter, die before they reach one year; thirtyseven per cent., or more than one-third, before they are five, and one-half before they are fifteen!

We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save a majority of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tinctures and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium, or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity they stupefy, retard circulation and lead to congestions, sickness, death. Castoria operates exactly the reverse, but you must see that it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. Castoria causes the blood to circulate properly, opens the pores of the skin and allays fever.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. A. F. Peeler, of St. Louis, Mo., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria in many cases and have always found it an efficient and speedy remedy."

Dr. Frederick D. Rogers, of Chicago, Ill., says: I have found Fletcher's Castoria very useful in the treatment of children's complaints.

Dr. William C. Bloomer, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: In my practice I am glad to recommend your Castoria, knowing it is perfectly harmless and always satisfactory.

Dr. E. Down, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria in my practice for many years with great satisfaction to myself and benefit to my patients."

Dr. Edward Parrish, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I have used your Castoria in my own household with good results, and have advised several patients to use it for its mild laxative effect and freedom from harm."

Dr. J. B. Elliott, of New York City, says: "Having during the past six years prescribed your Castoria for infantile stomach disorders, I most heartily commend its use. The formula contains nothing deleterious to the most delicate of children."

Dr. C. G. Sprague, of Omaha, Neb., says: "Your Castoria is an ideal medicine for children, and I frequently prescribe it. While I do not advocate the indiscriminate use of proprietary medicines, yet Castoria is an exception for conditions which arise in the care of children."

Dr. J. A. Parker, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Your Castoria holds the esteem of the medical profession in a manner held by no other proprietary preparation. It is a sure and reliable medicine for infants and children. In fact, it is the universal household remedy for infantile ailments."

Dr. H. F. Merrill, of Augusta, Me., says: "Castoria is one of the very finest and most remarkable remedies for infants and children. In my opinion your Castoria has saved thousands from an early grave. I can furnish hundreds of testimonials from this locality as to its efficiency and merits."

The Man Who Was Laughed At

By SADIE OLCOTT

Muldrough was a ranchman. He was a typical westerner; but, having made money at raising sheep, he held his head pretty high. He had a daughter, Rosa, who was a rustic beauty. Muldrough didn't propose that Rosa should take up with a cowpuncher or anything like that. He intended her for a ranchman, like himself, who rode over his broad acres and bossed others.

A ranchman came courting his daughter, true enough, but not the kind of ranchman Muldrough was looking for. His name was Jabez Stubbs. He came out from Missouri to start ranching on fifty acres of land and with a dozen sheep. He was the homeliest man in the west, and so ignorant was he of western ways that he didn't even carry a revolver. He caught sight of Rosa Muldrough one day skimming along on horseback, for all the world like a swallow, only a hundred times as pretty, and he wanted her right off.

He was a very honorable fellow, Stubbs was, almost as honorable as he was homely. One morning Muldrough was standing on his porch, booted and spurred for a ride over his domain, when he saw Stubbs coming up to the house mounted on a horse as measly looking as the rider was homely. When he reached the porch, without dismounting he said in a cracked voice:

"Mr. Muldrough, I've come to ask you for your daughter—that is, if she'll marry me. I've got fifty acres of land and a dozen sheep, but that isn't all the property I've got. There's $675 in the Dime Savings bank of Independence, Mo., and $972 in"—

He got no further. Muldrough put his hand to his hip, drew his revolver and, pointing it at him, said:

"Git!"

Stubbs looked up, apparently more surprised than hurt, and, digging his heels into his horse, rode away, saying:

"Very well, Mr. Muldrough, I've taken the right course in asking your permission to win your daughter before speaking to her. Now, since your treatment of me I give you notice that I'll win her if I can without your permission."

A burst of laughter, in which was mingled a lot of scorn, was the only reply to this threat. Then Muldrough went into the house and told Rosa all about it. She didn't laugh as he did, for, down in the bottom of her heart, she sympathized with Stubbs on account of the treatment he had received from her father. But Muldrough did not notice this and never dreamed that he had anything to fear from Stubbs through Rosa.

Some time after this, when the girl was out on her horse, she met Stubbs. He rode right on, looking at her wistfully out of his eyes till he saw her draw rein; then he came to a stop.

"Mr. Stubbs," she said, "I wish to say to you that a man who pays a woman the highest compliment he can pay her—provided he wants her for herself—is entitled to a civil reply. My father was not warranted in his treatment of you the other day, especially since your cause was perfectly honorable. Nor was he authorized to speak for me. Though I highly appreciate the compliment you have paid me, I decline your proposition because I do not love you."

"I thank you for saying it to me instead of never giving me an answer at all. I'm sorry you don't love me. I love you and shall always love you. I'll never love any one else."

"Why do you especially want me, Mr. Stubbs?"

"Because I do."

"There are plenty of girls in the world far more attractive than I."

"Not to me."

"I wish you didn't feel as you do. It troubles me to give any one pain, and to be the cause of your spending your life alone distresses me very much."

"And I don't like the idea of distressing you. I'm not going to distress you any more than I can help. If you think my being about here will have that effect on you I'll go elsewhere."

"Oh, I wouldn't drive you away from here. That would be selfishness. I can't love you, but I can sympathise with you."

After a few more words they both rode on. When Rosa had gone some distance she drew rein, turned her horse's head and looked back. Stubbs was sitting on his horse, facing her, not far from where she had met him. She waved a hand to him, then turned again and rode on.

One day Muldrough went home after being out all day to find his daughter gone. She had left a note for him, bedewed with tears, saying that she had gone off to be married. She knew her father would not consent to the match, so she was obliged to go away and be married somewhere else. She did not give her lover's name.

Muldrough stormed until he learned that the man his daughter had married was the one he had laughed at when he had made an application for her hand. Then he was crushed.

Jabez Stubbs if he had been permitted to finish the list of his bank accounts might possibly have been accepted, for he could have bought out Muldrough two or three times over. He is now the richest man in his state.

But Rosa knew nothing of this when she married him. She certainly did not marry him for money or for looks. What she did marry him for has been a question among her friends ever since.

Father and His Daughters.

The habits of a lifetime which began a generation or more ago, the habit of being a source of maintenance and the need of keeping in hand the means of maintenance, the habit of power and of keeping hold of the source of power, may make a man less than fair perhaps in dividing his acquisitions with his wife, but when it comes to the daughters whom he is going to leave in the world when he quits it he is all for securing to them as far as he can a full share of all that is worth having. Hardly can sex selfishness squeeze in between him and his girls. As between them and all males, he is for them. He wants them to lose no good thing that may lawfully be coming to them. He wants no man to bully them, no man to impose upon their generosity, no man to bring them to want, to sorrow or a hungry heart.—Edward S. Martin in Atlantic.

CANING THE CULPRIT.

The Marks It Leaves Look Worse Than the Whaling Feels.

In a London police court recently a teacher in a public school was prosecuted for assaulting a pupil by caning him. The magistrate decided that he had not used undue violence and therefore discharged the master.

In this case the father of the boy who had been caned took him to a physician on the evening of the day of his castigation and this doctor found about fifteen wheals on the lad's back. This was evidence of severe punishment, but the magistrate considered it was not too severe for the offense which had caused it, and said that parents had formed an exaggerated opinion of the amount of force that had been used.

Commenting on this the London Lancet says:

"A blow from a cane causes at the time an appreciable amount of pain (which, by the way, is what it is intended to do), but it leaves behind a mark quite out of proportion in its formidable character to the amount of suffering which it causes after the first sting has been endured. If any one doubts this, having perhaps avoided the opportunity to observe it in the course of an exemplary boyhood, the experiment is easily made. Any small boy will be willing to do his share by inflicting upon the seeker after truth a sharp cut or two, the results of which will no doubt be distinctly felt for a time, but only for about an hour, while there will be visible on the well protected and tender skin of the back for some days wheals which would harrow the heart of any mother."

In other words, a boy's back after a caning looks far worse than it feels.

HARDY TUSCAN WOMEN.

One Vigorous Old Dame Who Acted as a Mountain Guide.

Illustrative of the hardiness of women in Tuscany, Sir Francis Vane relates in "Walks and People In Tuscany" the experience of two Englishmen who were travelling in Italy and who appealed to a village innkeeper for a trustworthy guide to conduct them over the pass between the mountains of Rondinajo and Tre Potenze. To their surprise an old woman appeared and announced that she had come to make arrangements for the journey. They concluded she must be the mother of their guide.

"What was our amazement to learn that this elderly dame was our destined leader, and indeed she was got up for the fray in long boots and short skirts.

"On we tramped, she always ahead, walking with a fine military swing which a lifeguardsman might have envied. The path was difficult and could not be used by vehicles. Our guide led us up the steep way which follows a small and rushing stream issuing from out the side of Rondinajo, and up it we ascended for an hour or more until the pass was reached.

"We here had the merciful intention of sending the old woman back, an intention, however, she very strongly opposed. It was only by allowing her to come some few miles farther on that we could induce her to leave us before she had seen us safely to the end of the journey."

Points for Mothers

Care of the Nose and Throat.

"Improper conditions of the nose and throat are not only dangerous to health, but stunt the physical and mental development of the child," says a well known physician. "Colds in the head, catarrh, adenoids and enlarged tonsils are the most frequent of these improper conditions found in little children.

"Adenoids are small masses of soft tissue normally found in every child's nasal passages between the back of the nose and the throat, which through catarrh or other causes may become enlarged and block up the air passages, interfering with breathing through the nose and forcing the child to breathe through the mouth, preventing proper inflation of the lungs and stunting the development of the chest. They keep up a constant catarrhal condition near the ventilating tube leading from the throat to the ear and in this way impair the hearing of the child.

"Another common throat disease is enlarged tonsils. The tonsils are small, almond shaped bodies situated on each side of the throat. They have a certain purpose, and I do not believe in the indiscriminate removal of all enlarged tonsils. In fact, I condemn what I unhesitatingly call the 'massacre of the tonsils' so often chosen as the treatment of enlarged tonsils. The cause is in many cases not in the tonsils, but in the general condition of the patient. Proper medicine and hygienic treatment will cure many cases without an operation. Only when the tonsils are enlarged, hard and fibrous, seriously interfering with speech and swallowing, should they be removed.

"Prevention is better than a cure. If a child catches a cold, do not let the cold 'wear itself away.' Treat it at once or it may lay the foundation for adenoids and enlarged tonsils."

Cover For Baby's Feet.

Children who are too small to walk out of doors nearly always suffer from cold feet, but this will never happen if mothers will wrap the plump little limbs of their youngest in a bag cover, which may be made as follows:

The size of the cover must vary according to the shape of mail or push cart which baby uses. Take careful measurements and then cut an oblong piece of cloth, making it twice the length you require the bag.

For lining you will need a piece of satin or sateen cut two inches smaller each way than the cloth and wadded with a thickness of cotton wool. This must be stitched firmly to the cloth. Then double the whole thing and sew up the sides so as to form a bag.

Cut a piece of cloth two and a half inches larger all the way round than one side of the bag, scallop it with silk to match the cloth and lay it on the front of the bag, stitching it firmly. If you like you can also work baby's initials in the corner, surrounded by some simple floral decoration.

Last of all add a small brass ring to each upper corner, sewing it on very firmly. When baby's legs are snug between the layers of cotton wool and the rings are slipped over two hooks screwed at the back of the cart you will have good cause to feel satisfied with your handiwork.

A Nerve Soother.

Fractiousness and restlessness on the baby's part are frequent results of cutting back teeth, and often the child is given to starting and screaming during the night. Try the following plan before putting the little one to bed: Get a bath ready with the water deep enough to reach to the child's waist when sitting down. Fasten a shawl or small blanket around the neck to keep the top of the body warm. Neither shawl nor hands should be wet. Keep the baby in the water five minutes. A board may be fixed across the bath at one end to hold a few toys to amuse the child. The temperature of the water should be 104 degrees. The lower part of the little body will be quite red when taken out. Give it a good brisk rubbing and pop the child into a warm bed. It should sleep quietly and soundly till morning.

Rainproof Hood.

My children never carry umbrellas, writes a friend. Instead each one is provided with a rainproof hood, which when not needed is buttoned into an inside pocket of the overcoat.

If rain comes on the hood is buttoned on to the buttons sewed under the collar of the coat. When the collar is turned up and the hood drawn over the head the little one is as cosy as possible and takes no harm from the rain.

The hood can be quickly dried afterward. I find it a far better plan than providing umbrellas, which are always getting damaged.

An Appeal to Pride.

Though smoking cigarettes is really harmful for boys, they smoke not because they are basically bad, but in imitation of their elders. It is the parents' duty to prove to the boy that smoking may prevent his becoming an athlete and that it will affect his chest expansion and muscular development. See to it that he distinguishes the real from the cheap sport and desires to imitate the right kind of elder fellow.

ANTI-HELL-FIRE MAN OPENS I.B.S.A. LECTURE SERIES

Pastor T. P. Yates of Hamilton Delivers Striking Sermon

The I. B. S. A. series of public Bible lectures opened here yesterday with a sermon on "Beyond the Grave." The audience gave marked attention throughout the entire discourse, which lasted an hour, though it is said that to some the time seemed much shorter. The speaker handled his subject in a very attractive manner, and presented some thoughts that seemed quite new to many present.

He remarked that while no one could speak from personal experience on what lies beyond the grave, we nevertheless have a vivid description of what we are to expect in the Great Beyond presented to us in the inspired writings of the Old and New Testaments. He appealed to these alone for proof, preferring not to build upon any of the creeds or other "traditions of men." These, he said, may well represent a measure of light previously attained, but at best they must be inferior to God's own Word.

The Dead are Unconscious.

Many scriptures were quoted proving that the dead are dead and not alive in some far-off place, as was once supposed. Those who are sleeping the sleep of death are absolutely unconscious, and will not be awakened till the Resurrection. "The dead know not ANYTHING." (Ecclesiastics, 9-5). "For in death there is no remembrance of Thee; in the grave who shall give Thee thanks?" (Psalms 6-5).. It is a mistake to suppose that our dead friends are wandering around as spooks, haunting houses and cemeteries, longing for the Resurrection when they shall again receive bodies. Nor can we believe that they are alive and in Heaven, for Jesus Himself says: "No man hath ascended up to Heaven, but He that came down from Heaven, even the Son of Man." (John, 3-13). The speaker then cited many passages of Scripture to the effect that the dead are in Hades, the grave, asleep and unconscious; that the fleshly body returns to dust, while the soul or sentient being ceases to operate, remaining in a dormant or comatose condition till the Resurrection.

What About Hell?

A ripple of laughter spread over the audience when the speaker, in a manner peculiar to himsel, pictured the old-time Hell of the Dark Ages. The fire-proof devils with horns, pitchforks, cloven hoofs, forked tongues and tails, shovelling coal and roasting poor mortals on their spits, are creations of error, not to be found in the Bible at all. It is on account of these wrong conceptions that many have supposed that the Devil lives in Hell, and that good people never go there, wheras the Scriptures point out that Jesus went to Hell, but say nothing of the Devil ever being there.

The Hell of the Bible was shown to be a condition of unconsciousness—death, oblivion. The word Hell is translated from the Hebrew word Sheol, and the corresponding Greek word Hades. The Greek word Gehenna, improperly translated Hell, is symbolical of the final destruction of the incorrigibly wicked. The word sheol, occurring 65 times in the Old Testament, is 31 times translated Hell, 31 times grave and 3 times pit. With this proof that Hell and the Grave are one and the same thing, the speaker called attention to Acts 2-27, and its context, as a proof that Jesus went to Hell, or the grave. In the Resurrection Death and Hell (margin, "the grave"), will deliver up the dead which are in them—Revelations, 20-13.

The wages of sin was alluded to as death, and not eternal life in torture, as some have supposed (Romans, 6-23). The original sentence was: "In the day that thou eatest thereof, thou shalt surely die." (Genesis, 2-17). Adam died within that very thousand-year day. Nothing was said about his being roasted forever in fire if disobedient, or of his ever getting to Heaven if he was good. Death simply means destruction, of cessation of life. The eternal punishment referred to in the Bible is eternal death, fire and brimstone being the symbol used to portray the utter destruction which will be meted out to the wilfully wicked. "They shall be as though they had not been." (Obadiah,16).

What Lies Beyond?

The speaker contended that man could never hope for life beyond the grave, had not God in love planned his redemption. In God's due time the curse of death will be removed, and mankind will be brought again from the tomb. All will be granted an opportunity of attaining eternal life. To the Church, now in the process of selection, will be given the position of everlasting life in Heaven with the Lord. The Lord has gone to prepare a place for the members of His Church, that where He is there they may be also. We are not to think that all others will be eternally lost, for the Scriptures in no uncertain terms assure us that this earth also will be populated throughout all eternity. "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." "The earth abideth forever." (Ecclesiastics, 1-4.).

The speaker left many of the important details of God's Plan of Salvation for consideration by future speakers. He assured the audience that these points will be carefully treated in the coming lectures, and urged upon all the importance of hearing next week's sermon on "Christ's Second Coming: Why? How? When?" A cordial invitation was extended to all to attend the entire series. It is believed that these public lectures will arouse much interest in personal Bible study.

Registration shows that 50 per cent. of the students at the University of Wisconsin are church members.

THE RESURRECTION TOLD IN SERMON AND SONG

Bright and Joyous Services Mark Easter Sunday in City Churches

Easter Day services in the city churches were largely attended and greatly enjoyed. The majority of the ministers remained in their own pulpits, the only visiting clergyman being Rev. Dr. Boyle, at St. John's, and Rev. Mr. Jolliffe, at Charlotte Street.

The general theme of sermon and song was the Resurrection. The singing of the day reflects considerable credit upon the choirleaders and their choirs.

Rev. R. Pogue concluded his special series of sermons on Labor and Capital, and at Murray Street and Park Street Baptist Churches quite a large number of new members were immersed.

Mr. Robert McMurdo commenced special meetings at Gospel Hall.

Charlotte Street Church.

The services in Charlotte Street Methodist Church yesterday were conducted by Rev. T. W. Jolliffe. At the evening service he preached from the text, Job 14-14—"If a man die shall he live again?" He quoted the New Testament where Christ says, "Because I live ye shall live also." He referred to the words of an old soldier who said, "I am not afraid to die, but I am agraid to be dead. On the question o f a future life he considered the answers of Atheism, Oriental materialism, Agnosticism and Christianity. The first had no answer, the second claimed the spirit was absorbed in the infinite, the third said none can tell—who knows enough the speaker asked, to say none can tell? For the fourth the Bible answers because I live ye shall live also.

Socrates and Plato, two of the wisest men that ever lived, without the aid of the Bible or of revelation, reasoned that there must be a future life. Cicero believed in it even though it should be an error. Science claimed that the mere longing for a future existence proved that such was a reality and came from remote causes.

The speaker considered what society would be like if men did not believe in a future life. A great restraining power would be gone when men did whatever seemed good to them. What we do in this life is to effect what we are in the life to come. Spritualism was a hoax—there was no communication with the dead as they represent it. To be good is the highest condition of life. While life is a struggle, storms are not forever, and reward is in the future.

A beautiful solo was well rendered by Miss Richardson, as well as a fine anthem by the choir.

The announcements are as usual.

All Saints' Church.

The services in All Saints' Church were truly of an Easter character, a large number of the congregation partaking of Holy Communion, of which there were three celebrations. The rector, Rev. R. B. Grobb, preached at both services. In the afternoon His Honor Judge Huycke addressed the Sunday School scholars, and his remarks received a most attentive hearing.

The choir of thirty-five voices did excellent work. In the morning Jackson's Te Deum and an anthem, "We will rejoice," were sung. Miss M. Williams rendered a solo in a very pleasing manner. An ambitious programme had been arranged by the choirleader, Mr. George Chandler, and the unaccompanied selection was particularly good, Mr. T. H. Boddy singing the bass solo, "Be thou faithful unto death," in fine voice. Miss M. Flowers presided at the organ most efficiently. The music will be repeated next Sunday.

St. Peter's Cathedral.

His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, D.D., celebrated Pontificial High Mass yesterday morning at St. Peter's Cathedral, with Very Rev. Dean McColl, Assistant Priest, Rev. C. J. Phelan, Deacon, and Rev. Father Cote Sub-Deacon. Rev. Father Phelan also preached the sermon on the Resurrection. In the evening His Lordship sang Pontificial Vespers, assisted by Father Phelan and Father Cote, while Dean McColl preached the sermon.

The singing of the choir in the morning and evening reflects great credit upon Mr. A. New, choir leader and Miss M. Doherty, organist. Both have worked untiringly during the past two months, and the result was singing yesterday which has never been paralleled in the history of the choir. Kalliwoda's Mass was sung, the solos being taken by Miss Gertrude Clancy, Miss M. Clancy, Miss N. Simons, Miss Aileen McCabe, and Messrs. J. Minicola, E. Hanrahan, and A. New. During Vespers Miss Genevieve Sullivan, Mr. J. Minicola and Mr. A. New sang Verdi's trio, "Jesu Del Vivi," while a quartette composed of Messrs. Geo. Daly, J. Minicola, A. New and E. Hanrahan rendered O Salutaris in an excellent manner.

Park Street Baptist Church.

Easter Sunday was a red letter day at Park Street Baptist Church, which was beautifully decorated with flowers and two large Easter mottos. The morning congregation was very large, when the pastor preached on Baptism. He divided his address into three parts, first baptism as enjoined on believers; second, the significance of Christian baptism; third, examples of Christian baptism.

At the close of the sermon, thirteen persons were baptized.

The pastor's bible class of young men was held in the afternoon with an attendance of thirty-eight.

In the evening the church was packed to the gallery and Rev. Mr. Conners spoke on the Resurrection, presenting Christ in his representative capacity, which is twofold. First, God the representative to man; second, Man's representative to God.

The choir rendered excellent music at both services. At the close of the evening service, twenty-one were baptised, making thirty-four for the day. This is the largest number in any one day in the history of the church.

A number were the heads of families, and one lady was 68 years of age. Mr. T. Mark, a student at Woodstock College, assisted the pastor during the day.

St. John's Church.

The services at St. John's were very largely attended. Many communicants were present and an enthusiastic and reverential response was noticeable during the reading of the Ritual. The sermons at 11 o'clock and at 7 p.m., were delivered by Rev. Dr. Boyle of Trinity College, Toronto. The choir was at its best, and Mr. Devey and his singers are again to be warmly congratulated on the success of the Easter music. Miss Quartermaine, in her solo at noon-tide service, was in splendid voice, and was much appreciated.

The altar was chaste and beautiful and the flowers, many of which had been sent in memory of departed friends and members of the congregation, lent their silent and impressive charm to aid in the holy associations, which are always renewed at Easter time.

St. Luke's Church.

Yesterday was one of the most successful days in the history of St. Luke's Church. There were some 280 communicants, and the Easter offering amounted to $250.00.

Sacred Heart Church.

Rev. J. J. O'Brien celebrated High Mass at the Church of the Secred Heart yesterday morning, and also spoke on the joys of Easter. The choir sang Father Turner's Mass in honor of St. Cecilia, the soloists being Miss A. Simons, Mrs. F. Laplante, Mr. P. Henshaw, and Mr. Ed Bartley. Mr. J. Armstrong, choir leader and organist, can justly claim no small share of the credit due the choir for their singing, as he has worked unceasingly the past two months endeavoring to bring it up to its present high standard.

The eight-thirty mass was celebrated by Rev. J. V. McAuley, while the pupils of the Sacred Heart School acquitted themselves very creditably in the choir. The Easter Sunday was a day of general communion for the whole parish, and several hundred received the Blessed Sacrament.

In the evening Rev. Father McAuley delivered an eloquent sermon on the Resurrection of Christ on the first Easter Sunday, and the Resurrection of Man on the day of Judgment. Rev. Father O'Brien sang Vespers.

The main altar was decorated in a very becoming manner with Easter lilies, and was handsomely illuminated. These were arranged by the Sisters of St. Joseph.

MR. McMURDO AT THE GOSPEL HALL

Mr. Robert McMurdo of Chicago conducted a bible reading in Gospel Hall yesterday morning at nine o'clock, dealing with the Lord's Supper, showing its institution on the same night in which He was betrayed, its purpose, viz.: for a remembrance of Himself and the participants only those who have been born again. All such should partake of it and all others excluded.

The Address.

In the afternoon at three o'clock to Christians was a rare treat, the subject being the church, its work and purpose. This meeting was largely attended.

At night the hall was filled to hear Mr. McMurdo again. The address was based on the 14th, 15th, and 16th chapters of Luke, dealing with the first things of earth, in the 14th chapter, the various excuses given why men refuse to obey the Gospel's message. The 15th spoke of Heaven as a place of joy. "There is joy in the presence of the angels over one sinner that repenteth." The 16th spoke of Hell as a place of torment and the inevitable end of all who obey not the Gospel.

Meetings will be conducted every night this week at 8 o'clock, the subject being Problems of Life, from the Book of Job.

SCHOONER RUNS ASHORE

VINEYARD HAVEN, Mass., April 13.—The British schooner Percy B. from Port Clyde, N.S., for New London, Conn., with wood pulp, ran ashore on East Chop early yesterday and was still fast yesterday. There was little wind and sea during the night, and it was expected that the schooner would be floated without serious damage.

Postman Brother Visits Pope.

ROME, April 13.—For two weeks Pope Pius will enjoy the companionship of his brother, Angelo Sarto, who has abandoned his duties as a postman for that length of time that he may be near the pontiff.

After the first visit to the Vatican Signor Sarto said his brother appeared greatly pleased on seeing him, and with all cheerfulness and resignation remarked that he supposed this would be the last Easter they will spend together.

Montreal Greeks Celebrated.

MONTREAL, April 13.—In the little Greek Church on St. Lawrence boulevard, Greek citizens of Montreal yesterday celebrated the 92nd anniversary of the independence of their country, which followed the war of 1821.

Woman's World

Miss Jane A. Delano, Distinguished Trained Nurse.

MISS DELANO AND HER MEDAL.

The Red Cross society, whose work for humanity has been so great, has enlarged its sphere of usefulness. It has established a town and country nursing service through whose instrumentality the dwellers in even isolated communities may be assured of proper care in times of illness. The object of this is to encourage the employment of visiting nurses in remote districts where it is difficult to obtain the services of a physician.

It was through Miss Jane A. Delano, chairman of the national committee on nursing service, that this new department of the work was established. Because of the splendid efficiency to which she has brought the nursing work of the Red Cross the gold medal of merit has been awarded to Miss Delano by the president. In presenting her with the medal President Wilson said:

"It is due to Miss Delano's devoted and efficient labors that a splendid corps of over 4,000 of the best trained nurses in the country have been enrolled in the Red Cross for active service in time of war or disaster. Not only has this large corps been enrolled, but by means of 110 local committees a system has been established that enables the Red Cross to mobilize within a few hours' time anywhere in the country the number of nurses required for active service."

Miss Delano is one of the most distinguished members of the nursing profession in America. She had established a high reputation before she joined the Red Cross. She is a graduate of the Bellevue Training School For Nurses. Her first case is said to have been that of the late Abram S. Hewitt, then mayor of New York. She distinguished herself by her work in the yellow fever epidemic in Florida. She has held important positions in the west, in Philadelphia and in Buffalo. She was superintendent of the New York municipal training school for women nurses and later of Bellevue hospital, where she instituted many needed reforms.

CONVENIENT BAGS.

New Models Are Compact and Fitted With Useful Accessories.

Manufacturers of fine leather goods are offering exquisite novelties in traveling bags and cases, which are much smaller in size than the heavy, old fashioned types of bags. The responsibility for the change lies with the modern taste for motoring. The woman of 1914 covers such distances and her belongings must be so moderate in size and so easily packed that designers have been at work turning out the most elegant as well as the most convenient form of toilet apparatus.

The party bag is a mere trifle to handle and looks almost like a handkerchief in black moire drawn in with a ribbon. It may be concealed in a coat pocket, or there would be space for it in a little hand bag. Within its folds are all the items that go to give a woman the finishing touches for the toilet. Just a little frame keeps all the gold, silver gilt or enameled trifles together, and the contents are all that is required.

The prevailing taste leans to easily folded or drawn bags, and some novelties consist of round models of the finest leather, so soft as to crush into very small space. Inside is a frame, and into this are fitted the little implements of the toilet. A tiny hairbrush is set into gold, gilt, enamel or inlaid ivory or tortoise shell. The comb is decorative, and there are small pots for cream, powder, lip salve, tiny bottles for perfume, a miniature toothbrush, diminutive manicure implements and a long thin roll of metal matching the setting of the case that turns out to be a receptacle for needles, cotton and other trifles to mend a rent.

Color enters into many of these fanciful cases, a green leather bag or case containing red or rose colored fittings, while a yellow bag will have every item in blue enamel or in silver gilt. Many and varied are these dainty trifles and devices featuring a season of unusual luxury and elegance.

ANOTHER CLUE TO TRAGEDY

FLOATING WRECKAGE TELLS OF DISASTER TO SOUTHERN CROSS

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., April 13.—Floating wreckage, believed to have come from the missing sealer Southern Cross, was reported by the sealing steamer Bloodhound, which arrived yesterday. The Bloodbound passed a large quantity of wreckage Saturday afternoon about 100 miles southeast of this port. It had apparently been washed from a sealer's deck, but as the crew of the Bloodhound had not heard of the loss of the Southern Cross no effort was made to identify it.

The steamer Kyle, which has been searching in the vicinity of Cape Race, was notified by wireless yesterday of the position of the wreckage, and started immediately for the scene.

Scare Brings Her Voice Back.

ROCKPORT, Mass., April 13.—Miss Sophronia Lowe hadn't been able to utter a sound since last Thanksgiving, a few days after her 65th birthday. This was because of a throat affection caused by a heavy cold.

But Miss Lowe can talk now—high or low, shrill or soft. She rented and occupied half of a large house. Not long ago a tenant was found for the other half. Miss Lowe didn't know it. Saturday she started to go to the attic of the house and met the other tenant.

He was a man. And Miss Lowe was so shocked, besides being pent up since Thanksgiving, that she screamed. And right from that instant she has been able to talk volubly. And has.

Okuma Is Popular.

TOKIO, April 13.—The selection of Count Shigenobu Okuma, Japan's foremost progressivist, who is engaged in forming a Cabinet to replace that of which Count Yamamoto was head, has created a profound impression. All classes consider that it denotes the dawn of a new epoch in Japanese history in the direction of a more representative government. Business men especially are pleased with the choice of Count Okuma by the elder statesmen, and the stock market is buoyant.

RECORD OF PURE BRED DAIRY CATTLE

According to Report No. 5 of the Canadian Record of Performance for pure bred dairy cattle, conducted by the Live Stock Branch of the Department of Agriculture of Canada, 746 cows and 25 bulls had up to the end of March, 1913, qualified for registration of performance. The cows were divided among the several breeds as follows: Ayrshire, 325, Holstein-Freisian, 357, Guernsey, 13, French Canadian, 21, and Jersey, 20. The bulls which qualified on having four daughters in the Record of Preformance, each from a different dam, consisted of 15 Ayrshire, and 10 Holsteins. A fact worthy of special attention is that several of the highest producers were milked three times daily for varying lengths of time. Noted among these is Belle of Wellington, a mature Ayrshire cow, which gave 12,632.82 lbs. of milk and 511.05 lbs. fat and Rosa Omega, a mature Holstein-Freisian, with a record of 18,603.7 lbs. of milk and574.07 lbs. fat. Many other excellent records not confined to any one breed, were made during the year.

This report contains the regulations governing the work, the standards for registration for the different breeds and the records of cows that have obtained certificates of the Record of Performance. A copy of this report can be obtained by making application to the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Dr. McGill Discusses Chemistry Bureau at Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, O., April 13.—That the system of the United States Bureau of Chemistry will be adopted by Canada was the statement made yesterday by Dr. A. McGill, chief chemist of the Canadian Inland Revenue Department, with headquarters at Ottawa. Dr. McGill, who was one of the delegates to the convention of the National Chemical Society, is in this city on an inspection tour. He called upon Chief Chemist Leo Forst of the local Bureau of Chemistry in the Federal building Saturday and inspected the laboratory.

Dr. McGill, in announcing that he expected to follow the system in this country in the matter of branch laboratories, said that he is preparing to establish branch laboratories in Canada to facilitate the handling of imports. He stated that he intended establishing laboratories at Halifax, Vancouver, Winnipeg, and possibly Montreal.

Will Teach Bulgarian Nurses.

WASHINGTON, April 13. — Miss Mabel T. Boardman, head of the American Red Cross, announced yesterday the selection of Miss Helen Scott Hay, an enrolled American Red Cross nurse, now in charge of the Western Suburban Hospital at Chicago, as superintendent of the proposed school for trained nurses at Sofia, Bulgaria.

The appointment is the result of an appeal made to the American Red Cross by Queen Eleanora of Bulgaria, who is to visit this country next month. Queen Eleanora asked help in instructing Bulgarian women in nurse work. She herself was a Red Cross nurse during the Russo-Japanese and Balkan wars.

NEW YORK, April 13.—Sleeping passengers on the steamship Vauban approaching New York early Saturday off Sandy Hook were aroused by an explosion in the baggage compartment of the steerage. Fire followed the explosion, but was quickly extinguished. Investigation showed that a Syrian, rifling the baggage of a fellow immigrant, had opened a box of cartridges and in so doing set them off. WIDELY KNOWN LUMBERMAN AND FORMER LIBERAL M.P. DEAD

Torontonian Came Originally From Dundas County and Entered the Lumber Trade—Went Into Politics in 1872 and Sat For Simcoe Ridings Until 1890—Joined Laurier in 1896, But Left Him Later

TORONTO, April 13.—In the death of Henry Herman Cook, which occurred yesterday at his late residence, 20 Dowling avenue, Canada loses one of its most conspicuous political figures.

Born in Williamsburg, Dundas County, Ont., on April 27, 1837, Mr. Cook entered the lumber business in 1858 and was at the time of his death president of the Ontario Lumber Co. He was one of the syndicate which offered to build the Canadian Pacific Railway in 1880. His family has been prominently identified with the lumber trade for many years.

Mr. Cook first entered Parliament in 1872 for North Simcoe, which constituency he represented as a Liberal in the Dominion House until 1878, when he entered the Ontario Legislature. He resigned his seat in the Legislature in 1882 when he returned to the Dominion House as member for East Simcoe, which seat he held until 1890. During this period he contested no less than eleven elections, winning six and being defeated five times.

... afterwards entered the House of Commons as a follower of Sir Wilfrid Laurier in 1896, and a few years later he came prominently before the public when he made a break-away from his party owing to the refusal of Sir Wilfrid to appoint him to the Senate, an honor he frankly believed to be due him. His criticisms of the Laurier administration created no small sensation at the time.

Mr. Cook's death came quite unexpectedly to his relatives and friends. He maintained his usual good health until Monday last, when be took to his bed with some slight ailment. On Friday he was quite well again, although still confined to his room. At three o'clock Saturday morning he was seized with apoplexy and never regained consciousness, expiring at 7.15 last night.

He is survived by two daughters and four grandchildren, the daughters being Mrs. Frank E. Macdonald and Mrs. Norreys Worthington, wife of the late Col. Norreys Worthington.

The funeral will be held privately on Wednesday.

PRESENTATION TO MR. AND MRS. JOHN TODD

Lakefield News.

The Sunday school room of the Presbyterian Church was the scene of a very interesting event on Wednesday evening last, when the members of the congregation assembled to bid farewell to Mr. and Mrs. John Todd, who were about to remove to their new home in Peterboro. For upwards of fifty years, Mr. and Mrs. Todd have been actively identified with the work of the church, and the congregation could not let them depart without showing in some tangible way, their appreciation of work well done in the service of the Lord. When the pastor, Rev. T. B. McCorkindale, took the chair, the room was well filled, and a very interesting programme of vocal and instrumental music was rendered. A number of the older members of the congregation gave short speeches, testifying to the worth of the departing members. At the conclusion of the programme, the chairman, on behalf of the members of the choir, presented Miss Emma Vincent with a very pretty cameo ring, as a token of their esteem. Miss Vincent, who was a valued member of the choir, also leaves for a new home in Peterboro. Mr. and Mrs. Todd were then called to the platform, where Mr. A. E. Kennedy read the following address, the presentation being made by Mr. R. Graham:

To Mr. and Mrs. John Todd:

Dear Friends:—It is with very sincere regret that we, your co-workers in the Presbyterian Church of Lakefield, have heard of your early departure from our midst. We realize to-night that there are ties and bonds in life, created by common interests, aims and hopes, and cemented by the true spirit of brotherhood and helpfulness, which it is hard to break. And when we remember that for upwards of half a century, you and your family have been faithful, earnest and active co-workers in all departments of church work, we feel that we utter no empty platitude when we say that we will miss you and you will leave a vacant place which will be hard to fill.

Your motives and actions were always felt to have been prompted by a rare disregard of selfish gain, and a strict and staunch adherence to the path of honor and truth, and we gratefully acknowledge that such sterling qualities of character could not but produce a helpful and uplifting influence in the church and in the community.

We trust that in the not distant future conditions may so change as to justify your return to Lakefield. Meantime we ask you to accept these chairs, this Bible, and purse of gold, as a slight token of our esteem and regard for you, and we humbly pray that God may abundantly bless and prosper you and yours in your new home in Peterboro.

Signed in behalf of the Congregation:

T. B. McCorkindale, M.A., Minister.
A. Fairbairn, Session Clerk.
A. E. Kennedy, Chairman, B.M.
Emma Burgess, Sec. W. F. M. S.
Charlotte Redpath, Pres. H. M.S.
Fannie Ray, Sec., H.M.S.
Hannah Hendren, President of the W.M.S.

In a few words, Mr. and Mrs. Todd thanked the donors for the handsome gifts, and expressed their regrets at was then made upstairs, where the leaving the village. An adjournment ladies had prepared a splendid repast and which was thoroughly enjoyed by all. Mr. and Mrs. Tood go to their new home followed by the best wishes of the entire community.

OTTAWA BRAWL; ITALIAN KILLED

OTTAWA, April 13.—John Sisinni, an Italian, 25 years of age, died last night from wounds received shortly after two o'clock yesterday afternoon in a foreign boarding-house at 24 West George street. His alleged assailant, Antonio Pedro, commonly known in the Italian colony as Tony, escaped, and has not been seen since. His description has been sent to surrounding towns and cities.

All the murdered man would say before he died was that he knew the man who had shot him. The only distinctive feature which the police are counting on to aid in Pedro's capture is that his face is badly scratched. He is about 35 or 40 years of age, 5 feet 8 inches in height, and weighs 175 pounds.

One Killed In Train Wreck.

NEW BRITAIN, Conn., April 13.—One man was killed and six persons were injured when a suburban train on the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, eastbound, was was wrecked at Clayton, two miles from this city Saturday. Five of the injured were passengers, and none suffered seriously. Engineer Frederick Benson of East Hartford, and fireman Henry V. Carroll of North Redding, Conn., were taken from the wreck unconscious and removed to a hospital, where Carroll died soon after. The cause of the accident has not been determined.

Three Men Drowned.

EMO, Ont., April 13. — A tripple drowning occurred Friday afternoon at Barwick, the first station west of Emo, on the Canadian Northern Railway, caused by four men trying to cross the Rainy River in a small canoe in a heavy wind storm, three of the men being drowned and the fourth escaping death by a small margin. The drowned were Carl Haglund, Eric Ericson and Albert Weeks. The bodies have not yet been recovered. George Smart, the survivor, was rescued by people on shore, who heard cries for assistance.

PREPARES FOR STRIKE.

Army and Fleet Will Be Used to Offset Railway Crisis.

ROME, April 13.—In addition to the army the whole fleet will be employed to facilitate communications and maintain order in case a general strike is inaugurated by the railway employes on Wednesday next. In this way the Government hopes either to check the strike or minimize its effects. In its attitude the Government appears to be supported by public opinion, which is not favorable to that section of the railway men which is advocating the employment of strong coercive measures.

The various organizations of civil service employes have already planned at what points to erect barricades and are in readiness to take possession of various offices. They believe that they have some of the army on their side. Meanwhile all the army officers are under orders to join their regiments. Detachments have been concentrated at those places considered the most dangerous, especially in Milan and in Rome.

Cured For Spinal Paralysis.

PARIS, April 13.—Prof. Arnold Netter made an important statement at the Academy of Medicine regarding a new cure for spinal paralysis.

The cure, which Prof. Netter had sought since 1910, consists of an injection of serum collected from the spinal marrow of a sufferere from a similar disease. Apparently the microbes coming from the first sufferer kill those inhabiting the second.

Prof. Netter illustrated his theory by the case of a man aged 34, who had been reduced in six months to utter helplessness by paralysis. He was cured entirely in a few weeks by the new treatment.

Disastrous Fire at Uhthoff.

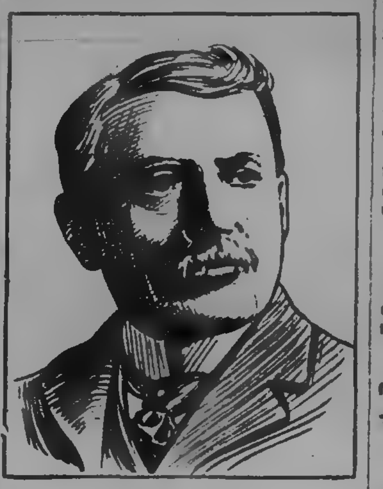
UHTHOFF, April 13.—Driven by a strong wind a fire which started in the home of J. Antonio yesterday afternoon, spread rapidly to an adjoining church, burning it to the ground and then ignited a big pile of cordwood in the G.T.R. yards. Eight hundred cords awaiting shipment were destroyed.

A FAMILY OF PIONEERS

SIR HENRY EGAN'S FORBEARS PROMINENT IN OTTAWA

Recently Knighted Lumberman, Financier and Electrical Magnate Is Interested In the Georgian Bay Canal as Was His Father Before Him—Later Advocated Waterway Sixty Years Ago.

Sir Henry K. Egan, of Ottawa, who has been spoken of as chairman for the Georgian Bay Canal Commission, is one of the most prominent and best known business men of the capital. He comes of a prominent old pioneer family and is a son of the late John Egan, who represented Ottawa and Pontiac counties successively in the old Canadian Assembly from 1848 to 1857, and who was in his time one of the leading lumber men of the Ottawa valley.



SIR HENRY K. EGAN.

Mr. Egan was born at Aylmer in January, 1848, and was educated at the Montreal High School. He has been actively identified with big business interests in this section for years and is at present managing director of the Hawkesbury Lumber Co. He is also a director of the Bank of Ottawa and of the British American Bank Note Co. and of the Ottawa & Montreal Transmission Co. He has a deep interest in charitable and social work in the capital and is a life member of the board of the Carleton General Hospital and a governor of St. Luke's Hospital, also a life director of the Old Men's Home and a director of the Country Club, a member of the executive committee of the Royal Ottawa Golf Club, the Ottawa Hunt Club and of the Rideau Club.

His father 60 years ago, while a member for Pontiac, was an ardent advocate of the building of the Georgian Bay Canal. Like his late father, Sir Henry, is noted for his kindliness of heart and generosity. His recent selection for knightly honors by King George was learned with much satisfaction by the people of every nationality and creed in the Ottawa district as well as throughout Canada.

Curious Dress Conventions.

Nearly every trade and profession in England has its own unwritten laws concerning the dress of its members. Most people know that the bank clerk is always expected to "dress like a gentleman," but few know that certain banks have definite rules on the subject, laying down just what must be worn and what must not be worn.

At Coutts' Bank, for instance, the clerks must all wear frock-coats, and no one in the employment of the bank is allowed to go about with his trousers turned up. This seems rough luck in wet weather.

At Hoare's Bank it is the custom for all those employed to wear white ties—a decidedly archaic notion in these days of gay-colored neckwear. This idea has been followed for nearly 250 years.

Other trades have rules of this kind as well; drapery firms, for example, expect shopwalkers and heads depariments to wear frock-coats. Members of the legal profession observe the etiquette of their calling by abstaining from wearing light or fancy-colored clothes, and always wear silk hats.

The white-fleshed fish such as halibut, cod, flounder and white fish, are more easily digested than other varieties.

FINE CLASS OF SETTLERS ALONG G.T.P. MAIN LINE

The extension of railway lines in Canada is being watched with the keenest interest by the farmers of the United States. Every opportunity for a favorable purchase of farm land is being taken advantage of by these experienced men. Just as quickly as steel has been laid on the last section of the Grand Trunk Pacific settlers from across the border have been on the scene in search of holdings. The class of settlers attracted is of the very highest. Often special railway cars are needed to carry the effects of a single settler. The forerunners of what is likely to be a large party of United States farmers came into Prince George last week in the person of Dr. Lloyd Chaplain, veterinary surgeon, of Kansas City. Dr. Chaplain brought with him two Shetland ponies, two driving horses, a number of registered calves, general household effects and light farming implements. He will practice his profession and will also take up land and do farming. He has been in veterinary practice in Kansas City for many years, and was also connected with the milk inspection service in that city.

SUBSIDY REFUSED

Canada Will Not Bonus British Shipbuilders

QUEBEC, April [illegible].—While the Borden Government is ready and desirous to give every reasonable encouragement to the promotion of the shipbuilding industry in Canada, and will insist that all vessels for the Canadian service must be built within the confines of the Dominion in future, it has no intention of establishing a precedent by subsidizing wealthy and powerful British concerns to enter the Canadian field and compete with this added advantage against the companies already established. This was the substance of Hon. L. P. Pelletier's reply on Saturday to a delegation of Quebec and Levis citizens who interview him with regard to the establishment of a branch of the Armstrong firm at Lauzon, where the new drydock is to be built.

Mr. Gravel, president of the Levis Board of Trade and member of the Quebec Harbor Commission, put the case for a subsidy before the Minister, telling of the negotiations which are being carried on with the Armstrongs and urging that a steel shipbuilding plant would be almost a necessity to the drydock, as the repair of damaged vessels would call for the permanent employment of a staff of experienced shipwrights and a well-equipped plant.

Try adding a little chopped parsley to the mashed potatoes; it gives them a delicious flavor.

ANOTHER BATTLE RAGING

Federals and Rebels are in Conflict South of Torreon

EL PASO, Texas, April 13.—Ciudad Parras, the Manchester of northern Mexico, is the battleground of the Federal and rebel forces. Communication has been cut from all directions and only the most meagre details of the battle there have drifted through the censor at Torreon, who is holding every detail of Villa's troop movement away from the world. The situation is considered a serious one for the revolutionists. This is indicated by the departure of Villa from Torreon in a high-power limousine automobile at a time when he was most needed there to straighten out the tangle which resulted from the collapse of the Federal civil government and the substitution of military rule under rebel control. Parras is 58 kilometres southeast of Torreon, and all of the available men and elements are being rushed in that direction to crush the escaped enemy by weight of superior arms. The censorship is so strict that nothing of a military nature has been permitted to pass by telegraph, and only the most general descriptions of the battle at the Coahuila factory town can be obtained.

The one great fear of the rebels is that the Federal columns which left San Pedro after the rebels occupied it have swung about and are marching to the relief of Parras from the northeast with sufficient men and means to overwhelm Benavides' brigade before Villa's main column under Gen. Angeles can advance to support the mounted brigade.

VERDICT OF THE PRINCE.

Napoleon's Great Pride In the Infant King of Rome.

A certain Frenchman of spirit once found himself in great distress. It was necessary to find a means of livelihood or die in misery. There was a vacant place that was worth 10,000 francs a year. He wanted it, but how could he get it? It was under the first empire. The king of Rome was a child in the cradle. The aspirant thought of an ingenious plan to bring about the success of his hopes.

He wrote a petition, addressed it to the young king and, through the friendship of a general officer attached to the emperor, got it presented to Napoleon.

The emperor took the petition and, seeing the superscription, began to smile. "Very well," said he, "let the petition be carried to him to whom it is addressed."

Four chamberlains conducted our hero before the cradle of the infant king. After a profound bow he began in a high voice to read his petition. From time to time he bowed before the cradle. As is the manner of infants, the child uttered several unintelligible sounds.

After having taken his leave respectfully the petitioner returned to Napoleon, who said, "Ah, well, what response?"

"Sire, his majesty said nothing."

"Who says nothing gives consent," said the emperor. "The petition is granted."—Youth's Companion.

When the Minuet Was the Vogue.

In the days when it was the vogue the stately minuet carried with it its responsibilities. Thus, for instance, Austen Leigh on the eighteenth century minuet: "It was not every one who felt qualified to make this public exhibition, and those ladies who intended to dance minuets used to distinguish themselves by wearing a particular kind of lappet on their headdress. I have heard also of another curious proof of the respect in which this dance was held. Gloves immaculately clean were considered requisite for its due performance, while gloves a little soiled were thought good enough for a country dance, and accordingly some prudent ladies provided themselves with two pairs for their several purposes."—London Standard.

A Pleasant Moment.

"I am told," said a beautiful woman to a dub of a man the other day, "that my lovely cousin, Miss X., has made a deep impression on you."

"Is Miss X. your cousin?" burbled the dub excitedly. "Indeed she did! She is one of the loveliest girls I ever met. I'll tell you just what kind of a hit she made with me. I met her at the Dashes' dinner, and she sat on the other side of me, and I talked with her the whole time, and I can't even remember who my dinner partner was."

"I thought not," said the beautiful woman dryly. "I was your dinner partner."—New York Globe.

WOMEN OF POLAND

More Ardent Than the Men In Their Love For Their Country.

TOIL AGES PEASANT GIRLS.

Hard and Rough Laboring Work Makes Them Appear Old and Haggard Before They Reach Thirty. Charms of the Women of the Upper Classes.

Woman occupies a position of unusual prominence in Poland. Some place her as superior to man in nearly every way. In the various conspiracies and in the revolutions against Russia Polish women have had an important part. Many have given up all their worldly goods in the cause of their country, while others have fought on the field of battle and lost their lives in the same cause. Still others have gone into exile without a murmur. They are capable of any sacrifice for patriotism, and they prove their sincerity by their actions. The women are still the most zealous patriots, and it is due to them more than the other sex that patriotic feeling is still so intense. Thus writes Nevin O. Winter in his "Poland of Today and Yesterday."

The Polish women, he continues, have always been noted for their beauty and the perfect shape of their hands and feet. They take part in all the social affairs, and no festival is complete without their presence. They are extremely good linguists, and nearly all speak two or three languages. In Warsaw I met one young woman of nineteen or twenty summers, just out of school, who spoke Russian, German, French and English almost as fluently as her native Polish. This is not an uncommon accomplishment.

The women do not enjoy the social freedom of the American girls, as the chaperon is still a necessity to protect the good name of a girl. They are never left unprotected. Marriages are made in much the same manner as in France, and the contracting parties frequently know little about each other before they are joined for better or worse.

"The will of my honored parents has ever been a sacred law to me," says the Polish girl, with resignation. When a messenger came with a proposal of marriage if a goose was served with dark gravy at dinner or a pumpkin was put in the carriage as he was leaving this meant that the offer was positively refused. "He was treated to a goose fricassee" was an expression frequently heard in the olden days.

The Polish women of the upper classes are undoubtedly charming and possessed of the graces of true womanliness. Perhaps it is the possession of these womanly qualities and the absence of the masculine elements wherein lies their real charm. A pencil or brush is certainly a better medium than a pen to portray such attractive types of womanhood.

The lot of the peasant woman, however, is especially hard, as it is with all Slav races, and this is noticeable throughout all the Polish provinces. They do more than their full share of the family work. Sometimes one will see more women in the fields than men, and a kaleidoscopic effect of color is then visible. Blue, green, yellow, gold and silver are mingled in various combinations. They pin up the overskirt, which leaves a bright petticoat exposed to view.

Woman is valued chiefly for the work she can do, and she is expected to bear a large family of children as well. For a man to say that his wife does more work than a horse or two horses is considered the acme of praise. It is no wonder that a girl naturally attractive soon grows old and haggard. Hard work, with little pleasure, the care of a numerous family and no regard for personal attraction must inevitably leave their mark before many years; hence it is that many of these Polish women look haggard and old even before they have passed the third decade of life.

There are, indeed, few bright spots in a Polish peasant girl's life after marriage. In their youth some of the girls are very attractive, and they look quite charming in their picturesque national costumes that are still common in Galicia. They generally go barefooted in summer, for boots cost money. Sometimes they will carry their boots when going to church and only put them on just before entering the sanctuary.

"Do women work on the railroads as section hands?" I asked a fellow passenger on the railway in Galicia. I had seen groups of women along the track with pick and shovel in hand, but could scarcely believe that they did the hard work of that occupation.

"Yes, and they do the work better than the men," he replied.

At Cracow I have seen them carrying mortar for the masons and plasterers where new buildings are being erected. They were spading the flower beds in the parks and were doing the work as well as the masculine overseer could have done it. They hang paper or paint a house. It did not make any difference whether there were three or a dozen women working together, there was always one man who did nothing but act as overseer. Along the roads they may be seen carrying heavy bundles or pushing loaded wheelbarrows. Everywhere they may be observed doing work that involves considerable physical strength.

Solitude can be delightful only to the innocent.—Leszczynski.

IMPROVING THEM.

IT'S mean, but we all like to do it
 If we can connect with a date
To puncture the ego inflated
 And smile as we watch it deflate,
To prick with a hatpin the pompous
 And grin as the wind makes escape,
To drive with a steam roller over
 The one who is stuck on his shape.

There's nothing that rouses the meanness
 That's latent in all of mankind
Like meeting one puffed like a porpoise
 And all of the cheese in his mind,
And, viewing pretense as it passes
 And reading it just like a book,
The person who views them is tempted
 To giggle and call for the hook.

The man who has nothing to back him
 But bluster and buncomb and bluff,
Whose greatness is founded on something
 Substantial and strong as a puff,
May hope and expect in his honor
 The world its obeisance will make,
But he has another guess coming
 And things that will keep him awake.

The man who is modest and normal,
 Who takes what he only deserves,
Has ever an eye out for merit.
 The egotist gets on his nerves.
And so can you blame him for trying
 Whenever a case is at hand
To shrink to the normal the ego,
 By this means improving the brand?

Only Natural.

"He is always talking about the dinners his mother used to get up when he was a boy," said the young married woman.

"Yes," answered the sympathetic neighbor. "Men always do that. You see, when he was a boy, somebody else had to do the worrying about the cost of food. He simply sat down as a guest, with no financial responsibilities whatever. It is only natural that his enjoyment should have been greater."

He Had No Kick.

"I really believe," said her jealous fiance, "that you permit other men to kiss you."

"Surely you can't object," replied the bright girl, "for you've always said you were opposed to monopolies."

Safer.

"What are you going to hunt in Afrika?"

"Tigers."

"But there are no tigers there."

"That is just the kind of a place I prefer to hunt them."

String Them Along.

"What are you doing for amusement?"

"Thinking of buying an automobile."

"Where is the amusement in that?"

"Every salesman in town is after me to take me riding."

Simple Trial.

Music hath charms to soothe the savage breast.
If so we ought to give the thing a test
By sending phonographs to every foreign shore.
 The listening heathen then might rage no more.

Proper Place.

"How is your rubber plantation?"

"No good."

"Poor investment?"

"Yes, we got it in the neck."

Lonely.

The little boats must hug the shore,
But larger boats may venture more.
The airship, though, upon the wing,
It cannot hug a single thing.

ALL READY FOR TRAINING PETES AT YOUNGSTOWN

Stan Creswell Goes to the Battle Grounds To-morrow Morning

A letter from Curley Blount announces the fact that everything is in readiness for the arrival of the Petes and prospective Petes on Tuesday. All the boys will be on hand with the exception of Bob Sterling and Ken Tracey, and they will arrive in Youngstown on Friday. The first few days will be given entirely toward loosening up a few forgotten muscles, while exhibition games will be played Friday and Saturday. The weather has been a little cold, but cannot last much longer, and Manager Blount is of the opinion that two or three hard days' work, assisted by the practice most of the players have had already will put his outfield into fairly good shape.

Willie Swartz has been forwarded a contract to sign, and Joe Byrne has also signified his intention of meeting the club at their terms he will be treated similarly. The natty uniforms of the Petes have been purchased and are on exhibition in one of Youngstown's leading sporting goods stores. The citizens are looking them over with a great deal of admiration, and are anxiously awaiting the arrival of the men to fill them.

Stanley Creswell will leave tomorrow morning, while Mr. Len Dobson will leave on Friday.

Hamilton, April 13.—The work of improving Brittannia park will be commenced to-day, both the playing field and grandstands undergoing many changes. The club officials will urge that the work be hustled along so as to enable the squad to work out at the Barton Street lot. In the meantime Manager Yates' stalwarts will do their preliminary cavorting at the cricket field.

"Bud" McLean, Broadbent, Art Dolan and Emil Wein were out Saturday morning for a light workout, with Manager Yates keeping a watchful eye on the lads. None of the remainder of the squad have reported but Darlington, the college catcher, who will fight it out with "Red" Fisher, is expected in to-day.

Pitcher Renfer, with Ottawa in 1912 and 1913, is ill with malaria. Renfer, who was bought by Detroit and transferred to Nashville, wants to come north again when recovered. Ottawas will try to make a deal for him.

LACROSSE

Havelock, April 13.—Percy Lancaster of town was elected a member of the council of the Ontario Amateur Lacrosse Association at the annual meeting of that organization in Toronto on Friday last. The news of his election was received with great pleasure by supporters of the game here and citizens generally.

Mr. Lancaster, who is editor of the Havelock Standard, well deserves a position on the board, and has been favorably commented on by the Toronto daily papers, the Toronto News of Apr. 8 carrying a cut of him, in which they boosted him for a place on the council. He has been a follower of the game for many years and has taken a keen interest in the recent movement to revive lacrosse in Ontario.

He has been instrumental to a large extent in the organization of the local lacrosse club, which has decided to enter a team in the intermediate series this year, and present prospects are for a good fast team. The officers of the local club elected were as follows:

Hon. President — Dr. Kindred; Hon. 1st Vice. — Rev. Mr. Holdsworth; Hon. 2nd. Vice.—L. G. Rogers; President—H. T. Andrews; 1st Vice.—Dr. Thompson; 2nd Vice.—Dr. Holdcroft; 3rd Vice. — W. J. Brown; Sec-treas.—H. F. McNichol; Manager—T. P. Lancaster; Assistant Manager—A. Armstrong; Executive committee—President, secretary and Messrs. T. Dineen, E. Warren, J. Easterbrooks and D. A. Forde; Coach—H. T. Andrews; Assistant Coach—D. A. Forde.

The membership fee has been set at $1, and Messrs. E. Goddard and B. Menzies are in charge of the campaign for subscriptions.

CAMPBELLFORD GUN CLUB OFFICERS

Campbellford, April 13.—The annual meeting of the Gun Club was held at the Windsor Hotel, when the following officers were elected for 1914:

Hon. President—A. B. Colville.
President—Jas. Irwin.
Vice-President—I. A. Humphries.
Sec.-Treas.—F. C. Bonnycastle.

A special prize will be shot for on the first night, May 4th, a watch fob by Dominion Cartridge Co. for the month of May, besides weekly and season prizes by the Club and by Mr. I. . Humphries. A handicap is being arranged.

TRAP SHOOTERS FORM LEAGUE

At a meeting held at the Dunham Hotel, Cobourg, on Good Friday, shooters from Campbellford, Peterboro, Belleville and Cobourg, formed a league to be known as the Trent Valley Trapshooters' Association. The league proposes holding friendly shoots from time to time during the summer at the different towns represented. Any teams in this district not represented at the meeting and who desire to join the league, are requested to send the name of their club to the secretary of the association, Mr. F. C. Bonnycastle, at Campbellford. Any information required will be supplied by him.

ONE VIEW OF SLEEP.

Likened to the Freezing of Water in a Pond or Bowl.

The approach of sleep is much like the freezing of water in pond or bowl. Faint spiculae dart from the sides; motes and dots, barely perceptible, swim in the midst. One might imagine the process not less grateful to the long unsheltered mere than to the merely longing brain, for as the one desires for the time being to be defended from that thought which is its own component essence, so might the other seek a coat proof against the plunge of an icicle, formed of a like element. Slight agitation, applied with judgment, will help the matter on. The introduction of a finger will sometimes change a bowl of congealing water to a solid mass. A bit of ice slid in at the proper moment will help on the water's freezing, and so will thinking on your latest dream help to induce slumber.

Transparent and cold as are ice and sleep nothing will keep brain and water safer and warmer. All glances from them and naught stirs up mud or mood. The parallel holds to the last, for nothing can more resemble the rude awakening of a slumber than the sudden breaking of ice, and nothing is more like a gradual and pleasant wakening than the melting thaw where beginning and end are alike indiscernible.—C. E. D. Phelps in "A Farmer's Notebook."

Inappreciative Man.

"You say you occasionally smoke one of your wife's birthday cigars?"

"Yes; I dug 'em up the other day, and they are a great help in my present situation."

Real Ability.

"What is the secret of success?" asked the fool.

"The ability to conceal your lack of ability," replied the sage.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

SOME OF THE HORSES TO BE SEEN AT LOCAL MEET

As was recently announced, a big horse race meeting will be held here on June 17 and 18 under the auspices of the Central Ontario Racing Association. On June 17th the 2.30 class for a purse of $250, and the 2.15 class for a purse of $350 will be run, while on June 18th, the program will be: Local 2.35 class, purse $150; 2.20 class, purse $250, and free-for-all, purse $350.

During the last decade the list of horses trotting in this section of the province has remained unchanged and some of them were still at it when correctly speaking their day was over, and they couldn't beat a fat man up a hill. Last year the local racing attracted considerable outside interest, thus demonstrating that the racing was becoming better. This year there is interest which has never been paralleled and the main reason for this is the advent of several "dark horses." The races on June 17 and 18 will see their first appearances.

2.15 Class.

Reviewing the horses in the 2.15 class, the first one arising in one's mind is Susie Hall, owned by Dr. Johnston of this city. This horse has a mark of 2.14¾, and although not raced on the ice, she has been jogged daily all winter, and is in perfect condition. Jimmie Direct, the property of Teele of Trenton, will also figure in the 2.15 class. His mark is 2.17¼. This horse ran well in the fore part of last summer, but met with an accident from which by reports he is thoroughly recovered, and is in fine shape for the coming season. L. Bennet's City Queen of North Bay, with a 2.15¼ mark, will be entered as will McManus' Zecena with her mark of 2.15¼. She is a very consistent mare and went well on the ice this winter. Her initial appearance on the local track was in 1912. Two new horses will start in this class. Adrian Pointer, owned by Gray of Picton, has a mark of 2.14¼, and won considerable prominence on the western circuit by winning three straights last summer. The other green trotter will be W. Johnston's Ester D., of this city. She is a young mare of which little is known except her mark of 2.16¼.

2.20 Class.

In the 2.20 three at least can at present be depended upon to enter. They are Patterson, owned by Jones Bros; Ora Medium, owned by F. Montgomery, and Harry Direct, Dr. Johnstons' old standby. Ora Medium will be new to local people, but Ora has been going well in Toronto, and should make a favorable impression. Harry Direct, "the hero of many a hard fought battle," has wintered well and although a little over 13 years old it takes some mighty fast stepping to beat him to the wire. Harry is an old favorite and hasn't missed a race on the local track for seven years.

2.30 Class.

There will, it is expected, be more entries in this class than in any other. Frank Montgomery's Ora Medium will figure in this class as will two other new steppers, Jas. Timblin's Angus Pointer and Jas. Daly's Amble Dawson. The former has the credit of trotting a mile in 2.17 in a workout while Amble Dawson will be called upon to step lively to live up to her advance notices. Mr. Daly purchased this horse last fall for $3,500, and the press made several comments on the deal, all going to show that horse is well known. Though coming from Grimsby to this city, Amble Dawson is a California horse and has a 2.09 trial on a half mile track.

Little Jerry, owned by Ridpath of Cambray will be in this race. Little Jerry it will be remembered won the three last heats of a six heat race on the local track last fall.

Little Pete, the property of W. Elmhurst of Keene will be another starter. He also went well last fall. The three year old Dr. Johnston, owned by Chas. Fife of Lang, and named after the popular local veterinary, should attract considerable attention. Last fall this horse won second money in Brockville, where American and Canadian horses were competing. It may also be possible that Montoval, owned by Hodgins of Orillia, will be a contestant in this race. All the local 2.30 horses will likewise enter the 2.35 class, it being in half mile heats and run the day after the 2.30.

Free-For-All.

The free-for-all will perhaps prove to be the best feature of the meet. Susie Hall, Adrian Pointer and Jimmie Direct will be entered, also Richards, with a mark of 2.13¼, owned by O. B. Shephard, of Toronto. Furioso, owned by Chas. Parks, of Sutton, has a mark of 2.09¼, and has been taking second money at the ice races in Ottawa and Toronto this past winter. The other possible entry will be Manualla, the horse owned by Powell of Belleville. Manualla has a mark of 2.07¼ and also holds the local track record of 2.13 flat, made last fall.

Four of these horses, namely Adrian Pointer, Jimmie Direct, Susie Hall and Manuella ran last 24th of May in Picton, and the race went down in history. The first four heats were won by different horses, each having one to his credit. The next heat Adrian Pointer won, and while a win called for the wire first in three heats, the race was settled by consent of the owners. The time of the first two heats was 2.15, the third 2.15½, the fourth 2.17 and the fifth 2.18½. Commenting on the race, the Canadian Sportsman said they were "four of the classiest horses that ever faced a wire."

With a good class of horses and abundance of enthusiasm the meet will undoubtedly be a huge success. The horses will soon be out on the track and "dope" a little more plentiful.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

CONNECTING WITH THE JAR.

On pleasant flights of fancy
At times aloft we soar
Way yonder in the cloudland
Above the human roar,
High in the mellow azure,
All peaceful and serene,
Then drop in haste because we've
Run out of gasoline.

It seems such pleasant sailing
As, peaceful and at ease,
We rest where clouds are lightest
Or flutter on the breeze,
And just when things are coming
Exactly to our taste
The steering gear gets cranky,
And it's to earth in haste.

We go into a project
With quite the best intent,
Assured it's worth a million
If it is worth a cent,
And just when we are ready
To bring it all about
We reach to get the fortune,
And then our pipe goes out.

This is a world of dreaming,
Of schemes that look like cash,
Of plans that seem so rosy
Until they go to smash,
Of voyages projected
That on the rocks are wrecked.
In legions run our fancies,
But few of them connect.

New Definition.

"Can you define an island?"

"Sure. A body of land surrounded by water."

"That's obsolete."

"What is it then?"

"A body of land surrounded by benevolent assimilation."

A beautiful lie is one that looks like the ugly truth.

The trouble with so many bad habits is that they are with us yet after we have been broken of them.

There are men who don't pay their debts from humanitarian motives. They hate to spring surprises.

The devil always feels pretty confident that deceitful people are coming his way all right.

The world may owe all of us a living, but it will repudiate the debt every chance it gets.

HOT AIR

To prove that our claims for the Bosch-Ford Magneto are not composed of Hot Air, we make the following offer: We will install a Bosch-Ford Magneto on any Ford car, and if the owner is not perfectly satisfied, we will remove it, and refund the money.

Would not do without it for any amount, is the verdict of all purchasers.

We cannot recommend these outfits for Ford cars too highly. Come in and talk it over.

Let us prove our Assertions.

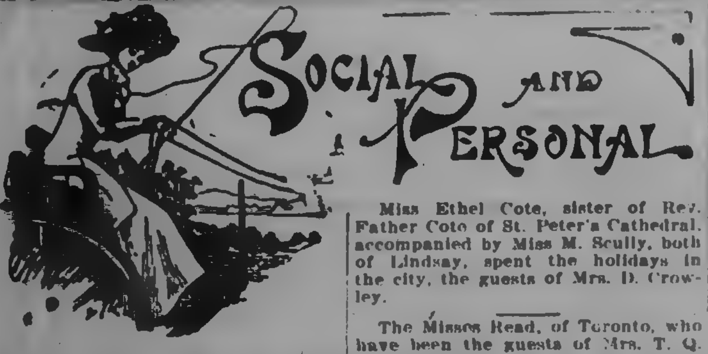
RICHARD HALL & SON
LIMITED



Easter Sunday, 1914, has passed to the Great Beyond of yesterdays, carrying with it the load of woe, sin and wickedness of a mighty world. Easter Monday has dawned bright and smilingly fair, emblem of a newly awakened world, birds singing sweetly; nature arousing, after its long winter sleep, seems calling mankind to a new life, a higher walk, an uplifting and striving to better things in every-day methods. Let us put on a new armor, with our new garments and remember Longfellow's "Psalm of Life," and "all things come to them who labor while they wait"

Many friends will extend sympathy to Mr. Will. McDonnell, of Moose Jaw, on the death of his wife, who died at their home there, yesterday, Sunday.

Major G. W. Bennett, of the 57th Regiment, who is now located in Toronto, as Superintendent of Ontario Colonization roads, spent the holiday in the city.

Mr. Harry Grubbe, of Toronto, who has been the guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Grubbe, McDonell Street, left yesterday for Montreal.

Mrs. Montgomery, of the Montgomery House, spent Easter Sunday with friends in Midland.

Mr. Daniel H. Burritt, formerly of this city, but now holding a position with the Ontario Government, Toronto, was a week-end visitor here.

Brigade Sergeant-Major R. Beatty, of the 10th Brigade, C. F. A., of Elisabethville, spent Good Friday in this city renewing acquaintances.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy S. Whitaker returned last night from their wedding tour and are guests at Bremar Lodge. Mrs. Whitaker made many friends in Calgary last year when she visited Mr. and Mrs. Cyril Hill, who will be delighted to welcome her again to Calgary.—Calgary Herald.

Rev. Dr. Boyle, who took the services at St. John's Church, was a guest of Dr. and Mrs. Holloway. Dr. Boyle returned to Toronto this afternoon.

The efficiency of the music teachers in connection with St. Mary's Convent of this city, was brought into greater evidence last Thursday evening when Miss Harriette Pierce attained great success in the rendition of her graduating recital in the Toronto College of Music. Miss Pierce excelled in all her selections, but most especially when playing Andante and Molto Allegro of Mendelssohn's Concerto in G minor. In these, the orchestral accompaniment on second piano was given by Dr. F. H. Torrington of Toronto. Miss Dorothy McCann, soprano, pupil of Dr. Torrington, also assisted in the recital.

Mrs. W. W. Kent, and Miss A. E. Kent, of Toronto, who, with Miss E. Kent, of Chicago, have been visiting Mrs. C. Wood, Simcoe Street, for the week end, returned home to-day.

Miss Ethel Cote, sister of Rev. Father Cote of St. Peter's Cathedral, accompanied by Miss M. Scully, both of Lindsay, spent the holidays in the city, the guests of Mrs. D. Crowley.

The Misses Read, of Toronto, who have been the guests of Mrs. T. Q. Quartermaine, returned to Toronto this morning.

Mrs. J. Wilson, 372 George St., and her assistants, are in Toronto attending the summer millinery openings this week.

Mrs. F. Knox, of Fenelon Falls, was the guest of her sister, Mrs. Jos. Knox, for Easter week.

Mr. Harold Morrow, of the Royal Bank staff, Toronto, is the guest of his parents.

Mr. Harold Parker, of Hamilton, is home for the vacation.

Miss Rena Goodfellow, of St. Margaret's College, Toronto, is visiting in the city.

Acting Crown Attorney Joseph Wearing, M.A., is the guest of friends in Toronto.

Mr. H. Hayes of Lindsay, is a visitor in the city.

Mrs. W. C. Austin, 548 Weller Street, will not receive to-morrow nor again this season.

Mr. H. J. Kelly of the Union Bank at Orillia spent the holidays at his home in Norwood. Mr. Kelly stopped off here en route for the northern town to-day and renewed a few acquaintances.

Miss Ada Williams, of Havelock, is the guest of Vera Knox, 481 Gilmour St.

BIG ATTRACTIONS IN MOTION PICTURES

At Red Mill

This combined programme of dramatic sensation, farce and news is probably the most notable motion bill ever offered the public, and is certainly the most exceptional attraction of this nature presented at the price of admission. The great feature, Levi and McGuinnas, can be seen at the Red Mill to-night and to-morrow. Remember, that "Seeing is Believing." Our motto, "Give the public a chance to see and believe in the exceptional value of what we have to offer." Don't miss this great programme.

TWO ORCHESTRAS TO PLAY AT ZEPHRA

At the initial performance of "Queen Zephra" to-morrow evening (Tuesday), a musical programme the magnitude of which has never before been heard in Peterboro, will be rendered.

Two orchestras will handle the overtures, solos, duets, dances, drills, choruses and music incidental to a big operatic spectacle.

The Peterboro Conservatory Orchestra, forty strong, will play between acts, and the Grand Opera House orchestra will take care of the music of "Queen Zephra"—35 numbers.

Both orchestras will be under the direction of Rupert Gliddon.

This will be one of the most extensive musical evenings ever offered in the city and no doubt will draw a crowded house.

The spectacular scenic effects that the production is set under are of a class such as are only attempted by the biggest professional companies, such as "Peter Pan." The reason of this is that the life of this class of scenery is very short and for that reason very expensive to replace.

The prices for Queen Zephra are within reach of all, being 25c, 50c and 75c, with gallery 15c. All seats are good and a full view of stage is assured.

The plan is open at Grand Opera House now.

All together (including both orchestras) there will be 200 people all trained in their respective parts and all doing his or her part to make Tuesday evening one to be long remembered in the city. Tuesday Wednesday and Thursday nights Friday matinee.

THEIR FINAL PLEA REFUSED

GOVERNOR GLYNN HELD THERE WAS NOTHING TO JUSTIFY A REPRIEVE

OSSINING, N.Y., April 13.—Harry Horowitz, Louis Rosenberg, Frank Cirofici and Frank Seidenshner, the gunmen whose picturesque aliases were flung across the continent after the murder of the New York gambler, Hermann Rosenthal, failed yesterday in their last effort to escape the penalty of their crime, and it was stated unofficially here this morning that they had been executed in the electric chair at dawn. Under the New York State law the execution is assigned to a certain week, but it is the custom to carry it out at sunrise on Monday.

To relatives who bade them goodbye yesterday and to their spiritual advisers the four condemned men again declared their innocence.

In the executive chamber of the deserted state capitol, Governor Glynn heard the final appeals of two attorneys for the convicted slayers, C. G. F. Wahle and H. L. Kringle, for a stay of the death sentence, and then again and for the last time refused to interfere with the executions.

For two hours— from three until five o'clock—the two attorneys pleaded with the governor. All appeals to his sympathies were disregarded. Only the new evidence that was presented before Justice Goff in New York Saturday was presented. Seldom did the attorneys speak above a conversational tone. When they had finished, the governor and his legal adviser, John G. Saxe, retired to a private room to consider the evidence.

Pale and a trifle nervous, the governor returned and said:

"Gentlemen, I am sorry, but I cannot see my way clear to change my decision."

With their last chance to save the gunmen from the electric chair gone, the attorneys walked slowly from the chamber.

"It seems the boys must die," Mr. Wahle said. "Unless the governor changes his decision before morning they are doomed."

"Did he hold out any hope?" was asked.

"No," he replied. "On the contrary, he said his decision was final."

Mr. Wahle then told of the nature of his appeal, emphasizing that he thought the governor was very patient.

"There is nothing left for us to do but continue our duties as bearers of bad news," he said. "We shall telegraph to Ossining and later return to New York to report the governor's decision to the relatives of the condemned men."

A written statement issued at the executive chamber follows: "Judge Wahle renewed his application and the governor heard him for one hour and a half.

"The application was renewed on the same facts that were before the governor originally, and the affidavits of new witnesses presented to Judge Goff yesterday afternoon.

"The governor replied that there was nothing before him to justify his interference with the course of the law."

Lit Fire To Hide Theft.

BRANTFORD, April 13.—The grocery store on Rawdon street, owned by Alfred Teague, was burglarized on Friday night, and to cover up the robbery an attempt was made to burn it down. When the owner went in the morning he found that the place had been soaked with coal oil and the cupboard was ablaze with fire. He soon had this put out, and then found that a good quantity of groceries had been taken.

SPEED OF GAME BIRDS.

The Hazel Hen Said to Be a Wonder In a Short Spurt.

What is the fastest game bird that flies? Of course, in seeking an answer to the question, as a writer in the Scotsman points out, one must assume equal conditions of atmosphere and cause for flight, for all creatures, human or other, seek their highest rate of speed under the influence of fear.

A recent writer declares that in a race of, say, 200 yards he would back a bird which, though not found in Britain, is indigenous to most of the rest of Europe and is especially familiar in Scandinavia—the hazel hen or gelinotte.

Yet, curiously enough, this is one of the forest haunting birds which, like the American "fool hen," usually fly up into a tree when flushed and, rejecting further attempts at escape, elect to be shot sitting. "But," says the writer referred to above, "on the rare occasions (and that they are rare I readily admit) when one catches a gelinotte in the open I have never seen any bird fly so fast nor move its wings with such extraordinary rapidity."

Next to it at any rate one must surely place the teal, which has a marvelous knack of getting under way quickly. Some experienced observers would give the third place to a bluerock pigeon—the wild, not the Hurlingham variety.

Inflammable Celluloid.

Celluloid, being first cousin of guncotton and closely related to nitroglycerin, is highly inflammable and should never be brought in close proximity to a flame. Celluloid is a compound of cellulose or vegetable fibrine, reduced by acids to guncotton. Cellulose is found in all vegetable life, particularly in young plants. It is a starchlike substance. Cotton fiber is principally cellulose. After the cotton fiber is cleaned it is submerged in acids, which quickly reduce it to cellulose in the form of a thick, pasty, semi-transparent mass. Camphor is added further to thicken it, and the required coloring matter is thoroughly mixed in, after which the celluloid is molded by heat and pressure into various useful and ornamental objects, such as combs, boxes, pins, paper cutters, ornaments, etc.—New York World.

THIS YEAR'S BUDGET

The annual meeting of the council of the County of Peterborough Sunday School Association was held in the Board Room of the Y. M. C. A. here yesterday. A few minutes after the fire started the editorial rooms were full of smoke and the stairway ablaze, and the staff escaped by fire escapes installed a month ago.

Dear Mr. Sandy:

It is with feelings of deep sorrow that we, your subordinates, learned that you were to be transferred to Lindsay. During the seventeen years you have been Agent here, we have always found you to be exceedingly considerate to one and all of the employees of the Company who have come under your jurisdiction. Your loss to the city was clearly demonstrated this afternoon and this evening, we wish in like manner to show our regret at your departure from among us. We ask you to accept this writing desk as a slight token of our esteem. Best wishes for your future welfare.

On behalf of the employees:
Mr. F. CLEMENTI.

The address was read by Mr. F. Clementi, while Mr. C. McGee made the presentation. Mr. Sandy made a very touching reply, remarking upon the co-operation of the employees and thanking them, not only for this evidence of their friendship, but also for the many kindnesses shown him during his term of office in this city. He promised to be ever remindful of them and wished them all and one every success.

LOCAL SCOTS MAY CELEBRATE BATTLE OF BANNOCKBURN

From the present indications there is a possibility of the 600th anniversary of the Battle of Bannockburn being celebrated here by the Caledonian Club. Scotsmen the world over are preparing for the celebration.

In Scotland an attempt is being made to purchase the site of the battlefield where the famous battle was fought, and convert it into a park.

The matter will probably come up for discussion at the next meeting of the club, Wednesday evening at the W.O.W. Hall.

"ROSE LODGE" IN FLORIDA WHERE PETERBORO LADY WAS VISITING IS FIRE SWEPT

The Review is in receipt of a copy of the De Land News, of De Land, Volusia County, Florida, where Mrs. H. I. Morse-Farnum, of this city, is visiting. Particulars are given of a fire which destroyed Rose Lodge, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Morse, at which Mrs. Morse-Farnum was the guest. The News says:

Saturday afternoon the dwelling of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Morse on their grove north-west of town caught fire from sparks from a burning chimney and was totally destroyed, as was also the barn and tool shed. The horse was saved. A number of neighbors arrived on the scene in an incredibly short time after the fire started, and succeeded in saving much of the furniture on the first floor, including the piano and several thousand books, but fire fighting facilities were inadequate, and little else was saved. Mr. Morse, in attempting to save a trunk from upstairs, narrowly escaped some falling timbers and had to abandon the trunk to save himself.

The gross loss is estimated at considerably more than $3,000. The house was insured for $800.

Mr. and Mrs. Morse have not decided yet whether they will rebuild or not. At present they are housed with Mrs. Bielby.

MOBS ASSAIL CLERGY IN RIOTS THROUGHOUT ITALY ON EASTER

Widespread Indignation of People at Endeavor to Suppress Ancient Folk Observances Results In Attack on Priests During Religious Processions—One Cleric and His Acolytes Are Wounded.

MILAN, April 14.—An extraordinary series of religious disturbances spoiled the Easter festivities in various parts of Italy. At Pagnano, in the province of Treviso, the parish priest and acolytes were shot at and wounded while carrying the sacred image in a public procession. One of the religious canopies was riddled with bullets. At Porto Ferrajo Cathedral, where about 2,000 worshippers were present, a dispute between rival religious confraternities for precedence in the procession developed into a riot. According to Corriere della Sera many women and children and old men were injured during the panic-stricken rush for the doors of the cathedral.

Similar disgraceful scenes occurred at Santo Stefano, near Messina. The peasantry of two adjacent Sicilian villages fought for precedence in the open-air cortege. Sticks, stones and hayrakes were freely used, and the clergy and monks were put to flight. All the sacred images were smashed to pieces. Scores of people were injured. Reinforcements of carabinieri had to be summoned by telegraph.

Catanzaro Cathedral, in Calabria, was also a scene of amazing riots. A new archbishop attempted to suppress certain popular local customs involving the use of pagan symbols, and owing to his instructions being openly disobeyed had laid a neighboring church under three days' interdict. When the archbishop appeared in the cathedral to celebrate Easter High Mass an infuriated throng threatened a tumult, and shrieked curses at him. As it was feared he would be assaulted the clergy hurried him away by a private exist. Troops were sent for to drive the mob out of the cathedral.

BECKER IS EXONERATED

BEFORE EXECUTION "DAGO FRANK" MADE VOLUNTARY STATEMENT.

ALBANY, N.Y., April 14.—Shortly before "Dago Frank" Cirofici went to the death chair in Sing Sing prison early yesterday, he told Warden Clancy that "Gyp the Blood," Horowitz, "Lefty Louie" Rosenberg and Harry Vallon, the informer, fired the shots which killed Herman Rosenthal, for which crime the four gunmen paid their lives.

The formal statement of the warden is in part as follows:

"About eight o'clock Sunday night Rosenberg asked me to save Frank, saying he had nothing to do with the shooting, as he was not there. I went over and asked Frank why he did not tell the truth. He replied that he knew what was going on, but was not there when the shooting took place. I advised him to tell the whole story. He said if he did they would kill bis brother. I asked whom he meant by 'they.' He replied that there were fifty men in New York he could name. He said, 'I don't care about myself; it's my family I care for.'

"He finally made the following, among other statements, in the presence of myself, Principal Keeper McInery, the chaplain, his mother and sister. They urged him to tell the whole truth. He hesitated and said:

"'I don't want to make any statement for the public. I do not fear for myself, but I do fear for you.'

"His sister replied: 'Don't have any fear for us; we will take care of ourselves; God will protect us.'

"His mother and sister continued to urge him to tell the truth. He said: 'I did not do the shooting. The men who fired the shots were Gyp, Louie and Vallon.'

"He said: 'I was five miles away at the time. So far as I know Becker had nothing to do with the case. It was a gamblers' fight.'

The executions of the four men began at 5.27 yesterday morning and in forty minutes all were dead. The only statement at the last was made by Frank Seidenshner ("Whitey" Lewis), who declared that he did not shoot at Rosenthal.

REGULATIONS FOR BAKERS

DOORS AND WINDOWS OF BAKERIES TO BE FITTED WITH FLY SCREENS.

KEEP EVERYTHING CLEAN

BREAD MUST BE WRAPPED BEFORE PLACED IN WAGONS.

Employees must wear clean white overalls, smocks and caps.

Doors and windows must be fitted with fly screens.

Lavatory accommodation must be properly located.

The premises and utensils to be kept in a perfectly clean condition.

Premises to be whitewashed or painted at least twice a year.

Delivery wagons to be kept in clean condition.

Bread to be wrapped before put in delivery wagons.

The above self-explanatory set of regulations for bakeshops was presented to the Board of Health at their regular meeting this morning by Medical Health Officer Dr. McPherson. It was decided by the Board to accept the regulations, and that a copy of them be forwarded to all local bakeshops, with instructions to obey these regulations.

Dr. Amys, who occupied the chair, brought up another question dealing with the same business, and that was the advisability of having the Sanitary Inspector order any baker suffering from tuberculosis to cease that class of work. If any one was suffering from this disease he should not be allowed to handle food stuffs used by the general public.

The Sanitary Inspector didn't agree with Dr. Amys, as he thought baking a very unhealthy occupation, and the average employee will contract some pulmonary trouble on account of the nature of his work.

It was agreed, however, by the Board, to have the Inspector report any instance where he finds a baker afflicted with tuberculosis.

PURSE OF GOLD IS PRESENTED

To Rev. H. Earle, Who is Leaving St. James Anglican Church.

At the St. James' Anglican Church, Emily, on Sunday, the congregation presented Rev. H. Earle with a purse of gold. An address was read by Mrs. Moncrief, and Miss Dollie Davis made the presentation on behalf of the congregation and Ladies' Guild.

It was a pleasant surprise for Rev. Mr. Earle, who thanked his parishioners for their kindness. Mr. Earle preached his farewell sermon on Sunday, and he is moving from Omemee this week.

The address was as follows:

Dear Mr. Earle:

We have learned with regret that we are unable to express in mere words, that you are about to leave St. James' Anglican Church and Omemee.

We will miss you. You have been untiring in your efforts for our spiritual and general welfare, and while we perhaps have failed you when you most needed our co-operation and sympathy, we appreciate what you have done.

You have never failed to visit our homes in the hour of joy or sorrow, and if for no other reason, we will miss your visits.

Now you are going away, we join in wishing you every success wherever your work for the Master may lead you, and besides our best wishes we would ask you to accept this small token, which we prepared to present to you.

PLOT NIPPED IN THE BUD

ROYALIST CONSPIRATORS QUARRELED AND PLANS LEAKED OUT.

LISBON, April 14.—A well organized royalist conspiracy has been discovered, according to semi-official reports. It appears that the royalists, disheartened by lack of support they had received from the members of the House of Braganza, decided to find foreign support and to place a foreign prince at the head of the monarchy.

The plan was carefully matured, but opinions were divided as to the person to be asked to accept the throne. One faction wanted a British prince, while another preferred an Italian ruler. The dissension at last grew so bitter that the plot leaked out. Several arrests have been made.

Mr. Oke verified the statement, and announced his intention of going into wholesale business exclusively.

SCHOOL TEACHERS PRESENT SOME PROPOSED CHANGES IN CURRICULUM

Ontario Educational Association Will Consider Draft Regulations Which Make Many of the Now Compulsory Subjects Optional—Studies Are Arranged in Three Groups For Easy Classification.

TORONTO, April 14.—The simplification of the common school curriculum, which has been long demanded by a section of the public, is provided for in the draft of the new regulations and courses of study of the public and separate schools of this province, just completed for presentation to the Ontario Educational Association for study this afternoon. These amended rules have not been submitted to Hon. Dr. R. A. Pyne, Minister of Education, yet, but go directly before the association through John Seath, Ontario superintendent of education. The simplification of the school studies is made through an extension of the optional principle, so that a school board is at liberty to pare down the number of subjects taught to a minimum. In forms one to four, the subjects to be taught are now divided into three groups. The first group comprises reading, literature, composition, spelling, grammar, history, geography, writing, arithmetic, manners and morals, and is made compulsory. The second group includes hygiene, physical culture, art, nature study and vocal music. When the teacher is qualified this group may be taught with the omission of topics duly authorised by the inspector, or local chief inspector. Group number three comprises bookkeeping, manual training, handsewing, household science, agriculture and horticulture, which are made entirely optional, but the school board may select for teaching any subjects that are desirable and practicable under the conditions of the school. In the fifth form foreign languages, commercial subjects, manual training, household science, horticulture and agriculture, are optional.

The new rules also provide for religious instruction in the schools after hours by the clergy of any denomination to the pupils of that faith, once a week. Any number of denominations may agree to send a particular clergyman to teach the pupils of their church members. Religious exercises consisting of the reading of selected portions of the Scriptures, the recital of the ten commandments, or a Scripture reading of the International Sunday School Association, are compulsory, but a parent may have his children absent themselves from the schoolroom during the rehearsal of these exercises.

Changes are made in the basis of the grants to rural schools. These formerly used to be made on attendance. Now teachers' salary and school equipment are the main considerations in the suggested rules. Formerly no rules for equipment obtained in urban districts. The new rules give explicit instructions in this respect.

BOARD OF HEALTH WILL TAKE ACTION AGAINST ITALIAN BOARDING HOUSE

Twenty Four Lodgers, in House and Twelve Sleep in Attic

Sanitary Inspector Spence waited upon the Board of Health this morning and gave a description of the conditions he found in a local Italian boarding house. He was there last Saturday at midnight; he was there again Monday at the same hour and called again this morning. He found 24 lodgers, besides the regular occupants, and of these, twelve were sleeping in the attic, containing about 3,500 cubic feet, while every person should have at least 600 cubic feet. He found five men sleeping in another room and similar conditions prevailed all over the house. Mr. Spence remarked that the only reason why the cellar was not occupied was evidently because it was nothing but a reeking cesspool. The Board unhesitatingly decided to take action at once.

Mr. Spence also reported having inspected the boarding cars in connection with the C.P.R. construction gang in this city, and found eight men sleeping in 800 cubic feet of space and also found 6 men in less than 500 cubic feet. The speaker pointed out to the Board that under such conditions the influx of foreigners was a distinct menace to public health. They may bring diseases with them, and without proper sanitary conditions epidemics are likely to occur. As the cars mentioned are here only temporary, no action was taken.

Recommended Sewers.

A petition was read asking for sewer connection on Chamberlain Street, and the Board decided to recommend to the City Council, the construction of a sewer on Chamberlain Street from Park Street to Alfred Street and on Lake Street from Aylmer to the west side of the Grand Trunk Railway.

A Resignation.

The resignation of J. H. Darwin, caretaker of Queen Mary Hospital, was accepted and Dr. Amys and the M.H.O. were authorized to secure another caretaker at the same salary, $400.

W. R. Turner was authorized to do some plumbing at Queen Mary Hospital, the same to cost $42.00.

The following accounts were ordered to be paid:—

Wm. Madill,	$5.75.
F. C. Cubitt,	$4.10.
Matthews-Laing, Ltd.,	$19.42.
Bell Telephone Co.,	$10.00.

Allen Ice Co.,	$6.00:
Wm. Collins Estate,	$15.71.
Burroughs-Welcome Co.,	$15.20.
Harry Bradshaw,	$5.22.
Pet. Water Commissioners,	$15.00.
Grant and Thorpe,	$7.94.

COMMISSIONERS ON WATER, MEET

At the Water Commissioners' meeting yesterday [illegible] it was decided to give the Henry Hope and Sons Company water service at the minimum rate of $60 per annum.

The Secretary read the report of the Provincial Board of [illegible] approving of the report of the work done by the Commissioners last season.

The Peterborough Cricket Club will be instructed to place their claim for water service to the Nicholl's Oval before the Park Commissioners.

Superintendent Fawcett said he had received a communication from the Fire Underwriters for a copy of the water service mains of the city. He informed them he had not an extra copy on hand. The Commissioners were of the opinion that they had better comply with the request. The getting out of a copy will cost in the neighborhood of about $7 or $8.

The Superintendent will submit a report on the cost of installing water service throughout Victoria Heights as requested per communication at last meeting.

The following members were present—Chairman T. F. Matthews, W. H. Moore, K.C., and Robert Hicks.

KNOX CHURCH TO CELEBRATE

Seventh Anniversary of the Induction of Rev. H. J. Keith

The congregation of Knox Church anticipate an interesting and enjoyable evening to-morrow night in the lecture hall, when the members of the church will rally to observe the seventh anniversary of their pastor's induction. The induction took place on April 11th, seven years ago.

It has been seven years of real progress and much of the credit redounds upon Rev. H. J. Keith, who has ministered faithfully and earnestly towards the welfare of his congregation and the church in general.

The members of Knox Church must also be congratulated, as they have rallied to the support of their pastor, and altogether have made great progress.

A NEW CONSTABLE.

Edward Downs, a local man, is the latest addition to the Police Force, and takes the position vacated by Constable Brown.

PRELIMINARY OPERATIONS FOR NEW METHODEST CHURCH PLANS HAVE BEEN APPROVED

Operations preliminary to the building of the new church for the Charlotte Street Methodists, have been commenced at the Aaron Cox property and the buildings on the property are being torn down.

It is understood that the plans for the new edifice have been approved, but as yet no contracts have been awarded.

The excavation work will be proceeded with in the very near future.

Afternoon Services.

Mr. R. McMurdo, of Chicago, will conduct afternoon services at the Gospel Hall Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday at 3 o'clock. All are welcome.

"I GUESS BLUE IS THE COLOR."

LAST SUNDAY, Easter, was interesting in the Sunday Schools. "I guess blue is the color this year," said one small boy. "Look at them, everybody is wearing blue," he said in response to a question from his teacher. "Look at Miss Blank, teacher," he said, "she's got blue on. Just turn around, she's back there." "Look at Mrs. Blank's new hat. Isn't it a sight? It comes up like this, and swells out like this, and comes around like this—"using his hands to describe a striking head-piece of Easter wear. Thus the childish critics of feminist apparel employed their wits unconscious of any inconsistency.

CARPING CRITICISM OF GLOBE.

THE TORONTO GLOBE says Mr. White has left the farmers nothing "but husks, sweetened by a reduction of 5 per cent. in the duty on harvesters, mowers, reapers and binders." We have failed to see in any Liberal paper a reference to the fact that the Hon. W. T. White has reduced the duty on agricultural implements to 2½ per cent. below that of the Reciprocity Pact. We have failed to observe Liberal papers extolling of late, the benefits of reciprocity which would present a sorry spectacle contrasted with present conditions and Mr. White's speech. The Globe, fed on party husks, unable, except at long separated intervals, to take non-partizan views, was expected to belittle a Conservative Budget, even when containing manifest advantages to Canada. It is noteworthy that Montreal Liberal papers are not enthusiastic over the extravagant proposals of the Liberals. The truth is, the Borden Government is conducting the country's affairs so well that criticism of it must necessarily be carping and peevish. In this way the public are taking with a grain of charitable salt such criticism as The Globe produces.

WEATHER RECORDS.

BY EXAMINING fairly accurate records, scientists have found that there has been no appreciable change in the climate of northern or north-western Europe in 1800 years.

This paragraph appeared in print as though it were true. We are inclined to doubt its veracity. Why did not the writer give authorities or at least state what these records were? What records of the weather did the people of northern Europe keep in 114 A.D.? We have read Caesar's account of Britain in 44 A.D., and don't recall any references to the British Weather Bureau. Most records kept in those days were skulls, stone axes and war-clubs. Science may be thinking of rocks, fossils, old river-beds, traces of the glacial period, old shore lines or other matter of scientific interest. If so it should be stated as when records regarding weather are mentioned we instinctively think of an office and are convinced the weather prophets of early northern Europe were a close corporation of pagan priests who refused to make details of their office public for obvious reasons.

MEDIOCRE VERSE.

THE FOLLOWING CRITICISM in The Toronto Mail and Empire should be taken to heart by all who feel an itch for verse-making when they have no education or training requisite for the composition of poetic lines. Readers of The Review who write verses should ponder what the Mail says and then burn half the stuff they intended to send to this paper for publication.

> "A labored effort at majesty of expression, which unfortunately has resulted in turgidity, does not make of "New Canadian Poems" by Warneford Moffatt (Briggs), either interesting or agreeable reading. Added to this are often such other unpleasant features as blatant jingoism, clumsiness of expression, and obscurity of ideas, so that with minor defects of prosody and grammar (the most annoying of the latter being the habit of omitting the definite article whenever the exigencies of the metre seem to demand it) the volume is scarcely a success, and one is compelled to remark that what value there is in the author's ideas has been almost hopelessly lost through his lack of skill in expression. Unfortunately, too, there does not seem to be any outstanding poem in the collection to save it from mediocrity."

PRAISES PARCEL POST.

THAT THE GREAT QUESTION facing the fruit and vegetable growers is the necessity for obtaining proper facilities for placing their products upon the markets at a reasonable cost, was the opinion expressed by Mr. Charles Bansley in a paper read before the Toronto branch of the Ontario Vegetable Growers' Association. Mr. Bansley made a plea for extensive public ownership in transportation throughout the country, and believed that it would be an important factor in solving the high cost of living problem. Mr. Bansley paid high tribute to the Parcels Post system, which he said has brought the producer nearer to the consumer.

The value of the Parcel Post system will be realized when it has had time to come into more general use than it has now. But already it is a known advantage to the farmer and shows that the Borden government is administering the affairs of Canada not in the interest of corporations of particular sections, but for the general advantage of the whole people.

GROWTH IN SHIPPING.

THE ANNUAL REPORT of the registrar of shipping recently issued shows that Canada is progressing rapidly in marine matters, in spite of the blue-ruin speeches of Grits. Capital estimated at $26,908,950 is invested in 8,545 Canadian vessels, while 43,968 men and boys are employed in the marine service. The number of vessels registered is 8,545, and the tonnage is 896,965, an increase last year of 344 vessels. Steamers number 3,847, and the tonnage is 711,512. Of the 344 new vessels added to the register last year the value is $1,807,380.

WHERE WOMEN VOTE.

WOMEN VOTED in Alaska the first time at elections held there a little while ago. They were especially active in Skagway, according to reports. The women voters hired vehicles to bring the men to the polls, set out a luncheon for them, provided cigars, and explained the ballot to their less enlightened brothers. They supported the non-partisan ticket, and it was elected against the taxpayers' party, which had been for six years in power. The scarcity of women in Alaska has always accounted for their popularity and how could the chivalrous men there refuse a campaign cigar from a lady? While the women there were apparently an effective power in turning out one party, time alone will tell whether the advent of women into politics will have a beneficial effect. When they resort to methods decried in men, in order to get out the vote, their influence does not bode well for a permanent good, even though they have accomplished a temporary benefit.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

BRITISH COLUMBIA has been a giant asleep for many years, but its nap is being interrupted. According to the official reports, 650 miles of new railway, exclusive of double-tracking, were laid in the province last year. Of this, 285 miles are credited to the Grand Trunk Pacific, 212 miles to the Canadian Northern, and the remainder is divided between the Canadian Pacific and four other provincial lines. Transportation being to a country what lungs are to a human being, the next few years will undoubtedly see the inauguration of great changes in the sunset province.

TUDIE ARNOLD of Blytheville, Ark., has been given a 10-year sentence. He is credited with having had sixteen wives, several of whom testified against him. While this man was, in a way, a matrimonial success, he should have received at least sixteen years, one year for each wife. But perhaps only ten were really against him.

THE LINDSAY POST appeared on Saturday in new form, having been printed on its new Cox-Duplex Web press. Lindsay is looking up in the newspaper line.

What Next Will They Do?
Hamilton Herald.

In Liverpool the suffragets are preparing to establish a church where the preachers are to be women, and men will not be admitted. The next move is not unlikely to be the repudiation of the religion that was founded by the Man of Nazareth.

Labor Men Satisfied.
Brantford Expositor (Lib.)

Brantford workingmen, through the Trades and Labor Council, have joined with the Brantford Board of Trade in protesting against any interference at the present time with the duties on agricultural implements. They know that it is sometimes wise to leave well enough alone.

Growth of Young Ontario.
Toronto Star.

Some idea of the growth of Haileybury is given in the fact that the public school there now employs eleven teachers. And to show the agricultural activity in Young Ontario we may quote the New Liskeard Speaker, which reports that one firm in that town sold this year 39 binders, 32 mowers, 26 hay rakes, 54 drills (seed), 43 harrows, 11 rollers, 12 scufflers, 5 hay tedders, 46 walking plows, 34 wagons, 10 cultivators, 24 cream separators, 5 manure spreaders, 6 gasoline engines, and two engines and saw mills.

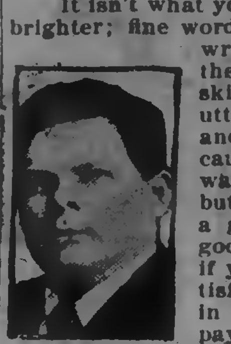
The Biggest One Yet.
Montreal Gazette.

A new 4,000 ton 8,000 horse-power ice-breaker for use on the St. Lawrence, ordered by the Government, is to be built in Canada. It will be the most powerful if not the largest craft turned out of a yard in this country. Its construction will be an experiment, but the company in charge is fitted to do the work, and it is safe to say that success will be achieved. Much has been said in political discussion about the importance of developing a ship-building industry in Canada. Some that was said came from men who in ministerial positions thought it best to get the public service vessels they needed built elsewhere. The new order at Ottawa that led to the giving of the contract to a home institution promises to be the most profitable.

What Intervention Would Mean.
American Review of Reviews.

If intervention were undertaken by us it would be with the announcement of unselfish motives. Our Government would proclaim to the world its purpose to protect the Mexican people from themselves; to help them establish conditions of peace, order and justice; to protect the lives and property alike of Mexicans and foreigners, and to gain neither territorial advantage nor political ascendancy for itself. There would be all sorts of renunciations in advance. Congress, by joint resolution, would pledge the honor of the United States to a merely temporary occupation, and to a full withdrawal as soon as order had been restored. We should have won in the end, and established apparent peace; but we should soon have withdrawn, and Mexico would still have its own future to work out. Meanwhile, we should have sent several hundred thousands of our young men into Mexico, with the sacrifice of many lives, with the public expenditure of from five hundred millions to a thousand millions of dollars, and private economic sacrifice and loss to a far greater extent. It is true, as Senator Sheppard admits, that the desperate conditions in Mexico have resulted in the unfortunate loss of lives of Americans and foreigners, and in the annihilation of property interests to a large amount. But a war of intervention would destroy all that remains of foreign property in Mexico before peace could be established, besides the incomparably greater economic sacrifices involved in the expense of our undertaking.

WORDS
By Walt Mason



It isn't what you say, my friend, that makes the gray world brighter; fine words are furnished without end by any skillful writer; and gifted orators will rise, and boost the silver lining, and fill the space beneath the skies with language that is shining. We all can utter Noble Things, and sweet uplifting phrases, and think we've earned a crown and wings because we talk like blazes. The meanest tightwad in the town can hand words to the sinner, but would he help the man who's down, to get a good square dinner? The helpful word is good as wheat, if backed by helpful action; but if you hone for grub to eat, words are poor satisfaction. The sunny smile is worth its weight in gold if wisely flaunted, but smiling will not pay the freight, if wienerwurst is wanted. I'd rather dry a widow's tears (if she is young and winsome) than fill with platitudes her ears and stand around and grin some. I'd rather give an orphan pie than hand him helpful stories concerning mansions in the sky and all the future glories. Oh, let us not depend on talk, to fill this world with laughter, but help the needy on our block, and do our smiling after.

RIFLE IS HARMLESS.

Modern Military Weapon Not Bad But Shrapnel Is Condemned.

NEW YORK, April 14.—The modern rifle used by the armies of the world was called "a comparatively harmless weapon" yesterday by Dr. A. Depage, president of the International Surgical Association, at the opening of the fourth congress of that organization. President Depage, one of the foremost surgeons of Europe, spoke on the surgery of war.

He protested, in the name of the association, against the use of shrapnell, and urged that the civilized nations abolish these death-dealing projectiles, for the same reasons that brought about the banishment of explosive bullets.

SPECIAL CORNER FOR AFTER DINNER READERS

An Alsatian Quarrel

By DWIGHT NORWOOD

Ever since the Franco-Prussian war there has been bad blood between the inhabitants of Alsace and Lorraine and the German soldiers stationed there to keep them subservient to their conquerors. True, those provinces were wrested from Germany, and many of their inhabitants are Germans. It is the French citizens who are restive under German rule.

Among those French Alsatians who returned to their homes after the war which lost these provinces to France was young Jules Laurant, eighteen years old. His mother was a widow, not yet forty, and still fair to look upon. One of the German officers belonging to the army of occupation met her and desired to marry her. But she was not willing to give her son a stepfather, and she was too patriotic to marry a man whose business it was to keep her country under a foreign yoke. Besides these reasons, she had no love for her admirer.

Captain von Gottschalk was not especially pleased at his refusal and considered Jules Laurant responsible for it. Consequently he took a great dislike to the young man. But Jules did not even know the captain had proposed to his mother. Quite likely had he known it he would have vigorously opposed it; but, being ignorant of the matter, he had nothing to do with the refusal.

One day when Von Gottschalk was marching at the head of his company some persons standing on the sidewalk looking at the soldiers jeered. It happened that Jules Laurant was there. Captain von Gottschalk was very wroth with those who had insulted him and his command and saw Jules standing near them. Jules had not uttered a sound. He had fought the Germans, and they had conquered. He was not the man to jeer at them, though he burned to have another chance to oppose them under arms.

Von Gottschalk, feeling this was a good opportunity to vent his spleen on Jules and withal being very angry, walked right past those who had given the insult up to Jules and cuffed him. Jules was unarmed, while the captain held a sword in his hand. Jules could not retaliate at the time, but he could challenge his insulter to mortal combat.

Jules went home and told his mother of the circumstance, explaining to her that it was not only his wish, but according to custom, that he should send a challenge to Von Gottschalk. She agreed with him, though she saw that the matter was a misfortune to both of them. The captain would be supported by the German government, and Jules, if he won in the fight, would be made to suffer, for the captain, so far as was known, had merely resented an insult to himself and his company which no officer of the German army could brook and retain his commission. For these reasons Mme. Laurant took the affair deeply to heart.

Captain von Gottschalk was an accomplished swordsman.

To make a show of magnanimity he gave Jules the choice of terms and weapons, though as the challenged party he was entitled to this choice himself. Jules, who consulted his mother in everything, was advised by her to choose pistols at ten paces.

The night before the meeting Jules left his waking in the morning to his mother. She gave him a glass of wine to drink before going to bed into which she had dropped a soporific powder. As soon as he had gone to sleep she took his clothes into her own room and, throwing herself on a lounge, rested for the few hours remaining before going on to the ground. Then at the first sign of dawn she put on her son's clothes, wrapped a muffler around her throat and the lower part of her face, pulled a felt hat down over the back of her neck to conceal her hair and waited for her second.

Whether she revealed herself to him or not on the way to the meeting has been kept a secret with much of what followed. On reaching the ground it was suggested that she take off some of the extra clothing that concealed her identity, but she refused. Being placed at only ten paces from her adversary, he would easily have recognized her had it not been for her muffler and the brim of her hat, which she pulled down over her forehead. Two signals were given—the one to aim, the other to fire. Between the first and the second signal Mrs. Laurant lifted the brim of her hat and pulled down her muffler, exposing her face.

Never was a man more thoroughly paralyzed by irresolution at a critical moment. Should he shoot a woman—a woman to whom he had proposed marriage—or permit her to shoot him? Before he had made up his mind which to do she had fired and put a ball into his chest that dropped him on the ground.

Mrs. Laurent's identity was exposed to all the attendants. Realizing what an unfortunate affair Captain Von Gottschalk had fallen into, they pledged each other to secrecy, and he was hurried to a hospital. He recovered and suffered the usual formal reprimand for fighting a duel, three months confinement in a fortress. And that was all that was ever known about the affair.

Jules was still asleep when his mother returned. When he awakened she told him all and convinced him that it was to his and her interest that the matter should be kept within the small circle of those who knew about it. With this in view, he went away till the excitement had blown over.

Learn to Write Well.

First legibility, second sightliness, should be the endeavor in handwriting and let the "character" and the "individuality" take care of themselves. If you wish to devise a signature hard to forge that is another thing, but one's everyday handwriting should be plain and as good looking as one can make it. The art of writing a neat, legible, well punctuated, correctly expressed and spelled letter should belong to every high school graduate, much more to every college graduate, and the thanks of the community are due to those who are testing and trying to improve our methods of education; but they must remember that the letter style is properly more loose and conversational than any other and therefore should not be criticised in just the same way.—Kate Upson Clark in Leslie's.

An Embarrassing Moment.

Sir Edward Chandos Leigh tells this anecdote in "Bar, Bat and Bit." It was told to him by the Dowager Lady Cowper apropos of the days when all the joints were carved on the table:

She was a debutante, very shy, and her old host, who was about to carve a sirloin of beef, turned to her and said, "Lady Anne, will you have upper or under?" Lady Cowper said to me that she had not the least idea what he meant, so in a weak moment she hazarded "upper." Whereupon the host turned to the butler and said in a loud voice, "Take it away and turn it. Young ladies give a great deal of trouble nowadays."

One Letter Names.

Names with only one letter have been bestowed on places as well as persons. There is a village called O in Normandy, not far from Argenton. Two Chinese towns are named respectively Y and U. There is a river Y in Holland, and one of the bays of the Zuyder Zee bears the same brief name. France has a river and Sweden a town of the name of A.

Only Her Latest.

"What is your last name, please madam?" inquired the clerk, deferentially.

"My latest name," corrected the literary woman, who is always careful of her English, "is Mrs. Havre Fourth-ab."—Kansas City Star.

Fair Warning.

"I am glad you have bought a parrot, papa. What will you do if it learns bad language—punish it?"

"No, son; punish you."—Houston Post.

True courage, as well as true wisdom, is not distrustful of itself.

The Insulting Creature!

"Why are you so angry with the doctor?" asked Mr. White of his wife.

"Because," she replied, "when I told him I had a terribly tired feeling he told me to show my tongue."—Lippincott's.

Prolonging Life.

The "don'ts" they're suggesting to lengthen our days
Have merits that move us to thanks and to praise.
You mustn't drink water unless you are sure
After tests that it's perfectly pure.
You mustn't eat this and you mustn't eat that.
You mustn't let worries get under your hat.
Yet you find as you study the warnings with care
That some "don'ts" of importance are not mentioned there.

Don't rock a canoe just for merriment's sake.
Don't sit in the draft that an airship will make.
Don't gaze at the wonders the street may reveal
While you stand in the way of an automobile.
Don't swim out too far, and don't stay out at nights.
Don't swallow queer tablets nor get into fights.
In other words, show as you journey life through
Some plain common sense in whatever you do.

GIN PILLS Brought Relief

Larder Lake, Ont., March 26th.

"I had been suffering for some time with my Kidneys and Urine. I was constantly passing water, which was very scanty, sometimes as many as thirty times a day. Each time the pain was something awful, and no rest at night.

I heard of your GIN PILLS and decided to give them a trial at once. I sent my chum 60 miles to get them and I am pleased to inform you that in less than six hours, I felt relief.

In two days, the pain had left me entirely. I took about half a box and today I feel as well as ever and my kidneys are acting quite natural again."

FEELS LIKE A NEW WOMAN

As Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Dispelled Backache, Headaches and Dizziness.

Piqua, Ohio.—"I would be very ungrateful if I failed to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound the praise it deserves, for I have taken it at different times and it always relieved me when other medicines failed, and when I hear a woman complain I always recommend it. Last winter I was attacked with a severe case of organic weakness. I had backache, pains in my hips and over my kidneys, headache, dizziness, lassitude, had no energy, limbs ached and I was always tired. I was hardly able to do my housework. I had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound on one other occasion, and it had helped me so I took it again and it has built me up, until now I feel like a new woman. You have my hearty consent to use my name and testimonial in any way and I hope it will benefit suffering women."—Mrs. ORPHA TURNER, 431 S. Wayne St., Piqua, Ohio.

Women who are suffering from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

FRANKING MAIL MATTER.

At One Time Soldiers In This Country Enjoyed the Privilege.

The postoffice was first established for the principal and in some countries for the exclusive purpose of carrying official correspondence by mail. Later in France, Great Britain and the United States because of the great expansion and commercialization of the postal system the free carriage of mail matter came to be regarded as a privilege and this privilege was claimed by persons in official position.

In England the house of commons claimed the privilege as early as 1660. It was abolished in Great Britain, however, by the passage of Rowland's cheap postage measure in 1839. In the United States the first appearance of the franking privilege is traceable to the action of the Continental congress assuming control of the postoffice in January, 1776. It is interesting to learn that it was then granted to all private soldiers actually in service for all letters they might write or that might be written to them.

In the early years of the United States government the privilege was granted widely, but it soon became necessary to restrict it. An act of March 3, 1845, limited the privilege to the president, the vice president, members and delegates in congress, the third assistant postmaster general and all postmasters. Other offices were directed to keep quarterly accounts of postage.—Argonaut.

COSMOPOLITAN DAMASCUS.

The Oldest City on Earth, It Shows All the World's Peoples.

At last we are set down in the midst of Damascus, a city that can claim life without a break from its founding back in the dim dawn of the world's history. When Abram crossed the desert from Haran 4,000 years ago this city was standing (Genesis xiv, 15, and xv, 2). She dates back to the time of the Pharaohs in Egypt. In fact, she was old when Greece and Rome were striplings in years. Rome may be termed the Eternal City, but Damascus is twice as old, and though her streets have run red with blood of battle and rapine many times, she has not been overthrown.

"Babylon is an heap in the desert, and Tyre a ruin on the shore," but Damascus remains.

Was there ever such a place to see the nations of the earth parading together? Here in the market place are motley crowds of Persians, Moors, Afghans, Indians, Egyptians, Sudanese, Jews, Bedouins, Druses, Turks, Europeans. The streets—so crooked, so narrow, so dirty, so full of life, with that strange spell of the desert upon them! The residences as seen from the street are ugly and disappointing enough, yet like old barns and tumbledown mills at home are fascinating and picturesque.—Christian Herald.

A New England physician says that if every family would keep a box of mustard in the house one-half of the doctors would starve to death. A mean man suggests that everybody should keep two boxes.—New Orleans Picayune.

Interested the Feline.

"Serenaded my girl last night."

"Any member of the family come out?"

"Only the cat."—Chicago Record-Herald.

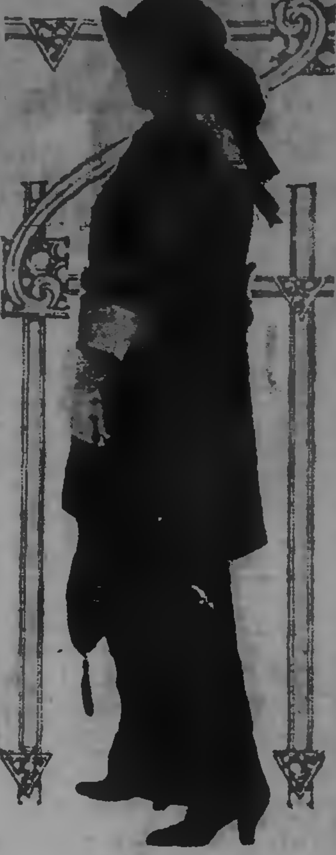
SASH BOWS ON COATS.

They Are Used to Embellish Separate Wraps as Well as Gowns.



WORSTED COAT.

On wraps as well as gowns butterfly bows are an attractive and up to date decoration. Theater wraps, separate coats, etc., are all thus decorated. The charming spring outfit illustrated here includes a coquettish little coat of one of the new worsted mixtures, with collar and cuffs finished with figured silk in shades of rose, green and terra cotta. A smart feature of the coat is the big butterfly bow across the back. Like most ultra coats of the season the skirt of the coat flares considerably below. The coat is worn over a simple little gown of silk poplin. The wide brimmed hat is adorned with velvet ribbon and a cluster of poppies.

Many of the new hand bags are in the shape of enlarged and flattened pears, with a tassel hanging from the lower point and a narrow silver mount at the top suspended on a short ribbon, just long enough to sling over the wrist. But newer still are the pockets which are being worn on the hips of the tailor mades. They may be visible or not, as one wishes, and the front and side draperies which are now in the fashion allow of them being used for practical purposes without in any way upsetting the set of the skirt.

The Charity Bazaar.

A pin stall is a good idea for a bazaar. Every one interested in the affair is asked to contribute one or more pins of one kind or another—toilet pins, safety pins, hairpins, clothes pins, hatpins, drawing pins, rolling pins—pins of any sort or kind. They sell like hot cakes.

A smelling competition is good fun. Fill a dozen little bags with strong smelling spices, herbs and so on. Hang them in a row from a string. Charge a fee of a penny or nickel for guessing what is in each bag. Or fill bottles with ammonia, eau de cologne, turpentine, kerosene, vinegar, lemon juice, rosewater, and so on. A prize can be awarded to the competitor who guesses every one.

Wintergreen Wafers.

Wintergreen wafers are delicious. To make them soak one-half box of gelatin in one-half capful of cold water until soft; then dissolve in one and one-half cupfuls of boiling water and strain. Add confectioner's sugar until stiff, then a few drops of wintergreen essence. Roll out on a board dusted with powdered sugar. Cut in rounds as large as a quarter and lay on oiled paper and you have wholesome homemade candies.

KITCHEN KINKS.

Try lemon and salt for ink stains on the fingers.

Ducks to be good must be young and fat. The underbill if the duck is young will break easily. The breast should be plump and fat.

By slipping stiff collars into a glass or tumbler after they are ironed and allowing them to dry thoroughly they can be made to keep their shape.

To make new potatoes scrape easily and to prevent the fingers becoming soiled while preparing soak the potatoes a little while in water in which a small piece of common soda has been dissolved.

A good way to strengthen the worn places in undergarments is to stitch them with the sewing machine back and forth in parallel lines and then turn the goods and run stitches at right angles to those already taken.

If olive oil is put on a burn immediately it will stop the burning and there will be no pain. Saturate a piece of bandage with the oil, then wrap the burn carefully and saturate again and again, keeping the bandage wet for some time.

MONAGHAN COUNCIL IN ALL DAY SESSION

Many Matters Are Considered by the Township Legislators

SHOW FOR BALL CLUB

The North Monaghan Council held an all-day session at the Court House yesterday, when all the members were present, Reeve Howden presiding.

The minutes of the last two meetings were read and and on motion of Messrs. Robson and Young, were accepted and confirmed.

Mr. Geo. Gillespie, on behalf of the Peterboro Industrial Association came before the Council and asked for a license to hold a small show on the fair grounds for one week, beginning July 6, the show to be Leon Washburn's Summer Carnival, and the proceeds to be used in the interest of the exhibition. Mr. Gillespie asked for a low license fee, and said they might have a second show.

Moved by Messrs. Young and Dobbin, that Mr. Gillespie's request on behalf of the Exhibition for a license be granted, and that the sum fixed for the license fee be $10 for one week per show. Carried.

Show for Baseball Club.

Mr. W. H. Bradburn, on behalf of the Peterboro Baseball Club, asked for a license for a show coming this summer and intending to show at the Carpet Co. grounds. The show will be here for one week, and the proceeds will be used for the Baseball Club.

Mr. Bradburn asked for a moderate license fee and the following license fee was fixed by resolution; moved by Mr. Robson and seconded by Mr. Young, that the club be granted a license for a small show for one week, the license fee to be $10.

Harrison Chattels.

The Reeve reported that certain chattels formerly owned by Thos. Harrison had been placed on the public highway, and the same should be removed. Moved by Mr. Robson, and seconded by Mr. Dobbin, that Mr. Peck, Township Solicitor, give the sheriff notice in writing to remove the Harrison chattels off the public highways on two days' notice.

Moved by Messrs. Robson and Dobbin that the sanitary inspector be paid his salary of $50, under bylaw 673.

A communication was received from Wm. Sutherland, Orpington Road, complaining that certain parties had been driving along the grass at the roadside, spoiling the foot path. No action taken.

Cut M. H. O. Salary.

The matter of the salary of the M. H. O. was then dealt with. Moved by Messrs. Dobbin and Robson that the salary of the M. H. O. be $50 instead of $100, as paid last year.

The assessor and the tax collector were both present and the question of Mr. Brooks' taxes on property on Western Avenue was fully discussed and dealt with. Mr. Brooks was not present, and had not appealed to the Court of Revision. There was no apparent error in the assessment or in the taxes, so the Council considered that they had no power to make any change.

Talk on Roads.

Mr. Geo. W. Bennett, superintendent of Colonization Roads, and past clerk of the township, was present. Mr. Bennett, in his interview with the council, expressed the policy and ideas that the government had gathered from all over the world in road construction, and which it wishes to impress on municipalities desiring to participate in the grants from the government under by-law or otherwise.

Mr. Bennett being quite familiar with local conditions, dealt mostly with the question as it affected this township, and gave a lot of valuable pointers to the council as to the best methods of how to proceed. The Reeve in reply thanked Mr. Bennett for his valuable and instructive talk on road building, as it was of great service to the council by way of valuable suggestions as to how to proceed to get better roads in North Monaghan.

Mr. Howden also thanked Mr. Peck and Mr. Bennett for the very liberal way they used North Monaghan by way of securing a grant under by-law for $600 to be used in the purchase of a rock crusher for the township.

Mr. E. McGregor came before the council and asked for assistance to the extent of about one half the total cost in putting in one foot cement tile in the drain and filling in the same in front of Mr. McGregor's property, where the drain has washed out so deep as to be dangerous to the travelling public. Mr. McGregor estimated that the length of the drain was about 100 yards. The Council considered this matter and assured Mr. McGregor that they would give this matter earnest consideration.

Site for Boat House.

Mr. Arthur Reid came before council and asked for permission to build a boat house partly on the street. Moved by Messrs. Young and Robson that Mr. Reid be given permission to build his boat house out onto the north-east corner of Lansdowne Street, fifteen feet on the road allowance. Also that he pay a yearly rental of 25 cents a year for same. Also that Mr. Reid is to remove the Council at any time.
same upon receiving notice from

Dog Tags.

The assessor brought up the matter of a number of residents applying to him for dog tags. He said that the complaint was that their dogs running into the city without tags were liable to be shot. No action taken.

Errors in Taxes.

The collector of taxes came before council and made a report as follows:

R. P. Scrace, error in assessment, $2.03.

Chamberlain Est., error in collector's roll, $49.60.

F. Shearer, error in assessment, $3.36.

Henry Calcutt, error in assessment, $3.36.

C. J. Waldron, error in assessment, $3.36.

Geo. H. McClelland, error in assessment, $25.45.

Total, $87.66.

The above amounts, which Mr. McIntosh collected, were added to the total of the Collector's Roll, together with $24.18 collected through the five per cent. being added after December 20.

Andrew Kent, error in collector's roll, $2.52.

Senator Cox, error in collector's rolls, $1.

Total, $3.92.

The above errors were refunded to parties as per above stated, and deducted from the collector's roll. Moved by Messrs. Young and Dobbin that the collector's roll be accepted and that the facts as presented by Mr. McIntosh's final report to the Council be also accepted as per the above statement. Carried.

Moved by Messrs. Young and Robson that the treasurer be authorized to add 50 cents into a pay sheet in which there was an error in adding up the total. Also that the 50 cents be charged to Road Division No. 2. The treasurer reported that the overdraft at the Bank of Ottawa is $2,266.58.

A communication was received from City Clerk Armstrong re the boundary roads account. The following resolution of the City Council was forwarded to North Monaghan Council: "That the City Council be sent in monthly statements of all boundary work performed by this township, so as to enable them to have their engineer certify to such accounts."

Streets and Improvements.

A communication was received from T. Hurley asking that Western Ave. be graded from Chamberlain Street north. After discussing the question of opening up new streets, the following resolution was passed unanimously: Moved by Messrs. Young and Dobbin that all parties interested in applying to the Council to have new streets opened or streets to be graded or streets requiring filling, must first apply to the Council, who will pass upon and determine the cost of work to be performed and the said parties must deposit with the township treasurer one half the total cost of said work before the same will be proceeded with. Carried.

Moved by Messrs. Young and Robson that the following accounts be passed and paid:

Peter Fuel and Cartage Co., coal and wood, re charity, $21.50.

Geo. McGregor, one load of stone, Succe's culvert, $2.50.

The Municipal World, Pound Act, 25 cents.

Bert Sanderson, glass and putty for Town Hall, 45 cents.

Total, $24.70.

The meeting then adjourned.

WRIT AGAINST J. K. FLEMING

Company is Seeking Refund of Charges.

WOODSTOCK, N.B., April 14. — A Supreme Court writ has been issued against James K. Flemming, Premier of New Brunswick; W. H. Berry and Edgar R. Teed on behalf of Timothy Lynch & Co., Ltd., lumbermen, for the recovery of $1,830 and costs in connection with the alleged payment of money by the Lynch estate in the matter of timber bonus charges made on the floor of the New Brunswick Legislature a few days ago. This action is taken by F. B. Carvell, K.C., M.P., who is solicitor for the Lynch Company.

It is announced that the basis of this suit is information in the possession of Mr. Carvell to the effect that the Lynch Company, without the knowledge and consent of a sufficient number of the directors, is alleged to have paid over $1,630, amounting to $15 a square mile of its timber limits, in connection with timber bonuses.

Mr. Carvell says that the serving of the writ at this time is due to the fact that he has heard that one of the defendants contemplated a journey out of New Brunswick for his health, and that serving the writ will inform him of the fact that his presence in this province is necessary during the immediate future.

EVERY PRECAUTION TAKEN TO OFFSET THE IMPENDING STORM

Detachments of Troops Have Been Stationed at Critical Places and Navy is Ready to Take Action in the Event of a Tie-Up of the State Railways—Better Wages, Pensions and Hours Are Demanded.

ROME, April 14.—The question of a strike of the railwaymen throughout Italy still hangs in the balance, but the Government, in order to be in readiness for any eventuality, has already occupied certain stations with detachments of troops. Arrangements have been made to replace with bluejackets the sailors on postal steamers plying between the continent and the islands, while the engineers and stokers of the warships will, if necessary, assist the military engineers to carry on the train service.

In several cases damage has been done to the engines, and those responsible have been dismissed. The leaders of the railway men have been holding secret meetings, but what they have decided upon it not known. It is thought by some that the strike may be suddenly proclaimed.

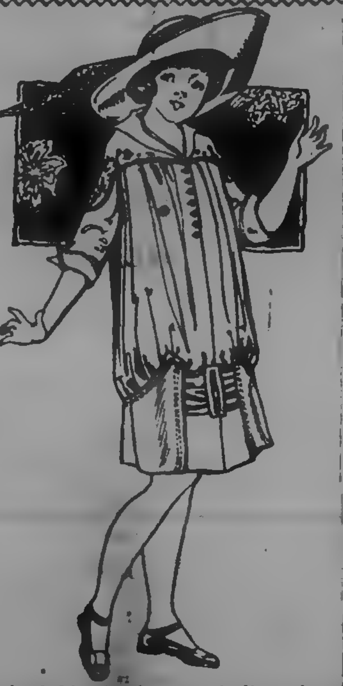
The operating forces permanently engaged by the Italian state railways, including officials of all classes, number about 115,000 individuals, who are joined in a league which has been pressing for increases of wages and diminution of hours of work.

The men's chief demand is for a minimum wage of sixty cents a day. Some get only thirty-four cents a day. Twenty cents extra per night for night work is demanded. More reasonable hours are also asked.

The guardians at the flag stations and the grade crossing women are to work ten hours a day, with one day of rest a week, the latter having no night hours and no work when maternal duties interfere.

Exceptional pensions are demanded for all the employes who are obliged to leave the service through infirmity caused by their service. A minimum pension of one hundred dollars yearly is asked.

The Government asserts that these claims cannot possibly be granted, as they would involve a yearly expenditure of over $20,000,000, which the budget of the country cannot stand.



A child's frock of pink linen has been sketched from the outfit provided by a wealthy New York mother for her children Palm Beach trip. The simplicity of the design with a few dashing touches is characteristic of the tasteful frocks that are often worn by children of wealth. A sash and buckle of the linen, pearl buttons and a little embroidery are the sole trimming. Panama hat, buttoned strap slippers and white hose finish the outfit.

PACIFIC COAST CITIES PLAN BIG CELEBRATION IN 1915

Every city of importance on the Pacific Coast between Alaska and Mexico is being invited to participate in the celebration that is to mark the opening of the Panama Canal next year. It is planned to have a "Convention of the Festival Cities of the Pacific Coast" on April 2nd and 3rd, 1915, in the Exposition Grounds at San Francisco with parades and pageants of unexampled brilliance. Canadian fraternal organizations will be invited to be present with those from the United States.

Hands-together-up-and-down- the Coast" is the slogan of these Festival cities and it is hoped that by means of this spirit of co-operation many thousands of tourists will be given special facilities for seeing not only the Exposition but the whole of the magnificent territory, rich in nature's wonders, that fronts the Pacific Ocean, from Prince Rupert to San Diego. Many of these travellers to the Exposition will take the Canadian route either going to or returning from San Francisco. Splendid steamships will carry passengers between Puget Sound and Prince Rupert, the gateway to Alaska, the terminus of the most modern of transcontinental railways, and a city that is advancing by leaps and bounds. Through the newly opened up wonderland of the Canadian Rockies they will pass on to the Prairie section of the Grand Trunk Pacific and can return by a variety of routes to their homes in the middle West, the Eastern States and Europe, making a tour through one of the most fascinating regions in the world.

LORD HALDANE---BACHELOR

Lord High Chancellor of Britain Successful as War Administrator

Lord Haldane has come into the limelight again as a result of Premier Asquith's taking up the burden of Secretary of War, following Col. J. E. B. Seely's resignation. The Lord Chancellor was for some years the successful political head of the army in the Asquith Cabinet, and the cables say he is busy coaching Mr. Asquith for his new office.

Of Ancient Family.

Fifty-seven years of age, the First Viscount of Cloan and Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain is the most famous representative of a very ancient Scottish family. His mother was the daughter of Mr. Richard Burdon Sanderson, of West Jesmond, Northumberland. Lord Haldane was educated at Edinburgh Academy and afterwards at Edinburgh and Gottingen universities. At the latter place he gained his mastery over the difficult German language, and his love for German philosophy and literature. At the age of twenty-three he was called to the Bar, and after eleven years' hard work on the Chancery side, during which time he gathered together a very large practice and the consequent profits, he was made a Q.C. in 1890 at the early age of thirty-four. Five years previously he had sought and gained Parliamentary honors as M.P. for Haddingtonshire, which division he represented for twenty-seven years, until his promotion to the Woolsack in 1911.

Still a Bachelor.

Lord Haldane's immense intellectual powers are not lightened by too much humor. He takes himself and the world in general very seriously. He has made several excursions into the world of literature and besides translating Schopenhaur's famous work, "Will and Idea," is author of "Life of Adam Smith," "Education and Empire," and "The Pathway to Reality. He has a wonderful facility in elucidating facts and a more than wonderful facility in expressing the result.

LORD HALDANE.

He can speak for hours on any topic he is interested in and at a pace which is the subject of admiration to his friends and the despair of the poor shorthand writers transcribing in his walks. He is still a bachelor and ever likely to remain so. It is a pity, as given an ordinary self-respecting woman there would have been a masterly struggle for "the last word."

The Lord Chancellor, in addition to being somewhat Germanic, in appearance, is a great admirer of German literature and philosophy. He speaks and reads German with equal facility as his own language. He is a great protagonist of the movement for the general reduction of armaments.

PLAN GOLD MINING WHERE INCA PALACES STOOD

Search Begun By Spaniards Five Centuries Ago to be Continued

Callao, Peru, April 14.—In that section of Peru where the Inca kings are supposed to have obtained their treasures of gold, up to the time when Pizarro and his followers bore down upon them, mining with the most approved kind of machinery is to be got under way soon. No development i slooked upon with more interest since the Cerro de Pasco mines began to pour forth their streams of silver and copper. The upper reaches of the Maranon river are expected to yield much of the yellow metal, and the historical interest that attaches to the territory is no small factor in focusing attention on this principal tributary of the Amazon River.

Although the ancient history of the gold workings is more or less obscure, the existing monuments of the Inca rule and the traditions of the present day Indians living in the Maranon River territory seem to point to the fact that the gold extracted in that early day must have been of great volume. At the time of the Spanish conquest between what are now the Indian villages of Chupan and Chuquibamba, in the department of Huanuco, was the centre of a large and importnat Inca population. Pillco, the ruins of which are called Huanuco Viejo, was the capital. Pillco is said to have been the largest city of the Inca nation next to Cuzco. Here were many fine palaces and temples, and it is in this vicinity that mining is now to be undertaken extensively.

History tells us that at the time of the seizure and captivity of the Inca king, Atahualpa, in 1533, the imperial palaces and temples were stripped of their gold by a special expedition headed by Hernando Pizarro. There appears to be little doubt that the gold furnished as a ransom came originally from the Maranon placer deposits. Local tradition has it that there were more than seven tons of gold buried by the Incas near Huanuco to prevent it from falling into the hands of invaders. The purpose of the numerous guard towers, the ruins of which still are seen on precipitous and well-nigh impregnable cliffs overhanging the Maranon River, is said to have been to facilitate signaling on the approach of some supposed enemy.

To reach the new mining country the preferable route is from Callao over the Central and Cerro de Pasco railways, and then follow four days of animal transport, via Yanahuanca, Banos and Union. By way of Huanuco the trip will take one day more. There is another route available, from the port of Supe, and this also requires five days of animal transport. New railroad construction already has been surveyed to make the mining district easier of approach and to facilitate ore shipments.

The conclusion has been reached that much of the Inca population was employed in working the upper gravel benches of the river, and that this gold [illegible] in reality the basis for the enormous wealth of the ancient rulers. The reason the auriferous gravel deposits were not worked below the river water level is thought to have been the large flow in the Maranon, which, in all probability, made it impossible to work the real river bed.

The Incas, according to mining experts, could have done nothing more than penetrate below the crust. It is here that modern machinery is to be used in bringing the material from its hiding place.

BOWSER'S MEDAL

Won For His Scholarship, It Gives Him an Idea.

By M. Quad.

[Copyright, 1914, by Associated Literary Press.]

AFTER dinner Mr. Bowser went upstairs in search of a collar button. In about an hour he came down with a medal in his hand to say to Mrs. Bowser:

"I haven't seen it before in twenty years."

"Is it your lost rubber boot?" she asked.

"It's my champion medal."

"For winning a fat man's race?"

"There you go with your sarcasm! It's my medal for being the best scholar in a class of 400."

"Indeed!" observed Mrs. Bowser.

As she said no more and simply glanced at the medal, Mr. Bowser glared at her. After a minute he said:

"I should think you would want to know things."

"Yes?"

"Woman was not ordained to know much in comparison with man, but she should at least be able to understand everyday things. I have often wondered at your ignorance and felt it my duty to turn teacher, but you have such a temper, you know."

"I'm sorry about my temper," said Mrs. Bowser meekly.

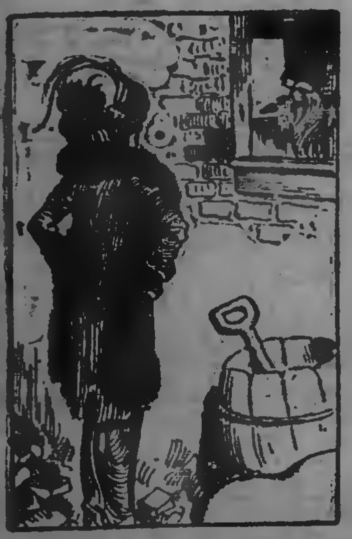
"And you'd be willing to learn and not raise a row?"

"Yes."

"Well, I'll open an evening school, so to speak, and try to learn you a few things."

"You mean teach," she interrupted.

"There you go the first thing!" he shouted as his spectacles fell off his nose. "Don't you suppose I know what I'm talking about? When I say learn I mean learn, and if you are going to jump in on me like that this school will stop before it begins!"



"I'VE BEEN IN A BRICKYARD."

"I want to be 'learned,' and I won't say anything more."

The Lesson Begins.

"See that you don't. Now, then, you have gone along the street and seen a pile of bricks?"

"Yes."

"You recognized them as bricks?"

"I did."

"And you didn't wonder if they were turnips?"

"No."

"Very well. Did you ever stop to think how bricks were made—whether they came out of the ground like potatoes or grew on trees like apples? No, you never did, of course. Not one woman in a million has."

"But I've been in a brickyard and seen the clay dug, tempered and molded and then the bricks put in kilns and burned," softly protested Mrs. Bowser.

"Then you do know what bricks are composed of? I wouldn't have believed it, but I'll give you a credit mark. Perhaps you can tell me what mortar is? Mortar is pretty closely related to bricks, you know."

"Yes, without mortar bricks would be almost useless. Which of the two kinds of mortar do you mean?"

"So you know there are two kinds. Describe them, please."

"The mortar used for brick and stone is composed of sand and lime alone unless a little cement is added, and that for plastering houses has hair mixed with it. The finishing coat on a wall is not mortar at all, but plaster of paris, as it is called. Is that right?"

It was right, and Mr. Bowser knew it was right, and yet there was real disappointment in his tones as he said:

"It's right enough for a woman, and you have indeed surprised me. You may possibly be able to answer another question. In the midst of your gadding about you may have ascertained how this house is heated."

"Yes, I have. We have a hot air furnace."

Failed Again.

"You've hit it, but it's probably because you've wasted at least three tons of coal this winter. We have a hot air furnace, but what is the principle on which it works?"

"There is a cold air box leading into the furnace, and the cold air is warmed by the combustion of coal and sent through the various pipes and registers. Shut off the cold air and you would get no heat."

He had hoped to trap her on the furnace, but her reply showed she had a better understanding of it than he had, and there was a hardness and sarcastic note in his voice as he continued:

"I beg to congratulate you, Mrs. Bowser, and I almost feel as if you could change a ten dollar bill and not get swindled out of a dollar or two. One more question. We have a range in the kitchen. It is made of iron, as you probably know. How is that iron obtained?"

"In the first place, they dig the ore," replied Mrs. Bowser. "Then the ore is melted and separated from the foreign substances. Then it is fluxed and remelted and run off into pigs. These pigs are again melted at the stove foundry, and the hot iron is run off into molds in sand. Any more questions, dear?"

"I suppose you think you are awful smart!" growled Mr. Bowser.

"No smarter than the average woman," was the reply. "I think we had better open two schools. There are a few questions I should like to ask you. What is a window glass made of? You see it at home, in the office, all around you. It is one of the main factors in building up mighty cities."

"Woman, what are you trying to turn this thing into?" he bellowed as his face turned the color of a beet. "We will let window glass and all other sorts of glass go to ~~pot. I never yet~~ set out to learn you"—

"Teach me, dear."

"Teach be hanged! That's twice you have crowded that word down my throat. I say it's learn, and when I say a thing that settles it. Enjoyable evening! Happy home! Domestic bliss!"

"I'm very sorry, and I won't interrupt any more. It was kind of you to offer to teach me everything worth knowing, and I gratefully appreciate it. Please tell me how window glass is made."

Mr. Bowser in a Trap.

Mr. Bowser had no more idea than the man in the moon, and he didn't propose to be put in a hole. He therefore felt that his only safety was in bluffing it out, and after a minute he replied:

"Never you mind about the glass business! It's enough that you break about a hundred dollars' worth a year."

"They don't use glue, do they?"

"I said let it go!"

"But can't you tell me if they use glue, or rosin, or what?"

"No, I can't, and I won't! I sat down here to enjoy my fireside and learn you"—

"Teach me how window glass is made. It will be kind of you."

Mr. Bowser drew a long breath. He was either going to kick the cat or jump over a chair and knock that window glass question sky high when the doorbell rang. Here was his chance. Quick to seize it, he ran down the hall, flung open the door and laid violent hands on the boy who stood on the steps. It wasn't until the victim of Mr. Bowser's wrath dashed out of the gate that he was recognized as a telegraph boy.

"Here you! It was a mistake!" shouted Mr. Bowser after him.

"Oh, it was!" replied the lad as he halted and waved the dispatch in his hand.

"Yes. What you got?"

"Something that serves you right. Your mother-in-law will be here in the morning to stay a month!"

Tripe In Butter.

Select a honeycombed piece, cut in three inch squares and soak in cold water for a couple of hours. Dip pieces in a fritter batter made of one egg to a scant cupful of flour, a pinch of salt and a cupful of milk and fry in hot oil or drippings until golden brown.

A Sewing Hint.

When using silk on the machine take a small round piece of cloth, cut a hole in the centre of it and slip on over the spool pin. Then put on the spool, and the piece of cloth will prevent the thread slipping off the spool and winding about the pin.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, April 13.—At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market, offerings this morning for sale were 450 cattle, 25 sheep and lambs, 1400 hogs and 400 calves.

There was no important change in the condition of the market for cattle, prices being steady, owing to the small offerings and the limited demand. Packers and butchers generally carried over fair stocks after supplying a very good Easter trade. On the whole trade was slow, and, while the supply was small, it was in excess of the requirements.

Demand for calves was fair, and the supply was ample, with steady prices. Trade in sheep and lambs was slow. The feeling in the market for hogs continues very firm under a good demand from packers, and sales of Ontario selected stock were made at $10 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $8.50 to $8.75; do., medium, $6.50 to $7.50; do., common, $5 to $6; canners, $4 to $4.25; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $7 to $7.25; do., medium, $5 to $6.50; do., bulls, $5 to $7.50; milkers, choice, each, $80 to $90; do., common and medium, each, $70 to $75; springers, $55 to $65.

SEA SAFETY.

Some of the Things Which Recent Conference Will Bring About.

The signing of the agreement drawn up by the delegates to the International Conference on Safety at Sea, at the British Foreign Office, brings into force new rules which will undoubtedly make ocean traveling safer and shipping disasters fewer in the future.

Lord Mersey, president of the conference, sumarized the principal provisions of the convention. He said:

"An international service is to be established by the nations chiefly interested for the purpose of an ice patrol and ice observations, as well as the destruction of derelicts in the North Atlantic. It is to be under the control of the United States.

This service is to take over and continue the work done by the two vessels employed by the United States in 1912-13 in locating ice, in determining its limits to the south, the east, and the west, and in keeping in touch with it as it moves southward in order that vessels may be kept informed by wireless telegraphy of its position.

"The service will also continue the ice observation work started last year by Great Britain with the object of determining before the ice becomes a peril the fundamental conditions which govern its movement.

"Great Britain will also continue the duty of dealing with dangerous derelicts east of a line drawn from Cape Sable to latitude 34 North longitude 70 west. The waters to the west of this line will be watched by the United States.

"The duty is also imposed on all shipmasters to report the presence of dangerous ice and derelicts and a code has been prepared to facilitate this reporting.

"When ice is reported on or near the track a ship must proceed during the night at moderate speed, or alter its course, so as to clear the danger zone.

"The practice by which routes across the Atlantic are fixed by agreement between the steamship companies has been left unaltered and the Governments undertake to impress all shipowners with the desirability of following as far as possible these routes.

"The effective lighting of boat decks is provided for by the convention, and the carrying of Morse lamps is made compulsory.

"An international code for urgent and important signals has been adopted.

"It was impossible to revise the international collision regulations, as many states which were parties to these regulations were not represented on the conference, but the convention binds the contracting states to bring about a revision of these regulations.

"Other points affecting the safety of navigation were found impossible of embodiment in definite articles, but the committee submitted resolutions embodying its views."

Facts About Deafness.

According to a French statistician, males are more subject to aural diseases than females, and out of every seven middle-aged persons there are two who do not hear so well with one ear as with the other. In every 1,000 children under fifteen years of age 4 per cent. show symptoms of ear disease and 6 per cent. a marked deficiency in hearing power. The liability to disease increases from birth to the age of forty and then begins gradually to decrease as old age advances. Out of the total number of cases subjected to surgical treatment in France in one year it is estimated that about 57 per cent. were cured and 30 per cent. permanently improved.

Married by Blood.

In the island of Banquey there is a tribe of Dusuns differing widely in language, religion and customs from other tribes bearing that name. Marriages are performed in the forest in the presence of two families. There is no public gathering or feast. The rite consists in transferring a drop of blood with a wooden knife from the calf of the man's leg to a similar cut in the woman's leg. After marriage the man takes the bride to her home, where he resides in future as a member of the family.

Restoring the Family Confidence.

"Wonders continue to happen. Last night my small son, who is just taking up algebra, brought me one of his problems. I once told him in a careless moment that I used to lead my class in algebra. Well, I took his problem and studied on it a long time."

And couldn't do it?"

"Yes, I could—and did."

Enlightened the Vicar.

The new vicar was making pastoral calls in his parish, says The Manchester Guardian, and stopped to converse with a small boy at the garden gate.

"And where does your father go on Sundays, my little man?"

"Well, on fine Sundays he goes golfing, and on wet Sundays he turns us all out to church so he can have a bit of peace in the house."

Field Work.

"Where's you son, Hiram?"

"Going to an agricultural college."

"I've heard them college ain't practical."

"You heard wrong. They put 'em right out in the field. My boy writes that next year they're going to let him take care of centre field."

The Grand Promoter

He Was Almost Out When Luck Turned

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1914, by Associated Literary Press.

It was almost a zero temperature in his office when the grand promoter got down there the other morning.

For half an hour he tried to build a fire with sawdust and an old derby hat, but it was no go.

If he went up to the dentist's office to get warm he would be dunned for $3 borrowed money.

That morning at the table the landlady had glared at him.

He must come down with the cash or skip.

He was played out at every free lunch place within a mile.

Never before in his career as a grand promoter and a grand deadbeat had he been so close to a desperate situation. He felt that he had been wronged. He felt that he was a victim to be pitied.

In a drawer of his three legged desk was an old revolver. He had bought it of a junkman for 15 cents, and he had made use of it to menace his clothes cleaner when that person came up and stood in the door and shouted out:

"You owe me $4, und if you don't pay him oop I shall have you in prison in two minits!"

A sight of the deadly pistol had always sent the cleaner downstairs on the jump and saved the major's dignity, but shouldn't it be used for a different purpose now?

The major placed the muzzle of the weapon to his ear and shuddered.

He opened his mouth, thrust the pistol into the cavity and sighed.

He held it against his heart and counted twenty and—didn't pull the trigger!

"No, no; I will live on!" he exclaimed as the pistol was replaced and he stood up.

"That's right, old rooster!" exclaimed a hearty voice at the door, and the major turned to behold a jolly faced stranger.

"What can I do for you, sir?"

"Give sympathy and help to a brother in trouble."

"Were you about to commit suicide?"

"I was."

"In hard luck?"

"The hardest kind."

"Don't do it, major. I came in here two months ago with only $8 left. I had determined to take a desperate chance—that is, to invest my last shilling with you. You sold me some silver stock at 3 cents on the dollar. You said it would soon be worth 90."

"But I was deceived," replied the major, who expected a blowing up.

"You mean you lied to me—lied like a trooper. But don't get nervous over it. I have called to thank you."

"You—you have!"

"Yes, sir. I have sold that stock at par!"

"And—and as I put you on to a good thing you have come to divide?"

"Nixy on the divide, major; just my thanks."

"But you have made thousands!" was wailed.

"Had to or bust."

"You ought to give me $1,000."

"I have to take a trip around the world."

"Say $500, then."

"I go to see about a castle on the Rhine, major. Ta, ta!"

Major Crowfoot's legs gave under him, but he wabbled to the desk and brought out that old revolver.

It should be death this time.

The grim grimmest of deaths.

He had had a fortune in his hands and let it go to another.

Hang on? Of what use when the world had given him the boot? No, he would not hang on. He would be found dead in his chair, and his suicide should lay heavy on the conscience of those who had picked on him and driven him to a rash act.

The major had the muzzle to his ear again and was wondering if it made any difference which ear received the fatal bullet when a woman's voice cried out:

"Hold, rash man—hold!"

"I will not!"

"You must!"

"I am ruined and can no longer face the world."

"Major Crowfoot, don't you recognize my voice? Put down that immoral weapon and turn your face this way."

"My landlady!" he gasped as he obeyed her.

"Believe me!"

"But you gave me the cold glare this morning."

"I did and was sorry for it five minutes later. You owe me about $90, but should a landlady worthy of a name glare about a trifle like that?"

"But I can't pay it!" despairingly announced the major.

"No one asks you to. Room and board with me right along for the next two years and nothing will be said about the bill."

"Mrs. Clawhammer, you can't mean it!"

"That's the sort of a woman I am. And there will be porterhouse steak for you at every dinner."

"Am I alive or dead?"

"As lively as a cricket, major, and please take this $20 and use it as your best judgment dictates."

"I certainly am dead and in paradise."

"And come to dinner early, major, and change your seat to the head of the table."

And when she had departed the major kicked over the rusty old stove, broke the backs off the two chairs and flew down to a lunch place he knew of and ordered three pork sausages well done.

Coloring an Abyssinian Bride.

Western brides have an easier time than their Abyssinian sisters. On the occasion of her marriage an Abyssinian bride has to change her skin. From ebony she has to become the color of cafe au lait. To accomplish this the expectant bride is shut up in a room for three months. She is covered with woollen stuff, with the exception of her head. Then they burn certain green and fragrant branches. The fumes which they produce destroy the original skin, and in its place comes the new skin, soft and clear as a baby's.

ERIE MANAGER IS ABLE TO PULL THE STRINGS

Erie, April 14.—From Charlotte, North Carolina, comes word from Manager Heinie Smith that there are several prospects of gaining players of the Erie team of the Canadian league. Smith has already signed up one catcher by the name of John A. Butler, of Worcester, Mass., and indications are favorable that he will get several players from the Buffalo Internationals and the Boston Braves who are now at Charlotte, on the spring training trip.

One of the most promising youths Smith is angling ofr is a young catcher by the name of Norman McNeil, who is to be let out by Buffalo. The Bisons have found themselves possessed of too many catchers. They have three old heads in La Longe: Kritchell and Stephens. Manager Clymer acknowledges that McNeil has been doing good work back of the bat. He had the build and the wind, but the position is clogged with veterans and much as he hates to lose the youngster, he finds no alternative. As yet the manager is undecided whether to send him to Wilkesbarre, which team Clymer owns, or farm him out to Erie.

Blessed with an abundance of pitchers, Clymer is also forced to cut down the staff. One of the most pr[illegible]ing recruits to be let go is a youngster by the name of Car Brown. Brown was offered a berth with the Charlotte team, the manager of which organization has come to be rather sweet on the youngster, but Brown has refused to remain there. He wants to come to Erie, and be near his home, Bemus Point, N.Y.

C. J. Gravelle, a catcher, whose home is in Waterdown, is another likely candidate Smith is after. Being a former manager of the Bisons, and having a close friend in Manager Clymer, Smith is in a position to get just about what he wants from the Buffalo team. He has several deals hanging fire other than the ones mentioned above, but as none have been formally closed, no definite word has been received.

With McNeil and Gravelle, together with Butler, Frank Daniels and John Beck, Smith has an array of backstop material that should produce a first-rate regular and a good second string man. Butler looks likely for the regular berth, as he is an ex-big-leaguer. He recently played with Jersey City in the International.

CANADIAN BALL LEAGUE MAY YET RECEIVE HIGHER RATING

President James Fitzgerald, of the Canadian League, is still hopeful of securing a Class "B" rating for his circuit.

President Garry Hermann, of the National Commission, has sent word to Canadian League managers that a special meeting will be held some time this week and that an effort will be made to settle the rating of the Canadian League.

President Fitzgerald said the letter he received from the commission, while it did not say definitely that the Canadian League would receive the higher rating, was most encouraging, and stated that the commission would investigate the matter thoroughly. An answer is expected this week end.

Local fans will be interested to know that Billy Garlow, the Indian sold to Boston Americans a couple of months ago, is still with Manager Bill Carrigan's team, and is well thought of by Carrigan. Garlow is a pretty wise lad, and will last just as long with the Red Sox as it is possible for any one in his position to do.

The Cleveland Americans announce the release of two players to the Cleveland American Association Club. They are First Baseman Paulette, obtained from the Mobile, Ala., Southern Association League, and Shortstop Dunlap, formerly of the London, Ontario, team of the Canadian League.

Dunlap recently wrote to a London friend saying he didn't expect to stay with the Cleveland Naps this season. He is confident, however, that with a little more seasoning, he will get another chance. Both Cleveland clubs are owned by the same people, Summers and Kilfoll.

London has no hope of getting Dunlap back for another season.

MOLYNEAUX IS NOW CHARGED WITH BIGAMY

Will Be a Little Late For the Ball Game This Season

Hamilton, April 14.—Bert Molyneaux, the well-known baseball player, faced a fresh charge in Police Court yesterday morning. He was charged with having gone through a form of marriage with an eighteen-year-old girl in St. Thomas, Pearl Ringer by name. She is a Hamilton girl. The police allege that Molyneaux was formerly married to a Miss Mary Hayes, Virginia, while he was at college in that state.

He was remanded for one week.

Molyneaux, it will be remembered, was committed for trial in the higher court last week on a charge of stealing sixty dollars and an overcoat from a butcher on the market.

Molyneaux, speaking to the newspaper men said: "I guess I'm a little late for the ball game this year, but I think I could put up a very neat game."

Molyneaux's friends, however, are rather of the opinion that the latter's court proceedings will monopolize the greater part of his attention this season.

ADVICE TO MAN WHO BUYS HIS FIRST MACHINE

What Not to Do With the Automobile. Above All Don't Tinker.

The automobile buying season is in full blast, and many purchasers will be car owners for the first time. E. W. Headington, manager of one of the automobile companies in this territory, gives the following advice to such owners:

"One of the most important things for the automobilist to learn is not to 'tinker.' There is no mystery concealed under the hood of a car, there is nothing that should be kept secret from the car owner, but the temptation to 'tinker' usually becomes too great; a delicate adjusting screw is turned or a wire is disconnected, and then—trouble begins.

Wait for Emergencies.

"Talk to the repairman, study the instructions, learn all you can, and then when the emergency comes, you'll be prepared. But wait for the emergency. Do not tinker. Don't try to make adjustments when the car is already in adjustment. Don't begin tearing down until you have isolated the trouble.

"Don't try to improve the timing of the valves or the ignition; the manufacturer knows best. Treat your car as you would an expensive watch. A lot of trouble may be avoided by having an expert examine the car about once every two months. There are many little wrongs that may quickly develop into big wrongs if not discovered and checked.

Go to Experts.

"Don't patronize the cheap mechanic—his work is usually in keeping with his price. Keep your car out of the hands of the school boy who offers to work free of charge. The manufacturer is always ready to advise and help you. His reputation is in your hands and don't be too much inclined to blame the car when the first little trouble arises.

"Each machine has peculiarities of its own, and no matter how experienced you may be in the operation of motor cars in general, it is essential that the manufacturer's instructions be carefully read and followed.

"The idea that there is no particular care necessary for the successful operation of a car, aside from filling the tanks and radiator is erroneous. There is no more carefully designed mechanism in existence, and is usually the case with all complicated machines, careful inspection and attention to details will prolong its life and insure successful operation to an immeasurable degree. Treat your car well, lubricate it regularly. The result will be efficient service at minimum upkeep."

OTTAWA, April 13.—Alfred Ambridge of this city, aged 12, was shot through the body and probably fatally wounded while out crow hunting near here. ITALIAN IS ARRESTED.

Prisoner at Prescott Suspected of Being Sisinni's Slayer.

OTTAWA, April 14.—A man believed to be Antonio Pedro, who on Sunday afternoon shot and killed John Sisinni, another Italian, in a boarding-house in George street west, was arrested yesterday afternoon at Prescott, Ont., while attempting to cross the international line at Ogdensburg. Two friends, Tony Mandell and Tony Giratti, both of this city, were apprehended at the C. P. R. station yesterday afternoon, after returning from Prescott, and were held on a charge of aiding and abetting a fugitive from justice.

Immediately following their arrest the police made a round-up of foreigners who were present when the shooting occurred, and as a result six men and Donato Maraschino, the woman who is one of the central figures in the case, were taken to police headquarters last night and locked up. They will be questioned closely by the authorities.

Billy Burke Marries.

NEW YORK, April 14—Announcement was made here yesterday of the marriage on Saturday at Hoboken, N.Y., of Miss Billie Burke, the actress, to Florens Ziegfeld, jr., the theatrical manager. The couple plan to sail for a honeymoon in Europe at the close of this spring of Miss Burke's present New York engagement.

Mr. Ziegfeld married Anna Held in Paris in 1907. They separated two years ago, and in January, 1913, got a divorce.

Fusillade From the Dark.

SOMERSET, Pa., April 14.—John and Joseph D'Angelo, cousins, were shot and killed, and Mrs. Frank D'Angelo, Joseph's mother, was dangerously wounded at Boswell, near here yesterday.

Seven persons were arrested, five of them blood relatives of the D'Angelo family. The boys were returning home from Easter festivities at the house of a friend. The police have no motive for the assassination.

TO DISBAR HAGEL

WINNIPEG, April 13.—At a meeting of benchers of the Law Society of Manitoba, a resolution was passed that the solicitor to the society be instructed to take immediate steps to have Percy E. Hagel's name struck off the rolls of the society. Hagel is now serving a prison term for having, as counsel for Krafchenko, assisted the latter to escape from custody.

Shock Fatal To Inventor.

MONTE CARLO, April 13.—Ferdinand Forest, an aged inventor of a motor, died suddenly yesterday while testing a new auto boat, in which he was about to attempt to break the mile speed record. The boat came into collision with a jetty. It was only slightly damaged, but the excitement proved fatal to the inventor, who suffered from heart disease. Forest was the first to construct a four-cylinder engine and apply the magneto ignition.

Those connected with "Zephra" wish to thank the managements of the local picture houses for running advertising slides for them for, while the regular price has been paid for this, it must be remembered that they are advertising a counter attraction, and it is a spirit of "boosting your own people" that it is hoped the public will show by giving the production of "Zephra" and your own local organization their patronage.

Plan is open at Grand, and to-night will be the big one.

Mystery of a Bridegroom.

The mysterious disappearance of a bridegroom at a wedding is recalled by T. F. Thiselton Dyer in his "Strange Pages From Family Papers." The wedding took place in Lincolnshire about the year 1750. "In this instance the wedding party adjourned after the marriage ceremony to the bridegroom's residence and dispersed, some to ramble in the garden and others to rest in the house till the dinner hour. But the bridegroom was suddenly summoned away by a domestic who said that a stranger wished to speak with him, and henceforward he was never seen again. All kinds of inquiries were made, but to no purpose, and terrible as the dismay was of the poor bride at this inexplicable disappearance of the bridegroom, no trace could be found of him."

A FROCK FOR MI-CAREME.

Mandarin crepe in old blue has been used to develop this design, simplified for Lenten occasions, yet none the less at the top of the mode. The combination of jacket blouse and bouffant panniers with soft neck and sleeve frills made it most becoming to the matron for whom it was made. The low neck in front is the most favored type in all fashionable frocks and blouses both for older and for younger women.

BRIDE ACCUSED OF MURDER

TAUNTON, Mass., April 14.—Mrs. Bradford Scudder, a bride of three months, was arrested on a charge of murder after her brother-in-law, Edgar Scudder, a farmer, had been shot and killed in her apartments yesterday. According to Medical Examiner Charles A. Atwood, the woman admitted that she fired the shot because "there was no privacy in the house."

Scudder was 54 years of age. The woman is 30 years of age.

BUXTON A VISCOUNT.

New Governor-General of South Africa Raised to Peerage.

LONDON, April 14. — Sidney C. Buxton, the newly-appointed Governor-General of the Union of South Africa, was yesterday created a viscount. He was formerly President of the Board of Trade, and at one time Postmaster-General, in which capacity he introduced two-cent postage for letters between the British Isles and the United States.

The new viscount is an authority on the question of the relations between employed and workman, having participated in the settlement of many disputes. His experience in this connection is expected to be very useful to him in South Africa, where the labor problem is very acute.

Microscopic Handwriting.

It is possible to possess a certain elegance of penmanship and yet be almost undecipherable as a writer. A distinguished literary man, whose name I mercifully withhold, writes a microscopically small hand, almost fairylike in its outlines and possessing a quite elfin elusiveness—almost every word can be read as some other word. Waggish friends who received from him letters on commonplace matters would sometimes affect to regard them as descriptions of his exciting adventures in the Alps, the burning down of his house or something similarly sensational and reply accordingly. After being long the subject of such merry jests he decided to silence the scoffers by using a typewriter.—London Chronicle.

NO AMOUNT OF WIND RAISED ABOARD A SHIP CAN PROPEL IT

As a Matter of Fact, the Force of the Air Driven Against the Canvas Would Have a Tendency to Send the Vessel Backward Instead of Forward.

"If an electric fan could be made large enough to throw a sufficient amount of wind to move a small sailboat and such a fan was placed on the end of a boat with the wind from the fan blowing against the sail on the very boat the fan is on, is it possible that it could move the boat? The argument is that the fan, being on the same boat as the sail, cannot move itself. But as the air detaches itself from the fan and hits the sail, my idea is that it can, provided it has the strength to move the boat. Please give an answer."

This question is worth answering because it involves a principle of physics that ought to be universally understood and ignorance of which may lead to the waste of both time and money upon inventions that will not work.

The writer of the question thinks that because the air, as she expresses it, is "detached from" the fan when it starts off to strike the sail, it ought to act like an ordinary wind and push the boat before it. But she would not think so if she reflected that the particles of air driven from the fan resemble a swarm of bullets shot from a gun.

The air particles get their force from the fan as the bullets get theirs from the gun, and just as the gun recoils with a force equal to that which it imparts to the bullets, so the fan, whether driven by electricity or steam or turned by hand, inevitably recoils with the same amount of force that it imparts to the air.

To make clearer the comparison between a stream of bullets from a gun and a stream of wind from an electric fan, imagine a Maxim gun placed at the rear of a boat and an impenetrable target at the front, and then suppose that the gun should hurl a continuous current of bullets against the target. Anybody can see that the boat would not be driven forward, because the recoil of the gun would constantly force it backward with the same energy with which the bullets, striking the target, forced it ahead.

But if the gun were placed on shore or on another support its stream of bullets striking the target would drive the boat forward, because then their effect would be like that of a wind blowing freely across the water and having no connection with anything on the boat.

An ordinary wind is able to drive a boat whose sail it strikes because its reaction (that of the wind) is not upon the boat, but upon the great mass of the atmosphere or upon the earth.

The principle to be remembered, and ignorance or forgetfulness of which has cost the happiness of more than one uneducated inventor's life, is that no mechanical force can be produced without an expenditure of energy precisely equivalent. Never forget that there can be no action without equal reaction and that if the action takes its origin within the limits of the thing that is acted upon the reaction will also be felt within those same limits.

Your electric fan would drive a toy vessel placed on the deck of your boat, although it would not drive the boat itself, because, with regard to the toy vessel, the breeze from the fan would have an independent origin, like an ordinary wind blowing over a lake, and its reaction would not be upon the toy, but upon the boat over whose deck the toy glided.

If you are inside a car and push upon the car you cannot move it as you could if you stood upon the ground outside and pushed. In the first case your action and reaction are both upon the car, but in the second case the action is upon the car and the reaction upon the ground outside. The same thing happens if you suspend a bar above your head and lift yourself by pulling down on it, and afterward put the bar under your feet and try to lift yourself by pulling up on it. You succeed in lifting yourself in the first case, but you fail in the second, because when the bar is under your feet the force of your pull reacts upon your own body and urges it down just as much as up.

There is one effect of the electric fan which might surprise you—it would tend to drive your boat backward instead of forward. It would push against air like the propeller of an aeroplane, and to make it drive your boat forward you would have to face the fan around, so that its reaction would be upon the atmosphere behind instead of ahead of the boat, and in either case your sail would be not only useless but an encumbrance.—Garrett P. Serviss in New York Journal.

BULLET AND BIBLE.

One Tried to Take a Man's Life, While the Other Saved It.

To illustrate the bullet resisting powers of papers, a veteran war correspondent brought for the inspection of some of his journalistic colleagues a pocketbook filled with photographs and papers and a Bible, each of which on separate occasions had been instrumental in saving his life in the course of the Russo-Turkish war.

In one instance he was knocked off his horse by the impact of a bullet and became unconscious, only to find on regaining his senses that the friendly wallet had prevented the bullet entering his body. On the second occasion, at Plevna, the Bible, which he had placed in a side pocket, deflected a heavy piece of shrapnel that threatened to end his existence.

He had kept the wallet intact as a memento of his escape, and one of the journalists who was examining its contents came, by a curious coincidence, upon a letter which he himself had indited to the war correspondent some thirty or forty years ago, the very existence of which he had entirely forgotten.

In the letter he had expressed the hope that his friend would return safe and sound from the seat of war. The words "safe and sound" had been almost cut away by the bullet, which, but for the providential interposition of the bundle of papers, would probably have ended the war correspondent's life.—Nottingham Guardian.

GOOD ROADS AND THRIFT.

France Sets an Example the Rest of the World Might Follow.

Good farms and good roads go together. Good roads mean cheaper hauling prices, better profits—therefore more money. The wealth of a nation is the wealth of its population. The population of the country of France is known to be the most thrifty, the least poverty stricken and the best provided for of any country in the world. And France has a better road system and more good roads in proportion to its area than any other country of the same or greater size. Has France rural wealth because of its good roads or has it good roads because of its thrifty peasantry?

It is, therefore, for us in this country to look upon France not only as a good example, but as the example of the fulfillment of dreams. We cannot solve our problem in any other way than as France has solved hers with any surety of success. She builds her national highways first, owns them, controls them, repairs them. She has her departments—her divisions corresponding to our states—build their own roads as feeders of this system, connecting with it, joining national road to national road. Finally her parishes or communes—similar political divisions to our counties—build their own roads, interlacing, connecting and binding together the whole into one vast network of hard surfaced roads.—Suburban Life.

HEROIC QUEEN MOTHER CHRISTINA OF SPAIN

Brought Her Son Through all the Plots That Beset Him in Most Rickety Monarchy in Europe.

Now that King Alfonso and his charming English Queen have such a considerable family, and the crown of Spain seems at last to have arrived at a pitch of security which it has not known for seventy years, little is heard of the able lady who gave Alfonso birth, and who herself reigned in Spain as Queen-Regent for sixteen years.

Yet these are Queen Christina's happiest years. Full of interest in her son and his country, keenly devoted to her royal daughter-in-law and her numerous children, Queen Christina is "resting upon her laurels," and well may she do so, for in spite of considerable personal unpopularity in Spain—where she is supposed to have the "evil-eye"!—she has scored a triumph as a queen which has no parallel in the rest of the world.

It is a wonderful story, how this simple Austrian archduchess, widowed at a most trying and untimely hour, brought her one son through the gravest dynastic perils, and has lived to see him firmly established on the most rickety throne in Europe. Only a woman of tremendous personality and foresight could have achieved such a triumph!

Prior to the accession of Queen Christina's late husband to the Iberian crown the Spanish throne was a dynastic volcano. Kings and queens came and went in quick succession, followed by a republic being proclaimed.

The then ruler of Spain, Queen Isabella, had fled to Paris, and her son, the Prince of the Asturias, had gone to England and joined the army at Sandhurst. He never expected ever to be King of Spain, and in England he was at least free from the fear of assassination.

But the Spaniards soon grew sick of the Republican statesmen, just as the Portuguese are doing to-day, and when they asked the Prince of the Asturias to return to Madrid as "King Alfonso XII.," he loyally, though reluctantly, obeyed. The Spaniards had not seen him for years, and when they did see him once more they were charmed.

They beheld a smart and dapper young king entirely after their own hearts, and they accorded him as much loyalty as can be expected in the land of the proud Hidalgos.

The new king was not allowed to remain a bachelor long. He had long cherished a keen affection for his cousin, the child Princess Mercedes of Montpensier. The marriage was not a popular one, for the bride's family were disliked by the Spaniards, but it was a "love affair," and the Spaniards are nothing if not chivalrous.

On the wedding day King Alfonso gave his pretty young bride a beautiful ruby ring, and almost from that moment the new queen's health began to fail. In spite of every attention the girl Queen of Spain only lived two days after her eighteenth birthday.

She left no children, and the heart-broken young king removed the ring and gave it to his grandmother, Queen Christina, who only survived the gift for a few weeks. The king then gave the royal ring to his youngest sister-in-law, who went to her grave three months later.

They said the ring was "unlucky," but the king's English training had made him skeptical of all superstitious beliefs, and he proceeded to wear it himself.

He was very soon "a stricken man!" As Spain's first necessity was an heir (all the bloodshed for many years having been caused by the failure of direct heirs to its crown) King Alfonso promptly married again. He this time chose for his bride the Austrian archduchess, who was a great-great-niece of the ill-fated Marie Antoinette.

This young princess had been dogged by misfortune almost from her birth, and when she had presented her king with two little daughters, death overtook him very suddenly.

The sorrowing royal widow removed the ill-omened ring from her dead husband's hand, and decided that it should never again be worn. So she caused it to be suspended round the neck of the Holy Virgin of Almadeno, Madrid's patron saint, and there it hangs to this day.

But youth and hope were with Alfonso's second widow, and when, six months after her husband's death she gave to Spain her only son, the present King Alfonso, she entered upon a new career. From that interesting moment Queen Christina devoted herself heart and soul to the upbringing of her son, so that he might be able to hold his own against a whole nation of machinators.

And right worthy has Alfonso XIII. justified Queen Christina's careful mothering of him. Time and time again has he escaped death by the "skin of his teeth." Many another woman would have removed her precious charge from an atmosphere so volcanic, but alone she stood by him all through the dangerous 16 years of his minority.

During these years she had the sorrow of seeing her son's country deprived in war of all its once vast colonial empire. During the six months that elapsed between the death of King Alfonso XII. and the birth of King Alfonso XIII., Queen Christina's eldest daughter was Queen of Spain.

Queen Christina was but 25 when she was widowed, and though not loved, she is highly respected by all classes of the Spanish people.

Turning the Tables.

When Sir Henry Lucy was writing for a well known newspaper under the famous management of the late Sir John Robinson, the latter frequently complained of Lucy's terribly bad handwriting.

One day Mr. Lucy, as he then was, received a very heated note from Sir John, again complaining of his handwriting. Now, Sir John himself wrote an execrable "fist," and there were three words in that note that Mr. Lucy could not possibly decipher. He cut holes in a sheet of paper and covered the whole of the note except these three words. Then he went down to the office, showed Sir John the shrouded note and asked him if he could interpret the cryptic words.

After prolonged examination Sir John could not. Veteran proofreaders were called in, and they also failed. Then Mr. Lucy uncovered the note and showed Sir John that it was his own CHECKED FABRICS.

NEW BLACK AND WHITE GOWN.

The common sense costume shown here is a Poiret creation. It is intended to be worn under a spring coat, and its lines particularly adapt it for youthful figures. Black and white checked serge is combined with plain black cloth. It is ornamented with ball buttons in black and white. The vogue of checks is foreshadowed in this as in many other spring models.

Much attention may be given to buttons, as on all the well made tailor mades the buttons are a striking note. The lesser precious stones are being used for these trimmings, so we see buttons in jade, amber, lapus lazuli, cornaline, agate, etc.

Moreover, it is not an extravagance to pay a good price for a set of buttons, as they can always be used on something if they have intrinsic value, no matter what the fashions. And just now they have a very obvious value, for it is in details chiefly that the marks of good dressing are to be found.

THE HUMAN HEART A GREAT PUMPING MACHINE

Has a Language of its Own—In Tones That Cannot be Misunderstood it Tells Whether it is Strong or Weak and if Ailing Notes the Place and Cause of the Troubles.

When the doctor puts his ear to your chest or applies the stethoscope, which only conducts the sounds more clearly, what does he hear? The sound of the normal heart is like the pronunciation of the syllables "lub-dup" close to each other. These syllables are heard in quick succession, and then comes a pause—the diastole or resting period of the great force pump. The sound "lub" is that of the blood flowing out under muscular pressure, and the "dup" is the closing of the aortic valves. If this sound "dup" is not heard it shows that the aortic valves are destroyed or not working.

The latest explanation of this first sound, "lub," is that it is caused by the muscular contraction of the heart and the impulse of the heart against the chest wall. The first sound is heard more clearly over the apex of the heart, the point of the chest nearest to the ventricle. The second sound is best heard over the aortic valves, which lie beneath the left side of the chest just by the third rib.

If you close a door with great force the slam is very loud, and if the tension in the aorta is very high the sound "dup" is louder than usual. This is most important to the physician, for he then knows that there is high arterial tension, due to what is termed an aneurism.

If the sound "lub" is weaker than normal it would indicate a weakness of the heart muscle and this is the case in fevers. In typhoid fever, for instance, when this first sound is very weak, we know that the heart is so weak as to make the case alarming.

A heart is said to have a "murmur" when the sharp "dup" disappears and the listening physician hears a softened noise called a "murmur." If you try to say "dup" with your lips open the sound uttered will be like that the doctor hears in the diseased heart whose valves do not close properly. The sound produced is something like "duff," and if the mitral valve does not work well the first syllable is softened into "luff." If both valves work poorly the sound is "luff-duff—luff-duff," but if both valves are very much out of order the sound is like that of a bellows, "oho-oho."

Most persons speak of the heart as if it were a single organ, but actually it is two hearts joined together, the right and the left heart. The right sends the blood through the lungs so that it may be aerated, or acted upon by the oxygen in the inhaled air, while the left heart sends the blood through the body in order to nourish the tissues.

Both of these hearts receive the blood from the large veins into the auricles, which by contracting send the blood on into the ventricles, and, when these powerful muscles contract the right ventricle pumps the blood into the pulmonary artery on the way to the lungs and from the left ventricle into the aorta, which distributes the blood all over the body, so that after having nourished the nerves and muscles it returns through the veins to the heart, there to be pumped into the lungs for purification by the oxygen before again passing through the sytsem.

The difference in the sounds of the right and left ventricles is traced to the difference in resistance of the aorta and the pulmonary artery. The pulmonary artery resists with only one-third the strength of the aorta, so the pumping force required is less and the noise of the closing gates is that much less.

It is true, then, that when the physician listens to the beating of a patient's heart through his stethoscope the heart speaks to him in unmistakable language. When it plainly says "lub-dup" he knows that all is well with this important organ, and he pats the patient on the shoulder, saying, "Nothing serious; you'll be all right in a day or two." When, however, the heart says "lub-duff" he knows that the aortic valve is not working properly and takes the proper steps to correct it. When the heart says "luff-dup" he is sure that the mitral valves are out of order, and he tries to reach them.

When the heart says "luff-duff" he draws a solemn face, for both valves are out of order, and when it says "oho-oho" he digs down into his bag and goes to work at once, for all is radically wrong.—Detroit News-Tribune.

CANINE TRICKERY.

An English Officer's Story of a Dog That Learned to Cheat.

That one dog at least not only reasons, but has been known actually to cheat is the conviction of a young English army officer who owns a smart cocker spaniel. Among other tricks the officer has trained the dog to answer "letter call" and fetch his owner's mail to the mess table. Pleased with the dog's intelligence, the officer fell into the habit of giving him a lump of sugar from the breakfast table.

One morning soon after the trumpeter had sounded "letter call," the spaniel came in with neither papers nor letters. This was unusual, for the officer subscribed to a daily paper that invariably arrived in the morning's mail, but he thought little of it at the time. About 11 o'clock, however, the dog entered his master's quarters and deposited a muddy paper upon the floor. The officer did not understand the situation, but he gave the dog a lump of sugar. Half an hour later the dog appeared again with a very muddy and crumpled letter in his mouth. Then the owner's suspicions were aroused.

He gave the dog another lump of sugar and watched him. He soon found that the dog had buried the morning's mail in the rear of the officer's mess and was digging it up a letter at a time, apparently with a view to a lump of sugar for each piece of mail.—Exchange.

Burning Wood.

Wood crackles when it is ignited because the air expanded by heat forces its way through the pores of the wood with a crackling noise. Green wood makes less snapping than dry because the pores contain less air, being filled with sap and moisture, which extinguish the flame, whereas the pores of dry wood are filled with air, which supports combustion.

Mutton Chops With Bacon.

Trim and wipe mutton chops, dust with salt and pepper, rub over with a little soft butter and broil under a clear flame. Have a slice of bacon for each chop, cut thin, and place in a dripping pan in a hot oven until it is crisp and curly. Place frills on the chop bones, lay a slice of bacon on each chop and serve hot, garnished with parsley.

EYES OF A PIG.

Did You Know They Closely Resemble Those of a Human Being?

Your eyes are like a pig's. If anybody told you so you would doubtless feel insulted. And yet such a statement would be quite correct. Your eyes are very much like a pig's—more so, indeed, than they are like any other animal's.

This is one of the most curious truths of physiology. A pig's eye so closely resembles that of a human being as to serve a very important practical purpose. Young men who are learning to be eye doctors are taught the rudiments of their business with the help of pigs' eyes. They dissect them and practice all sorts of operations on them, from removing a cataract to the snipping of the muscles which control the movements of the eyes in their orbits. If an oculist happens to be puzzled about an operation he expects to perform, he sometimes gets one or more fresh pigs' eyes from the butcher and makes experiments with them.

A pig's eye in a live pig's head does not look much like a human eye. It is small and not very intelligent in expression. When the pig is dead, however, and the eye is taken out it is hardly distinguishable from the eye of a person.

Human eyes do not vary much in size, and in themselves they have no expression whatever. When it is said that a person has large eyes it means simply that the opening between the lids is larger than ordinary. It is the lids that are wholly responsible for ocular expression, which is capable of such wonderful variations.—New York American.

Claquers in French Theatres.

The theatrical claquer has ever been an institution in France, especially Paris, where a "chef de claque" enjoys a recognized status and receives a comfortable income. It is a mistake to suppose that the only duty of claquers is to applaud. A well organized claque includes some members who have cultivated the art of infectious laughter. These, called "chatouilleurs," attend the lighter forms of drama and laugh so heartily and naturally that their neighbors join in and leave the house convinced that the play must be a most amusing one. Then, too, there are the "pleureurs," who are paid to shake with sobs at the right moment in melodrama.

FOUR WINTERS OF RHEUMATISM

Cured of Sciatica And Muscular Rheumatism By "Fruit-a-tives"

RIDGETOWN, ONT., May 21st. 1913.

"Fruit-a-tives" cured me of Rheumatism. It was the only medicine that made any impression on me. I was a terrible sufferer from Rheumatism. I was laid up for four winters with Sciatica and Muscular Rheumatism, and was completely crippled.

Some neighbor of mine told me that "Fruit-a-tives" helped him, and I started in to take them. I used "Fruit-a-tives" faithfully for two years, taking them every day as I saw they were doing me good, and the results were marvellous.

For over two years, I have been completely free from any Rheumatic Pains whatever, and I give "Fruit-a-tives" the credit." W. H. RACHER.

"CATTLE-DUFFING."

It Is a Step Towards Affluence In Parts of Australia.

It has been well said that in certain parts of Australia there are just two main industries, cattle-raising and "cattle-duffing."

The difference is that one man, the one engaged in the "raising," breeds the cattle; the other brands them—with his own brand.

The "duffer's" program is first to take up a small piece of country on the margin of a big man's station, then buy a small stock of breeders, say one hundred head. Sometimes, too, even his alleged breeders may be working bullocks—anything, in fact, that answers to the description of "cattle."

A capital of about $1,000 will see him well on the way to a fortune. All he now has to do is to "sit tight" and avoid company. The average pastoralist does not employ a sufficient number of men to "brand up" his calves as they are born—it would be next door to impossible for him to do so, in view of the immense size of his holding—and consequently the "duffer" places his own brand on every unbranded animal he comes across. These then automatically become his own.

The boundaries of these runs are more or less shadowy, which assists the operation, as also does the fact that the high road—such as it is—to anywhere usually runs through the big man's holding. In short, it is practically impossible to catch the thief, who flourishes luxuriantly. The way in which his herds increase is extraordinary.

The large station, be it remembered, may carry anything up to 40,000 head of cattle. So the small man, commencing business with, say two hundred head, finds apparently every one of his cows having about twenty calves a year—most of them being born with two-year-old horns!

If a boundary-rider is "in" with the "duffer," the latter very soon leaves the "duffer" stage, and now becomes a "squatter"—in other words, a "big" man himself. His cattle—or, at any rate, a cattle carrying his brand, and so his to all intents and purposes—are now running on the original station in hundreds and he regularly sends away lots of from 500 to 700 "fats" for sale. Or, better still, he sells them to their original owners at $52 or $30 per head, station delivery.

And the station man knows all the facts of the case. He knows these fats are the progeny of his own cattle, he knows they have been fattened on his own country, he knows the vendor's whole record—and the vendor knows that he knows—yet he buys. For he often makes another $15 or $20 per head on the transaction.

But he has very little redress. The difficulty of catching the thief has already been referred to. But even if he be caught red-handed, a conviction has to be secured. And it is an exceedingly difficult matter to find a jury which will convict. Many a scathing criticism of Western juries is passed by the Queensland district court judges. But it all passes like water off a duck's back, and the same thing happens next time.

Sometimes, though, the "big" man gets a bit of his own back. A favorite method of stealing one's neighbor's cattle is to allow one's own to mingle on the other's property with his herds. Then, when bringing the straying beasts back to their proper place it is usually found that quite a number of new ones have come with them—accidentally of course!

One Was Enough.

Robert Bridges, the new poet laureate, is a fastidious critic and sees little to admire in the verse of Alfred Noyes.

Noyes once brought to Mr. Bridges two very long odes that he proposed to submit to the English Review.

"I'll read them both aloud," the young man said, "and afterward you will tell me which is, in your opinion, the more likely to be accepted by the English Review."

Poor Mr. Bridges sighed and settled himself in his chair, and Noyes, in his loud, harsh voice, read the first ode. It was very long, and at its conclusion Mr. Bridges leaped to his feet and said briskly:

"Now, my young friend, I can advice you. Send the other ode to the Review!"

Merry Song of the Snowflakes.

A LITTLE SNOW GIRL.

We hurry forth
From the icy north,
A swift and silent band,
And ride the blast
In numbers vast
When the storm king gives command.

We flutter down
From the mountain's crown
And haste o'er the frozen plains,
And we dance and leap
To the winds that sweep
Through the city streets and lanes.

We bring fresh joys
To the girls and boys
Who laugh at the winter's chill,
And we make a bed
For the flying sled
As we pile on the coasting hill.

Point For Boy Scouts.

When visiting my former regiment the other day, says Baden-Powell, I found that several novel ideas were in force in the physical training of the young soldiers. One was that of teaching them to walk along a plank set up on edge at a height of about five feet above the ground. To walk along this for about fifteen feet was the test of balance, and after a little practice there was not one who could not do it, although at first trial it looked hopeless.

It might be thought to be rather a waste of time to instruct soldiers in walking the tight rope, but most curious results have been obtained from it. Not only does a lad become more well balanced, confident and plucky, but it has been found that he also develops very rapidly into a good shot. One old soldier, who was a particularly bad shot, was sent through a course of tight rope walking, and he soon gained thereby the power of controlling his nerves.

Making Sleighbells.

The sleighbells we see are round with an iron "jingle" in them. Now, you know that this little jingle could not have been put through the holes of the bell, so perhaps you would like to know how the bell is made. It is made by a man called an iron founder. First he puts the jingle inside a little ball of mud, which is just the shape and size of the metal ball. Then he makes a mold the shape of the outside of the ball. The ball of mud with the jingle in it is put inside the mold; then hot metal is poured in and fills the space between the ball and the mold. But when the mold is taken off the bell will not ring. As soon as the dirt inside the mold is shaken out the jingle is still in the bell and it will ring now. It took many years to think how to make a sleighbell.

Cerberus.

In Greek fable Cerberus is the three headed dog that watches outside the entrance to hades. Some writers assert that he has fifty heads, but generally he is said to have three, and three snakes are twined about his neck. His cave is on the farther side of the dark river Styx, where Charon, the ferryman of the dead, lands the shades. Cerberus is supposed to welcome all entering hades, but to seize all those seeking to escape.

VENOMOUS LEECHES.

A Perilous Experience In the Swampy Jungles of Sumatra.

Dr. Andries Verhagen of Batavia, Java, was directed by the government of the Netherlands to go to the eastern end of Sumatra to study a terrible epidemic of beriberi which had broken out there. The ship in which he sailed was wrecked, and he and a young assistant offered to go into the interior to seek assistance.

For about ten minutes they struggled through a dense and swampy jungle. Suddenly the younger man cried out with pain. Going to his aid, Dr. Verhagen noticed three leeches attached to his arm. They were of a venomous variety that cling to the lower branches of the bushes awaiting their prey and, not content with gorging themselves on blood, inject into the wound a poison that causes acute pain.

While Dr. Verhagen was helping his assistant innumerable leeches attached themselves to his face and neck. To free him from them the young man had to scrape his skin with a sharp stone. Exhausted by loss of blood, the doctor managed to crawl back to the wreck of the ship, where he fainted. He was taken to a hospital the following day, and it was several weeks before he recovered. One of his eyeballs was totally destroyed by the terrible leeches, its socket being left empty.—New York World.

A Scorpion.

"I took my first typescript—get that?—typescript to a manager who happens to be a friend of mine," said an aspiring dramatist. "I discovered that managers have an irreverent incredulity combined with a scorpion's sarcasm.

"'You wrote a play?' he marveled. 'Who told you to?'

"'I wrote it on my own initiative,' I answered stiffly. 'Nobody would ever write a play if people waited to be told.'

"'I would not do anything so difficult as write a play unless I was forced,' declared the manager.

"'It is easy, not difficult, to write a play,' I argued. 'It is as easy as falling off a log.'

"He read the play and sent it back with a scrawl on the title page as follows:

"'Compared with writing such a play as this it would be totally impossible to fall off a log.'"—New York Times.

Diagnosis by Electricity.

For the benefit of the nervous cases that come to the doctor it has been asserted that it is just as necessary to know how emotional they are as it is to know how high the temperature is in a case of fever. Moreover, in many cases, it is necessary to find out what experiences in the past or present life of the patient produce emotions. For this purpose the patient sits at ease with hands on the electrodes, which may be so concealed in the arms of his chair that he is unaware that the most intimate processes of his soul are being registered as various words are spoken or various topics of conversation are discussed, the galvanometer showing when a sensitive subject has been touched.—Harper's Magazine.

Fame of Tenedos.

Tenedos, which certain powers have taken away from Greece, has become well known by name from having the good luck to get mentioned in the first book of Homer's "Iliad" instead of the last, as well as in the beginning of Vergil's "Aeneid." Ever since Homer's day this fertile islet, lying at the entrance to the Dardanelles, has been considered of great strategic importance. During classical times the laws and civil institutions of Tenedos were celebrated for their wisdom and were discussed with approval in a lost treatise of Aristotle.

THAT is our idea—to produce cars that will develop more power than others selling at the same price—and that will go further on a gallon of gasoline.

this "more power—less fuel" idea is carried out to an even more complete extent than has hitherto been attained.

THE ART OF SELLING.

Real Salesmanship Is a Light That Can't Be Obscured.

The boss wants lookers, because he knows the looker of today is the buyer of tomorrow and he wants to make the lookers feel that his store is "the best place to trade," which is only another way of saying that it is the best place to do one's looking. He also knows that the looker of today can sometimes be converted into a buyer before the day is over. All he requires to accomplish what he desires is salesmanship among his salespeople.

Does he get it? Not from all of them. If he did there would be less need for commissions to inquire laboriously into the relation between shopgirls' wages and shopgirls' chastity, for real salesmanship will get the money wherever it is practiced and by whomsoever it is practiced. Real salesmanship is one light that can't be hidden under a bushel. It's a light that can't be obscured. It's a light that will shine above department heads and floorwalkers and reach clear up to "the old man" in his private office, if you keep it burning long enough.

What is salesmanship? No one quite knows. But if you will take care of the lookers, if you will make all the lookers pleasantly remember what you showed them and how you showed it to them when they were merely looking, you will have mastered one very important branch of retail salesmanship.—Collier's Weekly.

A Revolutionist

She Passed Through Hairbreadth Escapes

By KATHLEEN EVERSHAM

Henry Cummings, an American, traveling on a train between London and Dover on his way to Paris, left London by an evening train soon after dark. There were four passengers in his compartment when he started, but at the first station two left the train. The remaining passenger besides Cummings was wrapped in a long ulster, with a broad collar turned up about his neck and a felt hat pulled down over his eyes. As soon as the train started after the second stop he roused himself, yawned, cleared his throat with a cough, looked out of the window, peering into the darkness; then turned to a bag beside him and took out a box of cigarettes.

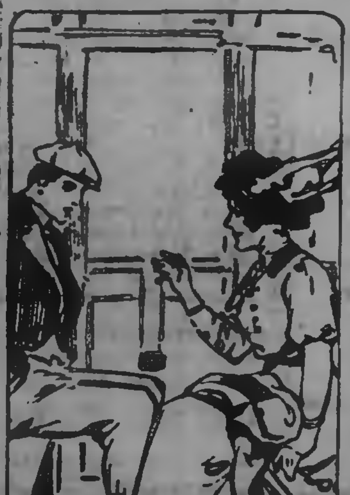
"Do you object to smoke?" he asked of Cummings in broken English.

"Not at all. I am a smoker myself."

"In that case, there being no one else in this compartment except ourselves, I suppose we may smoke."

When the man turned toward Cummings to ask the question the American got such a view of him as was afforded by the dim light from the lamp in the center of the ceiling. He saw a youthful, feminine face, without the sign of a beard, hair of a very light hue and steel gray eyes. The voice, too, was very soft for a man's. He offered his box of cigarettes to Cummings, who noticed that the hand holding it was round and exquisitely shaped.

Cummings took a cigarette from that side of the box nearest him, and the young man took one from the other side before closing and putting it in his bag. Cummings took a silver box from his pocket and, scratching a match on it, held the match for the other to light his cigarette. This gave a better illumination of his fellow passenger's face, and Cummings was very much struck with it. He was sure if he ever saw it again he would know it. It was a serious face, the face of one who might be expected to have some great object in life, and had it not been too feminine it would have been handsome. But only a glimpse was to be had while the young man lighted his cigarette, and Cummings lighted his from the same match. Then the American leaned back to enjoy his smoke.



"YOUR PASSPORT SAVED ME FROM ARREST."

"I fancy," he said presently, "there is a trace of opium in these cigarettes of yours."

"Do you think so?"

"I am quite sure of it. But nearly all cigarettes that are made now contain some opium. I don't mind a little of it."

A very pleasant languor came over Cummings, and, not having anything in common with the stranger to talk about, he permitted himself to fall into a doze.

He was awakened by a rough shake.

"Wake up!"

A man in police uniform was bending over him. Cummings found it hard to keep his eyes open and closed them again, whereupon he was shaken anew. This time he roused himself and began to take in the situation.

The train was at a standstill. There was no one in the compartment except himself and the policeman, though he could see several persons standing without. On the seat opposite him was an ulster which he recognized as belonging to his fellow passenger. His bag lay open beside him.

"Where is the young man who was in the coach with me?" Cummings asked.

"Was there a young man with you?" asked the policeman quickly.

"Yes; there is his ulster. He gave me a cigarette to smoke, and it put me to sleep." Diving into the open bag, he pulled out most of the contents. "My passport!" he exclaimed. "It is gone!"

"We're too late," said the policeman, and, taking Cummings' name and nationality that he might identify the passport if found, he withdrew. Cummings felt for his money, and it was safe. He called to the policeman to ask him for what the missing man was wanted, but the guard slammed the door, locked it, and the train moved on.

The next stop was Dover. Cummings while passing on to the Calais boat asked certain railway officials he met if they knew of what had occurred in his compartment, but none of them could give him any information. Fortunately passports are not needed in most European countries nowadays unless called for specially, and Cummings found no difficulty in entering France without one. He heard nothing from the one that had been taken from him or the person who had taken it. Indeed, no explanation of the matter came to him. There was only the supposition that the young man who had put him to sleep was some one attempting to evade the law.

Two years passed when by a singular freak of fortune Cummings encountered the fugitive from the law again. He was a globe trotter and during the interval had been to America but once and then only for a few months. It is to be admitted that traveling continually he was far more likely to meet any particular person than if he remained in one place.

He was traveling northward from Italy. Leaving Lugano one morning for Lucerne, in the same compartment with him was a lady twenty-two or twenty-three years old, who the moment he looked at her attracted his attention. He was sure that he had seen her before, though he could not tell when or where. Then suddenly it flashed upon him that she was the counterpart of the man who two years before had stolen his passport. From this he came very soon to the conclusion that she was the same person, and that person was not a man, but a woman.

Now that he met her again and knew her he had a great advantage, for she didn't seem to know that she had ever met him before. He looked at her steadily. She looked away, as any lady would when being stared at by a man, but showed no embarrassment. Not caring to let her know that he recognized her, he turned away his glance. He desired to satisfy his curiosity with regard to her and determined not to lose her.

She was evidently traveling alone. There was a man in the compartment besides Cummings and another woman. The woman soon left the train. There being no notice that smoking was permitted in the compartment, the man went to another to light a cigar, leaving Cummings temporarily alone with the lady.

"Madame or mademoiselle," he said, "do you object to smoking?"

"I do not."

"This is not a smoking compartment, but if you don't object I will avail myself of your permission."

"Do so, by all means."

Cummings took a box of cigarettes from his pocket and handed it to the lady.

"Thank you very much, but I never smoke."

"You mean that you do not smoke now, not that you have never smoked. If I mistake not, I have had the pleasure of smoking with you and one of your own cigarettes."

The woman gave him a piercing glance, and her face became a shade whiter.

"It was in a coach," he went on, "between London and Dover. The cigarette you offered me was rather heavily charged with opium or some other drug. At any rate, it put me to sleep, and when I awoke you were gone. I have always been curious to know how you left the train."

The young woman's gaze was fixed upon Cummings without reply for some time. She was evidently much frightened, but as he proceeded appeared to gather confidence. Presently she said:

"You are an American."

"Yes. How did you know that?"

"I should know it and not forget it. Your passport saved me from arrest, and arrest for me meant a return to Russia, and that meant Siberia."

"Then I am more than pleased."

"Had I known that you were an American I would not have put you to sleep with a cigarette. I would have confided my situation to you and asked you to help me. America, as your national hymn says, is the 'land of the free,' and all oppressed peoples may find sympathy there."

"How did you leave the train?"

"I committed my soul to God and jumped in the darkness. There was no stop after I put you to sleep till the train reached Dover. I must jump or be arrested when I reached the terminal. I landed, fortunately, in a ditch beside the railroad or I should have been killed. I finished the journey on foot, but not to Dover. On reaching the coast I crossed the channel in a fishing boat."

"The passport—how did that help you?"

"Not then; later. I have traveled to Russia for consultation with fellow revolutionists as Henry Cummings and returned by using your passport."

"Great heavens!" exclaimed the American. "What sacrifices are made for liberty!"

The two parted at Lucerne, and Cummings never saw the lady again. But she gave him her name, and long afterward he learned that she had illustrated the truth of the adage, "The pitcher that goes too often to the well is at last broken." He learned from a fellow countryman of hers that she had at last been caught and was in the Kara prison.

American Humor.

Frank Gould says that American humor is like nothing else under the sun—so droll, so grotesque and often so solemn in expression.

Mr. Gould gives this account of a half minute comedy enacted in one of the corridors of a Chicago hotel.

It was played by two millionaires. One of them, waiting for the elevator, was struggling into his fur lined coat. The other, an acquaintance, took hold of the coat and assisted him into it.

The first man turned, saw who it was, gravely put his hand into his pocket, took out a dime and handed it to his helper, who, with equal gravity, pocketed it. Then the first man went down in the elevator, and the other passed on to his room. Not a word had been spoken and neither man smiled, except inwardly.

Would a foreigner have understood the pantomime, even if he had known the standing of both men?—Buffalo Express.

Shirts From Trees.

It is comforting at least to know that the sad "Song of the Shirt" does not apply to all parts of the world. In the forests of Orosoko, situated on the slope of New Granada, nature has provided what serves as a ready made shirt for the natives. It is obtained from the marina tree, a species of tropical palm, which has a thin, fibrous red bark. When a native wants a shirt he simply cuts a piece of one of these trees about eighteen inches in diameter and takes off the bark, managing so as not to cut it in any way, and thus obtains a hollow cylinder of flexible bark somewhat resembling a rough sack without any bottom. He then makes a small slit in each side for his arms to go through and puts it on. It is only during the rainy season, however, that natives conform to the requirements of civilization sufficiently to wear garments of any description.—New York Sun.

A Penalty of Genius.

It seems to be the frequent penalty of genius that it is dened the privilege of perpetuating its name and kind beyond a few generations at most. Thus it is said that there is not now living a single descendant in the male line of Chaucer, Shakespeare, Spenser, Milton, Cowley, Butler, Dryden, Pope, Cowper, Goldsmith, Byron or Moore; not one of Sir Philip Sidney or of Sir Walter Raleigh; not one of Drake, Cromwell, Hampden, Monk, Marlborough, Peterborough or Nelson; not one of Bolingbroke, Walpole, Chatham, Pitt, Fox, Burke, Graham or Canning; not one of Bacon, Locke, Newton or Davy; not one of Hume, Gibbon or Macaulay; not one of Hogarth, Sir Joshua Reynolds or Sir Thomas Lawrence; not one of David Garrick, John Kemble or Edmund Kean.—London Standard.

Horseradish.

The cultivation of horseradish is a thriving industry, a writer in the Country Gentleman says, and he describes a three acre farm devoted to this industry, which keeps two men busy, one of them making good money out of his miniature farm. One advantage of this crop is thus described: "The horseradish farmer can well lie back and rest in easy security, for he has a crop that only insects with suicidal motives attack."

Going Up and Down Stairs.

Going up and down stairs properly is one of the best physical exercises. It strengthens the heart, expands the lungs by inducing deep breathing, strengthens muscles of the back, shoulder and abdomen. It promotes elasticity of the foot and leg muscles and, above all, brings about poise of the body.

The correct, healthful way to mount stairs is as follows:

First.—Place the ball of one foot on the step, raise the heel of the other foot, carrying it inward so that it is in line with the heel of the foot in front.

Second.—At the same time raise the body by transferring the weight to the ball of the foot already on the stair. The relative positions of the different parts of the body are precisely the same as in walking on a level surface—head up, chest up and out, arms hanging free from the shoulder blades.

To descend stairs the following are the correct positions:

First.—Body erect, point the toe downward, heel turned inward.

Second.—Touch the step, sinking gradually, lightly upon the ball of that foot, at the same time carrying the weight to it by raising the heel of the foot on the stair above, swinging the heel inward on the toe as a pivot, as in mounting stairs.

Keep the heels in line all the time. Spreading the feet is not only awkward, but unrefined. Swaying also is awkward and unnecessary. Practice rising on the toes and sinking on the knees, slowing rising again. It will help make the ankle muscles flexible so that the little pivot movement can be done freely.

A Valuable Cream.

One of the most delightful creams to use on the face is the orange flower cream. It will soften and whiten the skin and is also good for massaging. It is not as greasy as most creams. It may be prepared as follows:

Take spermaceti, six drams; oil of sweet almonds, four ounces; white wax, six drams; glycerin, one and one-half ounces; borax, two drams; orange flower water, two ounces; oil of olives, fifteen drops; the oil of neroli, fifteen drops; oil of bigarade (orange skin), fifteen drops. Warm the spermaceti, wax and almond oil in a double boiler until they become creamy; then add the glycerin to the orange flower water and let the borax dissolve in this. Pour this mixture into the first one, stirring constantly. Just before the cream congeals pour in the perfumed oils drop by drop.

For Oily Skin.

Oily skins are often caused by indigestion. If your skin is oily pay strict attention to your diet, eating only the simplest foods at regular hours and absolutely avoiding all greasy foods. A couple of times a day sponge the following witch hazel lotion on the face: Take four ounces of distilled witch hazel and one dram of boric acid and mix together.

Do not use any cream on the face, but protect it as much as possible from all sudden changes of temperature and any undue irritation. Build up the general health, paying particular attention to the circulation. Once the blood is in perfect condition it will remedy the shriveled skin of which you complain.

To Reduce Waist Line.

To reduce the size of the waist and hips stand with the feet eighteen inches apart. Raise arms above head and bend body from waist only until the finger tips touch the floor. Raise the body and repeat. Practice this for five minutes and then put the feet together and go through the same movements for another five minutes. At first you will not be able to touch the floor, but the necessary flexibility will come in time. Repeat the exercise frequently at first.

Two Kinds of Powder.

If you are up to date in the use of face powder you should have two sorts of powder—one to use in the daytime and one to use in the evening. The evening powder, because of the fact that it will be shown under artificial light, is colored slightly mauve. This sort of powder must be expensive to be delicately and naturally colored and for a good quality. The daylight powder has a pinker tinge.

To Clean the Face.

Japanese tissue paper is convenient in cleansing the face. It may be used instead of a face cloth. It possesses the big advantage that it can be thrown away after it is used and therefore appeals to the fastidious woman as cleaner than any cloth. These little sheets of tissue paper can be used to apply lotions, cold cream or water to the skin. It is thin, soft and at the same time firm.

Hand Lotion.

A formula for a hand lotion that has proved to be a delightful toilet article is as follows: Take thirty grains of gum tragacanth, soak in seven ounces of rosewater for three days, stirring occasionally with a wooden spoon. At the end of that time strain and add one ounce of glycerin and one of alcohol.

THE MINISTER'S REVENGE

By RUTH GRAHAM

One night during a ball at Versailles—this was during the reign of Louis XIII. and the government of Cardinal Richelieu as prime minister—Dr. Antonio Langrado, a Spanish physician, who had found royal favor by curing the king of an illness, was passing from one room to another when he met a party of three in whom he felt sure he saw the enactment of one of those love stories which, though they are common, the world loves as well as if they were rare.

These three were a girl of nineteen and two men. The man on the right was forty, quite fat and with a red face, denoting that he was much given to wine. He was evidently a man of importance, for his breast was covered with the insignia of different orders. He on her left was a handsome young fellow not much older than the girl, who wore but one badge, a decoration for military distinction.

As the three passed Dr. Langrado the older man scowled at the younger, whose fingers played nervously with the handle of his rapier, while the lady seemed to draw toward him and away from the other. But the doctor saw them only a moment, for they passed in among one throng, while he passed in among another.

The ball being ended, Dr. Langrado went to his lodgings and to bed. He had barely fallen to sleep when he was awakened and hurried away to see a patient. The person coming for him—a young army officer—said to him:

"Doctor, your patient has received a dangerous wound. It will be expected of you if questioned to report that he is ill of a fever. Do you understand?"

"Partly. I presume he has been stabbed for reasons that are better kept secret."

"Not exactly. Perhaps I should tell you the exact status. He has been wounded in a duel. You know the cardinal"—

"Yes, I know that the cardinal has determined to stop this mania for dueling, which is spilling the best blood in France, and if he knows the patient is half dead after fighting will have the headsman finish him."

"You are right. Can we rely on you?"

"My business is to cure him if possible. I have nothing to do with how he was wounded."

The officer was obliged to be satisfied with this, and in a few minutes the two entered the chamber of his patient. The doctor found a dangerous wound in the side, which he bound up according to the treatment prevalent at that time. But what surprised him was that his patient was the younger of the two men he had noticed with the girl at the ball at the palace.

Dr. Langrado attended the invalid for several weeks and was getting him into a condition when it would be safe to leave him when he received a summons to report himself at the Palais Cardinal. He obeyed and was ushered into the cabinet of the prime minister.

"Doctor," said the cardinal, "you have attended young Raoul de Pourtales. What is his disease?"

"He has no disease, your eminence. He has recovered."

"You have cured him of a wound, have you not?"

"I decline to answer. I am not a subject of the king of France, but the king of Spain."

"But you are a physician, and as such I think I can require you to tell me whether your patient is sufficiently recovered to stand up manfully under the ceremony of being beheaded."

"I believe, your eminence, that he will stand such a ceremony without flinching. He is a splendid fellow."

The cardinal thought awhile before proceeding with the examination.

"I should like to punish Pourtales' antagonist," he said presently, "but he has succeeded in keeping himself unknown. Since you are a Spanish citizen I will not require you to tell, if you know, but will ask you to do so."

"Will not Pourtales give his opponent's name?"

"No."

"I see. He is an honorable man."

"Do you know who his opponent was?"

"I think I do, your eminence."

"Well?"

"I am not sure but that he is very near to his majesty the king. He may be of royal blood."

The cardinal paused again and thought. The doctor, whose sympathies were all with young Pourtales, fancied he saw a way to save his life, but he waited for the minister to speak again.

"In that case," said Richelieu, "it might be best to ignore the matter. If what you suspect is true I may overlook Pourtales' disobedience."

Dr. Langrado told the story as it has been told here. He described the man he had seen in company with Pourtales on the night of the ball, and the cardinal recognized him at once as the Marquis de Ceaux, a relative of the king. Richelieu hated the marquis, but it was not in the line of his policy to bring one of royal blood to the block.

"Thank you, doctor," he said when the story was finished. "What can I do to show my gratitude for the favor I have received?"

"Forgive my patient."

"I will more than forgive him. I will marry him to the girl he loves. This is all the punishment I can inflict on De Ceaux, though I should like to marry him to the block."

And the cardinal kept his promise.

INHERITED WEALTH.

And the Advantages of Poor Boys Who Have to Fight Their Way.

Poor boys reared directly by their parents possess advantages over those watched and taught by hired strangers. They appear upon the world's stage trained as athletes for a contest, with sinews braced, indomitable wills resolved to do or die. Such boys always have marched and always will march straight to the front and lead the world. They are the epoch makers. Let one select the three or four most celebrated names of men supremely great in every field of human triumph and note how small is the contribution of hereditary rank and wealth to the list of immortals who have lifted and advanced the race.

It will, I think, be seen that the possession of rank and wealth is almost fatal to greatness and goodness and that the greatest and the best of our race have necessarily been nurtured in the bracing school of poverty. The sons of millionaires are to be regarded with approval who cannot be induced to take absorbing and incessant interest in their father's business. The day is over when even the richest can play at business, as rich men's sons almost invariably do.

The transmission of wealth and rank, without regard to merit or qualification, may sometimes pass from one peer to another without serious injury, seldom involving the welfare or means of others, but the management of business never Business methods have changed; good will counts for less and less. Success in business is held by the same tenure as success in public life, at the cost of perpetual challenge to all comers. Hereditary wealth and position tend to rob fathers and mothers of their children, and vice versa. Nothing is more fatal to the prospects of a public man in America than wealth or the display of wealth.—Andrew Carnegie in Century.

"PRINCE OF SPIES."

He Was a Young Alsatian In the Service of Napoleon.

To those who look with contempt upon spies and such as profit by their labors it comes as a surprise to learn that Napoleon, the greatest of all masters of war, owed to his excellent service of spies not a few of his most brilliant victories.

The man whom he picked out to organize this secret service was a regimental officer named Savary, who afterward became Duc de Rovigo. Savary, like his master, excelled in his judgment of men; he gathered from various corners of Europe an immense number of agents who served him with varying degrees of success, but with that curiously uniform fidelity which the service of Napoleon always seems to have bred.

Chief among them was a young Alsatian, Charles Louis Schulmeister, who earned the nickname of "Prince of Spies." Savary had come across him in the early days in a little Alsatian village where Schulmeister, the son of a local clergyman, was carrying on a gigantic and eminently successful system of smuggling. When Napoleon commissioned him to organize an army of spies Savary at once bethought him of his shrewd and audacious friend.

So young Schulmeister entered the French service in 1800, being then barely thirty. He showed considerable skill in watching the doings of the emigres in Germany. He it was who traced the unfortunate Duc d'Enghien to Ettenheim, where he was arrested. A certain General de Thumery was arrested at the same time; this was the result of a French official thinking that Schulmeister, who with his strong German accent would say "General Doumery," was speaking of the much-wanted Dumouriez.—Westminster Review.

Life and Death.

An English minister, who guarded his morning study hour very carefully, told the new maid that under no circumstances were callers to be admitted—except, of course, he added, in case of life and death.

Half an hour later the maid knocked at his door. "A gentleman to see you, sir."

"Why, I thought I told you"—

"Yes, I told him," she replied, "but he says it's a question of life and death."

So he went downstairs and found an insurance agent.—New York Globe.

Grote and His Wife.

The wife of the historian Grote must have been an extraordinary woman. She rode without a saddle, she was not afraid to put off in a boat without a man, and she was plucky enough to marry her lover without permission and return home without saying a word about it. Sydney Smith described this lady and her lord in his happy fashion. "I do like them both so much, for he is ladylike, and she is a perfect gentleman."

The total amount of rent money paid for furnished rooms in this city each week is enormous! Nobody knows how much. HARRY LENNOX IS GROUND TO DEATH BY FREIGHT TRAIN AT C.P.R. BRIDGE

Had Evidently Attempted to Board the Train on the First Span of the Bridge—Remains Identified by S.A. McCall Who Met Him in the Afternoon

A horrible discovery was made at the C.P. R. bridge last night about 9.30, when the mutilated body of a stranger was found on the first span from the station.

This morning the remains were identified as being those of Harry Lennox, who had been about the city during the day. He had come from Toronto. His widow resides in Bowmanville.

The unfortunate young man had evidently attempted to board an outgoing freight train. The body was almost cut in two.

Belleghem's ambulance was summoned, and the remains were conveyed to their undertaking establishment and the clothes searched for letters or papers that might lead to identification. Positive identification was made this morning.

In the pockets of his trousers were found sme bills and change, a small leather pouch, a letter and a G.T.R. ticket. Some of the coins had been almost welded together by the wheels of the freight train.

The inquest was opened this morning at Belleghem's Unledtaking Establishment by Dr. Greer.

The inquest will be resumed next Monday evening in the Council Chamber at 8 o'clock.

S. A. McCall, of Bolivar Street, a foreman at B. F. Ackerman and Sons, identified the remains as those of Harry Lennox, aged about 30 years, of Bowmanville, and a former resident of this city. He stated he last saw the deceased yesterday afternoon, while on his way to work, at noon. Lennox went to the factory with him, and remained there for a couple of hours, leaving about 4 o'clock. "This was the first time he had seen Lennox for about ten years. (Here the witness, evidently being overcome with the affair, collapsed, and had to be given a drink before he could proceed). "He," said the witness, continuing, "told me that he was on his way to either Montreal or Ottawa. He did not mention how he was going to get there. He remarked that money was not too plentiful. There were no evidences of liquor about his person."

The witness mentioned having been told by two of the men at the factory this morning that they had met Lennox about 6 o'clock last evening going south, evidently toward the station, "pretty well canned," as they stated. The names of the two were taken by the acting Crown Attorney for future evidence.

His father at one time used to work at Ackerman's. The victim yesterday stated to the witness that he had been living in Toronto, and that his wife resided with her mother in Bowmanville. He said he had just come from Bowmanville. He last worked with Adams, of Toronto.

Mr. A. Pearson, grocer, of Charlotte Street, viewed the remains this morning in company with a Review man and stated that Lennox had called upon him yesterday afternoon. He was here seeking employment and mentioned having a wife and child in Bowmanville. She was staying with her father. Mr. Pearson and the unfortunate man were schoolboys together near Barrie, Ont. Lennox was sober and left him with the intention of applying at Ackerman's for a position.

$5 LICENSE FEE FOR ALL MEN WHO WRITE INSURANCE

Amendment to Insurance Act Now Before the House.

Should an amendment to the Insurance Act which the Government will bring before the Ontario Legislature, pass, all insurance agents in the province will be required to secure a license at $5. This will serve to assist the regular insurance agents the local men claim, owing to the fact that numerous people not regular agents add to their incomes by writing insurance and cutting the regulars out of the business. Peterborough at a rough estimation contains about 125 insurance agents besides various others who dicker in insurance on the side. All these would be required to take out a license.

THE KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS HONOR JUDGE HAYES

An Address of Congratulation is Read by Mr. V. J. McElderry.

Mr. L. M. Hayes, K.C., the newly appointed judge for the County of Wellington, was entertained last evening at an informal smoker by the Knights of Columbus in their handsome and spacious club rooms, Simcoe Street. Dr. McNulty, lecturer, presided, and spoke of the great esteem in which the departing member was held throughout the city. Mr. V. J. McElderry read an address which bespoke of the great esteem in which Judge Hayes was held, and of the honor that had been bestowed upon the society by one of its members being appointed to the position of Senior Judge. Judge Hayes had been a Grand Knight and had rendered many valuable services to the Knights of Columbus, and his departure for the new field was regretted. The honor bestowed upon him was fitting.

Judge Hayes, in a neat and appropriate manner, thanked the members for their kindness. He deeply regretted leaving Peterborough, but hoped to make friends in Guelph, the County seat for Wellington.

Father McColl also in a few words congratulated Judge Hayes on his appointment. It was an honor to have one of their members appointed to this high position.

Father John O'Brien, of the Church of the Sacred Heart, also spoke with feeling at the departure of Judge Hayes from the city.

Mr. Harry Phelan voiced similar sentiments, and the evening was brought to a close with Father Cote singing in excellent manner, "O Perfect Day." The gathering then broke up with the old favorite, "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

WILSON ORDERS FLEET TO ADVANCE ON TAMPICO

U.S. Officials Insist on a Public Apology for Arrest of Marines on Thursday and Fighting Machinery is Put Into Motion to Secure it---Soldiers on Border Hope for Invasion---London Paper Sees War

WASHINGTON, April 15. — President Wilson yesterday ordered practically the entire Atlantic fleet to Mexican waters to force a public salute to the American flag from the Huerta Government as an apology for the arrest of American marines at Tampico last Thursday.

No ultimatum has been issued, that is, no specified time has been set within which the Huerta Government must comply, but the naval demonstration has been ordered as a concrete evidence of the fixed determination of the United States to back up Rear-Admiral Mayo's demand for a salute. Up to last night Gen. Huerta had not made satisfactory response to that demand.

"Future developments depend upon Huerta himself," was the way a high administration official close to the President summarized the situation.

Forty-six warships and 21,000 men will comprise the force off Tampico.

Everywhere, at the White House, the State Department and the Navy Department, the hope was expressed that the despatch of the fleet would not lead to serious consequences, and there was a confident prediction among Administration officials that Gen. Huerta would see the wisdom of satisfying the American demand and close the incident.

U. S. Soldiers Eager for Action.

FORT BLISS, Texas, April 15.—Coming at the end of three years of watchful waiting on the sand dunes and cactus clumps of the Mexican border, the Tampico incident renewed hope among the units of the United States army here on the border, and nothing was being discussed at the officers' and men's messes last night but the possibilities of a Mexican invasion at last.

One hour is the estimated time it would require to throw the entire Federal force into Juarez, the first point of contact for the army of invasion.

On Verge of Intervention.

LONDON, April 15. — The Daily Mail in an editorial yesterday morning considers that the United States "is on the verge of armed intervention in Mexico, with all its incalculable consequences."

The Post, asking whether President Wilson has lost faith in his policy of watchful waiting, thinks it more than likely that the naval demonstration is intended as a warning to the constitutionalists as well as to Huerta, but that even if Huerta yields and the constitutionalists desist from the destruction of foreign property, the general problem will be no nearer solution. "It is difficult to see," The Post adds, "how intervention can be avoided."

MR. G. W. BENNETT ON GOOD ROADS

Superintendent of Colonization Roads Addressed Township Council.

Mr. G. W. Bennett, superintendent of Colonization Roads addressed the North Monaghan Council at their meeting, Monday afternoon, at the Court House. The Reeve and Council extended to Mr. Bennett a hearty welcome and he spoke to his old friends of North Monaghan on the question of road building, the most important question of the day to all rural municipalities.

Mr. Bennett dropped all preliminaries and formalities and proceeded to discuss his subject from the standpoint as best suited to North Monaghan. He said that the Government fully intends to leave the question spending of the money in the hands of the local municipalities and no restriction would be placed on them as to how or where the money was to be spent but that when the Council decided on a suitable man to build the roads then the Government would assist him in every way possible in the way of plans, specifications and if necessary by a personal visit of an official from the Department. The Government would insist upon an inspection by some one sent by the Department. Mr. Bennett's important point was that the Municipal Councils would have to abandon the old time idea of spending a little here and there an all over the township in order that the people paying the taxes would have an opportunity of getting back their money.

SUCCUMBED TO SECOND OPERATION

THOPIELD DELAIRE PASSED AWAY IN HOSPITAL AT GREENFIELD, WIS.

Word was received in the city this morning of the death of Mr. Thopield Delaire, aged 65 years, which took place last night at 10.45 in Greenfield, Wis. The late Mr. Delaire had made his home in Peterboro for many years. He left here on August 2nd of last year, and was engaged in the lumbering business. Some seven weeks ago a tree fell upon his leg and crushed it severely. The doctors attending him in the hospital at Greenfield entertained hopes of saving his life if the leg was amputated, but when the operation was performed gangrene set in and another operation was made necessary. This proved too much of a shock, and eventually caused his death. He was engaged in the lumbering business in this section of the country for many years, and was most extensively known.

Four brothers, Mr. P. W. Delaire, 478 Park Street, Mr. Jos. Delaire, Perry Street, Mr. Philip Delaire, of Michigan, and Mr. Sylvester Delaire, of Midland, Ont., also one sister, Mrs. Josephine Corbey, of Saginaw, Mich., are left to mourn his death.

The remains will be brought to this city on Friday, and will be conveyed to the residence of Mr. Jos. Delaire, Perry Street, from where the funeral will take place on Saturday to the Church of the Sacred Heart and St. Peter's Cemetery.

FAIR GROUNDS FOR THE LOCAL ASSOCIATION

President Garbutt Discusses the Question With Board of Trade.

At the Board of Trade meeting last evening, President J. H. Garbutt of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition waited on the Board with a view of getting assistance from the Board of Trade to purchase permanent fair grounds. The grounds would cost about $30,000.

"Don't you think you could promote a solution to the council whereby you could purchase one half and the city council the other half?" asked Mr. Turner. The ownership of the property might prove valuable with the annexation of a considerable part of Monaghan to the city.

"There is no better grounds around," said Mr. Roland Denne. "Land speculators blocked a deal on us once before."

Mr. Turner furthered his remarks by saying he would like to see a deputation assisted by the Board, place the matter before the City Council.

President Hall said the Board would be glad to render any assistance possible.

Mr. Worth reported on the Toronto trip in company with the local delegation to further their interests on the Radial question.

The delegation were assured that they would have the hearty support of the Peterboro Board of Trade in any steps they might take.

DOG OWNERS ARE AFTER THE TAGS

Nearly one hundred dog tags have been issued during the past week, since the Police Department have taken over the job of issuing dog tags. Numerous parties have called at the Police Station to recover their dogs, as any dog found without a tag is placed in the hands of the police.

To-day Police Chief Thompson expressed himself that unless notice was taken of the tagless dogs after the expiration of time, they would make short work of the canines.

Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Hassler Are Circling the Globe.

Stratford, April 15.—Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Hassler, of Vienna, Austria, who are now on a 25 year tour around the world on wheels will be here shortly. They are now in Berlin, and are three weeks ahead of schedule time. Mr. and Mrs. Hassler, better known as Hopatcong Joe and La Tosca, started from Vienna, their birth-place, on Jan. 1, 1904, on a $25,000 crown wager offered by the Singer Manufacturing Co. of Vienna to encircle the world, and cover 10,000 miles of every country in the world. When they started Mrs. Hassler was 13 and her husband 12 years of age. They speak German, English, Bohemian and Polish. They started from the Palace of Emperor Francis Joseph I. on Jan. 1, 1904, without money. They cannot beg or steal, and they must earn their living by giving lectures on their travels in theatres or public squares and show pictures of all parts of the world, especially of the opening of the Panama Canal on Jan. 17, 1914, the Petro Miguel Locks and the Culebra Cut, the Pan-American Exposition, 1915.

They so far have covered about 650,000 miles, and have visited a large part of Austria-Hungary, Germany, Spain, Greece, Russia, Roumania, Egypt, the United States, Japan, China, and the East Indies. From here they will go to Lonon, Woodstock, Hamilton, and Toronto, Peterborough, Ottawa, Montreal, New Brunswick, and Prince Edward Island, then to Glasgow, Scotland, and Ireland and England, thence to South America.

C.G.E. WHISTLE TO LABOR LESS

Will Not Be Blown at 6.50 p.m., 7 p.m. and 10 p.m.

The blowing of the Canadian General Electric whistle at 6.50 p.m., 7 p.m., and 10 p.m. has been discontinued, as the recently installed time-clock system dispenses with the necessity. The average citizen and particularly those in the South Ward will miss the "big noise" and will for a few weeks be more or less at sea. The first two whistles did not benefit the public very much but the ten o'clock toot was depended upon a great deal. It was generally the time for the old folks to flee to cover, for the fellow to do the "break away" stunt and for the canoists on the river to turn the bow toward Rye's.

TWO $2 FINES FOR DRUNKENNESS

"My dear man, I came to this city from Millbrook with some $15 or $16; I have not one cent of it now, so I guess my lord I was drunk all right," said Jas. Barber this morning to Magistrate Dumble at Police Court.

"Well, you should know that we have a number of experts here," sympathized the Magistrate, who gave the culprit ten days to pay the fine.

"Yes, your lord, I am guilty, for I was drunk." So remarked George Douglas.

Magistrate Dumble explained that it would cost him $2 to be paid in ten days.

QUEEN ZEPHRA GIVEN PLEASING PRESENTATION

Capable Caste Win Unstinted Approval of Audience at Grand Opera House

Presented with all the latest costumes and scenic effects, and punctuated with excellent solos and choruses, Queen Zephra, as seen last night in the Grand Opera House, under the auspices of the Peterboro Conservatory of Music scored an initial success. So far does it surpass all previous musical extravaganzas presented by local talent that it verges upon perfection.

The plot revealed in Queen Zephra is that of earnest and devout love on the part of Prince Juna for Princess Neyera, daughter of Decius, ruler of Njord, a province of Norseland, over which Queen Zephra reigns in a gentle yet righteous manner. Prince June is loathed by King Decius because of an old family feud, and he refuses to give his daughter's hand in marriage, swearing before heaven that he would strike her dead with his own hand in preference to having her become the wife of Juna. Decius finds that Neyera meets her lover in secret, and in an effort to stop this practice he casts her into prison.

Very soon is the handsome and winsome Neyera missed from the Royal Court and a search for the Princess is begun. Flora, a friend to Neyera, finds the truth of the matter, and prepares to charge King Decius with misconduct before the court of Queen Zephra. Decius has long been a vassal to Her Majesty, but relying on his followers he admits his guilt when charged by Flora and at the same time announces his intention of throwing off the yoke of Zephra. The Queen possesses a magic stone presented by Unis, a fairy godmother, and when she waves it thrice, the doors of the prison are opened and Neyera is freed.

Decius, seeing his plans foiled, attempts to start an insurrection, but his followers are more faithful to Queen Zephra, thus he is alone. Her Majesty, although sorry to think that he should act so rash, casts him into exile, and, like all other stories and plays, Price Neyera and Prince Juna live happily ever after.

The difficult role of Queen Zephra is taken by Miss Lillian H. Rush, who does full justice to the role, while Jessie H. Perrin's impersonation of Princess Neyera is par excellence. Her singing and acting was extraordinarily well executed, and in the rendition of "Tell Me, Cupid," drew great applause. Flora, friend to Neyera, and the prosecutor of Decius before the Royal Court, is well taken by Atbolia L. Beatty, and Kate I. Leary as Unis, the fairy godmother, handles a difficult role with ease. Arthur Knott as the Pride of the Court, Helen Fisk as Cupid, and Aileen Morgan and Sybil Hood as Queen's Pages were truly stage dolls. The children were very good and needless to state they drew considerable applause.

King Decius, a part which involved some fine acting, was represented by Mr. E. Hanrahan, and his manner and singing soon made him very prominent. Mr. Wm. Collins impersonated Prince Juna and did so in his excellent way. His singing of "Miladi" was well received. Mr. A. Primeau as Sir Alexis, Mr. Vernon Morphet as Sir Solon, G. M. Wright as Sir Thoras, Chas. Thorpe and John Smith as attendants, all did exceedingly well. Mr. Morphet sang the opening song, "A Kingdom for a Stage," and received enthusiastic applause.

Several drills and [illegible] were put on, the [illegible] being the superb [illegible] and the Newsboys' [illegible]. The grand finale at the end of the third act, during which confetti was [illegible], made a [illegible] last scene, [illegible].

BOARD WILL GIVE ASSISTANCE TO LAKE COTTAGERS

In Their Efforts to Bring About Better Conditions.

The Board of Trade were waited on last evening by a deputation from the Stoney Lake Cottagers' Association. Mr. Robert Neill, acting as spokesman, said it was their desire to have the co-operation of the Board of Trade in assisting the Cottagers' Association to get better railway service at Lakefield by having the G. T. R. run their trains to the wharf instead of the station, and thereby save [illegible] and delay. Over 40,000 people passed through Lakefield per year for their summer homes on the lakes, and the new proposition would be of great value and convenience.

Mr. Jas. Hamilton expressed himself that every shipper should be interested in the matter, and suggested each write to the Railway Commission regarding the same.

Magistrate Dumble said he had communicated with the Railway Commission, but as yet had not received word from them. The Lakefield Council's objection against the matter was all rot.

President Hall spoke greatly in favor of the matter. The delay with the present conditions was from half an hour to one hour each trip when the transfer of baggage was taking place.

Magistrate Dumble also brought up the mail question. The matter at the present time was in the hands of the Postmaster-General, and word was expected daily.

The Hatchery also formed an interesting theme of discussion by Magistrate Dumble, who outlined the great necessity for a fish hatchery in the back lakes. The fish are rapidly dying out owing to the number being caught. He spoke of the change of the fishing season to that of July 1st. These matters were being considered at present, but they wanted the assistance of the Board of Trade in the matter. "Our government as a matter of wisdom and prudence ought to have stocked our back lakes with good fish. There isn't a sporting place in the world with the facilities of Peterborough. The Government have been very lax in this particular matter. "If we don't get what we want we go to Toronto and put those fellows out," concluded Mr. Dumble.

It was felt that the Board of Trade would do everything possible to promote better conditions at the Lakes.

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 15, 1914

RAILWAY POLITICS.

THAT FINE PUBLICATION, The Queen's Quarterly, contains in its April number, an article by Professor Skelton, on the railway situation in Canada. It is a skilful article, written with perhaps too much concealed favor for the Grand Trunk Pacific. Although he does not condone shortcomings in the construction of that railway, his careful comparison between the Canadian Northern and the Grand Trunk Pacific of the matter of standards leads one to the conclusion that policy of the Grand Trunk, in constructing a high-class road, meant high fixed charges, while the cheaper construction of the C.N.R. meant high operating charges. One is apt to conclude, that, so far as the people were concerned, the result in either case would be much the same. Possibly it would, but no note has apparently been taken of Mr. Hayes' protest to Sir Wilfrid, in regard to some very important matters in constructing the road—an objection not made without good reason. Professor Skelton points out that the "choice between the two policies, assuming that financial credit left anything but Hobson's choice possible, turned mainly on the question how soon heavy traffic could be expected after completion: a question that still waits its answer." The expediency of building such a road, the effect on national credit, financial stringency, may be part of the answer as to whether there was a choice, as to whether the plan actually followed was as is claimed extravagant, especially in view of the gap of $100,000,000 between the estimates and the actual cost. If Canadian trade is crippled by over investment in railways as the financial stringency would indicate, there was a choice, and the results of the two methods are not the same.

When the Professor deals with the question of value received, he gives some very interesting comparisons to show that the average cost per mile of $85,000 is not relatively an exorbitant cost. He mentions the New York Central costing $473,000 a mile, the Northern Pacific at $70,000, the Union Pacific $151,000, and the old Grand Trunk at $126,000. These however, are capitalized costs, which might or might not be the construction cost, although it is reasonable to consider them so. He does not say that the Davis charges show graft, but that the charge of graft has weight, and he half admits the charge of over classification in the matter of allowing assembled rock to pass as solid. As far as the comparative figures go, they mean little when applied to a road like the Grand Trunk Pacific, unless a great many details and conditions between the roads compared are identical. A real comparison would involve the history of railroad construction for the last forty years, and would involve an estimate of varying prices of wages, of changing cost of construction materials, of improved methods of construction as the increasing use of machinery, of the advantages of stock and bond issues, of the savings in low grades, big curves and many other details that have been part and parcel of railway development. As far as the Grand Trunk Pacific is concerned it is a problem of its own and needs to be considered in the light of the conditions that affected it, not of the conditions prevailing when some other road was built.

Turning to the Canadian Northern, he says that it is largely a question of the validity of the security offered, and that aid should be given it, but not until the tax payer is informed of the true state of the company's affairs.

But to go back to the very beginning of Professor Skelton's article, he goes to the root of the whole matter when he says that for over sixty years, publicly and secretly the railways have been very much in politics. This connection of the railways with politics has prevented, from the very beginning, a true understanding of the railway situation. The press cannot shoulder the responsibility of speaking plainly what it thinks to be the actual state of affairs. Usually, it is not in possession of the facts and is obliged to support or to condemn the policy of the leaders in politics according to the party stripe to which it belongs. Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his ministers, particularly Mr. Fielding, must have known that the Grand Trunk Pacific could not be built at a cost to the country of only $13,000,000. The road necessarily served political ends, and for that reason it is more than likely a great deal of the people's money was misspent. This money will be drawn from the people for many years in high freight rates and in taxes to meet interest charges on the national debt. No matter from what angle the question is viewed, the people foot the bill in the end. It is only natural for the Liberal party to try to prove its efficiency in constructing the road, and it is just as reasonable for the Conservatives to try to prove graft charges on the part of the Liberals.

The very fact that the road was in politics serving party purposes, is enough to cause a suspicion of graft. In the case of the Grand Trunk Pacific, it seems that the turnover in 1911 came so suddenly that the Liberals were unable to cover up all their tracks. That the road is solidly constructed is admitted, that economy and good judgment were lacking is the basis for the charge of extravagance.

ANOTHER LIBERAL KICKS.

SEVERAL LIBERAL NEWSPAPERS have been congratulating their party on the exit from their ranks of Sir Lyman Melvin-Jones. Perhaps they congratulated themselves when the famous nine went against them in Toronto in 1911. In truth the old guard is becoming sadly decimated for another Liberal has disapproved so strongly of the Liberal policy that he has broken with his party. A. C. Ross, ex-M.P. for Cape Breton North and Victoria, and one of the most prominent Liberals in Nova Scotia, has severed his connection with the Liberal party and thrown in his lot with the Conservatives.

Speaking of the matter before leaving for New York, Mr. Ross said his reason was simply his hearty approval of the whole transportation policy of the present government and his strong disapproval of the transportation policy of the late government. He made particular reference to the failure of the Laurier Government to see the great natural advantage of the Sydneys as summer ports of call for the landing and embarkation of mails and for passengers who desire to reach their destination quickly.

Mr. Ross is a close personal friend of Hon. W. S. Fielding and Premier Murray of Nova Scotia. He is the founder of the Dominion Iron and Steel Company, the Inverness Coal and Railway Company and a number of other Cape Breton enterprises.

THE CONSEQUENCE.

CONTRARY TO WHAT we had expected the four gun-men were sent to the electric-chair. American justice would not apparently permit all to escape—a victim had to be provided, and, as far as the gunmen were concerned they paid the penalty of the crime of which they were proved guilty. During the last few days sentiment was inclined to favor them, but to no purpose. Although Whitey Louis made a statement that he did not shoot at Rosenthal, the process of law considered him fully implicated. Grant that Becker was the promotor of the crime and in a way more guilty than they, that does not excuse them. When they became citizens of the United States they made a contract to be bound by its laws, the justice of which did not enter into the agreement. They agreed to suffer penalties for laws broken as well as to enjoy privileges such as taking part in elections. They allowed themselves to be Becker's tools, and, having done the job clumsily, were found out, proven guilty and suffered the inexorable consequences of their contract. Even though they never formally swore allegiance to the U.S., their residence there was equivalent to an agreement to be bound by the prevailing law. If they were tools in Becker's hands that does not excuse them, although it increases the degree of crime of which Becker is guilty. The main point is that the death of these youthful derelicts, who, in spite of their guilt, had many extenuating circumstances in their favor as the lack of proper home training, is a warning to others to live rightly. They furnish another proof of the universality of suffering the consequences of one's acts.

THREE TIMES AND OUT.

REPORT SAYS the Hon. Sydney Fisher is flirting with Jacques Cartier Liberals for the nomination. The writ for the bye-election necessitated by the resignation of the Hon. F. D. Monk has not yet been issued, but the ex-Minister of agriculture is said to be doing all he can to prepare the way for his candidature, and it is expected that as soon as the date is announced he will throw his bonnet into the ring. It was thought that after his signal defeat in Chateauguay, Mr. Fisher would take the hint now twice thrown out by the Quebec electors. On the part of some of his former colleagues this thought was fathered by the wish. Mr. Fisher, as now appears, has no intention of gratifying this wish and will make a bold bid for the Jacques Cartier nomination. He has given up hope of winning back his old constituency of Brome. It appears Hon. Sydney is superstitious and is going on the principle that the third time tells. No doubt it will tell the third out.

Can You Pick the Flaw in the Reasoning?

Toronto News.

Mr. George P. Graham's speech on the National Transcontinental Railway will be printed. It took him seven hours to deliver it. At 6,000 words an hour the document reached 42,000 words. At $6 a thousand ems, this would be $63 for composition alone, to say nothing of paper and binding. We doubt the advisability of crippling the Liberal campaign fund by this ill-judged expenditure.

Keep Busy—It Means Success.

Farmer's Advocate.

The most successful men on the land are generally those with whom every season of the year is a busy season. We have heard men say that there is a slack season on the farm just after seeding and previous to hoeing. There shouldn't be. Where is the farm without fences and gates to repair or build, draining to do, buildings to overhaul or weeds to destroy? Keep busy! It means success..

Who Furnished the Cash?

Montreal Weekly Witness.

When we see great lists of names, early gathered, and other evidence of expenditures on behalf of a candidate, far beyond what the office is worth to himself, we naturally ask ourselves, whose money is being used and for what purpose? Did he have it himself to spare? Is it due to the contributions of patriots through a patriotic association? Or is it supplied by interests with axes to grind? If the people are not to be ruled by money, they must know what moneys are spent on an election, whence obtained and how used. They should also know exactly who owns their newspapers and who subsidizes them by advertising or otherwise. Their right to such information is now generally acknowledged, and until they have it they may count themselves in their electoral capacity as puppets dancing to the bidding of wealth.

THE LOAFERS

By Walt Mason

When Spring comes, soft and balmy, with zephyrs flying loose, and weather cold and clammy is canned for future use; when Spring, the genial fairy, brings solace to our souls, and all the world is merry, the loafers leave their holes. They come, the whole blamed slather, from holes, the Lord knows where, and on the corners gather, and chew and smoke and swear. They come, the ragged loafers, who'd rather die than work, as useless as the gophers that in the cornfields lurk; as useless as the foxes that steal the farmer's geese, they sit on drygoods boxes—their smell disturbs the peace. The peelers see them sitting all day, a dingy sight, their perches never quitting from morning until night; but do the peelers nab them, or try to get their goats? Ah, No! No cops will grab them, for loafers all have votes. They are as independent as donkey eating hay, because they shine resplendent upon election day. They'll still defile the pavement, and stir up women's wrath; they ne'er know what a shave meant, and never took a bath; they shun all sane endeavor, these skates with thirsty throats, and they'll abide forever, because they have their votes.

Birthdays Note

WEDNESDAY, APRIL FIFTEENTH.

BLISS CARMAN, the well known Canadian poet, who was born in Fredericton, N.B., on April 15, 1861, has enjoyed a varied career, having successively studied law, practiced engineering, taught school and engaged in journalism. A characteristic anecdote illustrative of his odd, simple-minded and unconsciously humorous personality is told by one of his intimate friends, a lawyer who once shared apartments with him in New York. One morning Carman, who was busy reading in his study, called out in surprise, "Why, I see that Sir John Macdonald is dead." "He has been dead for months," answered his friend, "didn't you know that?" "No I didn't," said the poet, and then he explained, "I'm just reading that Year Book which came out last week. I usually get my news of what's happened last year out of it. Good idea, don't you think?"

SEVEN LIVES LOST.

Fire Wrecks Apartment House in Boston in Early Morning.

BOSTON, April 15.—Seven persons were killed, sixteen were injured more or less seriously, and twelve families, totaling more than seventy-five individuals, were endangered in an early morning fire that wrecked the Melvin, a five-storey brick apartment house at the corner of Commonwealth and Long Avenues, in the Allston district, yesterday. The loss is estimated at $60,000.

The dead: Mrs. Alice Shackford, wife of C. L. Shackford; Mrs. Edith Bemis, wife of H. E. Bemis; Mrs. F. C. Beharrell, a sister of Mrs. Bemis; James R. Power, Mrs. Power and their infant son; Miss Mary Connors, a maid in the Power family.

Mrs. Shackford and Mrs. Bemis met death by jumping, one from the fourth floor and the other from the fifth. The bodies of the other victims were found on the fifth floor two hours after the discovery of the fire, and the medical examiner expressed the opinion that all had been suffocated.

Train Bandit Is Shot.

ABERDEEN, South Dakota, April 15.—Harry Matthews, one of three bandits who held up the Great Northern express near Bellingham, Washington, last month, killing two trainmen, was in turn shot and killed on Monday night at Lemmon, S.D., by George Schlong, a special railroad detective, and Deputy Sheriff Fred. Axtell, of Perkins County. He was found in a box car, and opened fire on the officers, who killed him instantly by a return volley.

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y., April 15.—That Patrolman McKnight held him up at the point of a revolver and took $22 from him in Portage Road on Sunday night is the complaint made by Andrew Busch, of 331 Thirteenth street. McKnight was recently reinstated in the department after being fined seven days' pay for intoxication.

GETTING BACK TO WORK.

Parliament Will Spend Rest of Week on the Budget.

OTTAWA, April 15.—Members of Parliament have returned from the Easter vacation for the resumption of business by the House to-day.

The balance of this week promises to be fairly quiet, with the budget debate continued.

The Senate also resumes to-day, and its special committee will tackle the Consolidated Railway Act, which will be productive of several weeks' work. The principal features are those extending the powers of the Railway Commission, and particularly vesting in that body complete control over stock issues by railway corporations. It is understood that the companies are preparing vigorous opposition.

Supplementary estimates and railway subsidies have yet to be brought down, but otherwise the Government legislation is nearly all on the table.

Amundsen Polar Trip Off.

CHRISTIANIA, Norway, April 15.—Official announcement is made of the postponement for a year of Capt. Roald Amundsen's expedition to the North Polar regions. The Fram has been recalled to Christiania, and explorers are inclined to believe the expedition will never be carried out, as considerable difficulty is experienced in raising the extra $200,000 necessitated by the delay.

The postponement is due to the inability of the Fram to get through the Panama Canal, it having reached Colon in December last, to have the honor of being the first vessel through the canal. Because of the foul condition of the hull it could not make the long journey around the Horn in time.

For Georgian Bay Canal.

OTTAWA, April 15.—Promising to be larger than ever, the annual delegation of municipal bodies and boards of trade in support of the Georgian Bay Canal scheme are in Ottawa today. They will interview the acting Premier, Hon. Geo. E. Foster, and Cabinet colleagues, and over a thousand delegates are in attendance, the bulk of them from Montreal, Ottawa and the Ottawa Valley. An immediate start on the canal will be asked.

Indian File.

This is another name for single file. It had its origin in a custom among the Indians of the north, who, when on the warpath, moved in single file—the one behind treading with great care directly in the footprints of the man preceding and the last man carefully obliterating the footprints of those who had gone before him. In this way the Indians succeeded in concealing their numbers from the enemy and very frequently in concealing their whereabouts also.

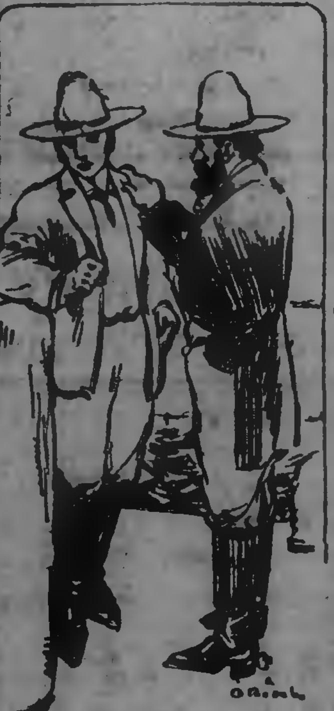
Story of a Man Who Was Believed a Thief.

By WILLIAM CHANDLER

Among those who went to California when gold was discovered there in 1849 was Joseph Griffin. He was a married man with one child, a girl of ten.

Griffin decided to make the land journey. He went from Buffalo to St. Joseph, Mo., traveling most of the way by stage, and there outfitted with one of the "prairie schooners" of that day, a wagon with a canvas top, drawn by horses, which he filled with provisions, cooking utensils, bedding and such other articles as would be needed on the journey. When all was ready and he was about to start a rawboned country boy stepped up to him and said:



MR. GRIFFIN TOLD ZEB THEY MUST PART.

"Say, mister, won't you take me along?"

"What's your name?" asked Griffin of the boy.

"Zeb."

"Zeb what?"

"I don't know. Father and mother were killed by Indians on the plains. I was picked up by buffalo hunters."

"Have you any home?"

"No."

Little Molly Griffin stood by the wagon listening to this dialogue, and her big blue eyes were filled with pity. She said nothing, but remained intent on what her father was saying.

"Have you no clothes but those you have on?" he asked the boy.

"No."

Griffin remained silent a few moments, deliberating. Then he said:

"I want a boy about your age to help with the horses and anything else there is to be done on the way. I'll give you your grub, but I've nothing else for you. If you want to go with us on those terms you may."

"I do."

"Well, come along with me. Those clothes wouldn't last you halfway. You'll need an overcoat when we get to the mountains, and I must have another blanket. Reckon we have buffalo robes enough."

Mrs. Griffin called her husband aside and expressed a doubt as to the propriety of taking with them a waif who was entirely unknown to them, but Griffin said he would need some one.

Zeb proved a valuable acquisition. He soon learned to harness and unharness the horses and was very useful in unloading and loading the wagons when the party camped under the stars. When Griffin was obliged to make repairs the boy proved very handy as an assistant. It was the first time in his life that he had been a member of a family, and he seemed delighted with the association, the duties and the experience of traveling all day and camping at night with the others.

A recital of the adventures of the party would fill a volume. There is only room here to say that after many mishaps and dangers they reached the mountains and after many more mishaps and dangers passed over them and finally struck the region of the gold diggings. By this time Zeb had become a fixture in the family. It would have been cruel to send him away; none of them wished to part with him.

Griffin had brought some money with him, which he invested in mines that had been partially developed. But for a long while none of these investments turned out to be very profitable. Meanwhile Zeb grew to be a young man and gave indications of having sprung from parents above the average in the social scale. He had outgrown doing chores for the Griffin family, but had not outgrown his interest in them. Mr. and Mrs. Griffin were the only parents he had ever known, and, as for Molly, he would at any time have given his head to gratify a whim of hers. But as he grew older he took his pick and shovel and started forth to try his luck as a prospector.

When Griffin had been in California six years he struck a bonanza. He bought a partly developed mine for a song and sold it for a fortune. The amount he received for it was 420 pounds of gold.

It must be remembered that California was still an inaccessible country. To reach the Atlantic coast by land the same perilous journey the Griffins had taken to reach the Pacific must be taken again. To go by sea meant something, though less dangerous, at any rate more tiresome. They desired to return to their home in New York state and carry their fortune with them, but dreaded either of these routes. After much deliberation it was decided that they would go southward by sea to Panama and there attempt to find transportation across the isthmus to Colon and thence by sea again to New York. They would avoid the necessity of a journey down the west coast and up the east coast of South America.

They made preparations for the journey, putting their gold in a box to take with them. It was carefully weighed, showing that there were exactly 420 pounds of gold, exclusive of the box. Just before the ship sailed on which they had taken passage Mrs. Griffin was taken suddenly ill. After deliberation Mr. Griffin decided to send Zeb in advance with the treasure that he might investigate the means of getting across the isthmus. If he found it too difficult to warrant their going by that route he was to write the fact and they would make other arrangements. Zeb sailed on the ship that was to have taken the whole party and in due time reached Panama. He had been instructed by Griffin that if he found it best to turn in the gold at Panama and take a draft on New York he was to do so. As soon as he arrived he made inquiries as to crossing the isthmus and found it practicable, though dangerous, principally from the liability to contraction of disease.

He wrote Mr. Griffin the result of his inquiries, but the latter did not receive his letter, for Mrs. Griffin recovered as quickly as she had been taken ill, and, finding a ship about to sail that would touch at Panama, her husband, worrying about his gold, decided to follow Zeb to the isthmus.

When the party reached Panama they found Zeb in trouble. He had decided to buy a draft for the gold and had taken steps to do so. But on weighing the metal, instead of its weighing 420 pounds, it weighed 416. This was a sad blow to Zeb. So fearful had he been that some one might purloin some of it that he had had it placed in his stateroom on the ship and kept it there during the whole of the journey. He scrutinized the box to see if he could find a gimlet hole, a loose nail or any other evidence of an outlet for the gold, but none appeared, and his heart sank within him at the imputation that must necessarily rest upon him of having stolen the missing four pounds of gold himself.

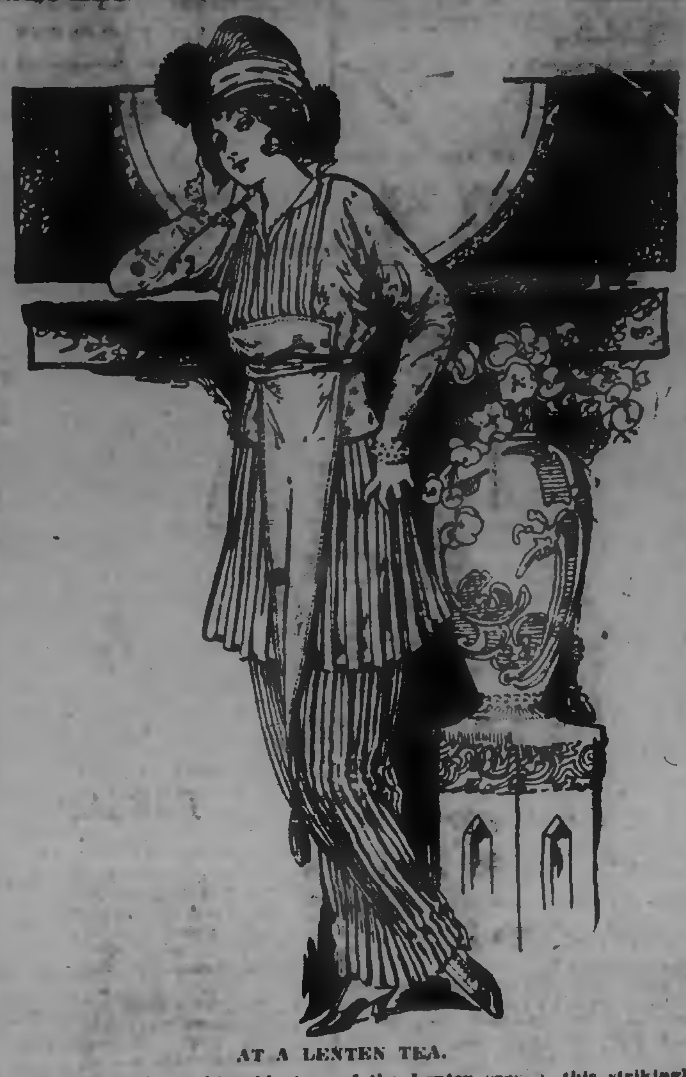
When the Griffins arrived Zeb confessed the shortage which he was unable to account for. Loath as was Mr. Griffin to believe that Zeb had appropriated the missing four pounds of metal, he was forced to believe that the young man had lost the money gambling or in some other way and had been obliged to take the gold to save himself. Possibly he had hoped he might replace it. Mr. Griffin reverted to the time when they had taken Zeb in without any one to vouch for him and admitted that that had happened which might have been expected. Molly, now a girl of seventeen, was the only one of the three who in spite of the indisputable evidence believed in Zeb's innocence.

After a conference Mr. and Mrs. Griffin came to the conclusion that Zeb had been cornered in some way and had yielded to temptation. They cared little for the gold that was missing, but regretted that one they had grown fond of should have robbed them. Mr. Griffin told Zeb that they must part and handed him $500 for immediate use. Zeb declined to take the money.

Mr. Griffin decided to take his gold to New Orleans and succeeded in getting his family across the isthmus without one of them coming down with any of the fevers then prevalent in that region. On reaching the Crescent City he had the treasure carted to a bank and asked for a draft for its value on New York. The gold was counted and the draft made out. When Mr. Griffin saw it he remarked that there must be some mistake. He had figured the amount himself from the weight and had made it much less. The amount of the draft was the same as it would have been had the gold missed at Panama not been taken, whereupon he received the following statement:

"Gold sent from Washington to the mint at New Orleans has been found to weigh less at the latter than the former place. This is because New Orleans is nearer the equator than Washington, and the centrifugal force arising from the revolution of the earth is greater the nearer one approaches the equator, rendering objects lighter."

Here was an explanation of the missing four pounds of gold. Mr. Griffin hurried at once to his wife and daughter to announce that there had after all been no robbery. Zeb was communicated with and money sent to bring him to New Orleans. When he arrived he was received with open arms and from that time forward was a member of the Griffin family, taking their name in lieu of his own, which he never knew.



AT A LENTEN TEA.

At one of the fashionable teas of the Lenten season, this strikingly original afternoon frock was displayed to advantage on the slender form of a season's debutante. Shallow box pleats were so laid that they clung to the figure yet gave an appearance of fullness, especially in the tunic. An Oriental suggestion is given in the tasseled sash-apron and the high flare and low neck of the collar are ultra fashionable.

WOMEN OF JAPAN.

The Old Time "Three Obediences" No Longer Dominate Her.

From the beginning of Japanese history to the introduction of Chinese civilization women occupied a very high place in Japan and filled positions of importance and honor in state, religion and household. Several empresses at different times ruled the empire. The greatest lights in the world of pure Japanese literature are both women—Murasaki Shikibu and Sei Shonagon. Their superb productions, "Genji Monogatari" and "Makurane Soshi," are strong proofs of a large measure of liberty and of high position in society enjoyed by women of the time. It was chiefly the Confucian doctrine of the three obediences: Obedience, while yet unmarried, to a father; obedience, while married, to a husband; obedience, while widowed, to a son, that changed the primitive state of comparative freedom and independence of woman. Buddhism and feudalism contributed also to place women in an inferior position and state of dependence.

Many Americans assume that women still occupy an inferior position in Japan under the law. But this is not true. During the last fifty years female education has spread throughout the country. Western jurisprudence has superseded Chinese and a great revolution has come over the social and legal position of woman. The new civil code of Japan created a new legal woman. It proceeds upon the principle of equality of the sexes and makes no distinction between men and women in their enjoyment and exercise of private rights so long as the woman remains single. She may now become the head of the house. She may exercise parental authority over her child. If her husband be dead she may adopt children. She may make contracts, acquire or dispose of property in her own name. In short, she may be a party to any legal transaction so long as she remains unmarried. When she is married her state of coverture obliges her to obtain the permission of her husband before doing certain acts, such as contracting debts, instituting legal proceedings, entering into contracts of personal service, etc. But even though she does these acts without her husband's permission, they are not void, but only voidable.—From a Bulletin of Japan Society of America.

Youthful Officer.

Greece boasts the youngest noncommissioned army officer in the world. He is only 13, and was a cafe waiter when hostilities broke out. As the military authorities refused to accept him on account of his age when he volunteered for service, he managed to be taken along, unofficially, by the 18th Regiment. At the battle of Elassona, says "Les Nouvelles," he took part in the fight, using the rifle of a soldier who had been killed, and his bravery at the battle of Saranaporos caused him to be admitted to the regimental ranks. Subsequently he was promoted, first to corporal, and then to sergeant, and was decorated by his sovereign.

IN DOUBT.

I WONDER if the thoughts I think
Are really thoughts or only bluffs—
Just airy eddies sailing round
In weak, inconsequential puffs.
I wonder what a thought is like—
If it is yellow, blue or gray
Or just a bright, high colored pink—
And if I'll have a few some day.

How do they ever get inside
The bony box that holds the brain?
Where do they come from? Goodness knows.
I wonder if they fall like rain.
We do not make them in the shop.
We do not buy them at the store.
We do not pick them from the trees
Nor find them lying on the floor.

But somehow they keep floating in—
At least that's what we think they are.
Who knows but they come down from Mars
Or from some other distant star!
They roam around inside our heads
And make us do some funny things,
And then they fly away again
As though they were possessed of wings.

And often when we sit and loaf,
Not bent on doing good nor crime,
We think that we are thinking thoughts
When we are only killing time.
For were they really, truly thoughts,
These fleeting waves that come and go,
We ought to in the course of time
Have something like results to show.

One Thing Lacking.

"You claim to be a man of experience."

"Sure I do. I have been around the world three times and in almost every known country on the face of the globe."

"Huh?"

"Yes, and I have worked at every trade and profession there is, from selling lightning rods to packing eggs."

"Huh?"

"Don't that make me a man of experience?"

"You ain't never been run over by an automobile."

Nervy.

"What are you going to do?"

"Speaking to me, sir?"

"Yes."

"Nothing."

"Good! Now, don't you want the assistance of an expert and a good figure?"

Psychological Effect.

"What shall I do for insomnia?"

"Get an alarm clock."

"Then I never would sleep."

"Oh, yes, you would. The minute the gong rang you couldn't help dropping off into a profound slumber."

Removing the Cause.

"I hear Jones and his wife had a falling out."

"They have made up again."

"Everything lovely?"

"Yes. She is to select his typewriters hereafter."

Song of Hope.

Life is real, and it's funny
If it isn't on the blink—
If you have a lot of money
And can purchase food and drink.

Lives of great men all remind us
That they had a lot of luck,
Which same doesn't need to blind us
To the qualities of pluck.

Life is real, life is ripping,
When things up and come your way—
When your hands the wheel are gripping
And the gasoline's in play.

Let us then be up and doing,
Hoping for a change of luck
Should we be misfortune viewing—
Should the blamed machine get stuck.

Playing Safe.

"I sassed the teacher today."

"Get a licking?"

"Naw."

"Did she hear you?"

"Not much. What do you take me for?"

Double Bill.

The hero is a gentleman
Who jumps into the briny
And fishes out a maiden fair
With tresses wet and shiny.
And if he marries her the men

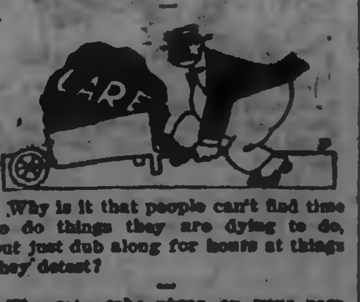
PERT PARAGRAPHS.

Some men think it helps some to go out and paint things red because they feel blue. But it only shows their streak of yellow.

It is better to get your supply of sense on the installment plan than not to get it at all.



Why is it that people can't find time to do things they are dying to do, but just dub along for hours at things they detest?

The man who steps on your corn needn't expect to get a boost from you, whether he knew you had a corn or not.

The man who goes too far runs a good chance of never getting back.

We are lots fonder of the people who are patient with us than we are of those who are brilliant at our expense.

If it is such a good thing to do to cheer up, with so many people telling them to do so it is a wonder more people don't do it.

WOMAN INVENTORS.

Saxon Lady Has Invented a New Explosive For Shrapnel.

Lady inventors have been much to the fore during the last few years, and were it not for their ingenuity the world would be the poorer by many a time and money-saving device.

New weapons for use in warfare have been invented by women, and only a few days ago it was reported that a Saxon lady, named Frau Ida Bohme, had invented a powder for shrapnel which, on exploding, produces a gas that can "put to sleep" for seven or eight hours large bodies of troops. At the present time the invention is undergoing an examination by the French War Office.

It was not so very long ago when Mdlle. Ernesta Carston di Lusi, the daughter of the Belgian Comtesse di Lusi, took out a patent for an improvement in vehicles. Her invention consisted of a turntable which will allow a vehicle to revolve on its own axis and reverse its direction in a few moments.

Machinery appears to have a peculiar fascination for inventive women, for within the last few years scores of patents have been granted in England and other countries for improvements in various kinds of mechanical appliances.

A Parisian lady invented a new type of donkey engine; Miss Kingsley, a farmer's daughter of New South Wales, put together a clever machine for cutting up fodder, and a forge bellows for the use of blacksmiths; and a woman named Ludovici, of Berlin, invented a new sheet-iron shovel and also an appliance for cutting corn.

One of the most gifted women who ever lived was Princess Nourmahal, of India. She was the first person to construct a shawl from the hair of the Cashmere goat, and she also conceived the idea of utilizing flowers in the making of scent. Her first experiments in this direction resulted in the production of that delicious perfume known as attar of roses. When she died the natives of India subscribed for, and erected a temple to her memory.

The materials from which ladies' veils are made was invented by a young woman named Pamphili, who lived on Stance Island in the Greek Archipelago. From her childhood she had exercised her reasoning faculties in making what clothes she wanted and improving the household arrangements in her parents' house.

No article, perhaps, has been improved upon so many times as the much-maligned corset. It owed its origin to Mary Brush, who invented and wore the first "female form compressor and support," as the corset was then called.

The glove button-hook was a lady's idea, and it was only a short time ago that a Frenchwoman put upon the market a comb which when in use will convey either scent or hair restorer to the roots of the hair at the will of the wearer.

Motion Picture Actors.

When an actor or actress from the regular stage obtains a good position with a picture firm he or she rarely wishes to get back to the footlights. One reason why artistes prefer picture work is that performing for the camera is much less tiring than legitimate acting, although, of course, it contains considerable more risk. Then the work is varied. It permits them to have the evenings for their own amusement, and, the greatest boon of all, it is constant. A salary every week of fifty-two weeks of the year appeals to people who are accustomed to a three months' unpaid "rest" each year.—London Express.

Economy.

"Oh, Ethel, why don't you use your finger bowl?"

"What's the use o' wastin' this good jam, mother, when I can lick my fingers?"—Life.

BEST AUTOMOBILE ROADS ARE BUILT IN GERMANY

Bridges Are Provide Pedestrians to Get Across the Speedway

NO GRADE CROSSINGS

Motorists touring Europe next autumn probably will have an opportunity to drive their cars over the new automobile speedway that is being constructed through the Grunewald Forest, just outside of Berlin, which is to be one of the finest of the exclusive automobile roads of the world.

The road, upon which four hundred men are now working night and day, assisted by an immense steam shovel and other improved machinery, is to be ten miles long, without grade crossings, bridges being constructed where other roads cross. These bridges will give pedestrians an opportunity to go from one side to the other of the speedway.

The road is being built in two sections, each with a surface width of eight meters (about 26.25 feet) and with an unpaved centre strip of the same width as each of the roadways. The construction is a three-course tar macadam with concrete curbs.

Wider at Bridges.

The bridges are especially interesting. They are of special design, so as to harmonize with the general intent of the roadway as well as the surroundings. While in this country the customary practice is to narrow the roadway somewhat where a large bridge is required, the Germans on this automobile speedway have adopted exactly the opposite plan, and the clear roadway on the culverts as well as the bridges is made nine meters.

Material for the new road, which runs straightway through the forest southwest of Berlin, is being brought by water from Madgeburg and then transferred by special unloading machinery to the cars of a structural railway and carried to the ground with a minimum of hand labor.

Beats Anything Here.

The only road on this continent comparable with the Berlin Parkway, is the Long Island Motor Parkway, extending through the middle of Long Island from the vicinity of Central Park to Lake Ronkonkoma, a distance of about forty-five miles. This is a single roadway of concrete and has no grade crossings.

The first part of this road was opened in 1908, when it was used as a part of the Vanderbilt Cup race circuit. It has since been extended eastward.

The Long Island Motor Parkway is not, however, a municipal or State undertaking, but was built with private capital and has been operated as a toll road.

GIANT SEA TURTLE GIVES SHIP TROUBLE

Crew Dine on Its Meat for Two Days Until They Get Tired of It.

Philadelphia, April 15.—A giant sea turtle, measuring 5 feet 6 inches from tailtip to the end of its nose, and weighing 400 pounds, caused the officers and crew of the steamship Washingtonian, of the American-Hawaiian line, no end of trouble although it afterward more than paid the men for their work.

This is how Captain John Parse tells the story:

Early Wednesday morning, immediately after I had taken breakfast, I heard a terrible hubbub in the fore part of the ship. I was on the verge of investigating when a sailor came running to my room and excitedly cried: "Captain, there's some sort of a fish caught in the bow of the ship."

I ran to the scene of the disorder. About twenty sailors were leaning over the edge of the ship, gesticulating excitedly. As I leaned over the bow and looked, there, to my astonishment, I found that the bow had cut half way through the body of a huge sea turtle.

Turtle Stuck to Bow.

Thinking that the turtle would become dislodged in time, I ordered full speed ahead. We kept this up for four hours, and in that time the turtle stuck tenaciously to the bow. I then ordered one of the lifeboats to be lowered and six men hewed and hacked at the giant turtle for an hour before it was finally hoisted to the deck by a block and tackle.

The turtle, I found, was of the green variety. After photographing it I ordered the cook to get busy and take what good meat there was from it.

Captain Parse said that more than half a barrel of meat was obtained. The shell, he said, is worth approximately $80. The ship's crew of 41 dined on the meat for two days until everybody became so tired of it that the rest was thrown overboard.

The Washingtonian, which came from Puerto, Mexico, with a cargo of sugar, docked last night.

"DAGO FRANK'S" STATEMENTS INADMISSIBLE AS EVIDENCE

Confession Will not Help Becker at His Next Trial Next Month

Dago franks statements inside page

New York, April 15.—The confession of "Dago Frank" Cirofici, made a few hours before he was executed for the part he played in the murder of Herman Rosenthal, will not be permitted to interfere in the plans of District Attorney Whitman for the second trial of former Police Lieutenant Charles Becker. Mr. Whitman holds the confession to be hearsay evidence, and therefore inadmissible either in the defence of Becker, who is charged with having instigated the murder of Rosenthal, or in the prosecution of Harry Vallon.

Vallon, according to the official version of Cirofici's confession to Warden Clancy of Sing Sing Prison, fired one of the shots that killed Rosenthal. It was Vallon's testimony, together with that given by "Bridgey" Webber, and Jack Rose, that led to the conviction of the four gunmen.

Becker's Second Trial.

The trial of Becker will begin on May 4, if Justice Seabury grants the motion of Mr. Whitman.

John F. McIntyre, who was leading counsel for Becker at his first trial, is of the same opinion as District Attorney Whitman concerning the availability of the Cirofici confession as evidence. Mr. McIntyre believes, however, that it might be used as a dying declaration if ordered in evidence by the presiding judge.

Bernard H. Sandler, attorney for Vallon, declared that the confession as a legal document was worthless. Mr. Sandler said that Vallon would be ready to testify at the Becker trial should he be summoned.

When Vallon was granted immunity, District Attorney Whitman stipulated that if it was subsequently shown that he had actually fired upon Rosenthal, the immunity would no longer hold and he must face trial for murder in the first degree. Mr. Whitman called attention to the provisions of this agreement when commenting on "Dago Frank's" confession.

Refuses to Talk.

Becker from his cell in the Tombs prison refuses to discuss the execution of the four gunmen or to comment on the confession of Cirofici.

The arrival of the bodies of the dead gunmen at various east side undertaking establishments drew enormous crowds. The funeral of "Whitey Lewis" Seidenshner was the signal for the first crowd to assemble. Word that the body of Harry Horowitz, "Gyp the Blood," was in a Lenox avenue morgue caused a throng to gather in that street and police reserves had to be called out to preserve order.

ASSOCIATION IS FORMED

TECHNICAL EDUCATION ADVOCATES ORGANIZE IN TORONTO.

TORONTO, April 15.—The Dominion Government will be asked to give the sum of $33,000,000 for technical education in Canada. This was practically decided yesterday, when the Ontario Technical Education Association was organized in Toronto. Ten annual installments of $3,300,000 will be suggested, it is understood, and the grants will be divided among the provinces, according to population. Ontario, for instance, would receive slightly less than a million per year under the proposed plan.

For the purpose of organization the Ontario Technical Education Association met at the Royal Canadian Institute, College street, Mr. R. D. Fairbairn in the chair. Delegates were present from manufacturing associations, Boards of Trade, the National Council of Women, the Trades and Labor Council, Provincial Technical Schools and other organizations. It was decided by the gathering to form a provincial association for the Promotion of Technical Education, with the ultimate object of having a Dominion association as the other provinces organize. A committee, representing each organization, was appointed to draft a constitution, which will be submitted to the various organizations for their official endorsement.

VESTRY MEETING AT ST. JOHN'S

Increase in Revenue and a Substantial Balance.

REPAIRS FOR ORGAN.

The Vestry Meeting of St. John's Church was held Monday night and was largely attended. Rev. Canon Davidson occupied the chair. The different societies' reports were read and showed good progress as did also the reports of the Sunday School and choir. A vote of thanks and warm appreciation was tendered the choir for the excellent work and high standard of music. The financial statement of the year was read by Church Warden H. W. Morphet displaying a considerable increase in revenue and substantial balance carried over. It was explained that necessary improvements would demand all the money available. A committee was appointed to consider the restoring and improving of the organ, which has begun to show signs of wear and tear and needs a thorough renovation. Votes of thanks were tendered church wardens Morphet and Ritchie for their excellent leadership during the past year.

The rector then appointed Mr. J. J. Howden as his warden for the coming year which was warmly received by the meeting. Mr. Ritchie was appointed people's warden and several complimentary references were made to his service during the past year. The list of sidesmen and ushers was referred to the wardens for revision.

Mr. J. A. Aylmer presented the missionary report which showed largely increased givings over other years. Expressions of appreciation were made of the every member canvass committee. The representatives to the Synod will be Messrs. W. F. Johnston, Jos. Mills, J. A. Smith. Mr. W. H. Walker was again appointed vestry clerk and a harmonious and optimistic meeting concluded with benediction.

YOUNG BURGLARS GO TO PRISON

Wilson Got Six Months and Smith Two Years.

Smith and Wilson, the two boy burglars, came up before Magistrate Jackson at Lindsay yesterday morning for sentence. Wilson got six months at Guelph Farm on each of the seven charges, the sentences to run concurrrently. Smith received two years less one day at the same institution, on the charge of entering and robbing Britton's jewellery store and six months on each of the other charges. The sentences in this case also to run concurrently.

They pleaded guilty to breaking into the G.T.R. station at Penetanguishene on or about March 26th, and were given six months on this also, the sentence to run concurrent with the others. Chief Special Agent Hodge, of the G. T. R., was present to look after the railway's interests.

The young burglars also admitted burglaries, thefts, etc., at Gravenhurst, Midland, Orillia, Barrie and Bracebridge.

Smith was given the heaviest sentence because of his previous bad record. He was first let off on suspended sentence on a charge of theft. Later he was given three months in Barrie gaol for breaking into a store. Magistrate Jackson said that this should have reformed him, but he should have received a heavier sentence in the second case, and been sent to a prison where he would have learned a trade.

Wilson had no record of previous bad conduct and the lighter sentence would give him a chance to make good.

HIS ABILITY AS AS WAITER CAUSED SUSPICIONS

Caretaker and Policeman Had Visions of a Crook.

While waiting for a lady friend, a prominent local young business man had a rather amusing experience and yet one that might have terminated in embarassment.

Apparently the lady friend kept him waiting longer than necessary. To while away the time, he proceeded to walk up and down Hunter Street and also Water Street. It being in the neighborhood of ten o'clock or later, the caretaker of the Post Office became suspicious at the actions of the young man who is regarded as one of the leading lights of the city, and informed a police officer. The blue coat wishing to get the criminal red-handed waited and did excellent sleuth work in the game of hide-and-seek which followed. The young man being one who is always ready for a joke, getting wise to the caretaker tipping the cop, commenced to walk faster as if trying to evade the officer who trailed him behind trees and other obstacles. After the game became rather stale the would-be criminal decided to quit, when, he heard a police whistle. This rather startled him. Noticing the cop walk up to the Gibbs' livery stable and there engage in conservation with a couple of men he gave up the ghost and walked back. Being well known to the livery man, they had a good laugh over the affair. Going around the corner he was more than amused to find the local detective force keeping their eyes open for the suspicious character reported in to the station.

"Why didn't you run and give them a good chase," questioned a friend when the story was related.

"Nothing doing. I thought I was having sufficient fun until I heard the whistle and I came to the conclusion it was time to adjourn."

PACIFIC COAST CITIES PLAN BIG CELEBRATION IN 1915

Every city of importance on the Pacific Coast between Alaska and Mexico is being invited to participate in the celebration that is to mark the opening of the Panama Canal next year. It is planned to have a "Convention of the Festival Cities of the Pacific Coast" on April 2nd and 3rd 1915, in the Exposition Grounds at San Francisco with parades and pageants of unexampled brilliance. Canadian fraternal organizations will be invited to be present with those from the United States.

"Hands-together-up-and-down-the Coast" is the slogan of these Festival cities and it is hoped that by means of this spirit of co-operation many thousands of tourists will be given special facilities for seeing not only the Exposition but the whole of the magnificent territory, rich in nature's wonders, that fronts the Pacific Ocean, from Prince Rupert to San Diego. Many of these travellers to the Exposition will take the Canadian route either going to or returning from San Francisco. Splendid steamships will carry passengers between Puget Sound and Prince Rupert, the gateway to Alaska, the terminus of the most modern of transcontinental railways, and a city that is advancing by leaps and bounds. Through the newly opened up wonderland of the Canadian Rockies they will pass on to the Prairie section of the Grand Trunk Pacific and can return by a variety of routes to their homes in the middle West, the Eastern States and Europe, making a tour through one of the most fascinating regions in the world.

HANNA INDICATES FURTHER ANTI-LIQUOR LEGISLATION

Legislature Resumes Sittings and Spends Day Debating Mr. Rowell's Resolution to Abolish the Bars—Local Option a Success Says Mr. Hanna, But Anti-Treating Laws Will go Far to Cure Evil.

TORONTO, April 15. — "Abolish-the-bar" day was celebrated in the Legislature yesterday and Mr. Rowell's perennial tirade upon the evils of the saloon and his apology for not wanting shops abolished occupied most of the sitting. Hon. Mr. Hanna, in reply, reaffirmed the policy of the Government and indicated that during the present session legislation will be introduced further checking the liquor evil. Mr. Rowell's resolution was defeated.

Mr. Rowell began by declaring that all in touch with the social problems of the province stood behind the temperance movement. It was recognized that the prohibition of importation or manufatcure was not feasible, but the proposal of abolishing the bar held forth no legal difficulties.

Local option had proved "one of the most valuable instruments for fighting the liquor traffic and would always get the support of the opposition," but it was insufficient in the places where it was needed most.

"Under the local option law as it stands, I venture to say that it would be impossible to carry it in any of the larger cities of the province," he declared, stating in the same connection that in every contest of the kind the measure had been overwhelmed.

The Opposition leader called attention to the excellent work of the Provincial Secretary on the prison farms, but urged that a better thing would be to remove the stumbling block of liquor from the feet of those who populated these institutions.

Mr. Rowell then dealt with the reason why shops are not included in his measure, and explained that his party had gone as far as the organized temperance party asked them to go. He pointed out that his measure left this part of the reform entirely to the community. Under the act it would be possible for each district to abolish the sale of liquor in shops should they think it advisable.

It had been said, and rightly, Mr. Rowell concluded, that some who had hitherto stood by them had now departed, but even so there was more to offset this loss. In all English-speaking countries the tide was running against the open bar and the organized traffic and the vote on the Scott Act in Ontario counties showed the determination of the people.

In his introductory remarks Hon. Mr. Hanna referred to the deputation of young Conservatives and the argument that the Government should accede to their request, and that in such a case the Opposition, with their leader, would walk across the floor to the Government benches. The old Liberal Government had enjoyed a request from 192,000 people in a plebiscite and yet had not hearkened. For long years they had waited and no response came, and yet in all that time not a man in the Government was condemned by the present leader of the Opposition. If to-day there was any moving along in temperance lines the Whitney Government was largely responsible.

The Minister drew a comparison between the actual legislation placed on the statute book by the respective Governments. That of the Ross Government was summed up in the regulating of druggists' licenses, the arranging of brewers' licenses and other minor affairs. They were years of silence, with no progress and then came Sir James Whitney with a pledge to the province, a pledge which had been steadily redeemed from the first day of power. The licenses had been cut from 2,516 to 1,383 and 81 shop licenses had gone forever.

A recent meeting in a northern county, where a peculiar document, either ballot or funeral notice, had been circulated to a large extent. It bore the words, "Rowell and Reform or Whitney and Whisky."

"Some one is responsible," said the speaker, "and the idea has been carried into politics in a fashion to be regretted."

Mr. Hanna then moved an amendment to the resolution declaring that the House recognized the necessity for curbing the liquor traffic, commending the local option laws and reaffirming belief in the efficacy of abolishing the treating habit.

Albert Grigg (Algoma) moved an amendment to the amendment, complimenting the Government on their administration.

WELL KNOWN RAILWAY MAN PASSES AWAY IN CALIFORNIA

Sir Wm. Whyte Was Until a Year Ago the Vice-President of the C.P.R. and During Most of His Twenty-five Years in the West Had Full Control of Company's Affairs

MONTREAL, April 15. — Word reached C. P. R. headquarters yesterday afternoon of the death of Sir William Whyte at Coronado Beach, California. Sir William was for years vice-president and a director of the Canadian Pacific Railway. The death of one of the pioneers of the C. P. R. and one of the best known men in Canada, came as a shock to his friends, as messages received up to a few hours previously were to the effect that Sir William's health was improving and that he would return to his home in Winnipeg quite restored in health. A special car has been sent to California to bring the body back. Lady Whyte will accompany it.

A message from San Diego says death was due to pyelitis and a complication of diseases.

Sir William Whyte had a quite remarkable railway career, which was characterized by gradual but steady evolution rather than by meteoric rapidity. He was born in 1843 at Charleston, in Fifeshire, Scotland. He was educated in the schools of his native place, and his first business appointment was that of clerk for two years in the factor's office of Lord Elgin's estate in Scotland. After spending a year in the service of the West of Fife Railway, he came to Canada in 1863, and was from that date till 1883 continuously in the service of the Grand Trunk Railway. During those twenty years he worked as brakeman, freight clerk, and afterwards freight foreman at Toronto, as yardmaster and station agent at Toronto, as station agent at Stratford and London, and as assistant superintendent of the central division.

SIR WILLIAM WHYTE.

Leaving the service of the Grand Trunk in 1883, he was appointed general superintendent of the Credit Valley Railway, to which were afterwards added the Ontario & Quebec and the Toronto, Grey & Bruce. As the Canadian Pacific Railway system in Ontario became consolidated his office became more and more important and responsible until it included the general superintendence of all the company's sections in Ontario and the provinces farther to the east. His great opportunity came when he took over the western division and became general superintendent and afterwards manager of all the lines west of Lake Superior. From 1886 till his retirement in 1911 he spent in the west twenty-five years, rising to the post of vice-president.

In 1871, he married Jane, daughter of Adam Scott, in Toronto, and he leaves four daughters and one son; Margaret, Christina Methven, Edith Jane, Gladys Helen, and William Whyte.

EVANS TO RETURN.

Crown Prosecutor Says Financier Will Arrive Next Week.

TORONTO, April 15. — According to the statement made by Crown Prosecutor E. A. Du Vernet, K.C., at the opening of the spring assizes at the City Hall yesterday afternoon, Pollman Evans has sailed from France in order to stand his trial on a charge of conspiracy to defraud in connection with the affairs of the defunct Union Life Insurance Co.

This information came as the result of Eric Armour's request that the charges against his clients, Harry Symons, K.C., and Geo. Millichamp should be proceeded with at once. To this Mr. Du Vernet objected, and when pressed by Mr. Justice Middleton for his reason, he declared that Evans would be in Toronto probably by next week.

Sir Hibbert Tupper Mentioned.

OTTAWA, April 15.—Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper has been added to the list of possible selections for the post of High Commissioner for Canada in London.

Sir Richard McBride, in the corridor gossip, is very prominently to the fore in connection with the position.

Survey Parties In Northwest.

OTTAWA, April 15.—Upwards of eighty surveying parties have been sent out this season by the Department of the Interior for the purpose of laying out new townships in the northern portion of the prairie provinces. They will go as far north as Fort McMurray.

SOME NEW RIFLES FOR P.C.I. CADETS

Through the efforts of Mr. C. E. Jamieson, instructor of the P.C.I. cadet corps, 110 latest model Ross rifles have been procured for the cadets. They will replace the old blunderbusses which have caused many a student to sigh as the gong for drill period sounded. In addition to these rifles, 2 Ross special shooting rifles and 2 Ross .22 calibre rifles have been obtained. These guns should cause the local cadets to make a name for themselves, as already they have some very promising shots. Last week, L. Cann made 33, 32, 31 and 31 out of 35 in four positions.

WOMAN'S WORK

Contributed by the Executive of the Women's Council

JUVENILE DELINQUENCY.

One of the greatest weaknesses in dealing with crime is that the antiquated viewpoint predominates—that the police and the courts, etc., are for punishment and not for reformation and prevention. From this central idea naturally follows probation officers, women police, Juvenile Court—provision for needy families of prisoners—adequate protection of a preventitive nature in parks—complete records and study of crime.

It is stated that practically all criminals are made between sixteen and twenty years of age. Not over two per cent. voluntarily go wrong — ninety-eight per cent. could be saved by education and supervision. Juvenile crime is "a love of fun gone wrong." This being so, one way to prevent it is, clearly, by providing recreation centres where there will be every facility for indulging, under the best conditions, the play spirit. For those who get into trouble there should be a Juvenile Court.

Dr. Travis in "The Young Malefactor" says—"The greatest product of legal evolution during the past decade has been the Juvenile Court. By this is not meant merely a separate place for trial, but the Court and its organization of associated child-saving methods. Most of all it means the evolution of the function of the Judge to combine the office of court president and regulator with that of state father to its wards. The purpose of the child's court is to give separate personal and adapted treatment to each offender with a view to preventing delinquency from hardening into crime. . . . . It is clear, therefore, that a court in which only children are tried is not a children's court; this is only one of nine or ten essentials. . . . . The kernel of the court is not the division as to place; it is the change of judicial function, and that change wrought out in all the atmosphere and action of the court. The judge does more than rule the proceedings; he sympathizes, explains, guides, inspires. Most of Judge Lindsey's work is done apart from the court and its officials. He goes to the home, the gang, the boy, wherever he can; talks to and guides the child as a father . . . here the State is father to the children. . . . This organization has done more than cure 96 per cent. of the offenders. It has taught old principles more clearly. . . . . The State should assume the parents' function when this is not done by the naturally appointed persons."

The Judge of the Juvenile Court need not be a lawyer, but some man (or woman) who has a love for boys and girls. He is to be the children's friend, who administers the Act in a paternal manner. Court could be held once, twice or oftener, a week. The present place of detention in the Shelters would serve. All dependent children's cases and truancy could be dealt with at this Court.

A remarkable thing is happening. Woman is discovering her medical capacity and ability is not as inferior to man's as she has always been taught to believe. She is not only learning to earn her living, but she is learning to enjoy work.

Let us face the fact that man's invention has set woman free from the four walls of his home.

British Laborites Will Not Co-operate With Socialists in Parliament.

BRADFORD, Eng., April 15. — A resolution instructing labor members of Parliament to act independently of the Socialist party was adopted by 293 votes to 78 at the closing session here yesterday of the annual conference of the Independent Labor party. The resolution also denounced the Cabinet rule which involves the suppression of the rights of private members "adequately to voice the policy of his party, besides making impossible the free consideration of proposals which have not received the Cabinet hall mark."

In conclusion the resolution invites members of the Labor party to vote on all bills in accordance with the principles for which the party stands.

Millionaire Murderer's Case Goes To Supreme Court on Appeal.

CONCORD, N.H., April 15.—Harry Kendall Thaw's petition for a writ of habeas corpus was granted by Judge Aldrich of the U. S. District Court yesterday, but no order will be issued for the prisoner's discharge from custody until arrangements are completed to take the case to the U. S. Supreme Court on appeal.

Thaw's petition for admission to bail, the court left undertermined, taking the ground that it would be more appropriate for this to be passed upon by the Supreme Court.

The result is that Thaw's guardianship and condition will be unchanged for the present, but that his petition for a writ of habeas corpus will go to the highest court in the land with a decision of the lower court in his favor.

A NEW MATRIMONIAL SOCIETY

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

Between the mountains of India and Persia there is a tribe among whom the women choose their husbands. When a single woman wishes to marry a man she sends a servant to his house to pin a handkerchief to his hat as an intimation of her desire. Unless he can show that he is too poor to purchase her at the price her father requires he is obliged to marry her.

Until the organization of the Arlington club for men there was no superfluity of spinsters over bachelors in a certain American town, but from then on marriages began to fall off. One of the most popular married women called the maidens together and organized an association for the advancement of matrimony based on the Indian-Persian plan. The first young lady to secure a husband by the method was invited to state before the association how it had worked in her case. She arose and said:

"Mrs. President, I had long admired Mr. George Luddington, who had paid me some attention, and had it not been for the organization of the Arlington club I believe he would have asked me to be his wife. But that pestiferous institution reduced him from an incipient lover to a vacillating hanger on. Soon after the adoption of the plan which we are associated to carry out I worked Mr. Luddington's initials on a fine cambric handkerchief and, calling a messenger, told him to take it to the club at the hour I knew Mr. Luddington dined there, obtain access to the coat room and pin it to his hat.

"The messenger had no difficulty in executing his commission. I did not know for some time that Mr. Luddington knew from whom the token came. I have since learned that he knew very well, and the action he took in the matter was intended to frighten me off. A few evenings after receiving the handkerchief he called on me, and I saw at a glance that he was or pretended to be very irate.

"'What do you suppose has happened to me?' he asked brusquely.

"'I can't imagine,' I replied meekly.

"'An association has been formed in this town—so I understand—to drive us bachelors into matrimony. If a girl wishes to marry a man she sends some one to pin a handkerchief to his hat. Did you ever hear of such immodest impudence?'

"'Never in my life.'

"You must excuse me, ladies, for my weakness, but he frightened me out of my wits.

"'Who do you suppose this person is?' he growled.

"'I can't imagine,' I replied.

"'Don't you think her very unmaidenly?' he asked in a less threatening tone, for my agreeing with him rendered him less severe to me.

"'I certainly do. I wonder how she could have had the face to do it!'

"I shrank into a corner of a sofa, as far away from him as I could get. He sat down on the other end and looked at me kind of puzzled. He knew I had sent him the handkerchief and couldn't understand how I could condemn myself for doing it. He looked very terrible, but not quite so terrible as when he first came. Then he began a system of torture to find out what it all meant.

"'The handkerchief,' he said, 'was very dainty, though the initials were badly worked. They looked as if they had been executed by some one with fingers so big that they were only fitted to work with a skewer.'

"At this I said nothing. I dared not speak for fear of betraying a tremolo in my voice.

"'If a girl,' he went on, 'had sent me a gift without an immodest intention I should have been deeply impressed with it. Quite likely I would have been affected to the point of making love to her and proposing marriage.'"

This statement was received with cries of "No!" "Don't you believe it!" "They all talk that way, but they don't propose!" When the commotion subsided the speaker went on with her recital:

"'But for a girl deliberately to tell a man she wants him to marry her, thus usurping his privilege, there's nothing she could do to so effectually turn him'—

"He got no further. I was full to the top of my throat. I made several convulsive gulps and burst into a torrent of tears.

"I don't know what he was doing for a few moments, for I held my handkerchief to my face. I heard nothing, but presently felt his arm around my waist. Then he drew my head down on his breast.

"'If the fool killer comes this way,' he said, with his lips pressed against my cheek, 'he'll yank me out, certain sure. Don't cry, little girl. Dear little girl, forgive me! I've loved you ever since'"—

Again there were cries of unbelief. "Oh, bosh!" "What a whopper!" and such like expressions of disapproval, whereupon the speaker indignantly turned her back on the assembly and with her nose in the air marched out of the room.

"Ladies," said the president severely, "I'm astonished at you. This society was organized to promote marriage, not to destroy romance. To doubt the word of a lover who says he has always loved the girl to whom he proposes would be to destroy nine-tenths of the delight attending such occasions."

Not Dangerous.

A man who lives out in the hundreds, just off Euclid, has two children, a daughter at the marriageable age and a son just at the diabolic age. The father of these two is wise and full of remembrance. So the other day he called his son in to him and spoke as follows:

"Danny, you are just old enough to be smart and just young enough to be foolish. Let me tell you a secret and ask a favor of you. Your sister has a young man calling on her, as, of course, you know. I want to ask you not to hide in the front room when this man calls, the way small brothers always do in the funny papers. This man may marry your sister if he isn't scared off by some little devil like you."

"Dad," answered the kid frankly, "I wouldn't dream of staying in the room where they are."

"Why wouldn't you?"

"Don't tell. Well, I'm afraid of the dark."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

WHEN YOU EAT HAM

Baking In the Oven Is the Best Way to Cook It.

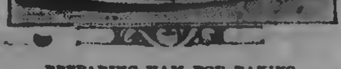
DESTROYS DISEASE GERMS.

It Also Gives the Meat a Fine Flavor, Besides Making It More Wholesome. Some Suggestions For Preparing It Palatably In This Way.

Pork is served frequently in cold weather because of its heat producing qualities. Ham, owing to the fact that it has been cured and smoked, is one of the most wholesome forms of pork. It should never be eaten raw, however. To eat it safely the ham should be well cooked before serving. The fat of pork is especially indigestible; but, owing to its leanness, ham is less open to objection on this score. Pork of any kind requires about five hours for digestion. It is therefore best served in the middle of the day or a long time before retiring.

Ham should be boiled eighteen minutes to each pound of the meat, provided it is placed into boiling water immediately. If the ham is placed first in cold water and gradually brought to the boiling point it should be boiled at the same rate, but a half hour should be deducted to allow for the time until the water begins to boil. In other words, the ham should be left in the water after it begins to boil eighteen times its weight minus thirty.

Ham is more desirable in the baked form than in the boiled. It is baked fifteen minutes to the pound—eighteen if you like the ham very well done. The ham should be first washed in cold water. Then take baking soda, sprinkle it over the ham and scrub with a small brush. Rinse it in cold water and trim it.



PREPARING HAM FOR BAKING.

Ham may be boiled before baking. After this has been done let it remain for an hour in the liquor in which it was cooked. Then take it out, let it get thoroughly cold and remove the skin. Rub the upper part of the ham with white of egg and sprinkle over it the sifted crumbs of dry bread, putting them on to form a crust a quarter of an inch thick. Sprinkle with pepper and set in the oven until the crust is brown and nicely shortened by the oozing fat. This will be in about a half hour. The ham should be served cold.

Take two pounds of ham, cut three inches thick, half a cupful of grape juice, a cupful of boiling water, two cloves and an inch stick of cinnamon. Freshen the ham for two hours in cold water, drain, place in a baking dish with the other ingredients, cover and bake till tender, about one and a half hours. Remove from the liquor, add to it two tablespoonfuls of chopped raisins and thicken with half a tablespoonful of arrowroot dissolved in a little cold water.

Spiced baked ham is nice. Parboil a young ham for about an hour and a half. Lift the ham out of the vessel and pour cold water over it. Remove the skin and rub into the ham a handful of brown sugar. Dot with cloves, sprinkle with breadcrumbs and bake until tender.

Stuffed ham is a fine dish. Remove the bones from a ten pound ham, rub the inside with salt, pepper and sage and fill the space from which the bone was taken with a highly seasoned dressing. Fasten together, place in a pan, rind side down, and add a little water. Bake, basting often. An hour before serving rub the surface with sugar. It should be baked for about four hours. Serve hot or cold.

Ham baked with cider is especially palatable. The Boston cooking school gives the following recipe for preparing it: Let a choice ham stand covered with water overnight; drain and set over the fire in a fresh supply of cold water; let it heat slowly to the boiling point; then simmer for four hours. Remove the ham to a deep baking pan, take off the skin and pour over it one pint of the liquid in which it was cooked and one pint of hot cider; baste each ten minutes and let cook until the bones of the shin may be turned. Serve hot with a dish of spinach chopped and mixed with a small quantity of cream sauce, about half a cupful to a generous pint of spinach.

For sauce skim off the fat from the liquid in the baking pan. Take a pint of this liquid, one cupful of rich brown stock and thicken with one-fourth of a cupful of flour cooked in one-fourth of a cupful of butter. Season with salt and pepper and stir in one-fourth of a cupful of currant jelly.

The first part of the cooking may be done overnight in a fireless cooker. Apple sauce, apple and celery salad or cabbage salad may be served with the baked ham.

STRANGE SEA TREASURE.

Ambergris Is One of the Most Prized Products of the Deep.

A piece of ambergris estimated to be worth about $150,000, recently brought into Victoria, B.C., was declared to be one of the largest masses of this strange sea treasure ever found.

Because of its great value, the infrequency with which it is found and the mystery which long existed as to its origin ambergris from the earliest times has been regarded as one of the most prized products of the deep. It is a solid, fatty, inflammable substance, generally of a dull gray or blackish color, and possessing after exposure to the air a peculiarly sweet, earthy odor. Ambergris is now known to be a morbid secretion formed in the intestines of the sperm whale, but for centuries it was variously believed to be the solidified foam of the sea, fungoid marine growth, gum which exuded from the trees and flowed into the ocean, or bye-product of bird life.

Ambergris occurs in lumps of various shapes and sizes from half an ounce to 150 pounds or more. When first taken from the whale it throws off a very offensive odor. This gradually gives way to a subtle aroma, said by some writers faintly to suggest that of honey. Although its almost sole use to-day is the making of perfumery, ambergris was for centuries highly esteemed as a medicine for certain diseases, and it was long used in the sacred rites of the church and in connection with fragrant gums burned in the apartments of royalty.

All seafaring men are constantly on the lookout for ambergris, yet many whaling skippers in fifty years of experience have never come across a quarter ounce of the substance. The amount of ambergris produced annually from all sources varies greatly, scarcely any being found in some years, while in others a single chunk worth $100,000 and more may be brought in by some fortunate vessel.

What is undoubtedly the most valuable lot ever secured up to recent date was a mass of 162 pounds obtained in 1891, and was finally sold in London for about $50,000. For trade reasons details as to its finding and marketing were long veiled in deepest secrecy. One of the most valuable pieces of ambergris ever received in America was taken in 1894 from a whale near the Cape Verde Islands. It weighed 109 pounds and sold for about $28,000, the best parts bringing $250 a pound.

There the Farmhand Balked.

Sam had worked on the farm for nine years, and until his master took to poultry farming he was quite satisfied with life.

But this poultry business was a bit too much. He had to take the eggs as they were laid and write the date on them with an indelible pencil. And worse than that, he had also to write on the eggs the breed of the hen that laid them.

So one day he marched up to the farmer.

"I'm fed up," said he, "and I'm going to leave!"

The farmer was astounded.

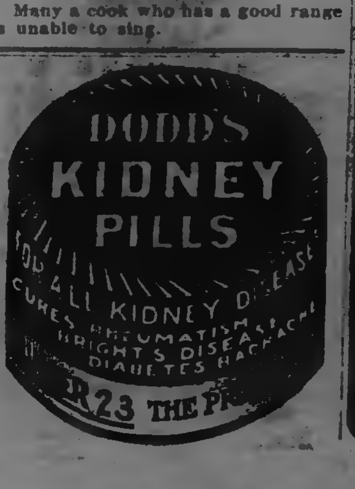
"Surely, Sam," said he, "you're not going to leave me after all these years?"

"Yes, but I am," retorted Sam, "I've done every kind of rotten job on this here farm, but I'd rather starve than go on being secretary to your old hens!"—London Answer.

Origin of Shaving.

It has been conjectured that the practice of shaving originated from its being found that the beard afforded too good a hold for the enemy in battle. This is the cause assigned for the origin of shaving among the Greeks about the time of Alexander. In other countries the practice was first adopted by military men. Historians mention the alarm in which some Roman emperors lived because of the fear that their barbers might cut their throats. For the sake of concealing a scar on his throat the Emperor Hedrian wore a beard. This fact brought the custom again into fashion.

Many a cook who has a good range is unable to sing.



Antiquity of the Mortgage.

The legal document known as a mortgage can be traced as far back as the dawn of authentic history. The mortgage comes directly down to us from the Romans, but its antiquity is much more remote than the Roman nation. The Greeks, Carthaginians, Persians, Egyptians, Babylonians, all knew of the mortgage and daily used it in their business transactions. It is safe to say that the custom of giving mortgages is practically as old as settled human society.

On the Verge of Prostration.

"What else have you got?" asked Cholly, looking languidly over the bill of fare for something to tempt his jaded appetite.

"Well," replied the waitress, "we have hot biscuits, too."

"That'll do," said Cholly, resting his intellect by tossing the bill of fare aside. "Bring me a hot biscuit stew."

SHAG WANTS SHORTSTOP SO HE APPLYS TO FORT WAYNE

Shaughnessy will try to make a dicker with the Fort Wayne club to-day for a shortstop. They have Nespo, whom the Senators tried to land last summer, and Harry Brant, whom Chattanooga drafted from Peterboro and farmed out to Fort Wayne. Either of the two will be let out. Nespo or Brant would look sweet on that Ottawa infield, though Brant is said to be erratic. Shag goes to the In- [illegible] olis club, which has also offered to sell him an infielder. He will complete his squad before Saturday, when he returns to Chatham.—Ottawa Citizen.

JOHNSON WON OPENER BY SHUT OUT

Boston Did not Get a Hit Till the Sixth

Boston, April 15.—Walter Johnson pitched shutout ball for Washington yesterday, and the Senators won the opening game of the season from Boston by 3 to 0. A big crowd enjoyed the contest, with weather conditions almost perfect. Ray Collins' pitching was effective, except in the third inning. Then Washington combined three singles, with a base on balls, and scored all three of its runs.

Boston batsmen did not get a hit off Johnson until the sixth, when Manager Carrigan singled to centre. Both teams fielded sharply.

Mayor James M. Curley threw out the first ball to Manager Carrigan, and there was the customary flag-raising march by the players across the field.

BASEBALL

Cobourg has organized a town baseball league, the following teams being admitted: Alerts, Beavers, Black Diamonds, and Ontarios. Officers: Hon. president, S. O. Runnalls; president, C. Rowden; vice-president, V. Wakely; secretary-treasurer, B. Love; Executive Committee, P. Nixon, M. Hewson, A. Hills, and V. Wakely. Mr. S. O. Runnalls has donated a cup to the league, to become the property of the team winning it two years in succession.

With ideal weather, the members of the Petes' roster are gradually drifting into Youngstown, and although the work yesterday was rather light, Curley Blount intended getting down to business to-day. Stirling and Tracey will not be in till Friday, but the rest of crew will be all there by noon to-day.

The Senators will arrive in Chatham to-morrow, although Manager Shaughnessy will not be there for a few days. At present he is down south filling in the blanks on his pay sheet. Harry Spicer, a shortstop of the Illinois-Missouri League, has been signed. Shag needs another pitcher, and then he's ready for the season.

SUPERANNUATION IS LOOKED FOR Important Measure for Teachers Announced for Next Year.

TORONTO, April 15. — Deputy Minister of Education, Dr. A. H. U. Colquhoun, made an announcement last night at Convocation Hall to the members of the Ontario Educational Association to the effect that a measure dealing with the superannuation of teachers would be introduced at the next session of the Legislature.

The Deputy Minister, in welcoming the association, said that the Minister had been detained in the Legislature, but he had been asked to convey a message to them. It said:

"I have consulted my colleagues, and we have definitely decided to offer a measure dealing with superannuation of teachers at the next session of the Legislature. This measure will necessarily be affected by three considerations at least.

"(1) A certain amount of public indifference on the subject.

"(2) Hostility on the part of a portion of the teaching profession itself.

"(3) The existence upon the statute books of the old fund. Subject to the limitations imposed by these conditions, we shall try to frame a measure just to the teachers and acceptable to the public. Any legislation of this kind must necessarily receive the endorsation of the great body of the parties affected."

"I have nothing further to add," concluded Dr. Colquhoun, "but I regard that as a binding promise, which must be fulfilled."

ANOTHER CHINESE REVOLT

DESPATCH FROM SHANGHAI INDICATES THAT SITUATION IS GRAVE.

LONDON, April 15.—Another revolt is threatened in China, according to an Exchange Telegraph Co.'s despatch from Shanghai yesterday. It adds that feverish excitement exists in official quarters at Nanking, where there is a reign of terror among the populace.

The regular troops at Sianfu, capital of the Province of Shen-Si, are said to have mutinied, and are believed to be in league with the brigand White Wolf, who with his followers has captured and looted many towns in the vicinity, killing hundreds.

Indications of grave unrest are reported from Wu Chang and Canton, says the despatch, and six provinces are said to be affected.

STUDENTS ON STRIKE

BANISHMENT OF FATHER FALLON CAUSES SOME TROUBLE AT OTTAWA

OTTAWA, April 15.—Three hundred students of Ottawa University, back from the Easter vacation, paraded the streets of the city yesterday morning and refused to enter their class rooms as a protest against the banishment of Father James Fallon, prefect of studies, by the Oblate Order. None of the English-speaking students, of whom there are over four hundred, resumed their studies, and everything was at a standstill when the strike came to a sudden end, and instead of sending a committee of protest they sent a committee of apology. A probe is in prospect.

It had been announced that Father Fallon was to be succeeded by a French priest, Father Lajeunesse, but the English-speaking students demand a successor of their own nationality, Irish, and one of the cries of the students as they marched through the streets yesterday morning was "We Want Father Murphy." Father Stephen Murphy is a teacher of the college, and one of the objects of the strike was to have him promoted to succeed Father Fallon, who, of course, it is realised, will not be brought back.

EXILED BARON DEAD AT 103

Asquith Gets Ovation.

LONDON, April 15.—Premier Asquith was greeted with an inspiring ovation on his return to the House of Commons yesterday. His progress from the entrance of the chamber to the chair of the Speaker was accompanied by volleys of cheers from excited Ministerial and Nationalist members. The newly-elected member for East Fife was introduced by Percy H. Illingworth and John W. Gulland.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Easter Monday Mrs. Louis M. Hayes gave one of the prettiest receptions of the season in honor of the "coming out" of her daughter, Nanno, as well as being a farewell before her own departure for Guelph. Miss Hayes wore a dainty frock of white charmeuse and shadow lace, with pearl trimmings, carrying a beautiful shower bouquet of Killarney roses and lilies of the valley. Mrs. Hayes was gowned in Alice blue satin with touches of old rose. Miss Marie McDonnell, of Toronto, who received with her sister, and niece, wore a handsome gown of cream satin, with overdress of lace and trimming of brown marabou.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mrs. Jack Hayes and the Misses Norma and Phyllis Hayes, of Toronto, daughters of Mrs. F. B. Hayes. Mesdames Dean and Aylmer presided over the tea rooms, Mrs. Fortye and Miss Lundy over the coffee, while Mrs. Young and Miss Halliday dispensed the ice-cream. The table was centred with a cut glass basket, filled with pink and white tulips, carnations and spray flowers. The assistants were Mrs. W. H. Dunsford, Mrs. Basil Hall, Mrs. Foster Ambree; Miss Collins, Miss Nan Hall, Miss Pierce, and Misses Pauline and Margaret Hayes, daughters of the hostess.

In the evening about seventy-five of Peterboro's younger set enjoyed a delightful house dance. The musician was Mr. Woodburn. The house was overflowing with flowers received from all parts of Ontario, and the enjoyment of both functions was only marred by the thought of losing Mr. and Mrs. Hayes and their charming family, when they take up residence in Guelph.

The Bridge Club met at Mrs. W. H. Dunsford's yesterday afternoon.

A large and fashionable audience were at the Grand last night to witness and enjoy Zephra, which was a delightful spectacular musical entertainment. The dancing and drills were excellent, the part of Queen Zephra, taken by Miss L. H. Rush, in a sweet and gracious, though regal manner, left nothing to be desired. All the other performers also took their parts with credit, and with Mr. Booth, are to be commended to the liberal patronage of the public.

Yesterday afternoon, Hon. J. R. Stratton, accompanied by Mrs. Stratton, Ald. A. H. Stratton, Dr. McPherson and attendants, went to Toronto in the special car, "Sir James," of the Provincial Railway, attached to the C.P.R. evening express. Mr. Stratton will occupy a private suite in the new Toronto General Hospital, for special treatment, with, it is to be hoped, further improvement in his recently improved condition of health.

Dunsford's, Monday evening of next week. And on the 23rd, an afternoon bridge and five hundred at the Armories, followed by a military euchre the same evening. WEDDING BELLS

HENRY-FINLEY.

A large number witnessed a pretty church wedding last Wednesday evening at 5.20 in St. John's Church, Emily. The contracting parties were Harriett Henry, eldest daughter of Mr. Alex. Henry, and Mr. William Evert Finley. The bride was given away by her father, after entering the church to the strains of the wedding march played by Stanley Magee, organist of the church. Miss Stella Handley, of Mount Pleasant, niece of the groom, accompanied the bride, while Mr. Elmor Henry, brother of the bride, was groomsman. The bride was dressed in brown fichu, wearing the gift of the groom, an amethyst necklace. The bridesmaid was dressed in embroidered crepe. She also wore the groom's gift, a pearl crescent. The groom's gift to the groomsman was an Arch Pin, and to the organist a chipped diamond tie pin. The bride and groom and intimate friends returned to the home of the bride's father, where supper was served and a pleasant evening spent in games and music. The happy couple will reside in Mount Pleasant.

"THE RED WIDOW"

The poet says "Music hath charms,' but what would that poet have said had he heard the dainty, tuneful numbers of 'The Red Widow," the late Astor Theatre, New York, success that is to be offered at the Grand Opera House, Tuesday, April 21st.

This attraction, fathered by a triology of authors, Channing Pollock, Rennold Wolf and Charles Gebest, led all the metropolitan successes last season, and its presentation here we are told will be on the same scale of magnificence, with all the wealth of scenic embellishments and dainty gowning and dressings that pleased the visual senses of its metropolitan beholders. The song numbers, some twenty, are said to be exquisite in their lyrics, and the music accompaniments we are told offer the most tuneful melodies of this season. Of course, the story of the play abounds in comedy sensations that will be found teeming in laughter, and the large company, said to number nearly three score personages, will no doubt make the most of the talented authors' conceptions and dictions.

ESTABLISHED 1879. PETERBOROUGH, ONT., THURSDAY, APRIL 16, 1914. PRICE 2 CENTS

EXTEND RAILWAY LINE ON CHARLOTTE STREET TO BOUNDARY AND SOUTH

Proposition is Presented to Board of Works and City Engineer is Asked to Make Report

Mr. W. H. Munro, of the Peterborough Light and Power Company, waited on the Board of Works last evening and submitted a plan which was recommended by the Board. The new proposition is that the company be permitted to construct a turn out on their tracks at Romaine Street.

Mr. Munro also stated that it was their intention to extend the radial line out Charlotte Street to the Boundary and down the boundary road to Patterson Street. To do this, they would have to have the corner cut out in a straight line at Charlotte Street. This would necessitate the removal of a few trees and sidewalk. He suggested that the city acquire sufficient of Mr. Andrew Brown's property, which is situated on the corner, to straighten out this bad jog in the street.

Some of the members expressed themselves that they were of the opinion that a few residences west of this particular property were also on the street line.

City Engineer Parsons will report on the matter.

City Pay Part.

City Solicitor G. N. Gordon states he had written the C.P.R. in regard to the removal of the poles from George Street. The company's new proposition is to have the city assume part of the cost of removal of the poles. No word as to what the cost would be has been received.

"There is a point which has never been brought up before," remarked Ald. Johnston.

Claim for Damages.

The City Engineer will look into the matter of the claim of David McGrath of Haslitt Street, regarding the damage to his house by the creek which runs past his property.

Andrew Brotherson of Concession Street, wrote the Board for a price of 7 or 8 feet of a lot owned by the City on Caddy Street. The Engineer was directed to report on the matter.

L. A. Turner asked for an approach to his residence on Gilmour Street. The City Enginerr will deal with all approaches.

The account of the Fire Department for hose for $275, was passed. "Taking from Peter to pay Paul," commented Ald. Johnston, with his usual characteristic smile.

W. H. Munro of the Peterborough Light and Power Company, wrote the Board asking that the Police Department be requested to prohibit the tacking up of posters and driving nails into their poles. Mayor Buller said he would communicate with the department.

The list of sewers submitted by the City Engineer were recommended to the Board of Health for approval.

No action was taken in the matter of purchasing oil for the streets at eight cents per gallon.

The question of purchasing four waggons for street cleaning purposes was also answered in the same manner.

SHORTAGE OF $400,000 AT MADOC PRIVATE BANK

Depositors Will Suffer Heavy Loss According to Indications

Madoc, April 16.—It is currently reported that the two auditors who have been investigating the affairs of the Dale private bank, which closed its doors two weeks ago, have about completed their labors, and have discovered a shortage of upwards of $400,000. This will be galling news to the twelve hundred or more depositors of the bank, who have been anxiously awaiting the result of the enquiry.

Farmers of the surrounding district were among the bank's chief patrons, but it also held the funds of the village and township, 18 cheese factories, 7 churches, all local branches of fraternal organizations and the Madoc Electric Light System.

It is rumored that the funds of the bank were used in handling various real estate propositions, chiefly in the West, and that many of these deals were failures. Stock speculation is also said to have played a part in bringing misfortune on the institution.

The books indicate that nearly $100,000 was invested in Western lands, including lots at Port Mann, which, it is said, are of little value as yet.

It has been intimated that action may be taken against the management of the bank should the state of affairs prove as disastrous to the depositors as is now reported.

LABORER HAD PICK DRIVEN IN HIS HAND

Jas. Labelle is the Victim of a Painful Accident.

Lindsay, April 16.—Frank Labelle, a workman employed in excavating the cellar for the Campbell store, now under construction on Kent Street, happened with a painful accident when he had the point of a pick driven through the centre of his left hand, which pinned the member to the ground for a few seconds.

The affair was purely accidental, Labelle being engaged gathering up debris on the ground, when James Kearney, a fellow workman, who was loosening up the earth for the shovellers, apparently did not notice Labelle's hand, and drove the blunt instrument into it.

The unfortunate fellow was carried to Maunder's Hotel, and medical aid was immediately summoned. The doctor dressed the injured hand, and pronounced the wound, which was painful, not of a serious nature.

HUERTA WILL SALUTE THE FLAG

Canadian Press Despatch.

Washington, D.C., April 16.—Secretary Bryan and acting chairman Shively, secretary of the foreign affairs committee, emerged from the White House, smiling this morning. Despatches received to-day says Huerta has practically promised to fire a salute to the American flag.

LADY HAD TO SPRINT TO CATCH BELLEVILLE TRAIN

There is one train leaving this city daily, that invariably departs on time, and that is the G. T. R. 1.30 p.m. en route to Belleville. Scarcely a day passes but there is someone left behind, whispering consoling ejeculations to himself and telling the baggage man what he thinks of the railway and this city. To-day a scribe was near the depot when the "Mid-day Choo Choo" started on its journey toward Keene The bell tolled mournfully before any movement took place, but just as the wheels made the first turn a lady "tore" around the north end of the building and with a sprint that would rival John Bunny, she caught the last coach at King Street. Another poor individual didn't care to take the sprint, so he will have to contribute two dollars more to the city in hotel charges.

PLANS FOR NEW SUB-DIVISIONS

Many Building Lots Will Be Provided at Properties.

At the Board of Works meeting night plans submitted by Mr. W. G. Morrow for the sub-dividing of the George A. Cox property in the West End, and Police Magistrate Dumble's in the north, with Mr. Harry Baker's in the southern section, were passed. The latter plan caused considerable discussion.

The plan showed that it was the intention to divide the property into three streets from the rear of the properties on Sherbrooke to Patterson, the buildings to face east and west in order.

A ten foot lane will cut eastward from the Monaghan Road to avoid a dead end and furnish connection at the northern end. Property owners on Sherbrooke Street had been petitioned to give some 33 feet in exchange for the same amount at the back. All but eight had done so, while the remainder refused to compromise.

This would give a regular street instead of a lane.

Unless they take steps Mr. Baker stated he will proceed in a few days to build as planned. There will be forty lots.

No objections were raised in the plan submitted by the parities in the George A. Cox estate, which will provide for forty lots.

Mr. Dumble's property will make 71 lots. He wanted the assurance of the Board that the street line or rather the tree line would be inside the sidewalk.

He was assured that they would carefully consider the matter, but this was apparently insufficient assurance, and a considerable discussion arose whereby the various mistakes of the tree lines were again re-hashed. After a careful consideration being promised, Mr. Dumble departed.

AUTOMOBILE LAMPS.

Police Chief Thompson is after the motorists around the city of whom some are evincing considerable carelessness by forgetting to hang their rear numbers in the proper place and also to keep the same clean.

HUERTA MUST SALUTE FLAG OR TAKE THE CONSEQUENCES

Washington Officials Are Unanimously in Favor of Forcing Mexican Dictator to Express Regret For "Offences Against the Rights and Dignity of the United States.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—With a majority of the ships of the American navy under orders yesterday to proceed at once to the Atlantic and Pacific coasts of Mexico, the United States Government gave Gen. Huerta final warning that unless a salute was fired to the United States' flag within a reasonable time to atone "for repeated offences against the rights and dignity of the United States," serious eventualities would result.

Gen. Huerta submitted to an executive session of the Mexican Senate yesterday the demands of the American Government for a salute to the flag. No answer has been received by the Washington Government late last night of the result of the deliberations.

It was learned last night that Gen. Huerta when apprised by Charge O'Shaughnessy of the proposed demonstration of the Atlantic fleet, argued that the episode growing out of the arrest of the American bluejackets at Tampico was a fit subject for arbitration at The Hague, and that he would appoint a commission to investigate the incident. President Wilson, in an emphatic reply through Charge O'Shaughnessy, is understood to have told Gen. Huerta that the time for delay and evasion had passed, and that the American Government would temporize no longer. Administration officials hold that insults to the flag and questions of national honor are not subjects for arbitration. All information, official and otherwise, that reached Washington from Mexico City tended to show that Gen. Huerta was unconvinced that the United States was in earnest and thought the Washington Government was bluffing.

Developments of the day here showed clearly that a determined and forceful policy had been adopted by the President, which would be backed up by Congress and enforced, if necessary, by the army and navy.

While the President expressed an earnest hope for peace, he unequivocally told members of the Senate and committees on foreign affairs that the offences of the de facto Government at Mexico City to the dignity of the United States could no longer be tolerated, and that unless Huerta complied with the American demands, the seizure of the customs houses at Tampico and Vera Cruz and even the declaration of a Pacific blockade, shutting off commercial intercourse with the United States, would be fully justified by precedents in international law.

It was established that no aggressive act, such as the landing of marines or the shelling of any towns or the seizure of any ports, would be undertaken without authorization from Congress after President Wilson had personally delivered a message on the subject. The practically unanimous approval which Republicans and Democrats alike gave the administration's initial steps made it apparent, however, that should Rear-Admiral Badger find it necessary to act vigorously in an emergency Congress would back up the American navy without hesitation.

WOMAN AWAKENED TO FIND MANIAC IN ROOM

He Had Killed Her Brother But He Spares Her Life

HUNTINGTON, N.Y. April 16.—Miss Mary Sammis, who lives with her brother, Frank, on their Long Island farm, awoke early esterday to find a man, with a bloody axe in his hands standing by her bed. In the dim light she recognized Frank Fowler, a young farm hand who slept in the house.

"I've just killed your brother upstairs," said Fowler, "and I'm going to kill you, too."

"I've always been kind to you, Frank," pleaded the woman, "and you have no reason for harming us."

"That's right," answered Fowler, "I guess I won't kill you, but I'll go away," and he walked out of the house, leaving the axe behind him.

Miss Sammis stumbled upstairs and found her brother's body on the bed with the head split in two. The police believe Fowler is insane. They are searching for him.

If potatoes are rubbed with olive oil before baking, the skins will be thin and soft and will not cling to the inside of the potato.

MORE STREETS TO BE SPRINKLED

Central District Will be Watered on Sundays

The following streets were recommended to be added to the Street watering list for the season by the Board of Works last night.

Western Section—Pearl, Joseph, Walton Streets, Frederick, Boswell, Maitland and Margaret Avenues. King Street will be watered as far as the boundary. Park Street from McDonnel to Smith.

East City—James Street from Mark east to G. T. R. on Mark from James to Maria, on Maria from Mark to Rogers.

Southern Section—Aylmer from Lake to Romaine Street, Romaine from Park to Lock, Wescott Street from Park to Lock.

Ald. Duffus then brought up the question of having the business section of the city watered on Sundays. After a short discussion his motion was passed.

One new cart will have to be purchased.

J. H. LARMONTH AT EDMONTON

Well Fitted for New Position in The Western City.

Edmonton, April 16.—J. H. Larmonth, just appointed superintendent of the street railway department of the city of Edmonton at a salary of $5,000 a year, has bad wide and varied experience in Eastern Canada. Commissioner Chalmers, at whose recommendation the appointment was made, said to-day that Mr. Larmonth is fitted in every way for the position, adding that the new appointee can be depended upon to work out a satisfactory plan for the 43 miles of street railway system, which is owned and operated by the city.

Mr. Larmonth was graduated in 1894 from the mechanical and engineering department of McGill University in Montreal, after which he worked a year in the Grand Trunk Railway Company's erecting shops at Point St. Charles, followed by four years in the company's draughting department. This was followed by two years in the draughting office of the Laurie Engine Company, followed by one and a half years in an office of chartered accountants, Ottawa, to get experience in municipal and coporation accounting; later employed by the E. B. Eddy Company of Hull, as erecting engineer and chief draughtsman, reconstructing and re-erecting their works after the big fire of 1900, which wiped out the entire plant.

After remaining 18 months with the E. B. Eddy Company, he was engaged in the office of C. H. Keefer, of Ottawa, consulting engineer; went to Peterborough, as resident engineer for C. H. Keefer, acting on behalf of the Quaker Oats Company on construction of power house and dam; after six months entered the employ of the Quaker Oats Company as supervising engineer of its construction.

When in 1904, the Quaker Oats Company, having taken over the Peterborough Radial Railway, and the Peterborough Light and Power Company and the Peterborough Gas Plant, he was put in charge of construction and operation as manager; remained in that position until the spring of 1910, entirely rebuilding the street railway, placing the same on a sound financial footing and making a dividend paying proposition. The maximum number of cars in 1910 was 17. In 1910 the utility interests of the Quaker Oats Company were bought out by the Electrical Power Company of Toronto, which controlled about twenty different properties scattered throughout Ontario, capitalized at $12,00,000. He entered the employ of the Electric Power Company as general manager, with charge of operating all of the subsidiary companies, for which position a salary of $5,000 a year was paid. After two years as general manager of this company he resigned to go into practice as consulting engineer on street railway, light, power and hydraulic work, with the good will of the company and employed by them as consulting engineer on special work.

NEW ENTRANCE AT FAIR GROUNDS

Will Give Better Accommodation for Exhibition Crowds.

The Peterborough Industrial Exhibition Board will probably erect a large and modern entrance to the Fair grounds if their present proposed plan is carried out. The new entrance will be in the same place as the main entrance is at present, but will be constructed along similar lines as that of the Toronto Exhibition Grounds with turnstiles and better entrance facilities.

The new entrance may cost in the neighborhood of $300.

POOR OLD DAD WAS CHASED OUT INTO THE STREET

A local man pleaded guilty to the charge of being drunk and disorderly before Magistrate Dumble this morning. He was fined $5.75. Constable Deannard gave evidence to the effect that the defendant had put his father out of the house this morning about 2 o'clock in his night clothes, and refused to let him enter again.

His companion was remanded until to-morrow, owing to his intoxicated condition. He also carries numerous injuries, such as skinned nose, and black eyes.

BISHOP O'BRIEN GAVE ADDRESS

His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, D.D., was in Toronto last evening, and delivered an address to the Knights of Columbus of that city on the practical topic of "Capital and Labor." Several prominent Catholic clergymen were present, among them being His Grace Archbishop McNeil, who also spoke a few words. His Grace leaves on Saturday for Naples, en route to Rome, where he will give an account of his stewardship to the Consistorial Congregation. After two weeks' stay in the Eternal City he will journey northward leisurely, and take a well-earned rest. He expects to be back again in Toronto towards the end of June.

MOVING PICTURES AT COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE

They Illustrate Points Brought Out by Dr. Clinton Who Deals With Questions of Importance to Public Health

Counter attractions undoubtedly was the cause of a minimum attendance at the public meeting of the Board of Health held last evening in the Collegiate Institute Assembly Hall, and at which Dr. Clinton, District Health Officer, delivered an illustrated lecture, one that should have been heard by the majority of citizens. Dr. Amys, president of the local Board, in his introductory remarks, paved the way for Dr. Clinton's lecture. The latter gentleman was, as he stated, a trifle disappointed at the small number present, as the lecture was voluntary and of great benefit to the general public. He reviewed in his opening remarks the progress made by Boards of Health in recent years, and remarked that the Medical Health Officer who seeks prevention as well as cure is the man who is laboring to the best interest of his municipality. Following up the theme of prevention, Dr. Clinton claimed that tuberculosis is not hereditary, and the child of a consumptive will not contract the disease if the proper care is taken. A child will not inherit germs, but they will find their way into his constitution if proper caution is not exercised.

Should be no Delay.

As soon as the slightest sign of tuberculosis presents itself one should visit a doctor and ascertain whether or not the germs of the greatly dreaded disease are at work. After the doctor the sunlight should be sought, which, coupled with outdoor air, good wholesome food and rest, will enable anyone to fight the plague with a winning hand. In connection with food, the speaker called upon Mr. Spence, the local Sanitary Inspector to speak a few words on the milk supply.

Mr. Spence congratulated this city on its good milk supply, and for this he gave the credit to the Board of Health. The day when the milk vendor was a common joke is over and the public is looking toward him as a philanthropist. He supplies the citizens with the milk, but in order to do so he must have everything connected with his premises in a state of perfect cleanliness. The speaker related the method by which he inspects dairy farms. In the first place he pays a surprise visit and goes thoroughly over the premises, seeing that the cows are properly cleaned, their food good, the stable well ventilated, and having cement floors and white-washed walls, that each cow has at least 500 cu. ft. of space, and if there are any defects he points them out to the owner. He remarked how he has always been treated with the utmost courtesy and has been gratified to see his rules and suggestions put into effect.

Mr. Spence stated that when the local by-law re milk vendors is carried out, as it invariably is, the person paying seven cents a quart is getting milk cheap and in fact would be getting it cheap at [illegible] a quart.

He is permitted to stop a milkman on the street to test some of his milk and if it is not up to the standard (3 per cent. cream) the milkman is liable to have his license cancelled. To aid in the procuring of good milk the housewife should do her part. When the bottle of milk comes in the morning she should empty it out immediately, not use it all day as a milk pitcher. She should rinse it out with cold water and set it away. "Above all," concluded Mr. Spence, "the practice of using the milk bottle as a flower vase should cease."

Swat the Fly.

Dr. Clinton dwelt for a short time on care of the teeth and also the evil done by the common housefly. To illustrate the points of his lecture his moving picture operator, Mr. Jones, gave several films, the stories revealed bringing out more strikingly the main principles referred to in his lecture. There is a slight vein of comedy running through the pictures which makes it interesting, amusing, and exceedingly instructive.

Dr. Clinton is giving another lecture this afternoon, and also this evening at eight o'clock in the Collegiate Assembly Hall, and the citizens should endeavor to be present in large numbers, as the questions dealt with are of the utmost importance to the common welfare of the people.

CONDUCTOR THINKS LENNOX WAS ABOARD

No Evidence of Tragedy Seen On the Engine

Mr. A. J. Stubbs, of Toronto, a brother-in-law of the late Harry Lennox, the victim of the C.P.R. fatality on Monday evening, was in the city last evening making arrangements for the removing of the remains to his late home in Bowmanville. It is probable they will be sent to-morrow.

Conductor Young, of the C.P.R. freight, by which the young man met his death, stated yesterday that when they received the wire at Havelock that someone had been killed, they looked about the engine, but no trace of blood was noticed. On the fifth car back, however, blood and flesh were found. This led him to believe that the victim was on the freight, and in losing his hold fell under the wheels.

SPRING FLOODS AT HUNTER ST. BRIDGE

City Engineer Parson reported to the Board of Works last evening that the heavy spring flood had worn away part of the concrete abutment at the Hunter Street bridge over the creek. Owing to the high water it was impossible to fix it at present, although the bridge at this particular place was secured by heavy props. The matter will be attended to as soon as the high water lowers.

NEW PHYSICAL DIRECTOR FOR LOCAL Y.M.C.A

Mr. George A. Carson of Winnipeg Will Succeed Mr. Thompson.

Mr. George A. Carson, Assistant Physical Director of the Winnipeg Y.M.C.A., has been secured by the local Y.M.C.A. Board to take the position of Physical Director here, caused by the resignation of J. J. Thompson, who leaves shortly for his new field of labor in Maine.

Mr. Carson is a graduate of the Springfield, Mass., Y.M.C.A. College and holder of the degree of Bachelor of Physical Exercises.

While in Winnipeg he assumed full supervision of the play grounds and his sterling qualities combined with his ability in Y.M.C.A. work demonstrated his worth while under the excellent leadership of Physical Director Hadcock of Winnipeg.

The Board feel very fortunate in securing his services as he is said to be one of the leading young physical men in the Dominion.

He will assume his duties here the first of June.

Lodge Celebration.

Dr. U. N. Stanley, of Brantford, chairman of the Medical Board of the Canadian Order of Foresters, will deliver an address to the Bridgenorth Court to-night at Bridgenorth, the occasion being the anniversary of that lodge. Several prominent local members will also attend.

RURAL SCHOOL FAIRS.

THE RURAL SCHOOL FAIR is a new agricultural movement in Ontario. As a general feature of the work of the Ontario Department of Agriculture it has been in operation only two years, yet the results have been such that it is already regarded by those who have been in touch with its operations as being an established institution. Some facts, therefore, in regard to its history, development and methods of management may be of general interest.

The object of these Rural School Fairs is to interest boys and girls in agriculture. The object involves an answer to the question, why boys leave the farm. It tends to make farming a scientific and interesting occupation, by giving the youth on the farm an outlook extended beyond the drudgery of daily chores. In 1913, sixty-nine Rural School Fairs were held in thirty-one counties, comprising the children in five hundred and thirty-one schools.

The organization is effected by what is called a district representative, an official under the supervision of the assistant Deputy Minister of Agriculture. The district representative selects a certain number of schools, probably six or ten, which converge conveniently to one centre. Each school is visited and the idea of holding a Fair in the Fall open solely to the exhibits of the children is explained. The school is asked to nominate one boy or girl as Director of the Rural School Fair Association of that district. Sometimes the teacher selects the director, but more frequently it is made the subject of an election, and it has been found that the children invariably elect the best boy or best girl to represent them on this association.

The district representative then offers to supply seeds or a limited number of eggs to pupils desiring to enter, the condition being that they must exhibit the return from what they have taken. When their applications have been received, the district representative distributes seeds of good quality of O.A.C. No. 21 barley or Banner oats or, the best variety of potatoes for the district or the best variety of corn, in accordance with request. Eggs from the laying strain of Barred Rocks are distributed, five in each school being given the opportunity of taking eggs.

The usual officers like President, etc., are elected from among boys and girls, as much responsibility as possible is placed upon them in the carrying out of the organization. During the summer, as many visits as possible are made to each of the contestants, and the district representative gets in touch with the parents, and interests them in better and more attractive agricultural methods. Very frequently, the boy's plot is the best kind of a demonstration farm to show the superiority of first-class seed and careful cultivation.

The fair is held on a date selected in September or October, preferably early in September. A convenient school is generally chosen as a site. It is right out on the crossroads, away from towns and cities, and the day is given up entirely to the boys and girls. A large tent is supplied to house the exhibits and sometimes the school building is utilized as well. The boys and girls bring in their exhibits of fruit, grain, vegetables or live stock as the case may be, in the morning, and they are, of course, frequently accompanied by their parents. The teachers and school trustees, however, have a great influence in making the fair a success, and their hearty and ready co-operation during the past year has been one of the chief factors in the success that has been attained.

While the judging is going on, a programme of sports is arranged, but there are no side shows or fakirs to detract from the agricultural side of the fair. The prizes are necessarily small, but that does not lessen the interest in the fair. The expenses are not great, those of the district representative have been borne by the Department, while the prize money is supplied locally. Sometimes a portion of the county grant for the district representative is used for the prizes; sometimes the school trustees contribute a few dollars. The Department has also supplied the seeds and the eggs, 25,000 eggs having been distributed last year in this way.

Such an organization works very nicely with such studies in the school, as nature study and agriculture, and they give a training to the boys and girls that is scientific and interesting, and assists them to understand easily many things that would be dry and obscure if they tried to master them from a book.

GLOBE SCORES LAURIER.

HAVING DEVOTED about eight inches of space to more or less flippant editorial on the C.N.R., The Globe ended its article with the following sentence :

> "The appetite of the owners of the C. N. R. has been so developed by a long course of free food that nobody now expects them to dig down into their trousers pockets for the price of a lunch check."

This sentence is great. It is magnanimous. It boosts Borden ; it knocks Laurier. It is the closing utterance of a statesman-like estimate of a most perplexing problem. It is the last word for Laurier's railway policy. It is a statement with which we can agree—"the C.N.R. has been so developed by a long course of free food"—we can hardly believe The Globe would give Laurier's policy to the C.N.R. such a whole-hearted kick. Laurier's Administration supplied the pap to the C.N.R.; bolstered up its bond issues and recklessly lent it public money without safe-guarding its investment in the road. Laurier was responsible for the "long course of free food" development of the C.N.R.

What has been done cannot be undone, but we are glad to see The Globe disapproves of "free food' for the C.N.R. We would just like to correct a misunderstanding that might arise from the last clause of the above quotation. "Nobody expects them to dig down into their trousers pockets for the price of a lunch check." This statement is, we are sorry to say, erroneous. Mr. Borden insists that Mankenzie and Mann pay for their lunch-checks, because, when the Conservatives give the C.N.R. assistance, the money is going into railroads and not meal tickets. The writer of The Globe's editorial was doubtless so overwhelmed with melancholy indignation at the pestiferous railway policy of the Grits that he was afflicted with a temporary attack of political pessemism. Cheer up. Borden is doing everything in the right way we are quite sure.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

A LIVE WHITE RAT and a Pomeranian pup were too curious pieces of mail matter handled by the parcels post, in Montreal. After considerable official correspondence it was decided that both His Majesty's mails and His Majesty's male employees, there being no lady clerks in the parcels post department, were in no danger of life, limb, or disfigurement from these packages and they were forwarded to their destination. Evidently the Borden Government can solve any postal problem no matter how difficult.

IN THE SUPPLEMENTARY ESTIMATES, the Ontario Government has placed $5,000,000 for Hydro-Electric expenditures. This sum is intended to open the way for vigorous advancement of the Radial Railway schemes outlined for various parts of the province. In view of this fact, Peterborough should not lose any time investigating the Hydro Radial scheme for this locality. If Hydro radials will assist in the development of this city and surrounding country, the sooner work is started along this line, the better it will be for all concerned.

THE CHINESE CHRYSANTHEMUM was introduced into England as far back as 1764, but it became extinct in that country soon after. Doubtless because of the difficulty of a three-bottle lord pronouncing it when he wanted to and couldn't.

"You appear to be watching me very closely, boy," said the parson, who was knocking a stake into the garden fence. "Do you take an interest in carpentry?" "No," said the boy. Coining Words.

The esteemed Weather Bureau has sprung a new one. It is the word "smog," and means smoke and fog. The bureau explains that very frequently there are times when this mixture is apparent in the atmosphere, and it considers the new word a great little idea.

Very well, "smog" let it be. But why end there? Let's call a mixture of snow and mud "smud." A mixtrue of snow and soot "snoot," and a mixture of snow and hail "snail." Thus we might have a weather forecast:

"Snail to-day, turning to snoot to-night; to-morrow smoggy with smud."

Some Facts About Diamonds.

At a large diamond factory in Amsterdam, where thousands of gems are brought every year from South Africa, there are twenty women employed. The factory was operated for thirty years by men workers, but in 1875, a few women were given positions as an experiment. The experiment proved so successful that now the most difficult part of the work is done by women. When the gems in the rough come in from the mines, they are handled first by the men who do the splitting, or divide the stones having flaws into smaller but flawless gems. This is done by pressing a diamond tipped tool on the weak spot in the stone. The women then take these sections and make them perfect. It is exceedingly delicate work and hard on the eyes as the most infinitesimal angle on their surfaces must be detected and cut off. The women work for eight hours a day, and receive from 8 to 20 guilders a week, which approximates from $3.25 to $8 a week.

UNTIMELY GUESTS

By Walt Mason

It's hard to wear a saintly smile when bores exclaim together, "We've just dropped in to talk awhile about the crops and weather." The earnest man gets down to brads, sells goods or scribbles sonnets, to earn the dollars of our dads, and keep his wife in bonnets ; he has no time to fool away, he needs each precious second ; if man would win at baling hay, each moment must be reckoned. And so the toiler, anxious-eyed, must labor at his fences, if he would keep his wife supplied with coin for bridge expenses. And when his troubles are so thick that he could fairly blubber, the bores come in, Hank, Tom and Dick, and sit and talk and rubber. There ought to be a law, methinks, for those who thrash the weather, compelling all such idle ginks to go and herd together. It isn't fair that busy folks must evermore be bothered, by dizzy jays with dizzy jokes and gags they've lately fathered. Protect the man who to his work with righteous fervor passes, and boil the idler and the shirk in sulphur and molasses.

Birthdays of Note

THURSDAY, APRIL SIXTEENTH

ANDREW BRODER, who has been member of Parliament for Dundas since 1896, and who is one of the most popular men in the House of Commons, has a birthday today. He is now sixty-nine years old, having been born in the county of Huntingdon, Quebec, in 1845. His Irish parentage doubtless accounts to a certain extent for his ready wit and his fame as a story-teller. When he was collector of customs some years ago in Morrisburg, he had several amusing experiences in connection with the discharge of his duties. On one occasion a woman stepped off the ferry, carrying a fine, large rooster, which she had bought over in New York State. She went to the customs office to tell her story and see if she could not get the bird through duty free. Mr. Broder questioned her exhaustively and then announced that he would let it come in on one condition. Being asked the condition, he stated with the utmost gravity, "That you do not permit this Yankee rooster to crow over a Canadian barnyard."

"M-M-M'ria," he said huskily, "y-you shouldn't shtay up s' late when yo' know I'm out on bishiness."

As Mrs. Jones did not answer, he continued in alarmed tones: "Shorry, m' dear, but it's lash tifue—tell you I'm shorry. Won't shpeak t' me?"

At this moment Mrs. Jones called from above stairs:

"John Jones, who are you talking to at this hour of the night?"

"Thash what I like t' know m'self," stammered Jones.

Mrs. Jones hastened downstairs and when she saw the situation burst out laughing in spite of her anger.

"It's the model," she said, "the model I bought today to fit my dresses on."

"Yesh, thash so," replied Jones tipsily; "model woman—didn't talk back; make shome fellow good wife."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Must Give Evidence.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—Unless there is an overnight change in the attitude of witnesses in the New Haven Railroad investigation, who refused to tell the Interstate Commerce Commission about the operation of the Billard Company, to which millions of dollars' worth of New Haven securities are alleged to have illegally diverted, proceedings under the criminal statutes will be instituted here to-day by the Government to compel them to testify. This was announced last night by Joseph W. Folk, chief counsel of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

LONDON, April 16.—Chinese Government officials in Shanghai yesterday arrested a number of revolutionaries who had come from Japan, according to a despatch. They were charged with spreading sedition among the regular soldiers.

Beating it In.

Dr. Brandes, in his lecture on Shakespeare's "Hamlet," said the interest of Shakespeare was to be found in story and not in psychology. Elizabethan art was intended for an audience who read but little. Like all early art, it was explicit. The conditions were similar to those in the story of the old London stage manager, who said:

"If you want the British public to understand anything you must tell them what you are going to do next, that you are doing it, and, last, that you have done it," and he finished by saying, "Then they will perhaps understand you."—Pall Mall Gazette.

The young doctor was buying furniture for the equipment of his new office. The eager salesman racked his brain to think of something else to sell him. He had sold almost everything that could go in an office, when he had a happy thought.

A Coal Fire Without Wood.

In the Woman's Home Companion a contributor tells as follows a new way to start the kitchen fire:

"Attach a rubber tube from the gas jet long enough to reach to the front of the range. Put a metal tip on the free end of the tube, light it and hold it under the grate already filled with coal. A steady flow of gas for a few minutes will start a good coal fire without using any kindling wood."

Food For Thought.

They threaten to make butter
  From modest Standard oil,
To use the crude petroleum
  The gentle cow to foil.
At prices that the poor can pay
  And not their earnings drain.
Say,
  Wouldn't it give you a pain?

When used to banish darkness
  The oil is quite the thing,
And, with a polished chimney,
  Much comfort it can bring.
And now they have a shorter cut
  The item every one has read.
But
  Who'd want to use it on his bread?

Much food is now suspicious,
  For chemists have a way
Of furnishing our breakfast
  From scraps and twisted hay.
But there's a point where they must quit,
  And we will very firmly cry
"Nit!"
  When that's the sort of thing they try.

We would not ever question
  Nor call for the police
If it were used to furnish
  A grade of axle grease.
For light or heat its use we see,
  For power it does not go to waste,
Gee,
  But could we learn to like the taste?

An Irish Rebel

A Story For St. Patrick's Day.

By NORA McCARTHY

It was in 1798 that the last attempt of any importance was made to free Ireland by violence. These revolutions have always been the work of the Catholic party, which lives almost anywhere in Ireland except in the province of Ulster, where many of the people are Protestants. So Ireland from the beginning of her revolts has been in the position she is now with reference to home rule, Ulster against the rest of the island.

One of the most earnest rebels in this 1798 trouble was Patrick Mulligan, a young fellow, who, like many another Irishman, was named for St. Patrick, who introduced Christianity into Ireland.

After the Irish revolt of 1798 Pat was found to be so deeply dyed in treason that all his inventive powers, assisted by those of his friends, were not sufficient to keep him from indictment and trial, and he was sentenced to be hanged by the neck until he was dead. When the judge put on the black cap he asked the condemned man if he had anything to say why sentence of death should not be passed upon him.

"Divil a word, your honor," said Pat, with an impressive bow to the judge. "Have I to say why sentence of death should not be passed upon me, for I'm the worst rebel in Ireland, but I have something to say when I shall be hanged. I have the honor to bear the name of the patron saint of Ireland. This year St. Patrick's day comes on Friday, two weeks from tomorrow, an' I should be obliged if your honor would sentence me to die on that blessed day."

The judge granted this modest request and after he had passed sentence asked Pat just why he wished to be hanged on the saint's anniversary. Pat replied that St. Patrick was stronger than the king of England and would have a care for any one who should be swung off on that day.

The following two weeks were a series of receptions on Pat's part, everybody he knew coming to the jail to see him and bringing him delicacies. Instead of acting like a man who each day was twenty-four hours nearer the gallows, the nearer drew the time of his execution the merrier he grew. When asked by his friends why he was in such good spirits he said that he was named for St. Patrick, was to be hanged on St. Patrick's day and divil a bit would the saint suffer him to hang at all.

His faith affected his friends to such an extent that they set about trying to get a pardon for him. But Pat had given the government so much trouble, not only in times of open rebellion, but of unrest, that they were determined to get rid of him. So Pat's friends were obliged to try another plan. One of them, a cobbler, riveted together some straps to go under his arms with a hook at the back of the neck. Another told Pat of the plan to save him from death, while a third the night before the execution got the sheriff drunk, and in the morning he was not in a condition to officiate on the scaffold. So he appointed a deputy, and that deputy was the man who got him drunk.

When Pat was brought out to be hanged he made a bow to the crowd waiting to see him swung off and said: "Good morning to you. It gives me great pleasure to afford you amusement on this blessed morning." He was led up on to the scaffold and, acting on the instructions he had received, objected to the rope on the ground that it was not safe, being too light and might let him down and hurt him. So another rope was produced, and the deputy sheriff when he came to slip the noose over Pat's head contrived to catch the end in the hook at the back of the neck.

Now, there were those present who, if they had perceived what was going on, would have reported the fact, and, though Pat might have been saved for the time being, he would have later been strung up in earnest without waiting for another St. Patrick's day to come around. So the deputy was obliged to go through the motions, and the rope was put around the neck of the culprit. It was intended that the hook should relieve the strain entirely, but it did not work as well as expected, and Pat was jarred senseless.

The deputy was obliged to let him hang an hour, but by setting ahead the hands of his watch he reduced the time to forty minutes. Then Pat was cut down, put into a coffin and driven away in a cart.

The jogging of the cart resuscitated him, and he was about to sit up when he was held down by a friend, and it was not till the cart struck a wood that he was taken out of his gruesome receptacle. He was then given a disguise and some money that had been collected for him and told to make for the coast and take the first vessel sailing for America. Pat bade them all goodby and the next evening was concealed on a ship about to sail for Philadelphia.

Pat found the United States recently revolted colonies of England, and there were as many patriots there as in Ireland. So he was much pleased with his surroundings and spent the first few years in his new home trying to organize an invasion of Ireland by his friends with a view to helping her to an independence similar to that gained by the American colonies. But finally he settled down and became an American citizen.

PICTURES IN THE PAPER.

First Crude Attempts to Illustrate Events of the Day.

It is a little surprising to learn that the first journal to give illustrations with any frequency was the Mercurius Civilius, which came out during the civil war in England with portraits of Charles I. and his queen, Cromwell and his officers and Prince Rupert. More elaborate pictures dealing with the war were, however, left to the pamphlets of that time. The frost fair on the Thames in 1683 was made the subject of an interesting broadside, and so also was the funeral of Queen Mary II. in 1695.

With the eighteenth century the art of illustrating actualities grew. Caricatures abounded, now of the Jacobites, now of the south sea bubble or similar exciting events. The Daily Post of 1740 afforded an example of a daily paper attempting to illustrate a current event. On March 29 of that year it published a detailed diagram of Admiral Vernon's attack on Porto Bello.

The St. James Chronicle in 1765 presented its readers with an illustration of a strange wild animal that had created much excitement in France, but this illustration was obviously imaginary. The Gentlemen's Gazette in 1751 gave a portrait of Edward Bright, a record fat man. In the Town and Country Magazine in 1773 there appeared portraits of the principals in a famous scandal.—New York Sun.

VOICE CULTIVATION.

It is Said That the Average American Needs It Badly.

The American voice lacks cadence. The touch of harmony is lacking. In depth or shrillness its strongest quality is monotony of tone.

In conversation it is colorless, and half of the resources of the vocal cords are unused or undeveloped. A strident, high pitched, nasal voice fails in saying any good thing well.

Every one has the power of speaking with sweet inflection. Every one can attain a reposeful utterance and clear enunciation by training the ear and voice to work together in avoiding harsh tones and cultivating the middle and more mellow register in every voice.

Excitement sends it up to a screaming pitch, but self control will lower it again, and its playground should be through the varying harmonies or cadences of five notes.

According to Thomas Wentworth Higginson, our English cousins put more cadence, more up and down, into an inquiry, "What time is it?" than Americans would into the announcement that a president was shot. A crowd of baseball fans will pitch the cheering on a high note and yell itself hoarse. In the same number of Europeans the shouting would be full of undertones and cadences. They would sing their enthusiasm.—New York Sun.

A Tardy Act of Justice.

Marriages between English actresses and men of a high social position began in the eighteenth century, if no earlier. There was Lavinia Fenton, the Polly Peachum of Gay's "Beggar's Opera," who became Duchess of Bolton; there was Miss Farren, who married Lord Derby; also Miss Brunton became Lady Craven not long before Lord Thurlow married Miss Bolton. Earliest of the list, though, comes the Earl of Peterborough, who married Anastasia Robinson, the singer, and kept the marriage secret until a few days before his death in St. James' palace, when he assembled his relatives and friends and publicly acknowledged the woman "to whom he owed the best and happiest hours of his life," a tardy act of justice that caused the lady to swoon away.

The Luxury of Sugar.

Sugar was considered an article of luxury in Europe until tea and coffee became usual articles of diet. Sugar was then used to sweeten these beverages and so gradually came to have a prominent part in the daily diet. Before the days of sugar much more meat was eaten and the drinking of alcoholic beverages was much more common. The fair maiden who could not with impunity drink a pint of ale for breakfast was unusual. Perhaps, in spite of the fact that most of us eat too much of it, sugar is a blessing. Even overswetened coffee and cereal covered with sugar sound more beneficial than a pint of ale and a half pound of beef for breakfast.—Boston Herald.

A Precise Artist.

The Head Barber—That customer complains that you cut him on each side of the jaw.

The Other Barber—Yes, sir. That first cut was an accident, and I apologized for it, but the second cut was for symmetry.—Boston Globe.

More Legislation Requested.

"Yes," replied Miss Cayenne, "and unfortunately there are no game laws to protect people from his careless marksmanship."—Washington Star.

TWO NERVOUS WOMEN

Made Well By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Philadelphia, Pa. — "I had a severe case of nervous prostration, with palpitation of the heart, constipation, headaches, dizziness, noise in my ears, timid, nervous, restless feelings and sleeplessness.

"I read in the paper where a young woman had been cured of the same troubles by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound so I threw away the medicines the doctor left me and began taking the Compound. Before I had taken half a bottle I was able to sit up and in a short time I was able to do all my work. Your medicine has proved itself able to do all you say it will and I have recommended it in every household I have visited."—Mrs. MARY JOHNSTON, 210 Siegel Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Another Bad Case.

Ephrata, Pa.—"About a year ago I was down with nervous prostration. I was pale and weak and would have hysteric spells, sick headaches and a bad pain under my shoulder-blade. I was under the care of different doctors but did not improve. I was so weak I could hardly stand long enough to do my dishes.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has made me well and happy and I have begun to gain in weight and my face looks healthy now."—Mrs. J. W. HORNBERGER, R. No. 3, Ephrata, Pa.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

NECKWEAR A LA MODE.

High Collars Are Favored For the Coming Season.

The neckwear fashions of the present season are designed to please women who have thin necks. The high medici and the Mary Stuart collars are favorable to the concealment of gaunt neck lines.

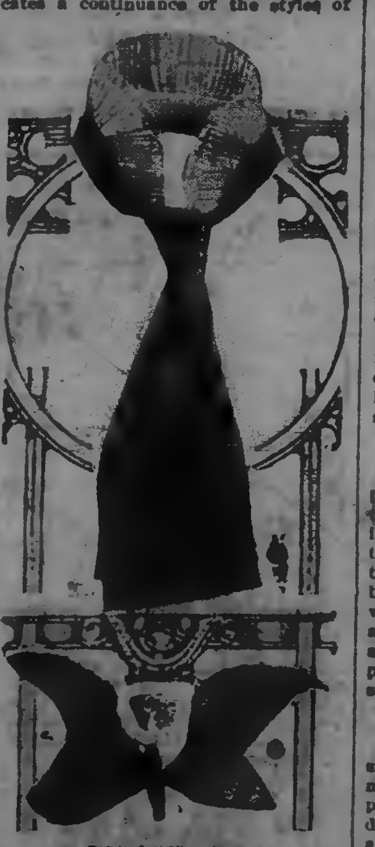
The butterfly bow is used in every conceivable way by spring fashion designers. A bow in wired black tulle is also illustrated here.

At present the lavish display of beautiful neckwear in the shops indicates a continuance of the styles of the midwinter season and the introduction of many new novelties. Designs vary from the small, trim roll back collars to the full, lace edged, quaintly fashioned berthas.



SPRING NECKWEAR.

The distinguishing feature about these new collars is their extreme sheerness. Even the Plauen collars are lacier than ever and some very prettily designed. These show up particularly well on a dress of dark serge.

Collar and cuff sets of dainty embroidered batiste are so sheer that they have the appearance of gauze.

Indignant.

He (reading the paper)—I hate a squealer.

She (indignantly)—You brute, you shan't talk that way about the baby.—Baltimore American.

Malicious.

Opera Singer (feeling rather hoarse)—Doctor, I want you to give me a certificate that I cannot sing.

Doctor—I can easily do that.—New York Times.

Cookery Notes

Fish Croquettes.

Stir over the fire in a saucepan one tablespoonful of butter, the same amount of flour and two-thirds of a cupful of milk or water. Boil up once and add one small half teaspoonful of salt, a dash or two of pepper; then remove from the fire and stir in the yolks of two eggs. Rub a deep plate with salad oil, pour in the mixture and stir in gently one cupful of flakes of cold cooked fish. Allow to cool thoroughly. Make out into cork shaped rolls. Wet the hands to prevent sticking. Roll in sifted breadcrumbs, then in beaten eggs; roll again in breadcrumbs, lay in a wire basket, hang in boiling fat and fry a delicate brown. Lift out with a skimmer and place on brown paper a moment to absorb superfluous grease. The finer the breadcrumbs the more certainty of success.

Cookery Basket.

One of the objections to cooking with paper bags has been the difficulty in lifting the bag from the grid of the oven without opening it and spilling its juices. This difficulty is entirely overcome by using the novel metal basket recently put on the market for this special purpose. The basket is of attractive looking metal, very light, fitted with handles and is to be lined with special parchment paper, in which the food is placed. It entirely does away with bursting or heating bags and permits the food to be removed as easily as it would be from any ordinary utensil. Special bags or papers come fitted to the basket, which also has a lid and can be lifted directly on to the table if desired.

Cherry Trifle.

Take a can of cherries and press through a colander to remove the skins and stones. Add to the pulp thus obtained one ounce of butter, one cupful of sugar and the beaten yolks of four eggs. Beat all together for five minutes with an egg beater and pour into a deep glass dish. Whip the whites of the eggs very stiff with one cupful of powdered sugar and arrange in an ornamental design on top of the trifle, sprinkling with a few finely chopped almonds.

Substitute For Cream.

Some thrifty women make a substitute for cream from tea and egg. It is said to be the best substitute for cream that is known. They beat a fresh egg in a bowl, then pour boiling tea over it gradually and stir to prevent curdling. Use enough tea with the egg to give it the consistency of thick cream. This substitute requires quite a bit of skill in the making. The art lies in knowing just exactly how to prevent the egg from curdling.

Flannel Cakes.

For these take one quart of flour, one tablespoonful sugar, one tablespoonful salt, two large teaspoonfuls baking powder, two eggs and one and one-half pints milk. Sift together flour, sugar, salt and powder. Add the beaten eggs and milk, mix into a smooth batter that will run in a thick stream from the pitcher. Bake on a hot griddle a rich brown color in cakes as large as saucers. Serve with maple sirup.

Fruit Salad.

Put in the center of a dish a pineapple, pared, cored and sliced thin, yet retaining as near as possible its original shape. Peel, quarter and remove the seeds from three oranges, arrange them around the pineapple. Take three bananas, peel and cut into slices crosswise. Arrange these wreath fashion around the oranges and over this strew a few strawberries. Put one pint of pulverized sugar over the fruit and serve.

Russian Salad Dressing.

To make salad dressing in the Russian style take four tablespoonfuls of mayonnaise; add half a pimento, chopped rather finely. To this add half a dozen sprigs of chives, chopped fine, and stir. Take two tablespoonfuls of chili sauce and a dash of tarragon vinegar. Add to this mixture one tablespoonful of whipped cream. Whip again thoroughly and serve. This will be enough for four people.

Water Biscuit.

One light quart of flour, one large kitchen spoonful of lard, two teaspoonfuls of yeast powder and one even teaspoonful of salt. Sift flour, baking powder and salt together and mix thoroughly with the lard. Add cold water to make a dough of the right consistency. Roll out and bake immediately. If you want them successful you must be sure to use enough lard or shortening.

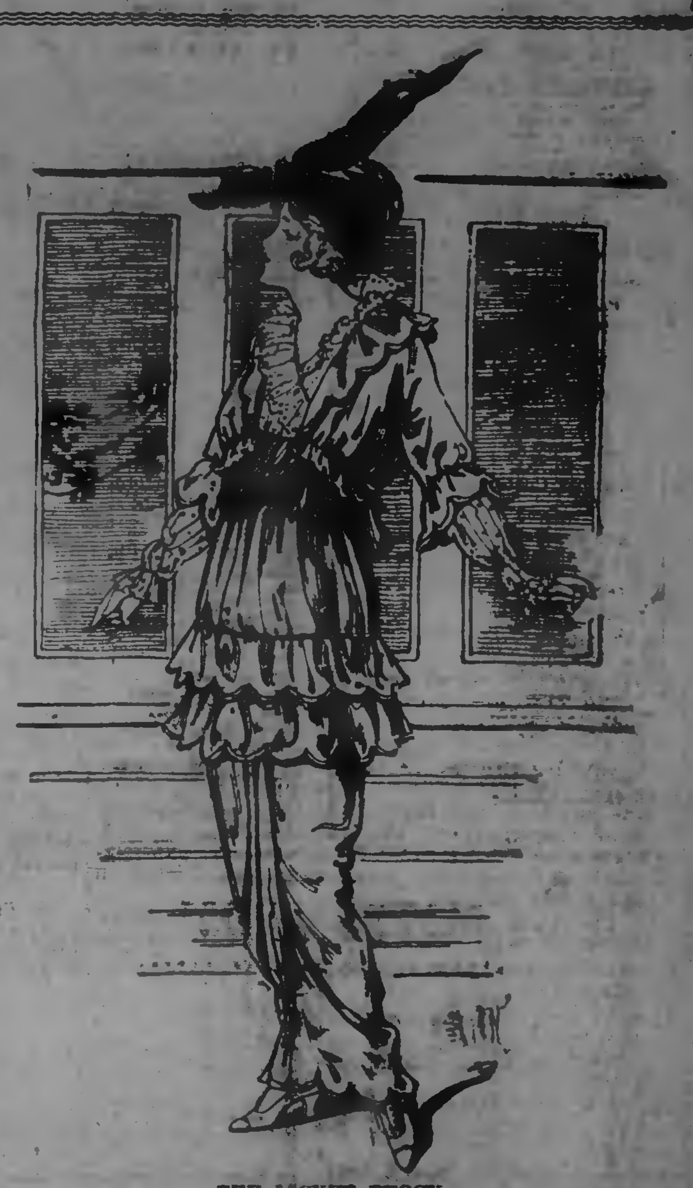
THE LATEST FROM DAME FASHION



THE JACKET FROCK.

With its loose cut peplum blouse that stimulates a jacket this frock expresses the newest spring mode in trotteur or dressy wear. The wide hip line of the skirt is effected by means of the set on frills, scolloped to match the blouse frills. The general softness, lightness and looseness of effect are carried out in the bishop sleeves and flaring collar of pointed machine embroidery all-over and edging; in the loose girdle; the softly heavy mandarin crepe of Turco red, a tone that is complemented in the bronze buttoned boots and the darker red hat.

A little bit of a pine tree 10 or 12 inches high, brought from the woods and planted in a small pot will make a delightful bit of green for the centre of the dining table.

Camphor ice is made of refined mutton or lamb tallow, two ounces, a piece of gum camphor as large as a walnut. Melt together; stir until they are thoroughly mixed and allow to cool.

SPEECH ON THE BRITISH BUDGET

Several Reasons Advanced for Likely Delay

LONDON, April 16.—It is believed that the introduction of the budget, set for next week, will be delayed for a week for two reasons, one, that the Chancellor of the Exchequer, who has been suffering from a severe sore throat, desires to ensure the full recovery of his voice, and the other, that Austen Chamberlain, the financial spokesman of the Opposition, will be unable to attend in the House of Commons on the date originally suggested, the 20th.

The Graphic, however, takes this possibility as the basis for the expression of the opinion that the delay is really due to a desire by the Cabinet to revise Mr. Lloyd George's plans, which are believed to involve an increase of the supertax, relief of income tax on small incomes and an import duty on antos.

Bust of Stead Unveiled.

THE HAGUE, Netherlands, April 16.—Solemn ceremonies marked the unveiling yesterday in the palace of peace of the bust of the late W. T. Stead, the English writer and pacifist, who was a victim of the Titanic disaster two years ago. There was a distinguished audience of pacifists and diplomats representing many countries.

Proposals to Tag Minors.

TOPEKA, Kas., April 16.—As a means of enabling them to do their part in enforcing the city ordinance against selling tobacco to minors Topeko tobacco merchants and pool hall owners have suggested the plan of requiring every boy under 18 years to wear a tag with his age printed on it.

Irons Should be Immaculately Clean

First of all the irons must be immaculately clean and suited to the article to be ironed. Irons come now in all sizes, for all purposes.

Heat the irons slowly, but have them very hot before starting, even if they must be cooled later. Try them on a soft clean cloth.

The ironing sheet also must be clean. For fine lingerie cover the ordinary ironing sheet with thin material; for embroidery and lace use a Turkish towel, pinned tightly around the board. To stiffen articles without starching rub them on the wrong side with warm water and borax.

To clean the irons if starch sticks rub them over fine emery paper, then with a little paraffin wrapped in muslin. If an iron becomes rusty scrub it with hot water and soap, then rub it very lightly with lard. Wipe it carefully with absorbent cotton to remove all traces of the lard.

Never allow irons to get red hot, as it takes the temper out. Do not put a hot iron in water to cool it; stand it on one side for a few minutes.

It is unwise to put irons directly over the gas flame, as it spoils the iron. In the absence of a special device for holding them use an asbestos mat.

When possible colored goods should be ironed on the wrong side, then pressed on the right. This brings out the coloring. All wool underwear ought not to be ironed, as ironing causes it to shrink.

Might Infer.

"What's on your mind?"

"Nothing."

"Thought you might be thinking of me."

"I was."

Quite Right.

"Is marriage a failure?"

"Well, it all depends."

"On what?"

"Whose marriage."

The Rat Concealed.

If seeing was believing
You'd think that on the square
Some lovely women that you know
Had quite a head of hair.

OLIVER WILCOX, M.P., URGES PROTECTION FOR NEW INDUSTRY

House Resumes Sittings and Budget Debate is Continued With a Prospect of Going on For Ten Days More—Mr. Carroll, of Cape Breton, Wants Free Trade For All Canada Except Own Constituency.

OTTAWA, April 16.—The House of Commons resumed yesterday after its Easter vacation, and despite a slim attendance the budget debate was continued. Three speakers, two Liberal and one Conservative took part and from present indications the debate may go on for ten days more.

Mr. Carroll (Lib., S. Cape Breton) resumed the budget debate. He commended the Laurier Government for the bounties it had extended to the iron and steel industries and intimated that assistance by way of bounty was preferable to high tariff. Increased duties upon iron and steel could be of little benefit to the big industries at Sydney and Hamilton. Wire rods were placed on the dutiable list, but there was a drawback for the benefit of wire fencing, and the Government threatened to remove the duty unless wire rods were sold quite cheaply to the small manufacturers of wire nails. He also condemned the recent change in the tariff which gives a drawback of 99 per cent. upon duties paid on bituminous coal imported for cokeing and smelting purposes.

The people of Canada, Mr. Carroll said, were suffering from the high cost of living partly because of the fact that they paid several millions a year duty on staple food products, and he said that in one ward of Ottawa alone, no less than seven hundred people were in distress.

Mr. Wilcox (Con., N. Essex) said that the member for South Cape Breton (Mr. Carroll), wanted a high protective wall around the city of Sydney, but free trade for all the rest of Canada. That gentleman favored free flour and free agricultural implements and desired to deprive the farmer of his share of the benefit of labor.

"I am not a partisan," the North Essex member said. (Laughter). "But I must say the Liberal party has always been on the wrong side of public questions, and has developed a wonderful talent for sitting up false gods for the Canadian people to worship. They bullyrag the manufacturers from one end of the country to the other, but shake hands with them under the table."

Continuing, Mr. Wilcox declared that the west is more prosperous today than it was prior to 1911, and that he believed that its unparalleled prosperity was due to the protection policy of the present Government. It was due to that policy that the United States steel trust had been forced to establish a Canadian plant. They had purchased over 1,500 acres of land near Windsor and were spending $20,000,000 in building and equipment of a plant which would give employment to thousands of Canadians.

Mr. Wilcox, in conclusion, urged the Government to put import duty upon Indian corn. He could see no reason why the tobacco growers, the fruit growers, and all other agriculturists should benefit by the tariff while no protection at all was given to the farmer who raised corn. He said that Sir Wilfrid Laurier had justified the reciprocity pact on the ground that the farmers should get more for their products. But when the farmers refused to follow him he changed his position, and was now clamoring for free food upon the ground that farmers were getting too much.

"The characteristics of the budget speech of the Minister of Finance," said Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, "were certainly reactionary. The speech was a complete surrender to the interests and manufacturers of Canada. The country was waiting anxiously for a downward revision of the tariff, and instead the Finance Minister wards. Minus a five per cent. reduction on certain agricultural implements, a mere sop to the farmers, the Minister ignores the needs and wishes of the farming communities, discards western interests, and bars and bolts the doors upon the consumers.

In the interest of all Canada, that the cost of living might be reduced, declared Mr. Lemieux, the present taxation upon food should not merely be reduced, but entirely abolished. As it was, he argued, the Borden Government was totally ignoring the needs and wishes of the consumers.

The debate was adjourned by J. E. Armstrong (E. Lambton), and the House rose shortly before midnight.

It is evident that the present session of Parliament is drawing rapidly to a close. Yesterday Hon. Geo. E. Foster, who is acting Premier in the absence of Mr. Borden in the south, gave notice that morning sittings of the Commons will begin on Monday next. Prorogation is looked for about June 1st.

PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENT'S REFORM LEGISLATION CONTINUES

No Inferior Stallions Will be Allowed After Five Years by Bill Brought in Yesterday—Boundaries Defined in Mr. Hearst's Measure—Salaries of Compensation Commission Fixed.

The aim of the Department of Agriculture to place the horse-breeding of Ontario on a new standard of excelence will be furthered by Hon. James Duff's new measure, which will allow only pure bred stallions to be used after 1918. In addition clauses are added to the Stallion Enrolment Act, which will make the inspection of all animals compulsory and work towards the weeding out of inferior cross-bred animals.

To make the plan work out without undue unfairness the first stage will be enforced in 1916, and the lower class of grade animals will be ruled out of service. Then the total enforcement will follow.

Hon. Mr. Hearst introduced a bill to amend the Territorial Division Act and which will make clear the judicial boundaries of Manitoulin and Sudbury for judicial and other purposes. This was followed by an insurance amendment of Hon. J. J. Foy, which will ask that in future certain forms of insurance companies, especially those operating on a fraternal basis will be required to submit more tabulated returns than usual. The rates now being charged by some are understood to be much lower than those recognized by actuaries and with a view to educating the country in the ways of insurance policy the bill will not be passed this year but printed and distributed.

A special bill, brought into the Legislature yesterday by the Minister of Lands, Forests, and Mines, is designed to elucidate some of the clauses in the Election Act, relating to the exercise of manhood franchise at the polls. A change will be made to enforce the submission of all nominations in writing and signed by at least 50 nominees.

Registration booths will be kept open at noon hereafter.

Before the Legislature in committee of the whole, Hon. Mr. Lucas explained certain amendments to the Workmen's Compensation Act, chief among which was the inclusion in the measure of the salaries to be paid to the new board—$10,000 to the chairman, $8,500 to the vice-chairman and $7,500 to the commissioner.

The Opposition probe into the public accounts at the meeting of the committee in the morning was conducted by Chief Liberal Whip C. M. Bowman.

C. H. Sproule, assistant Provincial Treasurer, was a witness in connection with the flotation and application of loans. He said that of the $5,000,000 autherized two years ago for Northern Ontario development, $4,006,000 has been raised. Of this sum $1,300,000 has been expended on New Ontario. The balance, he said, has been used for any general purpose where a vote has been made by the Legislature. When the money is needed in New Ontario new flotations may be required.

J. H. Humphreys, of the Department of Education, was examined with regard to the reduction of rural public school grants. While in 1912 the Treasury had assisted the Department to the extent of $80,000 in meeting the extra grants earned by the schools, in 1913 the Department had been forced to cut down the grants to the public schools to 72 per cent. The separate schools had been paid in full.

Miners Will Continue Work.

PITTSBURG, April 16.—Van Bitner, president of District No. 5, United Mine Workers, announced yesterday that reports from local unions indicated that a majority of the forty-five thousand miners in this district voted to continued work while the negotiations for a settlement of the wage scale are in progress.

Picked the One Fitting Word.

In the opinion of fastidious judges as well as in that of the public John Bright was the best parliamentary speaker of his day. He had all the physical attributes of a great orator, including a splendid voice. His diction, drawn largely from the English Bible and Milton, was further enriched by a knowledge of all the great English poets, and his most recent biographer, George Macaulay Trevelyan, claims for him the additional distinction of an intuition for the right word that was almost unerring.

In the house of commons at the crisis of the Crimean war Bright daringly said:

"The angel of death has been abroad throughout the land; you may almost hear the beating of his wings."

He carried it off triumphantly, but Cobden afterward said to him:

"If you had said 'flapping' the house would have laughed."

The Diplomat.

It was the day after the party. Nine-year-old Robert came to his mother and said:

"Mamma, how many of those nice cut glass ice cream dishes of yours are there exactly?"

"Twenty-four, my son."

"Will you bet me that you have more than twenty-three?"

"No, darling. Grandmother Brown gave me one dozen and Grandmother Sullivan another dozen. That makes exactly two dozen."

"All the same," persisted young Robert, "please bet with me."

"Very well, I'll bet."

$1,000,000 FOR PEACE.

U. S. Centenary Committee Tentatively Approves Memorials.

NEW YORK, April 16.—Memorials marking the centennial of peace between this country and Great Britain in 1915, at an aggregate cost of $1,000,000, were tentatively approved yesterday by a sub-committee of the American Centenary organization, meeting in this city. The organization's finance committee must yet ratify the appropriations and conditional contracts made.

Sums of from $35,000 to $75,000 each were set apart for statues of Lincoln in London; Francis Parkman the historian, in Ottawa, and Queen Victoria in Washington, D.C. Free educational trips abroad for newspaper men of all countries are to be instituted with the proceeds of one of the funds available for the committee's use, it was announced. Ignorance of foreign countries causes writing which engenders friction, while foreign travel for newspaper men would promote peace, in the opinion of the committee. To writers of poems, hymns and essays extolling peace and the Centenary celebration $10,000 in prizes will be distributed. A gift of $10,000 was voted to the city of Ghent, Belgium, where the treaty of 1815 was signed.

PERILS LURK IN PANAMA.

Expert In Tropical Medicine Fears Epidemics When Canal Opens.

BOSTON, April 16.—Fear that the opening of the Panama Canal may be followed by a world-wide redistribution of yellow fever and cholera, which will threaten very great commercial loss, was expressed yesterday by Dr. Richard P. Strong, head of the Harvard Medical School of Tropical Medicine.

Dr. Strong was formerly at the head of the Government biological laboratory in the Philippines, and later became prominent through his work in combating the pneumonic plague in Manchuria. Last year he led the Harvard Medical School expedition to Peru, where an extensive study of tropical diseases was made.

"The troubles to be feared from the spread of tropical diseases by traffic through the Panama Canal," he said, "are rather heavy financial losses through disturbance of trade than any great loss of life. Modern medicine has so far mastered the ways of checking infectious diseases that in many civilized countries no great mortality is to be feared from the introduction even of plague, yellow fever and cholera. It is necessary, however, to hold up trade in order to check the diseases."

Yielding to Temptation.

"John, didn't I tell you that if you came home tipsy another night I'd go home to my mother?"

"Yeah, m' dear."

"Then why have you come home in this condition?"

"Didn't you shay (hic) you'd go home t' your mosher?"—Boston Transcript.

Cat and Dog Convicts.

Beyond the lovely vale of Kashmir, across the Indus, lies a desolate settlement where convicts are transported.

Probably one of the quaintest convicts who crossed the passes and entered this penal settlement, writes Captain H. L. Haughton in "Sport and Folk Lore in the Himalaya," was a fine tabby cat. This cat was convicted of no less offense than that of killing and devouring a parrot and a pet myna belonging to the old maharajah and was sentenced to penal servitude for life. A very old officer of the Kashmir army told the writer that he remembered this cat in Bunji, and that it was allowed a ration of flour daily by the state.

Captain Haughton alludes also to a case where a dog and a pestle were brought to trial:

A dog playing in the courtyard of a native house ran against a big wooden pestle used for pounding grain, which in falling killed a baby sleeping underneath it. The dog and the pestle were both brought before the judge, who convicted them both and sentenced them to a term of hard labor.

ARE CHARGED WITH CRUELTY TO ANIMALS

Six Philadelphia Scientists Are On Trial

PHILADELPHIA, April 16.—Advocates and opponents of vivisection, many of whom are medical men and society women, crowded the criminal court here yesterday to hear the testimony in the case of six members of the faculty of the medical school of the University of Pennsylvania who are charged with cruelty to dogs after vivisection had been performed.

Those under indictment are: Drs. Joshua E. Sweet, Alfred N. Richards, Allen J. Smith, Richard Mills Pearce, Alonzo Englebert Taylor and Dr. Ed. Reichert.

Dr. Sweet was the only one placed on trial yesterday. He pleaded not guilty. He had charge of the housing of animals.

The prosecution of the medical men was brought by the Women's Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. Counsel for the society said that the prosecution is not necessarily an attempt to deliver a blow at vivisection, but was brought as a means of preventing unnecessary cruelty to animals.

BRIDGENORTH ITEMS

Bridgenorth, April 16.—The ice on the lake is 18 inches thick. The stork took a chance on the ice and visited the home of Mr. F. Joppling, leaving a bouncing baby boy.

The only thing the fermers are kicking about is the rain. They say it will affect the roads, which have been in fair shape, good enough in fact to allow a few autoists to run to Bridgenorth and other country towns.

Given $200 Damages.

LONDON, Ont., April 16.—A jury in the assize court yesterday awarded Mrs. Alice Eckardt $200 damages against the Smallman & Ingram Co. for wrongful search of her person. The case arose out of the detention and search of the plaintiff and her mother by officials of the store, when they were accused of having stolen a tie. The mother was given a solatium of $350 Tuesday.

IDENTITY OF TRENTON MAN WHO MASQUERADED IS REVEALED BY DEATH

Oklahoma City, Okla., April 16.—The man who was found dead in the Blossom House, Kansas City, recently, was not Dr. H. H. Grey, but his right name was Dr. William M. Ireland, the name under which he had registered when he went to the hotel. He had been known here during the past thirteen years as Dr. Grey and the fact that he was masquerading had only leaked out, although it was suspected by some of the physicians here.

When the physician came here and opened an office he hung up a diploma showing that he was Dr. Henry Hedd Grey and that he had been graduated from Trinity College of Toronto, Canada.

It has since become known that there was a Dr. Henry Hedd Grey, but he died more than twenty years ago in Canada under peculiar circumstances. He was the boyhood companion of William M. Ireland, the man who afterward took his name. This man, a reputable physician, an active member of a church and widely known in Oklahoma City as a lecturer, is now known to have fled from Canada more than twenty years ago. Why he fled and why he assumed the name of another man are not known, but it is known why he registered at the Kansas City Hotel under his right name.

William M. Ireland was a native of Trenton, Ontario, where his father was Mayor, and of an old and aristocratic family. He was educated in the schools there, spoke English and French and when a young man was sent to Trinity College. With him went Henry Hedd Grey, a boyhood companion and a member of another old family of the Dominion.

Mystery in Friend's Death.

The two young men were graduated from Trinity in 1890. They began the practice of medicine together and were always close friends. About that time Dr. Ireland married a girl to whom the members of his family objected, but they only lived together a short time.

One morning Dr. Grey was found dead in his room and an autopsy showed that he had taken a drug. It was never charged that his death was due to anything more than a mistake in giving him the wrong medicine. But Dr. Ireland fled and became a wanderer.

He first went to Chicago and began to practice. Something caused him to leave and he went to San Francisco. There he registered with the State Medical Board under his own name. He acquired a good practice there, but in time the same mysterious thing that drove him from Chicago came up and he fled from San Francisco.

Although he did not know it at that time, his wife in Canada, from whom he had been divorced, had given birth to a baby boy and the infant was reared in an orphan asylum in Chicago.

When the physician left San Francisco he went to South Africa and became a surgeon in the British army. He participated in the Matabele rebellion and the Jameson raid, but left before the Boer war began. He went to New Orleans where he married the woman who is now his widow and the mother of their daughter, two years old. This child, Cecile Grey, is now a student at the technical college.

After he returned from South Africa, Ireland learned of the action of his Canadian wife in placing their baby in a Chicago orphan asylum. He found the boy after a long search and took him to the new home he had established. He moved to Beaumont, Tex., and from there came to Oklahoma City.

Feared His First Wife.

Why he fled from place to place is not known among those who have been investigating the past of the physician, but it is believed that be was avoiding his first wife. It was easy for her or any one else to find him in any State where he registered to practice medicine under his own name. It is believed that he assumed the name of Grey on that account when he fled from California.

Until a few days before his death Mrs. Grey, now the widow of the dead man, did not know that he had married her under an assumed name. Then he confessed to her that his right name was William M. Ireland and that some one in Oklahoma City had discovered his identity. He said he could no longer practice medicine under the name of Grey, and he decided to go to California and practice in Los Angeles, having already registered in California years ago under his right name.

The physician had started for California when he died in Kansas City. Having decided to use his own name, it is supposed that he began by registering under that name when he went to the hotel.

While the dead physician was not wealthy, he had for years been doing a lucrative business and had accumulated considerable property. He owned a handsome home here and some other real estate. The life insurance he carried, all of it payable to his widow, is said to amount to a sum between $20,000 and $30,000.

Something had turned the physician's hair as white as snow, although he was not an old man and had a youthful face. He was active in church work, and until a few weeks ago it was not suspected that he was using a name not his own.

The physician's boy by his Canadian wife enlisted in the navy three years ago, but has since deserted and is now with "Kelly's Army" in California.

Buried at Boyhood Home.

The body of the dead physician was taken back to his former home at Trenton, Ont., for burial, accompanied by his widow.

Before he left Oklahoma City the physician is said to have expressed the wish to be buried at his boyhood home. Those who knew the physician here do not believe that he committed suicide.

THEY WANT THE CANAL

DELEGATES ARE TOLD GOVERNMENT IS WAITING FOR REPORT

OTTAWA, April 16.—Upwards of 1,000 delegates, of whom 700 were from Montreal and the immediate vicinity, yesterday afternoon waited on the Government and urged the early construction of the Georgian Bay Canal. A resolution calling for this action was presented.

Mr. Adelard Fortier, president of the Montreal Chamber of Commerce, which was primarily responsible for the organization of the delegation, said his organization was actuated solely by an earnest desire to help an enterprise of national importance and in carrying out the project the Government would have the support of the great majority of the people of Canada.

Hon. Robert Rogers, in reply to the resolution, said he regretted the Prime Minister was unable to be present. He agreed with the mayor of Montreal that the work of linking up the western lake ports with the sea is of the deepest importance to every good Canadian citizen.

"We have had no report yet as to the commercial feasibility of the scheme, and we consider the time would be well spent to take advantage of having a commission to enquire into the feasibility of it," he said.

Japan Apologizes and Pays.

PEKIN, April 16.—The Japanese Government yesterday expressed its regret to the Chinese Government for the Chang-Ti incident, which occurred in September, 1913, when several Chinese soldiers were killed by Japanese troops who were occupying a section of the Mukden Railway. Japan also agreed to pay $26,000 (Mexican), in compensation to the families of the soldiers killed.

Hamilton Unemployed Restless.

HAMILTON, April 16.—Following the action of 500 unemployed men Tuesday in storming the City Hall, another demonstration was made yesterday. Several hundred men swarmed around the City Hall and after being driven out by the police marched to the home of Mayor Allan who advised them to apply to the city works yard. The civic authorities fear trouble.

Hon. T. W. Crothers Better.

OTTAWA, April 16.—Hon. T. W. Crothers, Minister of Labor, who has been seriously ill for some weeks with erysipelas, and had a relapse two days ago, is reported to-day to be out of danger.

HAS LIND DONE IT?

London Paper Sees Link Between His Return and Present Action.

LONDON, April 16.—Most London morning papers, in their editorial comment on the Mexican situation display sympathy with President Wilson in the difficulties which have arisen with Mexico, while at the same time contending that those difficulties were largely brought about by his idealistic policy.

The Daily Telegraph cannot believe that President Wilson intends to put into effect a resolute military intervention, and sees no hope of putting an end "to the anarchy which has resulted from the Wilson policy of moral intervention."

The Chronicle argues that any sovereign state might, without loss of dignity, have condoned the Tampico affront on receipt of the apology which Huerta has already tendered and says:

"It is, therefore, difficult to disconnect the President's action entirely from the return of Mr. Lind. It is evident that Mr. Lind went home to urge stronger measures, and stronger measures have followed forthwith. They need not involve war. The Americans need only to sit tight at Tampico and Vera Cruz and collect the customs."

PACIFIC COAST CITIES PLAN BIG CELEBRATION IN 1915

Every city of importance on the Pacific Coast between Alaska and Mexico is being invited to participate in the celebration that is to mark the opening of the Panama Canal next year. It is planned to have a "Convention of the Festival Cities of the Pacific Coast" on April 2nd and 3rd, 1915, in the Exposition Grounds at San Francisco with parades and pageants of unexampled brilliance. Canadian fraternal organizations will be invited to be present with those from the United States.

Hands-together-up-and-down-the Coast" is the slogan of these Festival cities and it is hoped that by means of this spirit of co-operation many thousands of tourists will be given special facilities for seeing not only the Exposition but the whole of the magnificent territory, rich in nature's wonders, that fronts the Pacific Ocean, from Prince Rupert to San Diego. Many of these travellers to the Exposition will take the Canadian route either going to or returning from San Francisco. Splendid steamships will carry passengers between Puget Sound and Prince Rupert, the gateway to Alaska, the terminus of the most modern of transcontinental railways, and a city that is advancing by leaps and bounds. Through the newly opened up wonderland of the Canadian Rockies they will pass on to the Prairie section of the Grand Trunk Pacific and can return by a variety of routes to their homes in the middle West, the Eastern States and Europe, making a tour through one of the most fascinating regions in the world.

Walking Sticks.

Many ingenious attempts have been made to increase the usefulness of the walking stick. Sticks containing a sword were common enough in less peaceful times, and some were even made to conceal firearms. Henry VIII., for instance, had a stick containing three matchlock pistols, and a clumsy affair it must have been. More recently sticks have been fitted with snuff boxes, scent bottles, watches, compasses, spirit flasks and even telescopes. A decade ago there was a short lived craze for a stick the knob of which unscrewed and formed a pipe.

A Wireless Message From the Dead

By F. A. MITCHEL

We are moving so fast in scientific discoveries that, lost in wonder at what we know, we have no time to consider what our attained knowledge is likely to develop in future. For instance, we know that an electric current may be transmitted without any other medium than the atmosphere. We also know that functions of the body, if not electric, are a force something like electricity.

When I was a boy I was constantly finding myself saying something to a companion who would say, "Why, I was just about to say that myself!" At the time I considered this a coincidence. Now I believe it to be a power I possessed in receiving the mental impressions of others by a sort of wireless process. I studied medicine and became a doctor. Then during hospital work I broke down and, though it was between winter and spring, was obliged to go to the country to recoup.

I stopped at a house that looked down a valley, and the view was uninterrupted. I used to sit on the porch wrapped in rugs and enjoy the view in the sunshine. About a mile distant was a house that bore evidence of having been built in colonial times. It was not by any means a farmhouse, but something quite handsome. The architecture was that peculiar style involving a porch with pillars.

One night I was awakened by the sound of wheels stopping right under my window and thought I heard some one call "Doctor!" I raised the sash and put my head out through the window. A man in a wagon asked me if I was a doctor, and I said I was, whereupon he begged me to come with him at once. I dressed myself unwillingly, went downstairs and got into the wagon with him. I asked him to tell me about the nature of the case I was expected to treat, but could get nothing out of him. He seemed entirely absorbed in some powerful emotion.

We were but a few minutes in reaching our destination, drawing up before a house with pillars from the porch to the roof. I inferred that I had come to the house about which I had so often dreamed. The door was opened by a woman in a short petticoat full at the hips, a kerchief across her bosom and a dainty cap on her head. She looked very much troubled.

"Come upstairs," she said.

I followed her up a winding staircase, and the woman opened a door with a glass knob. I entered the sickroom to see a young woman lying on a bed with four high posts surmounted by a canopy. On one side of her was a man holding one of her hands; on the other side was a young girl holding the other. These two looked at me with that mute appeal a doctor is so often obliged to meet.

As I drew near the bed the girl with the invalid pulled down the bedclothes, and I saw at once from blood stains and temporary bandages that my patient had been wounded. I was not a surgeon, but felt obliged to perform a surgeon's part. I examined the wound and saw that it was near the heart, so near that I wondered that the wounded woman lived. There was nothing that I could do for her except bind up the wound in a more professional manner and await results.

Presently I saw her gasp, and between gasps she said to the man beside her:

"You are convinced of the unjustness of your suspicion?"

"Yes, yes; forgive me."

"I forgive you. Goodby."

She fell back dead.

Amid a wail of those present I retired from the room. Notwithstanding the tragical circumstances, I could not but notice the costume of those in the house. "What singular persons!" I said to myself. "Not content with living in a colonial house, they adopt the colonial costume." This was especially marked in their collars, which were like those I had seen in pictures of America's early settlers. I was ushered out by the woman who received me and driven back to my home, where I went to bed, remaining half awake, half asleep, for the rest of the night.

Now, there was something uncanny about my visit, and I hesitated to talk about it to those in the house. I asked if any of the family had heard a wagon stop before the house during the night, but no one had heard any such sound. This induced me to maintain a reserve about my visit. Presently I ventured to ask who lived in the house with pillars and was told that no one lived there. It had been unoccupied for many years. The last tenant had vacated some thirty years before. I asked if anything peculiar had taken place there, but no one had heard of anything unusual. But before returning to the city I heard from a very old resident of the region there was a legend that long before the Revolution a murder had been committed there. A man in a fit of jealousy had stabbed his wife.

And now in this second decade of the twentieth century I have come to believe that the scene I witnessed took place as I saw it many years ago; that it was stored somewhere; it may be in some soul across the border, possibly one of the participants who flashed it to me by some such process as a wireless operator will flash a message from one side of the world to another.

RENTING ROOMS

The total amount of rent money paid for furnished rooms in this city each week is enormous! Nobody knows how much. It goes to thrifty people, who like to lessen their own rent or living expense by sub-letting one or more spare rooms to an agreeable person. If YOU have a desirable extra room you can become a receiver of rent by ordering a "Furnished Room to Let" ad. in the Review. The cost is nominal—one cent a word for first insertion and half a cent a word for subsequent insertions, run consecutively.

Classic Ruses.

Palmerston used to greet all whom he did not know with "How d'ye do, and how's the old complaint?" which fitted all sorts and conditions of men. Trivial illustrations, indeed, which we may dismiss with this single note of recognition, that they are every whit as socially sincere as "literal truths" told often in such a way as to create an entirely false impression.

At times the ruse rises into a fine art. I recall the cunning artist who painted the beautiful Irish girl, twice a duchess, with a sunflower that turns from the sun to look at her, and Mrs. Gaskell's heroine, who, as amateur clerk, tries to make the old bookkeeper forget that she is a woman by whistling. A millionaire peasant of Russia wished Engel to give piano lessons to his daughter, but in order to lessen the cost thought that she might do without learning the black keys. The master sat down at the piano and played Chopin's etude on the black keys so divinely that the father exclaimed: "The devil take the 5 rubles! She shall learn to play on the black keys too."—Atlantic Monthly.

The Wrong Bertie.

Sir Francis Bertie was once the center of an amusing muddle at Windsor.

It happened during the reign of Queen Victoria, when Sir Francis was permanent under secretary of state for foreign affairs. Wanting to consult Lord Ponsonby about a certain matter he telegraphed to him at Windsor: "Shall be down tonight. Bertie."

The telegram was shown to the queen, and as Bertie was the name she always used to her son, the late King Edward, she came to the conclusion that he was going to pay her an unexpected visit. When Sir Francis arrived he was considerably taken aback at the elaborate preparations that had been made to receive him, and the old queen laughed heartily at the trick he had all unconsciously played on her, but when he was leaving she suggested that he should in future sign his telegrams in some other way.—Pearson's Weekly.

They All Did.

One predicts a future for the schoolboy who wrote the following terse narrative about Elijah:

"There was a man named Elijah. He had some bears and he lived in a cave. Some boys tormented him. He said: 'If you keep on throwing stones at me I'll turn the bears on you and they'll eat you up.' And they did and he did and the bears did."—Everybody's.

Not Fast.

"By Jove! I am glad to see you looking so gay and festive!" said Mr. Olde Frend. "You were all in black the last time I saw you."

"Yes," demurely replied Mrs. Brown, who had just taken a second husband, "but it wasn't a fast black."—Magazine of Fun.

Value of a Kiss.

"Your honor," said the foreman of the jury, "this lady is suing this gent for $10,000 for a stolen kiss."

"Correct," responded the judge. "You are to decide if it was worth it."

HAD TO STOP WORK FROM THE PAIN

Suffered Ten Years Until "Fruit-a-tives" Cured Him

ST. THOMAS, ONT., May 22nd. 1913.

"I was troubled for ten years with the most distressing Constipation and Indigestion of the worst form.

No one could have been worse with these troubles than I was for this long time.

The pain from Indigestion was so severe that many times, I have had to stop work and lie down until the acute spasms passed away.

I took a lot of medicine—in fact, I guess I took about everything that was advertised—and gave them all a fair test—but got no relief. About a year ago, however, I was advised to try "Fruit-a-tives". I am mighty glad I did so for they seem to be made exactly for me.

They gave results in a very short time and I am now free from these diseases and enjoying perfect health.

My wife also used "Fruit-a-tives" and we both think they are the best medicine ever made."

Spoiled a Nice Surprise.

They were having a quiet little home supper, for it was the girl's day off, and they were all by their two loving selves.

"What is this meat?" asked the husband.

"I'm not going to tell you," answered the wife. "You'll know when you taste it—it's to be a surprise."

"But I have tasted it."

"And do you mean to say that you don't know what it is?"

"Pardon me for being stupid, darling, but I don't. Is it chicken or lobster?"

"I've had bad luck! I don't know either. The label was torn off the can when it was delivered."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Doing Their Best.

Little Margie had not been to the country before, and, getting lonesome, she was told she might go to the barn and look for eggs. Presently she returned without any.

"Couldn't you find any eggs, dear?" asked her mother.

"No. The hens were scratching all around as hard as they could, but they hadn't found a single egg," was the doleful reply.—Philadelphia Ledger.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson III.—Second Quarter, For April 19, 1914.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

The topic of this lesson, "The Cost of Discipleship," is an all important one, inasmuch as few seem to see the difference between being a Christian and being a disciple. One great point of difference is that the cost of our salvation fell wholly upon the Lord Jesus, while the cost of discipleship falls upon us. In our last lesson in this chapter we saw salvation represented as a prepared feast to which all were invited. In Isa. lv, 1, the invitation is, "Ho, every one that thirsteth, come * * * without money and without price." This is in accord with the record of the coats of skins provided for Adam and Eve in Gen. iii, 21, in which the Lord did all, and they had only to accept the clothing which He provided by the shedding of the blood of the substitute. In the passover record in Ex. xii safety depended wholly upon their being under the shelter of the blood of the Lamb.

In the sacrifices, if the offering was perfect, it was accepted for the offerer, and the priest did all (Lev. i, 1-4; iv, 27-31). Our Lord Jesus Christ, who was both priest and sacrifice, having offered Himself without spot to God, has by His own blood obtained eternal redemption for us (Heb. ix, 11-14), and therefore eternal life is the free gift of God since He has paid such a price for it (Rom. iii, 24; vi, 23; John iv, 10). "I will give unto him that is athirst of the fountain of the water of life freely." "Whosoever will let him take the water of life freely" (Rev. xxi, 6; xxii, 17). Since our Lord Jesus has finished the work of providing eternal redemption the only thing for the sinner to do is to plead guilty, receive Him as his own personal Saviour and then take Him at His word concerning his acceptance in Christ, the forgiveness of sins and the possession of eternal life (Rom. iii, 19; John i, 12; iii, 16-18; v, 24; vi, 37; x, 27, 28; Eph. i, 6, 7; I John ii, 12). He who would put anything as necessary to salvation between the sinner and the Saviour, such as reform, good works, a changed life, money or aught else, does not understand the grace of God and frustrates the same, according to Gal. ii, 21.

With this made plain we are now ready to consider the matter of discipleship and its difficulties or what it costs to be a whole hearted follower of the Lord Jesus Christ. The privilege is as open to all as is the gift of eternal life to any penitent sinner. This is indicated by the words, "If any man come to me" (verse 26). Whether for salvation or discipleship, it must be according to Lev. i, 3, "of his own voluntary will." Notice the three times repeated "Cannot be my disciple" of our lesson (verses 26, 27, 33) and the conditions, preferring Christ to father, mother, wife, children, brothers, sisters or one's own life; bearing the cross and forsaking all that we have. Well may we say, Who is sufficient for these things? I said preferring Christ to our dearest loved ones, because in Matt. x, 37, it is written, "He that loveth father or mother, * * * son or daughter more than me is not worthy of me." The greatest lover should have the greatest love and be in all things pre-eminent. There is a way today of making religion (so called) easy and alluring to ordinary people. Even cards and the dance and the theater are not prohibited if only people can be persuaded to join a church. This is as far below our Lord's method as earth or hell is below heaven. It is unthinkable that He would at such infinite cost to Himself deliver us from the wrath to come that we might live as we please here and yet expect to share His glory.

Is it not also almost as unthinkable that one who has been delivered by such a sacrifice should be unwilling to follow fully such a deliverer no matter how great the cost? Paul saw it correctly when he said, "I even reckon all things as pure loss because of the priceless privilege of knowing Christ Jesus my Lord, for the sake of whom I have suffered the loss of everything and reckon it all as mere refuse" (Phil. iii, 8, Weymouth). "God forbid that I should glory save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom the world is crucified unto me and I unto the world" (Gal. vi, 14). Our Lord said to His Father in His prayer that last night, "I am no more in the world, but these are in the world," and He also said to His disciples that evening, "The world seeth me no more, but ye see me" (John xvii, 11; xiv, 19), implying that we are here in His stead and that He expects the world to see Him in us. He never pleased Himself nor sought His own will or His own glory (Rom. xv, 3; John v, 30; viii, 50), and we are here to manifest His life in these mortal bodies.

The life that does not savor of Christ is good for nothing in the light of His kingdom and glory (verses 34, 35); Matt. v, 13). This life of discipleship is spoken of as "serving the living and true God," "denying ungodliness and worldly lusts," and while it can only be by the love of Christ constraining us the attitude that controls is always waiting for our Lord's return (I Thess. i, 9, 10; Tit. ii, 11-13).

"I think it only right that I should tell you about the benefits I received the last couple of weeks by using GIN PILLS. I was troubled for over three weeks, with a pain in my back, and tried a number of remedies without any benefit. One of the reporters had also been troubled the same way and he said to me, "Why don't you use GIN PILLS? I used a box and a half and the pain left". He said "You take this other half of the box and get another box, and you will be all right". I am glad to inform you that before I used all of the second box, I felt myself all right again and the pain had left. I certainly think GIN PILLS are wonders".

Agnew was thrown into a ditch, and two men held McCartney while two others beat him unconscious.

THE SPORTING WORLD

TWO UNIQUE PLAYS PULLED IN THE CANADIAN LEAGUE

Hon. Chas. Hyman Exposed Midge Craven's Trick — How "Tacks" Davis Slipped One Over on Ed. Renfer

(St. Thomas Times.)

Probably the most peculiar occurrence happening on a Canadian League baseball diamond since the organization of that smart circuit occurred last season at the Pinafore Park.

The situation arose one afternoon in a close game between the Saints and their old time rivals, the London Tecumsehs. Dunlop, the visitors' great shortstop was at bat. He swung hard at one of Ray Clements' spitters and slammed out a terrific drive to deep right-centre. Midge Craven who was playing for the locals went away back for the fly but only got his finger tips on the ball and dropped it. However, his quick brain seized the situation. With his back still turned against the playing field, he motioned, or rather faked a throw to Jules Kustus who had also moved over toward the direction of the hit. Kustus got the clue and raised his hand as if he had taken the throw. "Dummy" after going to the initial sack, was waved out by the umpire and returned to the visitors' dug-out. Midge, of course, at this juncture, intended to pick up the ball and make a toss to Ort at first, but for the fraction of a minute lost sight of it. This hesitation directed the attention of a spectator sitting in an automobile, near the right field foul line. He stood up in the machine and shouted to the London players that Craven had not caught the ball. Dunlop jumped from his seat on the bench and before the Saints' "new leader" located the ball and got it back into the infield, the crack shortstop had circled the bases for a clean home run.

Who broke up this brainy play? None other than Hon. Chas. S. Hyman, ex-Minister of Public Works in the Dominion Government, who with a party of friends had motored over to St. Thomas to witness the game. His keen eye and quick thought had figured out Craven's hesitation before any of the visiting players, the umpire or any of the bugs on the bleachers or even the fans in the stands.

(London Advertiser.)

Another peculiar occurrence that does not often happen on the diamond was staged in Berlin last year during a game between the Berlin and Ottawa clubs. Ernie Dinsmore, the local boy, who belongs to the Berlin Club, tells the story. According to him the game was a tight one, and Berlin was leading a trifle. Renfer was in the box for Shaughnessy's men, and "Tacks" Daly was umpiring.

Toward the end of the game Berlin got a man on second, with the heavy end coming up. Dinsmore does not remember just who was batting at the time, but Renfer apparently did not like the look of him. He fooled around with the ball for a time, and then started throwing it to first base. He threw four balls, and started to throw a fifth, when Daly waved the batter to his base, giving him a base on balls. It was the first time in the history of the Canadian League that a batter had been given a base on balls without the ball being thrown to the catcher. Daly's decision was only feebly protested by the Ottawa Club. He had ordered Renfer to pitch to the batter, and was perfectly right in calling the base on balls when the pitcher threw four times to first base instead.

PETES ARE GATHERING AT YOUNGSTOWN CAMP

First News From the Battle Grounds—New Men on Hand.

Youngstown, April 16.—The first contingent of players of Curley Blount's selections for jobs on the Peterboro Canadian League team have arrived here, but the players were held indoors yesterday as Jupiter Pluvius had his artillery working throughout the day.

Manager Blount, however, has ordered his men to turn out in uniform to-day rain or shine for light practice.

The players who have reported are: Schlettler, Belting, Tirrill, Creswell, pitchers; Gaffney, Nau, outfielders; O'Hearne, Schrage, Price, infielders; McGuire, Kelly, catchers.

An exhibition game has been arranged with a local club for next Sunday. The players like the looks of their training headquarters and with Manager Blount are hoping for fine weather.

Other players are expected in to-day and Manager Blount believes he will have all of his squad rounded up by the end of the week.

Hamilton has secured three Baltimore recruits, catcher Rensome, outfielder Barrows and shortstop Kunesaik, who were handed over to Manager Yates by Jack Dunn.

A point of moment regarding the changes in the playing rules of baseball effected by the joint committee of the National and American Leagues is that several of them are expected to produce less wrangling over interpretations. Also, several rules have been changed to make them more equitable. The chief of the latter revisions was brought about by rewording section 7 of rule 54 and section 4 of rule 55.

By striking out the words "on foul ground" in section 7, and substituting the clause "while standing back of the plate" for "or the umpire be struck by a ball thrown by the catcher or other runners no longer are compelled to return to the base from which they started when a thrown ball strikes an umpire who is on fair ground.

The injustice of the then existing rule was illustrated forcibly at the Polo Grounds last Summer. With Hartzell of the New Yorks on base, Borton made what was practically a base hit. There was no chance to retire either man, yet when Collins, who stopped the hit, threw it against Umpire Dineen's head Hartzell was sent back to his base and Borton had to bat over again.

In rule 30, "Delivery of the Ball to the Bat," the words "or on top of the plate" are inserted to make it clear that pitcher can have his feet in that position as well as his heels in contact with the front edge of the rubber, and in section 3, rule 34, devoted to balking, it is now brought out plainly that neither foot can be back of the plate without being in contact with it. It was the practice of some pitchers to slip a foot behind the plate, thereby starting a kick by an opposing manager and a dispute for the umpire to settle.

The occasional practice of batsmen in not running the bases in prescribed order on a home run over the fence, or a two-base hit, if the distance was less than 235 feet, is forbidden by the specific requirement that "In either event the batsman must touch the bases in regular order." The rule, as it was seldom was evaded in the manner mentioned, but there have been few such cases and of umpires being complaisant.

In order to do away with a contradiction in the rules, which permitted an umpire to call two men out on the same base of interference the committee had to provide an exception to section b, rule 51, to conform to section 15.

Living Rent Free.

In Sydney street, Chelsea, England, people are living rent free. But this is not the only place so distinguished. When the lease of a house in parts of England is running out the owner sometimes finds it more economical to abandon his property and avoid paying the ground landlord $500 or so on what are termed dilapidations. Meanwhile the tenant lives happily without a landlord. Some houses are forsaken even when the leases are not expiring. Here the explanation is that the owners are mortgaged up to the extreme limit. If tax rates go up and rents go down there is no balance left to maintain the property and so it is not worth keeping. Should the property require heavy expenditure for repairs the mortgagees refrain from claiming it. Occasionally, too, owners die, leaving no one to succeed them, and then tenants with sufficient audacity can lie low and "squat" until twenty years' undisturbed possession gives them permanent ownership.

ABOUT MRS. ADAM.

MRS. ADAM never danced;
Mrs. Adam never flirted;
Mrs. Adam never pranced
Round the garden hobble skirted;
Mrs. Adam didn't roar
A demand for "votes for women;"
Mrs. Adam simply wore
Fig leaves when she went in swimming.

Mrs. Adam didn't dress
In a gown that seemed to cling;
Mrs. Adam, I confess,
Never wore a surplus thing;
Mrs. Adam didn't care
For the latest thing in hats;
Mrs. Adam didn't wear
Switches, curls or puffs or rats.

Mrs. Adam didn't do
Anything so very shocking,
Never showed a foot or two
Of exquisite silken stocking;
Mrs. Adam went about
Minus any silken hose;
Mrs. Adam went without
Much of anything in clothes.

Mrs. Adam didn't wear
Any tall aigret or feather,
But she traveled here and there,
Quite exposed to wind and weather;
Mrs. Adam didn't go
Out to every swell fandango;
Mrs. Adam didn't know
Anything about the tango.

Mrs. Adam didn't rave
With a wild, unhampered passion
Nor bow meekly like a slave
To the stern demands of fashion;
Mrs. Adam couldn't rig
Up a dud to hide her back,
And she didn't care a fig
That her wardrobe was so slack.

He Couldn't Understand It.

In a breathing space between important dances the regular dancing men stood in the smoking room and puffed at cigarettes. And the awkward idiot gathered to himself as many as he could in order that he might relate his troubles.

"I say, are you chaps having a good time at this dance?" he began.

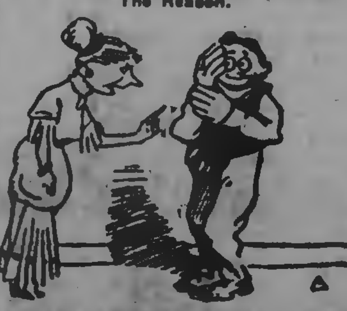
The young men politely protested that they were having the time of their young lives.

"But the girls," continued the bore. "I can't think what's coming over the girls of this generation. Why, they have no endurance, no stamina, no backbone."

"What makes you think so?" sighed the athlete with the wilted collar.

"Why, they can't stand the pace. Out of seven of my partners tonight five have asked if they mayn't sit out their dances with me." — Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Reason.



"I'm surprised at these efforts to bar diaphanous gowns. What ails these finicky mayors anyway?"

"Oh, it's a clear case of gauze and effect."—Philadelphia Press.

The Hatter and the Earl.

"The late Earl of Cork was a very pious person and extremely solicitous as to the future salvation of his fellow men. One day, finding himself in a crowded railway carriage, he delivered a homily as earnest as it was undesired, exhorting every one immediately to set about insuring his happiness in a future life. Presently one of the passengers, who had been listening very attentively to all that Cork said, arrived at his station," says Lord Suffield in his memoirs. "When he had got out on the platform he turned round and, leaning through the carriage door, said:

" 'Thank you, sir! One good turn deserves another. You've put me up to a wrinkle in your profession; now let me give you one in return. I'm a hatter. Put a piece of blotting paper inside the lining of your hat and it will last twice as long. Good day!' "—London Globe.

CONGREGATIONAL RALLY HELD AT KNOX CHURCH

There was a very large turnout of members of Knox Church to the meeting in the lecture hall last night, to observe the seventh anniversary of the induction of Rev. H. J. Keith.

The pastor was chairman and Sheriff Hall brought greetings from St. Paul's, Rev. Mr. Pogue being unable to attend. Mr. Hall recalled the early days when services were held in the building on Aylmer Street and later on Dalhousie Street. He had fears, he said, that they were going ahead too fast, in the matter of erecting a church, but he had been pleasantly mistaken, and the church had grown much more rapidly than he had expected.

Greetings from St. Andrew's Church were conveyed by Rev. Jas. Rollins, who said that St. Andrew's congregation rejoiced with Knox Church in their progress of the past seven years and they hoped that the next seven years would be just as fruitful.

Rev. H. J. Keith referred to the work of the late Mrs. Jas. A. Hall, Miss Charlotte Dickson, J. W. Bennet and others who had helped. Mention was also made of W. W. Johnston, now of Montreal, a former superintendent of the Sunday School for twenty years.

Others who gave short addresses were: Messrs. J. F. Johnston, who is the oldest member of the Session; C. Williamson, on behalf of the young people; Mr. Carpenter on behalf of the members of the congregation from the old country; Mr. Kenyon on behalf of the choir, and R. G. Clifford, W. G. Bartley, H. Shurter, J. Smith, J. H. Taylor, A. McKenzie and H. J. McCannan.

During the evening, warm praise was bestowed upon the pastor, who has been so successful during his leadership at the Knox Church, which is now a potent force in the life of this city. The membership is 575, an increase of 25 since the close of the year 1913. Seven years ago, 83 members, practically all of the congregation, signed the call to Rev. H. J. Keith.

The Sunday School attendance has gradually increased until now the equipment is being overcrowded. There is an average attendance of about 270.

A new pipe organ is being installed in the church, and it is expected will be opened on Sunday, May 17th. Dr. Hanson, of Belfast, Ireland, and now at Erskine Presbyterian Church, Montreal, will preach at both services. Mr. Kenyon will preside at the organ, and a recital will be given at a later date by Dr. Norman Anderson, of St. Andrew's Church, Toronto.

NEW PASTOR FOR NORWOOD CHURCH

Rev. A. M. Irwin of Cannington, Accepts Invitation.

Norwood, April 16.—Rev. A. Mansell Irwin, B.A., B.D., of Cannington, has written to say that he will accept the invitation of the Official Board of the Methodist Church, Norwood, to become their pastor at the close of the present Conference year, subject, however, to the action of the Stationing Committee.

Rev. Mr. Irwin is a native of the township of Mariposa, in the county of Victoria, born and reared on a farm not far from the village of Little Britain. His education was obtained at the Public Schools of Mariposa and Scugog Island, the Oakwood and Port Perry High Schools, the Collegiate of Lindsay, and Victoria College. After teaching for a short time he entered the ministry in 1894. He graduated in Arts in 1898, was ordained in 1899, received his degree of B.D. in 1904. Grafton, Newcastle and Cannington are the later charges he has held. For a young man Mr. Irwin has had many offices of honor and responsibility in the Bay Conference—last year, by an almost unanimous vote, he was chosen Secretary of the Conference. Mr. Irwin is spoken of as a vigorous and able preacher, a careful and diligent pastor and and a wise and judicious administrator.

The Vienna Woman.

The Vienna woman is called the best dressed woman in the world, and she well deserves her title. She is more French in attire than the Parisian, and she is more elegant than the Russian. She combines the usefulness of the English with the delicacy of the Spanish. Yet she is a school of her own in dress. She is original to the last detail. To be thoroughly Viennese in dress is the dream of the well gowned European woman.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Putting Her to the Test.

"John, didn't I tell you that if you came home tipsy another night I'd go home to my mother?"

"Yesh, m'dear."

"Then why have you come home in this condition?"

"Didn't you shay (hic) you'd go home t' your mother?"—Boston Transcript.

W. C. MIKEL K.C. OF BELLEVILLE HAS VERY OLD BIBLE

W. C. Mikel, K.C., of Belleville, former President of the Ontario Bar Association, owns what is probably the oldest Bible in Ontario. It was published in A.D. 1700. That is a long time ago, and the world has seen many changes down through those two hundred and fourteen years. At the time it came into existence there was no United States of America, and George Washington had not yet been born, nor had the great Napoleon appeared on the scene.

The Bible has been in the Mikel family since 1754, one hundred and sixty years ago, and six generations of the one family have thumbed and gazed upon the old book. It is five inches thick from cover to cover, fourteen inches long and nine inches wide. The binding consists of wood covered with leather. It contains one hundred and twenty-three illustrations about six inches square, with a large portrait engraved the full size of the book on the second page. Judging from the expense attached to publishing at the time this volume was published, it must have cost a considerable sum, but its value is now, no doubt, many times its original cost.

A few years after the close of the war of American independence, young Godlove Mikel, who had fought on the side of the British, decided to come to Canada, and his mother gave him the Bible. It was somewhat big and clumsy to carry around, but he and his family have stuck to it pretty well through all the vicissitudes from early pioneer life down to the present time.

It is something to trace descent back to a man who started life with a big Bible and a name like Godlove, and it says something for the parents who gave him that start.

Mr. Mikel would be glad to hear from any persons possessing old Bibles with descriptions of same.

The total sales of the "SALADA" Tea Co. last year amounted to as much as the total business during the first twelve years they were introducing Ceylon tea into Canada and the United States. Their increase alone in 1913 over 1912 amounted to more than the total business done during the first five years of their existence, and during the first three months of 1914 their ratio of increase is the largest they have ever had.

HORSESHOERS ASKING FOR LEGISLATION

At the Master Horseshoers' Convention in London, this week, the bill of the Association, which has been sent to the Provincial Secretary was discussed.

The bill proposes to put the horseshoers on a plane with the legal, dental, medical and other professions, insofar, as under its provisions, only men bearing regularly-certified diplomas and having certain qualifications, would be eligible to practice the gentle art of tacking footwear on equine feet. Yearly examinations would be conducted and each master horseshoer that is to say, each man having a shop of his own, would have to pass the government tests and become a member of the provincial association, the whole procedure corresponding to that provided for aspirants to the medical profession. In addition to a two and a half years' apprenticeship under a competent instructor, each candidate for horseshoeing honors, would be required at the Ontario Veterinary College in acquiring a knowledge of horsial anatomy.

Though the bill was sent to the provincial secretary some time ago, and was dated to take effect in April, 1915, there is little likelihood of its being formally presented to the house during the present session.

The bill is aimed at the cut-rate shoers and the men who refuse to join the association and aid in the general boosting of prices. There were delegates who were free to admit their doubts as to the possible approval of the bill by the Legislature. The fact that the measure places restrictions on the trade in allowing only members of the association to charge for their work, and would thus give opportunity for fixing price schedules purely at the fancy of the association, is regarded as likely to defeat the bill. The farmers who constitute the largest customers of the horseshoers, are expected to be greatly opposed to the measure fathered by the association.

INQUEST WILL BE RESUMED

The inquest into the death of N. Duloff, the Bulgarian supposed to have been murdered, will be resumed to-morrow afternoon at Havelock, with Coroner Dr. Kindred presiding, and Assistant Crown Attorney Wearing, M.A., acting for the Crown.

Witnesses from Smith's Falls and Toronto will give evidence, and some startling revelations of the case are expected.

An interpreter from Toronto has also been secured.

PROSECUTE THE MANUFACTURER

For Impurities Which May Be Found in Goods.

Mr. E. F. Mason Elected at Retail Grocers' Convention.

Toronto, April 16.—"People have a general idea that adulteration transforms food into an article unfit for consumption. This is not always so." This was the substance of an address by Mr. J. Rogers, assistant Provincial Chemist, to the Retail Grocers' convention yesterday morning. He pointed out the laws in respect to food adulteration, and the main points of the pure food laws.

"Some foods may be adulterated and still retain their food value. But in any case, where there is adulteration they must, in accordance to the Pure Foods Act, be sold for exactly what they contain, so that the public may know exactly what they are eating."

Up to Manufacturers.

President D. W. Clark contended that the manufacturers instead of the retailers should be prosecuted for impurities which may be found in the goods. This matter was given considerable discussion and it was finally resolved to take the matter up before the Canadian Manufacturers' Association.

Mr. H. C. Beckett, of Hamilton, advocated the appointment by the Dominion Government of a Trade Commission, which should have the same power over trade that the Dominion Railway Board has over transportation.

The officers were elected for the coming year as follows:

President, J. W. Millen, Brantford; first vice-president, J. A. McIntosh, Hamilton; second vice-president, A. Palmer, London; third vice-president, E. Barnsdale, Stratford; secretary (re-elected), W. C. Miller, Toronto; treasurer (re-elected), Thos. Shaw, London. Executive committee—E. F. Mason, Peterboro; C. McCausland, Paris; E. Hazell, Hamilton; F. Harp, Brantford; A. Phillips, Ottawa; J. D. Wisdom, Barrie; W. J. McCully, Stratford; G. Drake, London; D. Maclean, Toronto.
